CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Asylum and Immigration

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): Earlier today my right hon. and noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Baroness Ashton of Upholland), made a statement in the other place reporting that on 7 March the Lord Chancellor made the following statutory instrument:

> The Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc.) Act 2004 (Commencement No. 5 and Transitional Provisions) Order.

The order is made in accordance with section 48(3)(a), (4), (5) and (6) of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc.) Act 2004, hereafter referred to as the 2004 Act. This order commences section 26 (unification of appeal system) of, and Schedules 1 and 2 to, the 2004 Act on 4 April 2005. This order also contains transitional provisions in relation to pending appeals which were made to an adjudicator before 4 April 2005, and in relation to further appeals and applications in such cases. Copies of the order have been made available to Members and Peers in votes and printed pages office.

The statement also reported that, on 10 March, the Lord Chancellor laid before Parliament the following statutory instruments;

> The Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (Fast Track Procedure) Rules 2005, and
> The Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (Fast Track Time Limits) Order 2005

The Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (Fast Track Procedure) Rules 2005 are made in accordance with sections 106*(1)*-(3) and 112(3) of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 and section 40A(3) of the British Nationality Act 1981, after consulting with the Council on Tribunals in accordance with section 8 of the Tribunals and Inquiries Act 1992. These rules prescribe a fast track procedure for appeals and applications to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal, where the appellant is in detention under the Immigration Acts at the locations listed in schedule 2 to the rules. The rules come into force on 4 April 2005.

The Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (Fast Track Time Limits) Order 2005 is made in accordance with sections 26(8) and (9) of the 2004 Act, after consulting with the Lord Chief Justice in accordance with section 26(10) of the 2004 Act. This order shortens the time limits for review applications made by parties to fast track appeals to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal. These are referred to as section 103A applications.

For a transitional period, section 103A applications will initially be considered by a member of the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal. If the tribunal member does not make an order for reconsideration or grant permission for the application to be made out of time, the applicant may notify the appropriate court, under paragraph 30(5)(a) of schedule 2 to the 2004 Act, that he wishes the court to consider the application.

This order reduces to two days the time limits for making the section 103A application and for giving notice under paragraph 30(5)(a), in cases where the fast track procedure rules apply, so long as the appellant remains in detention when the application is made or notification is given. It comes into force on 4 April 2005.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Homelessness Strategy

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): I am pleased to announce that the Government's new homelessness strategy "Sustainable Communities: Settled Homes; Changing Lives" has been launched today.

"Settled Homes; Changing Lives" follows on from our five year plans, "Homes for All" and "People, Places and Prosperity". It builds on our achievements to date in tackling the worst forms of homelessness. This has resulted in meeting challenging targets to significantly reduce rough sleeping since 1998 and put an end to the scandal of homeless families having to raise their children for long periods in cramped bed and breakfast hotels. It also sets out our plans for reducing homelessness further and halving the use of temporary accommodation by 2010.

I have placed copies of our strategy for tackling homelessness in both Libraries of the House. The Government response to the ODPM Select Committee report on Homelessness will be laid before Parliament today. Both documents are also available on the ODPM's website:

www.odpm.gov.uk/stellent/groups/odpm_control/documents/contentservertemplate/odpm_index.hcst?n=865&l=2

Draft Environmental Impact Assessment Amendment Regulations

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I am announcing today the publication of a consultation document on draft regulations to amend the Town and Country Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) (England and Wales) Regulations 1999.

The amendments implement the requirements of Article 3 of European Directive 2003/35/EC. This amends environmental impact assessment (EIA) requirements to bring them into line with the pubic participation provisions of the UNECE Convention on Access to Information, Public Participation in Decision-making and Access to Justice in Environmental Matters (also known as the Aarhus Convention), which was ratified by the UK on 23 February.

The EIA provisions are largely compliant with the Convention, and only a few changes to the current requirements are proposed. They include a requirement that supplementary information provided voluntarily by the applicant after the submission of an environmental statement should be subject to the same full public consultation process as the statement itself, and that, when applications are determined, information about the public's participation and the right to challenge the validity of the decision should be made publicly available.

The consultation will run until 6 June 2005 and will apply to England only. Copies of the consultation document will be made available in the Libraries of both Houses and from The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website www.odpm.gov.uk.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Parliamentary Questions

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Jack Straw): I should inform the House of inadvertent errors in the answers to two written parliamentary questions tabled by the hon. Members for Cotswold (Mr. Clifton-Brown) and for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) in November 2004.

The hon. Member for Cotswold asked:

> "How many written questions for his Department were unanswered when Parliament prorogued; and how many of the unanswered questions were tabled in each of the previous months of the 2003–04 Session". (201551)

I replied:

> "Seven. Of the seven, two were tabled in October 2004. Five were tabled in November 2004".

I regret that two further written parliamentary questions that received no answer in the 2003–04 Session have been identified. In addition, the original answer counted six questions that did receive a "prorogation answer" as not having been answered, and one of the six questions, tabled in September 2004, was wrongly attributed to October. I understand that Departments have dealt with this question in different ways and to be consistent with answers that the hon. Member has received to similar questions from other departments, we should exclude these "prorogation answers".

My revised answer to the hon. Member for Cotswold is therefore that three written parliamentary questions were unanswered when Parliament prorogued, of which one was tabled in December 2003, one in October 2004 and one in November 2004.

The hon. Member for Ribble Valley asked:

> "To how many written questions tabled in the last parliamentary session his Department had been unable to provide a substantive answer before the end of the Session". (199644)

I replied:

> "Seven. Of the seven, five were tabled shortly before the end of the parliamentary session".

As noted above, two further written parliamentary questions that received no answer have been identified. My revised answer to the hon. Member is therefore that nine questions did not receive a substantive answer before the end of the last parliamentary session. Of the nine, one was tabled in December 2003, one in September 2004, one in October 2004 and six in November 2004.

HEALTH

Moratorium on Genetics and Insurance

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): We are publishing today a new concordat and moratorium on genetics and insurance, which has been agreed between the Government and the Association of British Insurers (ABI). Copies have been placed in the Library. An electronic version has been placed on the Department of Health website at: www.dh.gov.uk/publications

The new framework, which comes into force today, provides that the use of genetic information by insurance companies will be transparent, fair, and subject to independent oversight. It will help to reassure patients who may be deterred from taking predictive genetic tests for fear of the insurance consequences, and is flexible enough to respond to fast-moving technological and clinical developments in genetic testing.

The concordat balances the interest of patients and insurers. Those seeking insurance should not withhold information relevant to underwriting, and insurers should not treat people who have an adverse predictive genetic test result less favourably than others, except as provided for in the concordat.

The moratorium on the use by insurers of predictive genetic test results is extended for an extra five years until 1 November 2011. No one will be required to disclose the results of a predictive genetic test unless it has been approved by the Genetics and Insurance Committee (GAIC) and is for insurance of more than £500,000 for life insurance or £300,000 for other health insurance. This means that for the vast majority of insurance policies genetic tests results will not be used at all.

The concordat clarifies the broad types of insurance for which predictive genetic test results may be relevant. They are life, critical illness, and income protection insurance policies. Insurers will not use the results from predictive genetic tests for travel insurance, private medical insurance, or any other one-off or annual policy, or for long-term care insurance.

The concordat also clarifies the circumstances when patients need not disclose genetic information, and how information will be handled by insurers.

For example, genetic tests taken as part of a research study will not need to be disclosed to insurers. This is good news for United Kingdom clinical researchers, as it specifically rules out the use by insurers of the results of genetic tests taken during participation in clinical trials, removing a potential obstacle to patient recruitment in the development of diagnostic tests, treatments, and medicines.

These commitments are backed up by independent oversight of the use of predictive genetic tests by GAIC together with the ABI's code of practice and an impartial complaint and arbitration process.

The Government would like to thank the Human Genetics Commission, GAIC, patient groups including Breakthrough Breast Cancer, CancerBACUP and the Alzheimer's Society, and other research groups and individuals who have provided valuable contributions that have helped shape this new concordat and moratorium on genetics and insurance.

The new framework means that insurance will continue to be available for people who take predictive genetic tests. They will only need to disclose the adverse results of predictive genetic tests for a limited range of unusually high value insurance polices—and then only if the predictive genetic test has been approved by GAIC. It is the Government's view that this approach is good news for individuals and insurance companies as it will ensure that the rights, safety and well-being of those taking predictive genetic tests are protected whilst also ensuring a viable and fair insurance market.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Regulation of Fundraising Scheme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Fiona Mactaggart): I am today publishing proposals for consultation on the principles on which the Government will base its assessment of the success of the self-regulation of voluntary sector fundraising.

Self-regulation of fundraising was a recommendation of the Prime Minister's strategy unit review of the charitable and wider not-for-profit sector, "Private Action, Public Benefit". The Government accept the strategy unit recommendation for self-regulation of fundraising, and have made provision in the Charities Bill for statutory regulation should self-regulation fail.

The draft Charities Bill was subject to pre-legislative scrutiny by a Joint Committee of both Houses of Parliament. The report of the Joint Committee on the draft Charities Bill endorsed the self-regulation of fundraising initiative, and recommended that the Government publish for consultation the criteria in accordance with which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will judge whether self-regulation is working effectively.

Proposals for a regulation of fundraising scheme have recently been published by the Institute of Fundraising. The main aim of the scheme is to maintain and build on the high levels of public trust and confidence in the voluntary sector's fundraising activities. The scheme will help the sector guard against future threats to the high levels of public confidence, and to provide the sector with a platform to defend itself against criticism.

The principles in accordance with which the Government propose that the success of the regulation of fundraising scheme should be assessed include measures of participation, comprising the number of participating organisations, the proportion of fundraised income covered by scheme membership, and the range of organisations in the scheme's membership; and other measures such as the effectiveness of complaints handling, public awareness of the scheme, the promotion of best practice, the scheme's independence, effective sanctions for non-compliance, the impact of the scheme on non-members and effective liaison with other regulators.

In the scheme's initial years the focus would be on measuring the take-up of the scheme within the sector as it develops its membership. It is envisaged that a formal assessment of the success of self-regulation would take place as part of the review of the impact of the Charities Bill which is due to take place within five years of enactment, and would report to Parliament.

I am very grateful to all those who have contributed to the development of the proposals for the self-regulation of fundraising. I would particularly like to thank the Institute of Fundraising for taking the lead in developing the scheme, Rodney Buse for considering and consulting on an appropriate model for self-regulation to adopt, and the members of the Steering Committee for their work in taking the proposals forward.

Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library and will also be available on the Home Office website at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/ comerace/ active/charitylaw/index.html.

Details of the proposed self-regulation scheme are available on the Institute of Fundraising website at www.institute-of-fundraising.org.uk.

Comments are requested by 3 June 2005 and a further statement will be made in due course.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

St. Helena

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Gareth Thomas): On 19 April 2004, Official Report, column 1WS, I announced in a written statement that the Government would be undertaking feasibility and other investigatory work to determine how best to ensure access for St. Helena when St. Helena's passenger and supply ship, the RMS St. Helena, is withdrawn from scheduled service in or around 2010.

That work is now completed. We have looked not only at issues relating directly to access, but also at the potential of various access options to encourage the development of a vibrant island economy. This reflects our aim, shared with St. Helena, to achieve economic growth for the island.

We have decided that, subject to satisfactory contract bids and a rigorous environmental impact assessment, we will establish air access for St. Helena. This will entail providing an airport, with a 2,250m runway, near the eastern coast at Prosperous Bay plain. It will be capable of supporting the safe operation of long-haul jet aircraft, such as the Airbus A320 and Boeing 737–800. We will also provide advice to help establish regular air services; and we will support the St. Helena Government in taking advantage of the economic benefits that the new investment should bring to the island. All private sector investment interest will be considered on an equal footing.

For its part, amongst other supporting work, the St. Helena Government will review local legislation on inward investment, immigration and taxation. Our shared aim with St. Helena will be the creation of a policy environment, against a transformed background of good access, that will encourage sustainable economic development and progress for St. Helena and its community.

TRANSPORT

Road Transport (Working Time) Regulations

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. David Jamieson): The Road Transport (Working Time) Regulations 2005 were laid before Parliament today and will come into force on 4 April 2005. These new regulations implement Council Directive 2002/15/EC concerning the working time of persons performing mobile road transport activities.

To accompany the new regulations, we have also published formal guidance on the new arrangements, and, a regulatory impact assessment.

Copies of these documents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The regulations, formal guidance and regulatory impact assessment follow public consultation—we have also placed copies of a summary of the consultation responses and the Government's subsequent conclusions in the Libraries of both Houses.

The new regulations will provide extra protection for drivers and crew of heavy goods and public service vehicles who carry out road transport activities covered by the EU drivers' hours rules—Regulation (EEC) 3820/85. The main provisions of the Road Transport (Working Time) Regulations 2005 are:

weekly working time is limited to an average of 48 hours (normally calculated over a four month reference period), a maximum of 60 hours' work can be performed in a single week, so long as the average 48-hour limit is maintained, night workers are restricted to 10 hours' working time in any 24-hour period, there are break requirements tied to hours worked to supplement the break requirements linked to driving time in the driver's hours rules.

In addition, under the new regulations:

where there is either a collective agreement or a workforce agreement at company level between the employer and employees, companies will be able to use the derogations available under the directive:-

the four-month reference period for calculating the average 48-hour week can be extended to six months the 10 hour limit (over a 24-hour period) for night workers can be exceeded, although the 60-hour weekly limit will still apply, and drivers will still have to respect the EU drivers hours rules the definition of "night time" is a period between 00.00–04.00 for drivers and crew of goods vehicles and 01.00–05.00 for drivers and crew of passenger vehicles,

VOSA (DVTA—NI) will enforce the new regulations, primarily in response to complaints they receive, workers who occasionally perform road transport activities will be subject to the Working Time Regulations 1998 (as amended) rather than these new regulations.

Self-employed drivers will not be covered by the regulations until March 2009, as provided for in the directive.

The Government will review the new regulations and associated formal guidance in the light of practical experience.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Stakeholder Pensions

The Minister for Pensions (Malcolm Wicks): We have today laid regulations before Parliament to make the stakeholder pension suitable for inclusion in the new suite of stakeholder products. We are also publishing the Government's response to the consultation on the regulations and a copy has been placed in the Library.

There are two key changes to the stakeholder regulations. The first requires pension scheme providers to introduce lifestyling. The second amends the charge cap applicable to consumers.

"Lifestyling" is an established financial mechanism and means that a pension scheme member's savings will be moved gradually into less volatile investments at least five years before retirement, thus helping to reduce the risk of an unexpected drop in value in the period before retirement. Lifestyling will be a requirement where a person makes no choice about how his or her pension savings are to be invested. However, members will be able to opt out of lifestyling if they so choose.

The regulations also provide for an increase in the stakeholder pension charge cap. For new members of schemes from 6 April 2005, the annual management charge will be capped at 1.5 per cent. for the first 10 years of membership, decreasing to 1 per cent. thereafter. However charges for existing members will continue to be capped at 1 per cent. per annum.

The regulations come into effect on 6 April 2005.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Land Registry

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): The Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor has today set the following key performance targets for Her Majesty's Land Registry for 2005–06.

National Enforcement Service

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): My noble Friend the Secretary of State has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I am pleased to announce today plans for the introduction of a national enforcement service to take forward my commitment to ensuring the fullest possible compliance with court orders. For too long enforcement of court orders has been patchy and flawed. We have made real improvements in enforcement. The payment rate of fines now at 80 per cent. compared with just over 50 per cent. two years ago. But there is more to be done. The time has come for the next stage of reform.

My proposals involve the introduction of a robust national framework to deliver a single consistent enforcement process for the whole of England and Wales, and to deal robustly with offenders who fail to attend court, default on fine payments and breach community penalty orders. The launch of the new unified Her Majesty's Court Service next month, will allow us to put in place a cross-criminal justice system enforcement team that is more distinct, professional and better skilled. The specific remit of the national enforcement service will be to bear down on the hard core of offenders who consistently attempt to flout their obligations to the courts. This does not mean a new agency or department, but a better, more collaborative approach to tackling enforcement, which builds on the lessons learned from national initiatives including the recent "Operation Payback". Enforcement staff in the magistrates courts together with the police, the national probation service and other criminal justice agencies will form the core of the service.

Improving sentence compliance is key to building public confidence in the criminal justice system and the national enforcement service will do just that. The national enforcement service framework will be tested first across a region from April 2006 with the aim of full national rollout in 2007–08".

DEFENCE

Veterans Agency

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): I am announcing today that the key targets that have been set for the chief executive of the Veterans Agency (VA) for the financial year 2005–06 are as follows:

Service

KEY TARGET 1:

To issue decisions on claims to war pensions in an average of no more than 59 working days. This is an improvement of four working days on the agency's 2004–05 target; and it represents a cumulative improvement of 41 per cent. against the agency's 2000–01 baseline level of 100 working days.

KEY TARGET 2:

To issue decisions on war widows claims in an average of no more than 23 working days. This is an improvement of two working days on the agency's 2004–05 target; and it represents a cumulative improvement of 36 per cent. against the agency's 2000–01 baseline level of 36 working days.

KEY TARGET 3:

To achieve an externally-validated war pensions scheme claims accuracy rate of at least 97 per cent.

KEY TARGET 4:

To achieve an externally-validated AFCS claims accuracy rate of at least 97 per cent.

KEY TARGET 5:

To achieve an externally-validated medical adjudication accuracy rate of at least 97 per cent.

Working in Partnership

KEY TARGET 6:

To work with the Department for Constitutional Affairs Court Service to reduce the average time it takes an appeal to pass through the war pensions appeals process. By 31 March 2006 the average time should reduce to no more than 225 working days. This is an improvement of 15 working days on the agency's 2004–05 target; and it represents a cumulative improvement of 60 per cent. against its 2000–01 baseline level of 565 working days.

Efficiency

KEY TARGET 7:

To use the agency output costing methodology developed in 2002–03 to help identify and generate such administrative efficiencies and other savings as will enable the agency to achieve a 3 per cent. reduction in 2005–06 against a comparable 2004–05 final out-turn figure.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Commercial Property Leases

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): Further to my statement of 24 February about Reading University's final report on the impact of the property industry's 2002 code of practice for commercial leases, I wish to announce our conclusions following the completion of the research and our own consultation exercise last year on upward only rent review clauses.

The Government continue to be concerned about flexibility in the commercial property market. The Reading report shows that the property market has become more flexible, notably with continuing trends towards shorter leases and break clauses, and I welcome these. However, there are still areas of inflexibility.

The Reading report indicates that the major problems are now inflexible assignment and subletting provisions in leases. These can make it difficult for tenants to dispose of properties they no longer need for their business. We intend to undertake a review of the law of assignment and subletting, with the aim of easing the position for tenants while not jeopardising property investment, including looking at legislative options.

We continue to have concerns about the prevalence of upward only rent review clauses in longer leases. The Reading report shows that their impact has been diminishing, as fewer leases contain any form of rent review provisions, and that tenants are currently more concerned about inflexible assignment and subletting provisions than they are about upward only rent reviews. We do however believe that further progress in this area is necessary to improve the flexibility of the market. We will therefore continue to monitor the situation and retain the option to legislate in future if necessary. But we do not propose to legislate against upward only rent review clauses at present.

The other major area of concern is the continuing lack of awareness of property issues among small businesses. The Reading report shows that many small businesses fail to obtain the best leasing terms available because they lack essential information about the leasing environment and the local market. There is a need for action by both the Government and the property industry.

We are asking the property industry to undertake a joint review of the code of practice, to carry out a renewed campaign to disseminate the code and provide an effective mechanism for dealing with complaints. We want to make sure that everyone negotiating a lease adopts the code.

We will be undertaking a further monitoring exercise over the next three years, and we will be looking for further movement on flexibility. We believe that achieving greater flexibility in the market is extremely important and that further market reform is essential.

We shall be inviting the property industry to join us in practical steps to improve small business knowledge of property matters.

We will shortly be making available on our website a summary of the responses to the consultation paper on upward only rent reviews. We will be placing copies of individual responses in the Library of the House while copies will also be available for public inspection in the ODPM Library.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Statutory Levy Bodies

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Margaret Beckett): In responding to Lord Haskins' report, the Government stated that they would commission an independent, fundamental review of the GB and UK statutory levy-funded agriculture and horticulture organisations.

We have, with colleagues in the devolved Administrations, now agreed the terms of reference for the review and a copy of them has been placed in the House today. The review will encompass the British Potato Council, the Home Grown Cereals Authority, the Horticultural Development Council, the Meat and Livestock Commission, and the Milk Development Council, taking as given the devolution of agricultural policy and the federal bodies created post-devolution under the umbrella of the Meat and Livestock Commission.

I am pleased to announce that Rosemary Radcliffe, formerly chief economist at PricewaterhouseCoopers and until recently independent complaints commissioner for the Financial Services Authority, has agreed to conduct the review. Rosemary will formally start her work on 4 April, and she will submit her report, to UK and devolved Administration Ministers, by the end of October.

Further details and information on how people may submit their views to the review have been placed in the Library of the House and are available on Defra's website.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran (Body Armour)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Chris Mullin): In March 2005, after consultation with the Ministry of Defence and the export control organisations, DTI, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office donated armoured vests and body armour plates to the Iranian Anti-Narcotics Police (ANP). This gift was to provide an element of protection for the ANP in their work of countering drugs smuggling from Afghanistan. We are satisfied that these goods would only be used for anti-narcotics operations and are therefore prepared to make an exception to the UK national embargo announced in 1993, as amended in 1998.

We are fully committed to implementing the UK embargo on Iran. However, we are, in limited circumstances, prepared to make exceptions where denying an export or a gift would be contrary to the intention of the embargo. As the UK has been active in encouraging and assisting Iran with combating the smuggling of drugs from Afghanistan, I am confident that granting this exception is fully consistent with this responsible approach of supporting the ANP whilst respecting the aims of the embargo.

A departmental minute announcing the intention to make the gift was laid before Parliament on 22 February.

All export licences, F680s and Crown immunity gifts are considered on a case by case basis judged against the consolidated and national arms export licensing criteria.

HEALTH

Health (Patient and Public Involvement)

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Ms Rosie Winterton): The Government have today published its response to the recent consultation exercise on the future support arrangements for patient and public involvement in health.

The main features of the response include:

- combining patients' forums in primary care trust areas into single forums but notreducing the number of forum members;
- requiring forums to have chairs who will be appointed by the NHS Appointments Commission. These appointments will be made with the full involvement of forum members;
- the development of a national resource centre in patient and public involvement that will assist both the NHS and patients' forums in their respective responsibilities in relation to patient and public involvement.

Copies have been placed in the Library.

Copies of the consultation findings as well as the Government's response are also available on the Department's website.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bichard Inquiry

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): Today I have received further comments from Sir Michael Bichard regarding progress made in implementing the recommendations of his inquiry. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House. A progress report was made to Sir Michael in December last year, and copies placed in the Library in January. I should like to thank Sir Michael for his commitment and hard work both in the conduct of the inquiry and in his recent review of progress.

I welcome Sir Michael's comment that he has been impressed by the positive and energetic response to his recommendations. He accepts that significant progress has been made and is pleased at the positive response to his report, particularly from the police service.

In recognising this progress, Sir Michael goes on to make a number of further recommendations, aimed primarily at ensuring the effective implementation of his report findings, particularly those which give rise to long term and complex new arrangements for the management and sharing of information. These include the development of national IT infrastructure to support the handling of police information, a code of practice and detailed supporting guidance for the management and sharing of police information, and a registration scheme relating to persons wishing to work with children or vulnerable adults.

In these areas I am pleased to accept in principle Sir Michael's recommendations that careful monitoring should be in place to check on progress, that the necessary links must be made between different aspects of the programme, and that appropriate budget allocations must be made to ensure effective implementation. I also accept the need for closer working between the United Kingdom jurisdictions to ensure that there are no loopholes to be exploited between the systems operating in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. This co-operation has featured as an important element of the implementation work so far. I will also look to strengthen the work being undertaken with foreign jurisdictions from which large numbers of staff come to the United Kingdom to work with children and vulnerable adults.

I shall be considering the detail of Sir Michael's comments with ministerial colleagues, and a full response will be sent to Sir Michael shortly. This will be placed in the Library of the House. I am happy to accept Sir Michael's recommendation that further progress reports should be made available to Parliament and to the public in six and 12 months' time.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departments (Cash Requirement)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Angela Smith): As a consequence of additional allocations made to the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety since Parliament's approval of estimates in July 2004, the Department has an additional cash requirement in respect of health and social services boards and trusts.

Parliamentary approval for additional cash to finance these services is currently being sought in a supplementary estimate for DHSSPS. Pending that approval urgent cash needs, estimated at £143 million, will be met by repayable advances from the NI Consolidated Fund.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pathways to Work

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Alan Johnson): On the 30 November 2004 we published an early summary of administrative data from the pathways to work pilots in helping people claiming incapacity benefits to get back to work. Today I would like to provide a further update on the pilots' performance.

The pathways to work pilots are a major step forward in the reform of incapacity benefits and in the way people with a health condition or disability are helped back to work. Under the pathways pilots Jobcentre Plus and the NHS work positively together to re-focus people on their remaining abilities and their own aspirations for a return to work. The pilots offer all claimants access to:

- support from a highly skilled Jobcentre Plus personal adviser offering support and contact especially in the early stages of a claim when people can be most readily helped back to work;
- groundbreaking rehabilitation support offered jointly with the NHS in each pilot area so that claimants can be supported to manage and cope with their health condition (e.g. back pain, angina, mental illness) so they can get back to work;
- strong local partnerships with the New Deal for Disabled People—voluntary and private sector employment advisers;
- a £40 a week return to work credit for a year once they get jobs so that it pays to get back to work;
- work with local GPs and employers to ensure people on IB are not discouraged from working again.

The pathways pilots have targeted new IB claimants and existing claimants who volunteer. From last month the mandatory elements of the pathways approach have been tested with some existing claimants.

The latest figures from the pathways to work pilots (including data up to the end of December) continue to be very encouraging. I am placing a copy of the findings in the Library. In particular they show that:

- well over 10,000 people have now been placed into work in pathways pilot areas—these numbers include over 2,000 existing claimants for whom participation in this pilot has been entirely voluntary;
- the number of recorded job entries for people with a health condition or disability has almost doubled compared with same period last year;
- the proportion of people leaving IB for work within six months of a claim starting appears to be significantly higher in pathways than non-pathways areas. Benefit off-flow rates are up to 10 percentage points higher compared to the rest of the country;
- performance appears very positive in both Phase 1 (the three areas that started in October 2003) and Phase 2 locations (the four areas that started in April 2004);
- between 20 and 25 per cent. of those attending an initial WFI are taking up Jobcentre Plus, New Deal or NHS back to work support. This is around six times higher than the proportions accessing back to work support in the rest of the country. In Jobcentre Plus Pathfinder areas the figures are closer to around 4 per cent. and in the rest of the country 2 per cent.

These continuing, positive findings have formed the backdrop to the announcement made on 2 December 2004 by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer. In the pre-Budget report he announced a plan to expand pathways to work to cover the Jobcentre Plus districts that contained the 30 local authority districts with the greatest proportions of the working age population on incapacity benefits.

The positive response of claimants and advisers and NHS staff to this radical initiative have also firmly shaped the detail of the DWP's five-year strategy and our plans to abolish incapacity benefit for new claimants and replace it with payments that more actively incentivise and support all those with the potential to get back to work to realise their own aspirations for doing so. I aim to publish a Green Paper setting out more details on these proposals in July.

TREASURY

Debt and Reserves Management

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): The Debt and Reserves Management report 2005–06 is being published today. Copies will be available in the Library of the House at the conclusion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement.

Invest to Save—Inclusive Communities Fund

The Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Paul Boateng): I am pleased to announce that 37 bids from across the public and voluntary sectors have been successful in round 7 of the Invest to Save Budget at a cost of £37 million in total over the three years to 2007–08 for England. The allocated sum rises to £43 million to include consequential funding for the devolved Administrations. Details of the winners of this round have been placed in the Library of the House.

The Invest to Save Budget (ISB) provides support for projects that increase the extent of joint working between different parts of Government; identify innovative ways of delivering public services; and reduce the cost of delivering the services and/or improve the quality and effectiveness of services delivered to the public.

This, the seventh round of the ISB, concentrates on the priority areas of:

Health and Social Care for Older People;

Employment for People from Black and Ethnic Minority Communities;

Correctional Services;

Hostel Provision for Homeless People;

Support for Parents and Learning Services for Adults; and Integration for People from Ethnic Minorities.

Winning projects must agree an implementation plan with the sponsor departments. Each project must provide six-monthly progress reports and carry out an evaluation of its success once it has been completed. Wider dissemination of the good practice from completed projects is then fed back into the whole spectrum of public service providers.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Private Finance Initiative (Fire and Rescue Authorities)

The Minister for Local and Regional Government (Mr. Nick Raynsford): Today I am inviting all English fire and rescue authorities to bid for a share of £150 million of credits available through the private finance initiative (PFI). This considerable new investment is available to help fire and rescue authorities to deliver some of the key assets that they need to keep building a better more effective and efficient service that saves more lives.

Over the past five years fire and rescue authorities have used £200 million PFI credits successfully to provide innovative new fire stations, training centres, headquarters, a vehicle fleet and other equipment. I am confident that fire and rescue authorities will have plenty of ideas for what they could deliver with a share of the £150 million credits now available. I look forward to receiving their proposals.

This investment re-confirms the Government's commitment to meeting their public sector agreement (PSA) target by 2010 to reduce the number of accidental fire-related deaths in the home by 20 per cent. and the number of deliberate fires by 10 per cent.

It comes on top of the Government's already significant investment in new assets for the English fire and rescue service. We are investing heavily in a new radio system and regional control centres and up to £188 million in mass decontamination and urban search and rescue equipment and training. Plus we have announced a £25 million fire prevention package to provide free smoke alarms and fire safety advice to one and a quarter million vulnerable households, mainly in deprived areas, in England over the period 2004–08. Every English fire and fire and rescue authority will again receive an above inflation increase in grant in 2005–06 and will receive a share of £57.98 million in supported capital expenditure.

Fire and rescue authorities have been asked to submit initial expressions of interest by 31 May 2005 and have until 7 October 2005 to submit indicative bids for the £150 million of credits to ODPM.

Copies of the fire service circular announcing the bidding round are available in the Libraries of both Houses and are on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: www.odpm.gov.uk.

HEALTH

People with Learning Disabilities (Premature Deaths)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): I am announcing today the first stage of a confidential inquiry into premature deaths among people with learning disabilities. The Department of Health has asked the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA), which is taking responsibility for confidential inquiries from April 2005, to carry out a scoping study to establish the best way to conduct the inquiry.

The Government's White Paper "Valuing People", published in 2001, included as one of its main objectives improvements in the health of people with learning disabilities. In particular, it highlighted the need to address evidence of health inequalities. The Government have taken action to address this, primarily through asking learning disability partnership boards to develop plans for health action planning in their local areas. But "Valuing People" also noted that there was cause for concern about evidence of avoidable illness and premature deaths, and included an undertaking to look at the feasibility of establishing a confidential inquiry into mortality among people with learning disabilities.

The Department has held wide-ranging discussions with experts and stakeholders and has determined that an inquiry would not only be practicable but would also provide valuable information about the health care of people with learning disabilities. Health care for this group has also continued to be raised as a matter of concern for organisations such as Mencap and the Disability Rights Commission.

Professor Sir John Lilleyman (Medical Director, NPSA) is the lead director for confidential inquiries and will be in charge of the management of the scoping exercise. The research will be overseen, managed and commissioned by Professor Richard Lilford's team at the University of Birmingham.

Our intention is that this inquiry should be carried out in a new and more flexible style compared to previous inquiries. It will be time-limited and produce results that can then be used to inform practice. The confidential investigation of health care histories of people with learning disabilities will be complex, since it will in many cases need to cover care provided in a variety of settings, for example residential care homes. The scoping project I have announced today is the first step to a full-scale inquiry and will also provide valuable information in its own right about the health care of people with learning disabilities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Magilligan Prison

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Paul Murphy): The Government have received a report from HM chief inspector of prisons and the chief inspector of criminal justice in Northern Ireland, Kit Chivers. The report is on an announced inspection of Magilligan prison and has today been published.

The Government warmly welcome this report which recognises not only areas of good practice, but helpfully, identifies a number of areas for improvement. I shall be considering very carefully the report's recommendations. I have no doubt that the report will be of value in informing and re-assuring the public, and is helpful to the managers and staff who are involved in this challenging area of work.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

TREASURY

Finance Bill

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): It is expected that the Finance Bill will be published on Thursday 24 March. Explanatory notes on the Bill's clauses will be available in the Vote Office (and the Printed Paper Office, House of Lords) and the Libraries of both Houses on that day. The explanatory notes will be available from the Stationery Office bookshops and on the Treasury's website at: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

DCMS Five-year plan

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell): I am publishing today the Department's five-year plan, "Living Life to the Full". Copies will be deposited in the House Libraries and the plan will be available on the DCMS website.

The plan sets our course for the next five years and builds on the significant progress that we have made in recent years. It sets out our achievements, our goals and the practical steps we will take to achieve them in the years ahead.

The fabric of this country and the quality of life we all experience are improving rapidly. The average proportion of household income spent on leisure nearly doubled between 1977 and 2002. We all expect more choice and higher quality. At the same time, opportunities are expanding to enjoy the arts, visit museums and galleries, to play sport, to travel, access the world's best media and prosper in the creative industries.

We have come a long way. In 2001 we introduced free admission to national museums and galleries—resulting in a record number of visits—34 million last year. Creative partnerships—bringing the experience and stimulation of culture to young people in deprived areas—will see 450,000 young people involved by this time next year. We recently published the BBC Green Paper setting out the framework for a strong BBC independent of Government. We are investing £1 billion in sports facilities to benefit every community. Working in partnership with the Department for Education and Skills we have ensured that more than half of all children in school do a weekly minimum of two hours' PE and school sport, up from a quarter in 2002. We are putting our wholehearted support behind London's bid to bring the Olympics to this country in 2012.

But there are still too many people who do not know about the opportunities available to them or who are not able to afford the cost of their talent. There are parents who cannot afford to support their children in making the most of their creativity and skills; adults who do not know how to get involved in local cultural and sporting opportunities; young people who miss out on formative experiences.

In the plan we make 10 commitments covering the key areas where the Department, working together with our partners in our sponsored bodies, in local government, in the voluntary and private sectors, can make a real difference.

We will work to build a comprehensive offer to young people on culture—known as creative sparks. We will review how national lottery money has been spent so far on arts, sport, heritage and film projects, and then consult about how proceeds should be spent in these areas after 2009. We will continue to improve our support for elite athletes, rewarding success with the talented athlete and 2012 scholarships. We will persuade nearly half a million adults per year to become physically active. We will complete our programme to replace outdated licensing and gambling laws, balancing personal freedom and prosperity with strengthening protection for the vulnerable. We will provide a virtual high-street for tourism and leisure offering an information and booking service to online users.

The title of the plan is "Living Life to the Full". Quite simply that is what our sectors can offer—the ability for everyone to live their lives and develop their talents to the fullest extent. So the aim of our five-year plan is straightforward, yet ambitious—making the quality of life in this country world-class and giving everyone the chance to taste it.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Revised Spatial Strategy (East Midlands) and Milton Keynes and South Midlands Sub-regional Strategy

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is today publishing the revised regional spatial strategy for the east midlands (RSS8) and the Milton Keynes and south midlands sub-regional strategy (MKSM SRS). This follows public examinations on the draft revised RPG8 and the MKSM SRS and subsequent public consultations on proposed changes to both documents.

Copies of the revised RSS and MKSM SRS, together with the related statements of changes and summary of representations, are available in both Libraries of the House. These have also been provided for all the region's MPs, MEPs and local authorities. Documents are also available via the ODPM and regional government office web-sites: www.odpm.gov.uk; www.gose.gov.uk; www.go-em.gov.uk; www.go-east.gov.uk

Regional spatial strategy for the east midlands (RSS8)

RPG8 was issued by the Secretary of State in January 2002 to provide a broad development strategy for the east midlands up to 2021. This also represented the "spatial" element of the east midlands integrated regional strategy (IRS) and provided the framework for meeting the region's development needs in a way that promotes a more sustainable pattern of development.

The revised RSS, issued today, is more concise, more regionally specific, more focused on delivery and has cross-references to national policy rather than repetition. However the RSS also incorporates relevant parts of the MKSM SRS, including increased housing figures for Northamptonshire. Elsewhere in the region housing provision figures were not reviewed but these will be re-examined in the next RSS review, which will be conducted under the spatial planning principles required by the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act.

Other new elements in the revised RSS include:

A revised regional transport strategy, which has been informed by a number of major studies in the region, and revised indicative targets and timescales for transport schemes;

A criteria-based policy for renewable energy projects;

A new map of natural and cultural assets;

Proposals for sub-regional strategies in parts of the region, including the area around Nottingham, Derby and Leicester (the "three cities"), the northern coalfield area of north Nottinghamshire and north Derbyshire and an area around Lincoln (the Lincoln policy area); and

A new appendix which indicates how policies are to be implemented and measured.

Milton Keynes & South Midlands Sub-Regional Strategy

This relates to one of the four growth areas set out in the Government's sustainable communities plan published in February 2003, and covers Northamptonshire and parts of Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire. Its largest urban centres are Milton Keynes, Northampton, Luton-Dunstable-Houghton Regis and Bedford-Kempston.

One of the key objectives of the plan is to increase housing supply and particularly to facilitate the building of more affordable houses in the area. The final sub-regional strategy, being published today, sets out the scale and form of development up to 2021 and will provide strategic direction for local authorities, local delivery vehicles and other delivery bodies.

The strategy incorporates amendments following public consultation on the Secretary of State's proposed changes to the draft strategy prepared by the regional assemblies for the east of England, the east midlands and the south-east. The strategy has also taken account of the recommendations of the independent panel following the five week public examination held in March and April 2004.

Key issues that emerged from the public consultation include:

The importance of infrastructure provision to enable growth;

The need for economic growth as well as housing growth;

Clarification of the status of some key transport projects;

Community safety—the need to create neighbourhoods designed to minimise crime and antisocial behaviour;

The applicability of affordable housing targets for Milton Keynes and Aylesbury;

The need to place greater emphasis on regeneration in Luton and issues of green belt review around the town;

The reintroduction of possible directions of growth around Northampton.

The Secretary of State has carefully considered these issues along with all representations submitted, and has made a number of amendments to the final document in response.

The sub-regional strategy constitutes revisions to the regional spatial strategies for the south-east, east of England and east midlands and will therefore form part of the statutory policy basis for the preparation of local development documents by local planning authorities within the sub-region. It is at this stage that detailed site specific proposals will be brought forward and this process will provide further opportunities for public consultation and stakeholder involvement.

Increasing the supply of homes and affordable housing in the wider south-east is essential to promote sustainable communities, and it is critical that the scale of growth is itself sustainable. This means that new communities must have the infrastructure that they need such as schools, transport and health facilities. The sub-regional strategy will help ensure that brownfield land is used first, improve the environmental efficiency of homes, and create new green spaces and places that will stand the test of time.

HEALTH

Non-medical Professional Regulation

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): On 27 January I announced that the chief medical officer for England had agreed to carry out a review of the revalidation of doctors and related matters, following concerns expressed by Dame Janet Smith in her fifth report from the Shipman inquiry. Dame Janet focused her inquiries, as her remit required, on the medical profession. However if changes are proposed to the arrangements for doctors, it is likely that they will have important implications for the regulatory arrangements for the other health professions, particularly where their roles are changing. And there may be other implications. I have therefore asked Mr. Andrew Foster, director of workforce, to lead a review of non-medical professional regulation. This review will run in parallel to the review into medical issues being conducted by Sir Liam Donaldson. It will consider and advise me about the measures needed to:

strengthen procedures for ensuring that the performance or conduct of non-medical health professionals and other health care staff does not pose a threat to patient safety or the effective functioning of services, particularly focusing on the effective and fair operation of fitness to practise procedures; ensure the operation of effective systems of continuing professional development and appraisal for non-medical health care staff and make progress towards regular revalidation where this is appropriate; ensure the effective regulation of health care staff working in new roles within the healthcare sector and of other staff in regular contact with patients.

In the light of the above, it will further consider and recommend any changes needed to the role, structure, functions and number of regulators of non-medical healthcare professional staff. The director of workforce is likely to report his conclusions and recommendations to me towards the end of the year.

As with CMO's Review, there will be an advisory group, which will include experts from non-medical regulators and from the NHS. A larger reference group, which will include education and training bodies and professional organisations as well as consumer and healthcare quality interests, will also support this process.

The members of the advisory group are:

Andrew Foster (Chair)	Director of Workforce, Department of Health (DH)
Chris Beasley	Chief Nursing Officer
Kay East	Chief Health Professions Officer
Prof Sue Hill	Chief Scientific Officer
Prof Raman Bedi	Chief Dental Officer
Dr Jim Smith	Chief Pharmaceutical Officer

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Tsunami

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): The 26 December 2004 tsunami brought destruction to coastal areas of South and South-East Asian countries and claimed over 273,000 lives, leaving millions of people in need of assistance.

DFID committed £75 million to the immediate relief effort, some £66 million of which has already been allocated to United Nations agencies, the Red Cross movement, and non-government organisations, or spent through DFID direct action or donations in kind.

The British public has responded with unprecedented generosity to this disaster. Appeals such as that of the Disasters Emergency Committee have had an overwhelming response.

DFID will now contribute up to £65 million for longer-term rehabilitation and reconstruction. This is likely to be channelled mainly through the trust funds that are being set up in affected countries. Our response will be guided by the findings of needs assessments currently being finalised, and by the level of resources already available to affected countries. Our assistance towards longer-term reconstruction will not be at the expense of DFID funding for other emergencies or existing programmes.

Nepal

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Gareth Thomas): Earlier today, I informed the Government of Nepal that the Department for International Development was ending support to Nepal's police, prison services and the Prime Minister's office. A total of £2.4 million had been committed but £1.3 million remains unspent and will now be cancelled.

This follows the dismissal of the Government by King Gyanendra of Nepal on 1 February. Since then, the UK Government have been carrying out an initial assessment of the implications for our development partnership with Nepal. Assistance will continue to be kept under review.

The criteria against which decisions on DFID assistance are made are the ability to make an effective contribution towards the millennium development goals and the safety and security of staff. We need to ensure that our programmes can continue to benefit poor and excluded people in Nepal. It is vital that the Government of Nepal maintain agreed financial allocations to essential development services, such as health and education, and not divert them to other purposes.

Along with the rest of the international donor community, the safety and welfare of staff carrying out development programmes, especially those in the field, is of paramount importance. We will not continue programmes in the face of increased and unacceptable risk or interference. The UK has called on both parties to the violent conflict in Nepal to ensure that the international community can continue to provide the development assistance that is needed to provide essential services to the poor. The Department for International Development will press for concrete measures by both sides to affirm that they will do everything in their power to safeguard poverty reduction programmes and staff.

We are deeply concerned about human rights in Nepal and will continue to work with others in the international community to encourage democracy in Nepal, the full protection of human rights by both parties to the conflict and progress towards a peace process.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Company Law Reform

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I am pleased to announce that we are today publishing a White Paper setting out proposals for a Company Law Reform Bill.

These proposals result from a comprehensive review of company law, which we initiated in 1998. In 2001 we received the final report from the company law review, an independent group of experts, practitioners and business people. The White Paper also takes account of international and other developments. We are very grateful for the input of a wide range of interested parties into the proposals we are bringing forward today.

The White Paper sets out a range of measures designed to further four crucial objectives: to enhance shareholder engagement and a long term investment culture; to ensure better regulation and a "Think Small First" approach; to make it easier to set up and run a company; and to provide flexibility for the future.

The proposals are part of a wider programme of action to facilitate enterprise, encourage investment and promote long-term company performance. We brought forward legislation to strengthen regulation of the accounting and audit profession and to allow a new type of community enterprise company. We have laid draft regulations for quoted companies to produce an operating and financial review and we have introduced greater transparency by quoted companies on directors' remuneration. We have taken smaller companies out of the need for an audit. We have also worked with market participants to strengthen corporate governance and shareholder engagement.

The measures set out in the White Paper represent a significant step forward in ensuring that our law remains up to date, flexible, and accessible for all those who use it. By making company law better fitted to today's realities, the measures should create improved performance across the economy as whole. They could also produce cost savings for business of some £250 million a year. The proposals will help ensure that Britain remains one of the best places in the world to set up and run a business.

TRANSPORT

Community Infrastructure Fund

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Mr. Tony McNulty): Earlier this year local transport authorities and delivery partners in the four growth areas submitted preliminary information about transport projects that would assist new housing development in support of bids for grant from the Government's new £200 million community infrastructure fund.

Following discussions with Ministerial colleagues in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, we are today announcing the projects that we have selected for more detailed appraisal ahead of final decisions in the autumn. A list of the projects to be taken forward to the next stage is being placed in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Funding of Horseracing

The Minister for Sport and Tourism (Mr. Richard Caborn): It remains the Government's view that commercial agreements between the relevant parties provide the appropriate long-term basis for the funding of racing. However, in the light of a judgment by the European Court of Justice last September it has become clear that the British Horseracing Board is not in a position to proceed immediately with its plans to fund racing by the sale of database rights in place of the current statutory levy. Following consultations with the Horserace Betting Levy Board, the British Horseracing Board and the Association of British Bookmakers, I have therefore accepted the interim recommendations made by the independent review group, chaired by Lord Donoughue, that more time is needed to develop the commercial options and that it is in the public interest in the well-being of the sport that the levy arrangements should therefore remain in place for a further limited period. We will accordingly be making an order under part 2 of the Horserace Betting and Olympic Lottery Act 2004 to end the levy on 31 March 2009, and to close the levy board six months later.

I welcome the agreement of the parties that Lord Donoughue's group should continue to explore the commercial options, considering all areas relating to the funding of racing which it believes are relevant to establishing appropriate post-levy arrangements, with a view to preparing a final report this autumn. It will then be for the British Horseracing Board and the other parties to work towards putting agreed arrangements in place to meet the above timescale.

In the meantime it is important that racing continues to take forward the modernisation of its structures, with priority being given to the establishment of an independent regulatory authority.

It is also important that, both now and after the ending of the levy arrangements, there continues to be proper financial support for the advancement of veterinary science and education and for the improvement of breeds of horses, which are the levy board's other statutory purposes. I have therefore made clear the Government's wish to see the board, while it continues in being, take over the funding commitments previously given by the British Horseracing Board in respect of the Equine Fertility Unit and the equine genome project; to maintain support for veterinary science and education at 2.5 per cent. of levy income and for breed societies at no less than current levels; to take forward consideration of the establishment of a university chair in the field of equine veterinary science; and to complete the grant to the National Stud, for which budget provision was previously made, on the stud's proposed re-establishment as an independent charitable trust.

I wish to place on record my appreciation of the work of the members and staff of the levy board, who have been contending with an extended period of uncertainty, and of their commitment to running the levy arrangements effectively for longer than had previously been expected.

I am aware that other sports, particularly football, have also been affected by the ECJ judgement. I have met with representatives from the football industry and I look forward to working with them, as I have done with racing, as they develop their own solutions to the funding difficulties arising from this ruling.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Local Air Pollution Control

The Minister for the Environment and Agri-environment (Mr. Elliot Morley): Charges to cover the costs of local enforcing authorities in regulating processes which are subject to part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 (Local Air Pollution Control (LAPC)) were introduced in April 1991. Interim charges for installations which are subject to the Pollution Prevention and Control Act 1999 (Local Air Pollution Prevention and Control (LAPPC) and Local Authority—Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (LA-IPPC)) were introduced in August 2000.

With the approval of the Treasury to the extent required, and following consultation with local authority associations and industry, myself with my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Farming, Food and Sustainable Energy have made revised schemes in respect of the Environmental Protection Act and in respect of the Pollution Prevention and Control Act. The schemes specify the scale of fees and charges to take effect from 1 April 2005.

There will be a 37 per cent. increase to the LA-IPPC application fees (plus any increase in the EA fees for 2005–06) and a 5 per cent. increase to all other LAPC, LAPPC and the LA-IPPC fees and charges for 2005–06. The basis of these increases is set out in the regulatory impact assessment which is available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality/lapc/charges/default.htm.

Some minor amendments to the schemes have also been made in the light of consultation with local authorities and industry.

The schemes have been laid today before both Houses and copies placed in the Libraries.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gibraltar Exempt Companies Scheme

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Denis MacShane): On 21 January 2005, the European Commission proposed terms for the continuation of the Gibraltar exempt companies scheme under certain conditions leading to its phasing out by 31 December 2010. These terms have been the subject matter of intensive negotiations and agreement between the Commission, the UK Government and the Government of Gibraltar.

The terms are as follows:

The total number of exempt companies will be 8,464.

Existing exempt companies will be able to continue to benefit from their tax exempt status until 31 December 2010.

Existing exempt companies that change legal or beneficial ownership and/or activity between 19 February 2005 and 30 June 2006 will be able to benefit from their tax exempt status until 31 December 2007.

Existing exempt companies that change legal or beneficial ownership and/or activity after 30 June 2006 will lose their tax exempt status.

New exempt companies can be formed up to 30 June 2006. This will be on the following basis:

In 2005, the number of new exempt companies that can be formed shall not exceed 60 per cent. of the number of exempt companies leaving the regime in 2005, or in any event, 823.

From 1 January to 30 June 2006, the number of new exempt companies that can be formed shall not exceed 50 per cent. of the number of exempt companies leaving the regime during that period, or in any event the number of exempt companies admitted in 2005.

New exempt companies will be able to continue to benefit from their tax exempt status until 31 December 2007.

Regular reports shall be submitted to the EC Commission certifying compliance with the above.

The UK Government (as the member state responsible for Gibraltar's external affairs) accepted these terms on behalf of the Government of Gibraltar on 18 February 2005. On the same day the Government of Gibraltar issued a press statement indicating how it would implement the appropriate measures. Copies of this press statement are being placed in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Arm's Length Bodies

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): On 30 November 2004, Official Report, columns 24–27WS, I announced the publication of an implementation framework for reconfiguring the Department of Health's arm's length bodies (ALBs) and achieving its three overarching objectives:

A 50 per cent. reduction in the number of ALBs

A saving in expenditure by ALBs of £0.5 billion by 2007–08; and

A reduction in posts of 25 per cent in the same period.

The ALB change programme is part of a wider programme to improve efficiency and cut bureaucracy in the management of the National Health Service. The aim of these activities is to reduce the burden on the front line and free up more resources for the delivery of front-line services to patients and users. This wider programme is to ensure that the increased investment in the NHS—42 per cent. in real terms from 2003–04 to 2007–08—is accompanied by modernisation that cuts out waste.

Today I am announcing the achievement of a further milestone towards the ALB change programme's key objectives. In November 2004 we made the following commitment as a first step towards our savings target on ALB expenditure:

"Even with these new functions, which bring new costs, we will be setting the 2005–06 budget for the ALB sector so that it will cost about £100 million a year less to run than in 2003–04."

I am pleased to report that I am today setting budgets for the operating costs of ALBs for 2005–06 which will reduce Department of Health funding by in excess of £150 million compared with 2003–04. This is despite the fact that in 2004–05 the ALB sector assumed new functions agreed by Parliament that increased the sector's costs substantially. A significant proportion of the savings generated in Department of Health funding will be redeployed for investment in front-line healthcare. We have additionally provided some £50 million to fund one-off identified costs in ALBs. This includes initiatives which will deliver savings in future years and enable us to continue the downward trend in operating costs for the ALB sector when we set budgets for 2006–07 and 2007–08.

In setting the 2005–06 budgets, we have:

Invested in ALBs which deliver front-line healthcare, like the National Blood Authority (an increase in Department of Health funding of more than £38 million over 2003–04), or carry out crucial work to protect public health, like the Health Protection Agency (an increase in Department of Health funding of more than £36 million over 2003–04).

Achieved the greatest savings in ALBs which provide central services to front-line NHS organisations. The reduction in Department of Health funding for this group of ALBs comes to more than £220 million compared to 2003–04 and provides a lower cost-base for overheads in future years.

Met our commitment that spending on ALBs undertaking inspection and regulation will not exceed 0.4 per cent. per cent. of the national spend on the NHS and social care, and made progress on our policy of full cost recovery for work relating to the independent health and social care sector.

Alongside these savings, we are also on course for ALBs to generate very substantial savings for the NHS front line by improving the efficiency of the services they provide centrally on behalf of the NHS.

We expect to generate further savings of over £100 million in 2005–06 from new national framework agreements let by the NHS purchasing and supply agency (PASA) alone. This follows savings of over £25 million in 2004–05. PASA is on target to achieve savings of £240 million per annum by 2007–08 for the NHS. Work is also under way to deliver efficiencies in the services offered by other ALBs. Taken together, this puts us well on course to meet or exceed our commitment to deliver £250 million to the front line by the end of 2007–08 through efficiencies generated by ALBs, as promised in the 30 November 2004 implementation framework.

The major reconfiguration of individual ALBs is also on course. The total number of ALBs will have reduced from 38 in 2003–04 to 34 on 1 April and is on course to reduce further to 31 by 1 October this year. The changes are:

The Family Health Services Appeal Authority (Special Health Authority) (FHSAA—SHA) will be dissolved on 1 April and its functions absorbed by the NHS Litigation Authority (NHS LA).

The Health Development Agency (HDA) will be dissolved on 1 April and its functions absorbed by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE).

The National Clinical Assessment Authority (NCAA) will be dissolved on 1 April and its functions transferred to the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA).

The NHS Information Authority (NHS IA) will be dissolved on 1 April and certain functions transferred to the health and social care information centre (HSCIC) and to the National Programme for IT (NPfIT).

The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) will be dissolved on 1 April and its functions transferred to the Health Protection Agency (HPA).

The Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) will be dissolved on 1 April and its functions transferred to the Health Protection Agency (HPA).

The Human Tissue Authority (HTA) will be created on 1 April and work closely with the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA) ahead of the merger of the two bodies to form the Regulatory Authority for Tissue and Embryos (RATE) which requires new legislation.

The Health and Social Care Information Centre (HSCIC) will come into being on 1 April to co-ordinate information requirements across health and social care more efficiently.

The National Programme for IT (NPfIT) will become an Agency on 1 April.

The NHS Modernisation Agency and NHSU are due to be dissolved by 31 July 2005 and some of their functions taken on by the new NHS Institute for Learning, Skills and Innovation which is due to be set up by the same date.

The National Blood Authority and UK Transplant will be merged and become NHS Blood and Transplant by 1 October 2005.

NHS Estates is being wound down and will be dissolved no later than 1 October.

Following is a table showing the 2005–06 recurrent operating costs budgets for 33 of the ALBs which will exist on 1 April this year. The total of those budgets includes £1,107 million grant in aid from the Department of Health, as well as income from other sources, such as fees charged to industry. The total grant in aid provided by the Department in 2003–04 was £1,265 million. Therefore the 2005–06 grant in aid is over £150 million less than that included in 2003–04 operating costs. We have additionally funded £50 million one-off costs in order to enable further recurrent savings in later years.

These changes are only the first part of our plan for reconfiguring the ALB sector. Over the coming year we will:

Drive forward further major reconfigurations of ALBs so that total numbers in the sector are reduced to 24 by April 2006.

Maintain momentum towards releasing at least £0.5 billion for the front line by the end of 2007–08 through further reductions in overall ALB budgets in 2006–07 and continued savings in the central services which ALBs provide on behalf of the NHS.

As part of this, put in place firm plans for delivering further savings of £35–40 million a year by 2007–08 through efficiencies in ALB overheads (for example back office services and accommodation), in line with the expectations set out in the Gershon Review.

Make further reductions in the proportion of national spend on the NHS and social care which goes on inspection and regulation and make further progress on full cost recovery.

Take forward the commitment in Wednesday's Budget announcement to bring together the Healthcare Commission and the Commission for Social Care Inspection by 2008.

The ALB budgets we are setting for 2005–06 will reduce Department of Health funding by more than £150 million compared with 2003–04. The resulting savings will contribute to our overall investment in NHS front-line healthcare. Taken together with growing efficiencies in services provided by ALBs to the wider NHS they place the sector on a firm footing to achieve the target of £500 million savings by the end of 2007–08.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Lord Carlile

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): Lord Carlile of Berriew QC has agreed to perform the role of independent reviewer of the operation of the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

I am grateful to Lord Carlile for accepting this invitation, and for his continuing work as reviewer of the Terrorism Act 2000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

North West Regional Development Agency

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I have decided to reappoint Bryan Gray as the chair of North West regional development agency, for a second term.

The appointment will begin on 1 April 2005 and will expire in 13 December 2008. I have placed further details of this appointment in the Libraries of both Houses.

The appointment was made in accordance with the code of practice of the commissioner for public appointments.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Medical Services

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Maria Eagle): Today the Department for Work and Pensions announces the outcome of the retendering exercise for the provision of medical services.

The current contract for provision of service expires on 31 August 2005 with the replacement contract beginning 1 September.

A contract notice was dispatched to the Official Journal of the European Union (ref 2003/S 182–164829) on 11 September 2003. The procurement was conducted in accordance with negotiated procedure under the European Community Services Directive Article 11 (2) (b) and (c), as implemented in the United Kingdom by the Public Services Contracts regulations 1993, regulation 10 (2) (b) and (c) (the "regulations").

Three service providers were short-listed:

Atos Origin (the incumbent)

Capita

Vertex

Throughout 2004, all three short-listed providers were afforded extensive due diligence and equal opportunity to develop innovative solutions for an improved service.

Following a comprehensive evaluation of bids, which balanced proposed operational solutions against value for money considerations, the replacement contract has been awarded to Atos Origin.

The contract duration is for 10 years with an option to break at year seven in the event of unsatisfactory performance by the contractor. The overall contract value is approximately £666 million over 10 years (net present value).

Under the terms of the replacement contract a number of service improvements have been secured including: faster turnaround times for medical assessments; improved quality of information to decision makers; proposals to recruit and retain additional medical resources—including use of appropriate health care professionals; and improvements for customer contact.

An experienced contract management team is in place who will work collaboratively with Atos Origin to secure improvements and service delivery for customers.

Written Ministerial Statements

DEFENCE

Chemical Weapons Convention

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): The UK's chemical protection programme is designed to protect against the use of chemical weapons. Such a programme is permitted by the Chemical Weapons Convention, with which the United Kingdom is fully compliant. Under the terms of the convention, we are required to provide information annually to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW). In accordance with the Government's commitment to openness, I am placing in the Library of the House a copy of the summary that has been provided to the organisation outlining the UK's chemical protection programme in 2004.

Skynet 5

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am pleased to announce that Skynet 5 has been accepted into service on time and to cost.

This represents a tremendous accomplishment by all parties concerned in the enterprise arrangement, and shows how PFI can successfully be brought to bear to provide our armed forces with the best available capability at the right price.

In addition to the enhancement to our defence capability, achievement of ISD is good news for our industry. The achievement shows that excellent results can be achieved in a demanding environment through close partnering between public and private sectors. The Skynet 5 project enables around 1,900 jobs to be sustained or created over the life of the programme.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Beacon Councils

The Minister for Local and Regional Government (Mr. Nick Raynsford): We are announcing today the Beacon Councils for round six of the scheme. Some 44 applications from 48 authorities have been successful across 10 different themes. Government Ministers made their decisions following recommendations from the independent advisory panel on Beacon Councils. Copies of the panel report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Beacon council scheme was set up in 1999 and provides a remarkably popular and successful way of both celebrating and promoting best practice in local government. In the first six rounds of the scheme, 275 Beacon awards have been made in 59 service themes. Round six beacons will now work with the improvement and development agency to ensure that their good practice is spread to other authorities. Learning exchanges, where authorities can both disseminate their good practice and learn from the excellence of others, have now been attended by nearly all authorities. These events have helped and will continue to help raise the level of service provision by local government to the people of this country.

Planning for Town Centres

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I am pleased to announce publication today of planning policy statement 6 (PPS6), "Planning for Town Centres" which sets out the Government's policies for promoting vital and viable town centres in urban and rural areas across the country.

PPS6 maintains the town centre first approach to planning for main town centre uses set out in the earlier national guidance on town centres, but places much stronger emphasis on the need for a pro-active plan-led approach to planning for town centres. Positive planning is critically important in ensuring town centres provide enhanced consumer choice, promote economic growth and deliver more sustainable patterns of development.

A further important strengthening of the policy framework in PPS6 is in relation to tackling social exclusion, with greater emphasis being placed on improving the provision of a range of shops and services, and encouraging investment in deprived areas.

PPS 6 applies in England and replaces revised planning policy guidance note 6 (PPG6), "Town Centres and Retail Developments" published in June 1996. The policies in PPS6 should be taken into account by regional planning bodies in the preparation of revisions to regional spatial strategies, by the Mayor of London in relation to the spatial development strategy for Greater London and by local planning authorities in the preparation of local development documents, and may also be material to decisions on individual planning applications.

Over 380 responses to the consultation draft version of PPS6 were received and these responses have been taken into account in finalising PPS6. Draft PPS6 provided guidance on design issues and implementation tools, which has been reviewed and is published today as a separate guidance note, entitled "Planning for Town Centres: Guidance on Design and Implementation Tools", alongside PPS6.

Copies of both documents have been made available in the Libraries of both Houses and are available to download from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website www.odpm.gov.uk/.

[1] During 2005–06, the VGA will endeavour to broaden this measure to reflect the significant additional work being undertaken to prepare for the council tax revaluation in England in 2007, and the new right first time approach to handling appeals against the 2005 rating lists.

[2] During 2005–06 this measure will be broadened to cover all the main areas in which we have direct contact with the citizen, whether as ratepayers or council taxpayers. The indicator will be re-based following the 2005–06 results.

Inheritance Tax and Pensions

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): We have been asked to clarify how inheritance tax (IHT) will apply to choices made by pension scheme members under the new simplified pension regime, and in particular what the implications are when scheme members opt for an alternative secured pension rather than taking an annuity at age 75 as they have been obliged to do in the past.

The same broad principles will continue to apply to the new regime as they have done to the old rules, and as they do to any other situation where people are able to make choices affecting their future wealth and that of others.

People are broadly treated as making a taxable transfer for IHT purposes when they omit to increase their own wealth in favour of increased wealth for others, just as they are when they transfer to others wealth that they already have. This is a principle of general application, and has always applied to choices under pension schemes as it has to any other choices that people make about their wealth. It is important that we maintain this principle, both in the interests of fairness between taxpayers and to ensure that pension funds remain dedicated primarily to providing retirement income.

The Inland Revenue published a statement of practice in 1992 setting out when IHT would be applied to choices made under the pension rules in force at that time. A new and wider range of choices will be available under the simplified regime, and that statement will no longer be valid. Treatment broadly comparable to that in the statement may remain appropriate in some situations, but in others that is clearly no longer so.

I have asked the Revenue to open discussions with interested parties to seek a consensus on the detailed application of IHT law to the new situations arising under the simplified regime, and on how in practice cases which are chargeable should be identified and any charge should be quantified. The Revenue will shortly be publishing a consultation document setting out their analysis of the IHT issues as a basis for these discussions.

ASPs were designed to provide an alternative to annuitisation for those with religious objections to risk pooling. They were not meant as a vehicle for inter-generational transfers by scheme members generally, and the Government will continue to monitor the situation to ensure that they are not being used for avoidance.

HEALTH

Adult Social Care

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): I am announcing today the publication of the Green Paper "Independence, Well-being and Choice: Our Vision for the Future of Social Care for Adults in England" (Cm 6499).

This is an important part of our modernisation programme for public services and will set the social care agenda for the next decade. Formal consultation will enable us to develop firm proposals which will transform the lives of people who use social care by giving them more control and more choice in helping them to decide how their needs can best be met.

These ambitions are based on what people who use services told us they would like to see. Turning this shared vision into reality will mean that social care services will have to be redesigned to give people more control over their assessments and how the money is spent. But this is not just about social care services. We want to see the capacity of the whole community harnessed to make sure that people have access to the full range of universal services to secure the best possible outcomes for all adults.

The key proposals in the paper include the wider use of direct payments and the piloting of individual budgets to stimulate the development of modern services delivered in a way that people want; a strong strategic and leadership role for local government; closer working between health and social care sectors and greater involvement for the community and voluntary sector; plans to stimulate care capacity and informal caring; and encouraging the use of new models of service delivery including assistive technology and extra care housing, and a greater focus on preventative services.

The ideas that we have put forward are designed to encourage and stimulate discussion about the future direction for adult social care. We would expect to develop concrete proposals for implementation following the formal consultation.

The consultation will run until 28 July 2005 and will apply to England only. Copies of "Independence, Well-being and Choice" have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and are also available from my Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/socialcare

Security and Development

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I am today placing in the Libraries of both Houses copies of a new paper entitled "Fighting poverty to build a safer world: a strategy for security and development", published by the Department for International Development (DFID).

The strategy—which has been produced in close consultation with other Government Departments, NGOs, researchers, the UN and other international organisations—analyses the links between security and development. It shows how we can better promote the security of the poor, and suggests ways in which the international system can better achieve both security and development goals.

Security matters for poor people in poor countries. In times of peace, they are the worst affected by violent crime, lawlessness and state-sanctioned abuse; and in times of conflict, millions of poor people have been killed, injured or forced from their homes. So the poor need security as much as they need clean water, schooling or affordable health.

DFID has been at the forefront of international efforts to promote security for poor people. We have initiated programmes to support police and security sector reform in developing countries, in order to make these public services more effective and accountable; we have improved access to justice for poor people; we have tackled poor governance; and we have developed ways of analysing conflict and insecurity, including their impact on the poor. But we need to do more. Our aim is to promote security as a basic entitlement of poor people.

The strategy explains how we will put the safety and security of the poor at the heart of our development work. We will make more use of political and conflict analysis in our programme design; pay greater attention to how regional and global conflict and insecurity affect the poor in countries where we work; focus our work to improve governance more directly on the security of the poor, including giving more attention to the role of security and police services and the judiciary; link conflict prevention and conflict reduction more regularly into our programmes; and work with a wider range of civil society organisations, so as to build relationships with groups with different views on development.

To implement the strategy, we will work closely with other Government Departments, international organisations including the European Union and the United Nations, and Governments and communities in our partner countries.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Good Relations in Northern Ireland

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. John Spellar): This statement sets out how I intend to take forward the policy and strategic framework for good relations in Northern Ireland.

The Government's vision for the future of Northern Ireland is that of a peaceful, prosperous, stable and fair society firmly founded on the achievement of reconciliation, tolerance and mutual trust and the protection and vindication of human rights for all. The founding principles of partnership, equality and mutual respect ensure a basis for good relationships.

The publication of the policy today sets out our aim of establishing over time a shared society defined by a culture of tolerance—a normal, civic society, in which all individuals are considered as equals, which respects diversity and where violence is an illegitimate means to resolve differences, but where differences are resolved through dialogue in the public sphere. The policy document outlines realistically the scale of the challenge and that good relations will build on the significant progress of the equality agenda.

The policy objectives to achieve the policy aim include: eliminating sectarianism, racism and all forms of prejudice to enable people to live and work without fear or intimidation; reducing tension and conflict at interface areas; facilitating the development of a shared community where people wish to learn, live, work and play together; promoting civic-mindedness via citizenship education through school and lifelong learning; protecting members of minorities (whether for example by religion, race or any other grounds) and mixed marriages from intimidation and ensure perpetrators are brought to justice; ensure that all public services are delivered impartially and guided by economy, efficiency and effectiveness; shaping policies, practices and institutions to enable trust and good relations to grow; encouraging understanding of the complexity of our history, through museums and a common school curriculum; supporting cultural projects which highlight the complexity and overlapping nature of identities and their wider global connections; supporting and learning from organisations working across ethnic divides for reconciliation, including those operating on a north-south basis; ensuring that voice is given to the diverse victims of violence in Northern Ireland, including via archives and victim-centred reconciliation events; encouraging communication, tolerance and trust across Northern Ireland, but particularly in areas where communities are living apart; promoting dialogue between, and mutual understanding of, different faiths and cultural backgrounds, both long-standing within Northern Ireland and recent arrivals to these shores, guided by overarching human-rights norms.

The policy, which is underpinned by a series of fundamental principles, will be taken forward at three levels. First, a triennial action plan covering actions across public authorities will be prepared by the autumn. Second, the roles and functions of the Community Relations Council will be enhanced to support the policy. Third, a new district council good relations challenge programme will be established by 2007 to replace the existing district council community relations' programme Government will lead by example and set the pace to promote good relations with a strong public policy agenda. Ultimately, however, sustained and deeper progress depends on political stability. It will require leadership at political, civic and community levels.

Copies of "A Shared Future: Policy and Strategic Framework for Good Relations in Northern Ireland" have been placed in the Libraries of the House and are also available on the website www.asharedfutureni.gov.uk/

The racial equality strategy for Northern Ireland will be published in the near future, following consultation with the Northern Ireland Race Forum.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Business Service

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): The Small Business Service (SBS) is today publishing its business plan for 2005–06. I have placed copies of the plan in the Libraries of both Houses. It is also available on the SBS website at: www.sbs.gov.uk.

The SBS published a Government action plan for small business in January 2004. The plan identified a set of practical actions focused on improving policy and delivery as it affects small business. For the first time, it aligned contributions from the whole of government behind clear objectives for encouraging enterprise and improving the environment for small business. Implementing the action plan and working with government partners to refresh it remains a priority for the SBS this year.

The business plan also sets out the ways in which the SBS will develop its capabilities to ensure that it is equipped to play an enhanced policy leadership and influencing role within government, across the regions and internationally on small business issues.

The plan identifies 10 key agency targets for 2005–06. These are to:

Increase enterprise awareness in young people by supporting a further "Make your Mark: Start Talking Ideas" campaign culminating in a successful second "Enterprise Week" in November 2005 targeted on people in a wider 14–30 age group.

Continue to support and promote social enterprise by completing a review of the Government's three-year strategy by July 2005, and establishing future priorities for action.

Increase the availability of risk capital for high growth potential businesses, by launching a pathfinder round of enterprise capital funds within two months of EU state aid clearance being obtained.

Hold a conference on risk capital in October 2005 as part of the UK's EU Presidency to highlight the importance of risk capital for small businesses with growth potential, and explore ways of increasing its availability in the UK and elsewhere in the EU.

Work with the SBS's lender partners to launch a simplified, better targeted and more consistently available form of the small firms loan guarantee by December 2005 in line with the recommendations of the Graham review.

Encourage female entrepreneurship by implementing recommendations being made by the Women's Enterprise Panel to increase the proportion of women-owned businesses by March 2006, and take decisions on whether to establish a National Women's Business Council by July 2005.

Work in partnership with the English regional development agencies to focus the business link service on information, diagnostic and brokerage services, and further improve on current levels of business link market penetration and customer satisfaction by April 2006.

Improve small business access to public sector procurement and R&D opportunities by launching a supplier route to Government web portal by October 2005, and re-invigorating the Small Business Research Initiative so that more government departments are meeting the target of procuring 2.5 per cent. of their R&D from small and medium size businesses by March 2006.

Complete a review of the UK's key regulatory and administrative processes using the World Bank's "Doing Business" survey as a benchmark and, with the Small Business Council, make recommendations on the scope for streamlining and simplifying these processes by January 2006.

Increase the SBS's influence on small business issues within government, across the regions and internationally by building its capabilities as a source of expertise, leadership and challenge.

Transport for London

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Mr Tony McNulty): The Government have been working with Transport for London (TfL) and the Greater London Authority (GLA) to set out projections of the impact of TfL's business plan on the Department for Transport (DfT) national priorities, in order to generate overall agreed TfL planned outcomes.

These projections are in the format of 2010 outcomes which are given in the table below. The table also includes the year end position for 2005–06 which is consistent with the planned 2010 result.

These have been agreed at a working level between TfL, GLA and DfT, which I have discussed with the Mayor. They will be considered by the TfL Board on the 23 March, and are being published today alongside the TfL board papers. These outcomes are based on modelling, and as such will be updated as actual data is received.

Target area	Outcome by 2010	2005/6 outcome
Air Quality Reduction in emissions from surface transport compared to 2000 levels	-37% NO2 emissions - 41% PM10 emissions	-21% NO2 emissions - 23% PM10 emissions
Road Safety Meet national targets compared to 1994–8 average	-40% all KSI[1] -50% child KSI inc. tackling casualties in deprived areas.	-25% all KSI -43% child KSI
Capacity Public transport capacity compared to 2000	+18% place km operated, am peak	+7% (33.1 km operated, am peak)

Road Congestion[2]	To be confirmed	To be confirmed

[1] Killed or Seriously Injured

[2] New national measures of congestion are currently in development, and therefore it is not possible to estimate the impact of TfL's plan in those terms at this time.

These are in addition to the targets for London Underground Limited (LUL) agreed between LUL, TfL and DfT in May 2002, www.TfL.gov.uk/tfl/downloads/pdf/integration-day/tfl-focus-on-tube.pdf (p.17–18) which will continue to be monitored.

Written Ministerial Statements

TREASURY

House of Lords: Contingencies Fund Advance

Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Paul Boateng): The House of Lords is shortly to purchase new accommodation. In lieu of completion, which is expected to take place shortly, the Treasury agreed a cash advance essential to the purchase from the Contingencies Fund on 16 March in the sum of £50,294,225. This advance was given prior to the Royal Assent to the Appropriation Act on 17 March which gives parliamentary authority for the expenditure.

The advance will be repaid from the spring supplementary estimate.

Financial Services

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): The Treasury is today publishing "The UK financial services sector: Rising to the challenges and opportunities of globalisation". Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. The document is also accessible on the Treasury website at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/.

The paper sets out how the UK financial services sector will be integral to helping the rest of the UK economy and society respond to long-term global economic changes, and presents a series of associated challenges for the sector and for policy-makers.

Parliamentary Questions

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): The Treasury has conducted a review into the costing of oral and written parliamentary questions. The revised costs, which will apply from 1 April 2005, are:

Oral questions	£369
Written questions	£134

The disproportionate cost threshold (DCT) relating to answers to written parliamentary questions and the recently introduced cost limit for requests to central Government under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) are set at the same level—£600. The FOIA cost limit is due to be reviewed later this year. In order to maintain consistency between the two limits for the time being, the DCT will remain at £600.

Budget Resolution 28

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): It has been drawn to my attention that there was an inadvertent error in Budget resolution 28. This resolution should have read as follows:

> "That provision may be made for the purposes of corporation tax about—
> (a) amounts that are not to be allowed as deductions for the purposes of the Corporation Tax Acts; and
> (b) contributions to the capital of any company that are to be treated as income arising to the company."

The corrected text appears in today's Order Paper.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Legal Services Reform

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor, Lord Falconer of Thoroton, has made the following written ministerial statement in the other place yesterday, 21 March 2005.

"On 15 December 2004, I informed the House that I had warmly welcomed Sir David Clementi's report on the regulation of legal services in England and Wales and broadly accepted his main recommendations. Since publication of the report, I have met key stakeholders, including consumer groups, a number of times. In the course of these meetings we have built a strong consensus in support of consumer-focused reform of legal services.

I will publish a White Paper later this year. I will set out detailed proposals for a Legal Services Board. Regulatory powers will be vested in the board, and delegated by it to the professional bodies, as long as they meet the standards the board sets. The professional bodies will be required to separate their regulatory and representative functions.

The White Paper will set out the arrangements for appointing members to the Legal Services Board, and will propose a lay chair and a lay majority with appointments being made on merit, by the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs. The board will have a range of sanctions available. The White Paper will set these out but I expect them to include setting targets, imposing fines, issuing guidance, directing a professional body and removing one or more regulatory powers, with the board ultimately having the power to remove regulatory powers from any professional body which has failed. Taken together, these arrangements provide a robust framework that will promote consumer interests.

I accept Sir David's recommendation for an Office for Legal Complaints. This will be simpler for consumers to use and understand and will provide consistent, fair and professional handling of cases for all complainants. As with the Legal Services Board, the White Paper will set out the detailed arrangements, but I expect the office will also be led by a board with a lay chair and a lay majority.

I warmly welcome Sir David's proposals to facilitate the creation of new business structures. Non-lawyers will be able for the first time to become managers, owners or investors in legal practices. This will create an opportunity to bring in new capital and develop new ways of working that should benefit consumers. Robust safeguards will be established to protect the consumer and the profession's reputation. Many of the changes that will be outlined in the White Paper will require legislation and I intend to bring forward that legislation when parliamentary time allows. I am committed to legislating to bring the regulatory framework I have described into full effect.

I can announce today that I have set up a consumer panel to advise the Government as we take forward reforms. The panel will comprise representatives from Citizens Advice, the Federation of Small Businesses, the National Consumer Council, the Welsh Consumer Council and Which?.

Going forward, I will continue to work closely with all interested parties to ensure that we establish a new framework for the regulation of legal services that protects and promotes the needs of consumers and allows the legal profession to flourish and retain its reputation as the best in the world."

Law Commission

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): On 12 May 2003 my noble Friend Baroness Scotland of Asthal, the then Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, announced that John Halliday CB had submitted the report of his independent review of the Law Commission on 31 March 2003. She added that the Lord Chancellor had welcomed the thrust of the recommendations and asked the Ministerial Committee on the Law Commission, which is currently chaired by me, to oversee the action taken on the report.

The Ministerial Committee subsequently authorised the setting up of an interdepartmental project board to manage the implementation of the recommendations. This board has now completed its task and been dissolved.

In all, of the 42 recommendations made, 39 have now been dealt with; two are for the future; and one is being taken forward separately.

Major themes of the 39 recommendations included:

more effective communication between the Law Commission, Government Departments and other stakeholders. As a result a vision and guidance' document, that sets out how the Law Commission and Government Departments will work together, has been published.

ensuring that the Law Commission's programmes of law reform are based on the best possible assessment of needs, priorities and resources. Consequently, the Law Commission undertook a wide consultation when preparing its ninth programme, which has been published today, 22 March 2005.

the development of more effective programme and project management at the Law Commission. As a result, the Law Commission has established a new electronic programme management system that will come into operation at the start of the ninth programme on 1 April 2005.

improving the processes for deciding on and implementing Law Commission recommendations. As a result, time limits have been set by the Ministerial Committee on the Law Commission within which Government Departments are required to respond to commission reports.

Recommendation 30, aimed at identifying special parliamentary procedures to facilitate scrutiny of Law Commission Bills, is being taken forward separately by the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

The vision and guidance and the paper setting out the quinquennial review recommendations and how the Government have responded to them have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and will shortly be available on the website of the Department for Constitutional Affairs at: www.dca.gov.uk

Key Targets for the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): The key targets have been set for the chief executive of the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA) for the financial year 2005–06. The targets build upon progress made by the agency since it formed on 1 April 1997 and reflect the importance of achieving joint personnel administration implementation whilst maintaining current outputs. Furthermore they provide customers with assurance that, in focusing on joint personnel administration and higher profile services such as pay and pensions, AFPAA will continue to give sufficient attention to the broad range of other outputs.

To keep the monthly error rate of accuracy for the volume of payments within 0.1 per cent.

2. To Deliver Pension Services

To make 99 per cent. of all pension payments (including new awards) by the due date, (excluding late payments caused by events determined to be outside the control of the agency).

To keep the monthly error rate of accuracy for the volume of payments within 0.1 per cent.

8. To deliver an efficient and effective MOD medal service.

To reduce the MOD medal office assessment backlog from 45,000 as at 1 April 2005 to21,000 by 31 March 2006.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Planning Delivery Grant and Fee Increases

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): In July 2002 my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced that he would be making an additional £350 million available to local authorities over the period 2003–06 to improve the delivery of planning services. Since then, we have announced that the Planning Delivery Grant (PDG) will continue, with a further £255 million being made available in the period to 2008. We have now decided the basis on which we will distribute the majority of the Planning Delivery Grant of £170 million in 2005–06 and will be informing recipients of their allocations.

The grant is performance related. Our aim is to enhance the resourcing of the planning system in a way that drives performance improvement and ensures effective delivery of our objectives for sustainable communities. It is specifically targeted towards meeting the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's public service agreements (PSA) 5 and 6. PSA 5 aims to achieve a better balance between housing availability and demand. PSA 6 requires all authorities to have local development frameworks in place (in accordance with agreed local development schemes) and to meet the best value development control targets by the end of 2006–07.

I can confirm today the amount of grant to be distributed to authorities in 2005–06 is £162.12 million. It will be paid to local planning authorities at a district and county level, national parks, regional planning bodies, the Broads Authority and the Greater London authority. A small amount of the grant, £4.73 million, will be top-sliced to support a number of national initiatives directly related to improving local authority planning performance. A smaller amount, £3 million, will be allocated to the Planning Inspectorate for their work on local development plan preparation.

Local authorities are rewarded for both improvement towards and achievement of best value development control targets in the period October 2003 to September 2004. Grant allocations are enhanced for local authorities within the high housing demand and growth areas as identified in the Communities Plan in proportion to their contribution towards delivering net additions to the housing stock. Pathfinder authorities receive an allocation of £160,000 in recognition of the low demand for housing in their sub-regions. Local authorities are also awarded £5,000 for each enterprise area within their boundary, up to a maximum of £100,000 for any single authority. Local authorities will be paid by determination under Section 31 of the Local Government Act 2003, copies of which will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses, along with a detailed spreadsheet showing the breakdown of the allocations for individual authorities.

For the first time, local planning authorities will receive payments in recognition of their online planning provision. The "e-planning" allocations will range from £20,658.68 to £100,000 to all authorities satisfying a minimum of 10 out of 21 e-planning criteria, with the highest awards going to those who achieve all 21. Also for the first time, specific allocations will be made for performance on "county matters" applications in relation to minerals and waste, enabling county councils and those other authorities who deal with such applications to receive PDG.

An element of the grant that rewards authorities for submitting a Local Development Scheme (LDS) to Government offices will follow later this year but cannot be included with this allocation as the deadline for LDS submission, 28 March 2005, has not yet passed.

In the first year of the Planning Delivery Grant (2003–04) grant was paid without condition. In 2004–05 two conditions were imposed on PDG payments. This year, these conditions will remain, to ensure that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has the power to act appropriately to partly withhold payment or recover part or all of grant paid where there are concerns over the accuracy or proven inaccuracies in the information on which allocations were made. I may consider withholding up to 10 per cent. of the grant allocated to authorities whose Best Value Performance Indicator 109 (BVPI 109) has been qualified by the auditor until we have established to our satisfaction the reason for the qualification and the reliability of the data on which grant was allocated. Following this I may seek to recover some or all of the monies paid to those authorities.

The second condition relates to performance on appeals, and this year it has been strengthened. Where an authority's performance on appeal is 40 per cent. worse than the national average (33.81 per cent. of appeals upheld against the authority), 10 per cent. of their development control allocation will be abated. Where this performance is 50 per cent. worse than the average, this abatement will increase to 20 per cent. of the development control allocation. This condition underlines the continuing importance we place on quality in decision making.

Grant allocations are not ring-fenced and authorities have complete discretion in the way they spend this money, although this year, 25 per cent. of the total grant paid to any individual authority will be limited to capital spending. The remaining 75 per cent. can be spent by the local authority on resource or capital budgets.

Regional Planning Bodies receive grant to support their work preparing regional spatial strategies and in recognition of the additional work which the strengthened regional planning function involves. In 2005–06 this totals just under £7 million. The Greater London authority (GLA) receives grant in recognition of its plan making responsibilities. The award is based on the GLA's performance against its business plan, and is given in recognition of work in bringing forward alteration of the waste plan, the housing capacity study, and progress against the annual monitoring report.

Decisions have yet to be taken on the basis of the grant for 2006–07. However, the requirement to meet PSA 5 and 6 means that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will continue to link grant awards to improved planning performance so as to incentivise authorities to reach and exceed the development control handling targets while maintaining high decision quality, incentivise delivery of housing in areas of high housing demand and provide greater e-planning provision. Authorities should be aware that they will need to continue to secure improvement in these areas to receive grant in future years. We will monitor performance in all aspects of Planning Delivery

Grant in order to inform future decisions on this. We will consult on full proposals for allocations before any final decisions are taken. The announcement of the grant for 2006–07 will be brought forward to later in 2005, following the consultation process. This is in line with other announcements of grant, and will help to increase certainty in budget setting processes.

A table showing the amounts payable will be made available in the Libraries of both Houses. This sets out the details of each recipient's grant.

Planning Fees

Planning fees will be increased on 1 April 2005, to enable authorities to move closer to recovery of costs on planning applications. The increases were consulted on in a paper I published on 15 December 2004, Official Report, columns 135–37WS. They will average 39 per cent. and raise an estimated £68 million in additional revenue, will be spread proportionately to the types of applications. The fees for a householder extension will rise from £110 to £135, whilst the maximum fee for a major development will rise from £11,000 to £50,000.

Fee increases are part of the package of resources, along with Planning Delivery Grant, that are designed to improve the quality of planning services and support the changes which the government is introducing as part of its reform of the planning system. For some time, it has been the case that the costs of handling planning applications have been significantly higher than the fees associated with them. These increases address the imbalance and provide authorities with a level of resources which we expect to see leading to improvements in the quality of services.

Minerals Policy Statement 2

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I am announcing today the publication of a new minerals policy statement on "Controlling and Mitigating the Environmental Effects of Minerals Extraction in England". The new minerals policy statement 2 (MPS2), and its two annexes covering dust and noise, will replace and extend minerals policy guidance note 11 (MPG11), "The Control of Noise at Surface Mineral Workings", published in 1993.

A draft of MPS2 was issued for public consultation in February 2003. The key policy aim of MPS2 is to minimise any significant adverse environmental effects that may arise from minerals extraction.

Mineral planning authorities will need to have regard to the policies in MPS2 in preparing minerals and waste development schemes as part of local development frameworks. The policies will also be material to decisions on individual planning applications where environmental issues connected with minerals extraction arise or which concern minerals extraction. Planning authorities have an important role to play in facilitating an adequate supply of minerals to meet the need of society whilst ensuring that the environmental impacts caused by mineral operations and the transport of minerals are kept to an acceptable minimum.

Copies of MPS2 are being made available in the Libraries of both Houses following publication. It is also being placed on the website of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I have today published two consultation papers on proposed secondary legislation and guidance to implement some of the development control provisions in the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004. The papers take forward provisions to simplify and speed up the planning system and to facilitate greater community involvement.

We are preparing to implement the development control provisions in Part 4 of the Act in stages. Where the provisions in the Act require secondary legislation we are proposing changes to the General Development Procedure Order (GDPO), the listed building regulations and the advertisement regulations. We are considering responses to our first consultation paper entitled "Changes to the development control system" published on 30 November 2004. A further consultation paper "Planning Control of Mezzanine and Other Internal Floorspace Additions" was published on 3 March 2005, Official Report, columns 93 and 94WS.

"Changes to the Development Control System Second Consultation Paper" covers local development orders (LDO's). Local authorities will be able to grant permission for the type of development specified in the order. There will be no need for a planning application. It is envisaged that there will be reduced costs and greater certainty for developers, whether they be householders or businesses. Local authorities may benefit by dealing with fewer routine applications thereby freeing resources for the consideration of more major applications. LDOs might potentially prove a useful tool for local authorities seeking to deliver high quality housing developments more quickly.

The paper covers the interrelated subjects of outline planning permission, reserved matters and design and access statements. I announced in a written statement on 23 March 2004, Official Report, columns 48–50WS during the passage of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Bill that applications for outline planning permission must provide a level of information to assess all the significant environmental impacts. The paper proposes that applications should include information on use, quantum of development, indicative layout, scale parameters and indicative access points. It also proposes some amendments to reserved matters requiring further detailed information. The amendments include information on layout and scale. The new Act contains a requirement for both design and access statements. The Government now propose—for simplicity and efficiency—that one statement would cover both design and access. The purpose of the statement is to explain and justify the design and access principles and concepts on which a development proposal is based. Most applications for planning permission and all applications for listed building consent will need to be accompanied by a design and access statement. The length of statements should be proportional to the complexity of the application.

The paper covers procedures for determining major applications. We plan to change an outdated provision in the GDPO that allows applicants to appeal major applications for non-determination after only eight weeks. This is an unreasonable turnaround time for local authorities, not to mention being out of kilter with Government targets of 13 weeks. Our proposals would alter the period that an applicant must wait before appealing a major application to 13 weeks, harmonising Government best value targets and Government guidance with the relevant secondary legislation.

The best practice guidance on the validity of planning applications published on 7 March was the first stage in clarifying planning practice in this area. The second stage, outlined in the consultation paper, is to clarify the idea of a valid application. We want to specify in secondary legislation that a planning application is valid only when it contains all the information required by local authorities and when accompanied by the correct fee. This measure would cut down on the number of applications that go to the planning inspectorate on appeal without ever having been accepted as valid by a local authority and would generally increase the accessibility and transparency of the planning application process.

We also want to use this opportunity to establish in secondary legislation the exact period of determination: from the first full day after a valid planning application has been received until the day on which a decision notice is dispatched.

We intend that, after a 14 week consultation period and consideration of the responses received, the provisions would come into effect in the autumn.

The other paper I am publishing today contains proposals for a standard application form for planning applications and related consent regimes. The paper refers to a prototype electronic application form called 1 APP which can be tested on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's web-site. The prototype allows for householder applications, demolition in a conservation area and listed building consent. Our intention is to develop the electronic form to cover all related consent regimes including outline and full planning permission, trees, advertisements, minerals and waste. In finalising the form we will take account of work under the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's householder development consents review. When the electronic form goes live, probably next year, people will be able to apply either on-line or on paper.

Copies of the documents will be made available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Local Government Performance

The Minister for Local and Regional Government (Mr. Nick Raynsford): Today we are making a number of announcements relating to local government performance and the improvement of local services. We are publishing the fourth in a series of discussion documents taking forward the debate on the future of local government that we began last July with the publication of "The future of local government: Developing a 10 year vision".

"Securing better outcomes: Developing a new performance framework" is intended to stimulate debate around the key principles that the Government consider should make up a new performance framework to secure more effective and efficient delivery of local services. The document is jointly published with Treasury and, building on the devolving decision-making review last year, sets out a broad framework for developing a more devolved approach to delivery of local services, including increased personalisation of services. It emphasises:

- opportunities for users and residents to influence local priorities and the design and delivery of services—including through more choice and personalisation,
- a reduction in bureaucracy—through a more coherent approach to managing performance, with clear national priorities, but with local government having the freedom to take responsibility for securing outcomes that meet the needs of their citizens and for improving their own performance in the way that the best councils are doing
- more flexibility to enable faster and better tailored responses to local circumstances—building on the experience of local area agreements
- the potential for developing an increasingly area based approach between councils and their partners—with greater focus on accountability between local partners in achieving common outcomes for the area
- the importance of strategic, integrated relationship management through Government Offices to tailor negotiations, co-ordinate engagement and support, and challenge and respond to significant under-performance
- the need for better and more transparent information to underpin any effective performance system.

The discussion paper also expands on the Chancellor's Budget announcement about a rationalised inspection landscape, including the creation of a single local services inspectorate by 2008. This inspectorate will bring together the functions of the Audit Commission and the benefit fraud inspectorate in relation to inspection of English local authorities. It will also have an important role as a gatekeeper and co-ordinator for all inspection of local authorities. The paper also looks at how inspection could be refocused in the longer term.

Copies of the document have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and are available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: www.odpm.gov.uk/localvision. I would urge those with an interest in local government to let us know their views on the issues discussed in this and the other discussion documents we have published.

The Government's aim is to give people the powers and resources to have a greater influence over the key decisions which affect their community. The new local area agreements, which were the subject of the first local vision discussion document, are one example of how we are enabling local authorities to work in partnership with other organisations in the public, private and voluntary sectors to target resources on local priorities.

The first 20 local area agreements (LAAs) will be signed today marking the successful completion of the negotiations on these pilots. The full, long-term agreements will be in place from 1 April 2005, enabling some £500 million of central government funding to be pooled or aligned locally to achieve better outcomes. The signing of these first LAAs means they can now be translated into better delivery of local public services. LAAs will simplify funding streams and help to join up public services. They will also enable local areas to have more freedom to work in innovative ways to benefit their communities.

As well as celebrating the success of those involved in the first round of LAAs today we are also laying out future developments for LAAs. This includes publishing the application criteria for a further 40 LAAs to be in place by April 2006. As with the first phase of pilot LAAs, the aim will be to ensure that there is a good regional spread of areas, a mix of single tier authorities and counties and linkages with other pilot initiatives in the next phase. Areas wishing to be in the next phase will have until mid-May to express an interest and areas selected will be announced in June.

It will also be confirmed later today that responsibility for local public service agreement (LPSA) negotiations will be transferred from departmental teams to the Government Offices, also responsible for overseeing the negotiations for LAAs. LPSAs cover additional service targets agreed between central and local government, with the incentive of additional grant rewards if these targets are met. The second generation of LPSAs are increasingly focused on local priorities and are more rigorously outcome-based. Aligning LAAs and LPSAs will help make these initiatives mutually reinforcing, and maximise the potential benefits they offer.

Today's signing ceremony will also highlight the new LAA fourth block, which will focus on economic development. Where LAAs are in place the new Local Enterprise Growth Initiative (LEGI) will be channelled through this fourth block, as proposed in last week's budget. LAAs will allow local authorities to pool this fund and other economic and enterprise funding streams in one place and to use them in a flexible way.

I am also pleased to announce that as a result of the first round of the LPSA scheme fifteen local authorities will receive reward grants totalling £93 million over the next two years. The councils, from across the country, have earned the reward grants for improving performance across a range of services to levels above those previously agreed.

We have also launched a leaflet today bringing local government up to date with the joint Local Government Association Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Capacity Building Programme. The Capacity Building Programme aims to support improvement in local government, by enhancing and developing councils' confidence, leadership, and skills to drive forward improvement as well as developing their capacity to learn, innovate and share knowledge and expertise about what works and how. The leaflet provides details of who is eligible to participate and how the programme can be accessed as well as encouraging local authorities to form improvement partnerships.

Improvement partnerships are voluntary partnerships formed when a group of authorities and or fire and rescue authorities come together to improve their internal capacity either at regional or sub-regional level. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will make £57 million available from the capacity building programme over the next three years to support these improvement partnerships.

Several regions have work underway to develop improvement partnerships, the furthest advanced of which is the North West Improvement Network (NWIN). We will provide NTWTN with £7.9 million over the next three years to support it in its work of creating a network of local authorities and other partners in the region committed to mutual improvement.

These announcements show the Government's continuing commitment to working with local government to improve the outcomes for all our citizens, by allowing local authorities and their local partners more flexibility to be able to make the decisions about the issues that affect their areas.

Hull and East Riding (Gateway) Market Renewal Pathfinder

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): Today I am announcing that we are awarding £16 million from the Housing Market Renewal Fund to the Hull and East Riding (Gateway) market renewal pathfinder to help revitalise areas in Hull blighted by abandoned homes and low demand housing. This investment will enable the pathfinder to start projects to improve poor quality housing and weak housing markets, working in partnership with the private sector.

Over the next year, Gateway will begin delivering:

The redevelopment of poor standard housing on the Ings estate in Hull;

The assembly of sites of land for housing redevelopment in west Hull, to replace abandoned homes.

The restructuring of existing plans to redevelop the Kingswood area in the north of the city so that it reconnects with north Bransholme estate in Hull, enabling the serious abandonment problems to be tackled more effectively.

The pathfinder will bring forward a scheme update in 2006 enabling further grant, of up to £35 million, to be awarded then.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Bill (Stray Dogs)

The Minister for Rural Affairs and Local Environmental Quality (Alun Michael): The intended impact of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Bill in regard to stray dogs is to achieve clarity and consistency in the way stray dog services are delivered. This statement is intended to explain how that will be achieved and address concerns raised with me by animal welfare charities.

The current situation is unsatisfactory because under under section 149 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and section 3 of the Dogs Act 1906, responsibility for stray dogs is shared between local authorities and the police. As neither is fully responsible for providing a service, the position has been patchy at best and has often been inadequate outside normal office hours. As a result of discussions involving the police and local authorities as well as relevant Government Departments, it has been decided to simplify the law and the allocation of responsibilities. For that reason clause 68 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Bill and part 6 of schedule 5 to the Bill provide for the responsibility of the police in respect of stray dogs to be repealed. When this provision comes into force local authorities will be solely responsible for dealing with stray dogs in their area. This clarity is in the public interest and in the interest of animal welfare. This additional demand on local authorities will be funded through an agreed and appropriate transfer from the Home Office to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and will not be brought into effect until the transfer has been made. The Local Government Association and the police have indicated support to this approval.

This change will place the onus on local authorities to have arrangements in place for dealing with stray dogs on a twenty-four hour basis, seven days a week. Concern had been expressed by animal welfare charities on this very point but the impact of the proposed legislation is very clear.

In addition guidance will be issued explaining what local authorities will need to do to comply with this requirement. The issues the guidance is expected to cover include:

how local authorities can ensure that facilities of a suitable standard are in place to take stray dogs at any time. These could be provided by local authorities themselves or local authorities may prefer to contract the service out to local dog boarding kennels, animal welfare organisations, the police or veterinary practices;

the arrangements they will need to set in place to inform anyone who finds a stray dog where to take it. As with other local authority responsibilities such as social welfare or child care. We would expect good arrangements with the local police to assist the public in making contact with the right person when a problem is reported;

the need to ensure that any sick or injured stray dog is promptly treated to an appropriate standard; this will need to be covered in contracts with those providing a service in respect of stray dogs; best practice in finding homes for stray dogs and limiting the number of healthy stray dogs that are put down.

The RSPCA, the Dogs Trust and the Kennel Club have been consulted on the issues that will be covered in the guidance, and are satisfied; these organisations will be fully involved in the preparation of the guidance itself.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Voluntary and Community Sector

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Fiona Mactaggart): I am pleased to announce today a series of initiatives that will strengthen the partnership between Government and the voluntary and community sector and support the sector to continue to develop capacity. The Government recognise the invaluable role that the voluntary and community sector plays in delivering services, building strong communities and empowering citizens to tailor services to local needs.

I am publishing a consultation document today called "Strengthening Partnerships: Next Steps for Compact". The compact is a guidance document that was first developed seven years ago and has made a significant positive impact on the relationship between voluntary and community organisations and the public bodies that fund them. The consultation document invites comments on how we move forward with the compact, building on the valuable experience we have gained so far. Proposals include compact plus, a short set of commitments which public sector bodies and voluntary and community sector organisations can opt into, and a compact champion who would support organisations in realising those commitments and adjudicate on disagreements.

We are also publishing the compact code of good practice on funding and procurement today. This revised funding code includes principles such as full cost recovery and the local dimension. The aim is to get the funding relationships right and keep it right by covering the full funding cycle, from programme design and bidding, monitoring and reporting, through to the conclusion of the financial relationship.

Last year we published a 10-year vision for developing the infrastructure and building the capacity of the voluntary and community sector, within a programme called ChangeUp. This was supported by an investment of £80 million over three years. Today we will be announcing continuation funding of £70 million for a further two years, until 2008. We will also announce the establishment of Capacity Builders, a sector-led agency to run ChangeUp and ensure it benefits front-line organisations

Futurebuilders is a £125 million investment fund to assist voluntary and community organisations and social enterprises in their public service work, announced in September 2003. The fund provides finance to acquire capital assets through grants and loans. Today we announce continuation funding of £90 million for Futurebuilders for a further two years of operation, until 2008.

A capital programme, which acts as a community enterprise incubator fond, was launched in 2001 as the capital modernisation programme in order to invest in the development of frontline voluntary and community organisations (for example, investing in premises and ICT). Today we are announcing an investment of £4 million through this programme to support the development of established community anchor organisations, to provide accommodation and intensive support for embryonic community-based organisations and enterprises.

Tasers

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Caroline Flint): On 15 September 2004, the then Home Secretary announced that he had authorised chief officers throughout England and Wales to deploy the M26 Taser for use in strictly limited circumstances. This allows chief officers to make the M26 Taser available to authorised firearms officers in their force as a less lethal alternative for use in situations where a firearms authority has been granted in accordance with criteria laid down in the ACPO Manual of Guidance on Police Use of Firearms. Since then, a new Taser model, the X26 Taser has been developed and placed on the market.

The Defence Scientific Advisory Council (DSAC) sub-committee on the medical implications of less lethal weapons (DOMILL) was invited to provide a statement on the medical implications of the use of the X26 Taser. The DOMILL statement confirms that the risk of a life-threatening event arising from the direct interaction of the currents of the X26 Taser with the heart, is less than the already low risk of such an event from the M26 Taser. I have placed a copy of the statement in the Library of the House.

I have therefore authorised chief officers to make the X26 Taser available to authorised firearms officers in their force for use as a less lethal alternative for use in situations where a firearms authority has been granted in accordance with criteria laid down in the ACPO Manual of Guidance on Police Use of Firearms. The authorisation for the M26 Taser remains in force.

Prison Management

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): I am announcing today the first competition of a cluster of prisons under the National Offender Management Service (NOMS). This will consist of the three prisons situated on the Isle of Sheppey: HMPs Elmley, Standford Hill and Swaleside. The purpose of the process is to invite bids from all sectors for the management of all three prisons and it will be an opportunity for bidders to demonstrate innovation in developing imaginative approaches to offender management in custody and in the links with interventions in the community.

NOMS will shortly call for expressions of interest and we are confident that this competition will attract high quality bids from a range of existing and potential new providers. We expect to select a preferred supplier by spring 2006.

We are not doing this as a means of reducing costs. We do not expect to run the three prisons for less money as a result of the competition but we do expect increased quality and value for money. Nor is it privatisation through the back door. I have no preconception about the outcome. The winning bid, from whatever sector, will deliver higher quality services and better outcomes in terms of resettlement, with the ultimate aim of reducing re-offending.

Indeed, the roll-out of the two tier work force code of practice, announced last week by the Prime Minister, will produce a level playing field for the contest as all bidders will face the same market conditions and will need to focus on quality rather than cost.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): On 17 March 2005 the Department for International Development hosted a high level conference on the extractive industries transparency initiative (EITI). The EITI was launched by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in September 2002. It seeks to increase the transparency of payments by oil, gas, and mining companies to governments, as well as the transparency of the revenues received by governments. The aim is to ensure that revenues from the extractive industries fulfil their potential as an important engine for economic growth and social development in developing countries, instead of leading to conflict, corruption, and poverty.

The conference follows on from an earlier EITI conference held at Lancaster House in June 2003. Since then implementation has begun in nine countries—Azerbaijan, Congo, Ghana, Kyrgyz Republic, Nigeria, Peru, Sao Tome e Principe, Timor Leste and Trinidad and Tobago. There has been considerable progress towards increased transparency across all nine countries, and two Azerbaijan and the Kyrgyz Republic have now published numbers under EITI.

The conference on 17 March provided an opportunity to take stock of progress in implementation so far, agree a set of criteria and guidelines for implementing countries and companies and encourage practical steps to internationalise EITI. The UK launched the EITI Source book as guidance for countries and companies interested in supporting the initiative. The UK also announced the formation of an international advisory group which will agree an approach to the future management of international EITI support, incentives for implementation and a suitable process for validating implementation. A number of countries including Niger, Cameroon, Democratic Republic of Congo and Equatorial Guinea used the conference as an opportunity to announce their plans to implement EITI; and several countries and international organisations including the United Kingdom, France, Norway, the United States of America, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development agreed to increase financial and technical support for EITI.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Economic Partnership Agreements

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): The EU is currently negotiating Economic Partnership Agreements (EPAs) with the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries, which have been the source of some concern for Members of the House. I warmly welcome the recent commitment made by Peter Mandelson, the European Trade Commissioner, to introduce a much stronger development focus into EPAs. I agree with him that these agreements should promote development by combining aid with wider opportunities for all ACP countries to trade, with each other on an integrated regional basis, and with the EU. In this statement, I would like to set out how the UK believes a stronger development focus could be delivered.

EPAs must be designed to deliver long-term development, economic growth and poverty reduction in ACP countries. To do so, we believe that in its work on EPAs with ACP regional groups, the EU should take a non-mercantilist approach and not pursue any offensive interests.

Developing countries can benefit from liberalisation in the long run, provided they have the economic capacity and infrastructure they need to trade competitively. However, without the capacity or the right conditions, trade liberalisation can be harmful.

Each ACP regional group should make its own decisions on the timing, pace, sequencing, and product coverage of market opening in line with individual countries' national development plans and poverty reduction strategies. Regional groups should have the flexibility to move towards more open markets along a non-linear path if necessary. We will not force trade liberalisation on developing countries either through trade negotiations or aid conditionally.

EPAs must ensure that ACP regional groups have maximum flexibility over their own market opening. The EU should therefore offer all ACP regional groups a period of 20 years or more for market opening, on an unconditional basis. Each regional group should be offered this full period.

Within EPAs, the EU should make an upfront offer of complete duty and quota-free market access to each ACP regional group, with no strings attached. In addition, the EU should further simplify and liberalise rules of origin under EPAs. There should be an effective safeguard mechanism for ACP countries to use if faced with a surge of subsidised EU imports.

EPAs should be accompanied by additional resources to enable the ACP countries to benefit from trade reforms and build their export competitiveness. The EU, in coordination with international financial institutions and other donors, must provide additional financial assistance to support the ACP countries. This assistance must support them in building the infrastructure and economic capacity they need to benefit from trade with the EU and the rest of the world, and put in place the institutions to help manage change and protect vulnerable people, supporting poorer countries with the cost of transition.

Investment, competition and Government procurement should be removed from the negotiations, unless specifically requested by an ACP regional negotiating group. It is for ACP regional groups to judge the development benefits of any agreements on these issues and the EU should not push for them to be discussed. If included, any negotiations on Government procurement should be limited to transparency.

A review mechanism for EPAs—with full ACP regional group ownership and participation—should be introduced to ensure they are delivering the intended developmental benefits. The Commission should be ready to provide an alternative to an EPA at the request of any ACP country. Any alternative offered should provide no worse market access to the EU than is currently enjoyed under Cotonou preferences.

In addition, the EU should propose within the WTO that Article XXIV of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, should be reviewed as suggested by the Commission for Africa, in order to reduce the requirements for reciprocity and increase the focus on development priorities.

Implemented along these lines, Economic Partnership Agreements should provide real development benefits to the ACP countries.

Patent Office

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I have tasked the Patent Office with managing and shaping an intellectual property system which encourages innovation and creativity, balances the needs of consumers and users, promotes strong and competitive markets and provides a firm foundation for the knowledge-based economy. During the coming year, the Patent Office will develop these new activities and form partnerships through which new services will be delivered.

I have also set the Patent Office the following targets for 2005–06:

Patents

1. Issue 90 per cent. patent search reports within five months of request.

2. Grant 90 per cent. of patents within two and a half years of request.

3. Give good customer service in patent search and examination in 95 per cent. of quality assured cases.

Designs

4. Register 95 per cent. of correctly filed design applications, to which no substantiveobjections have been raised, within three months of the date of application.

Trade Marks

5. Register 90 per cent. of processed trade mark class applications, to which no substantive objections are raised or oppositions filed within eight months of application.

6. Achieve an average of 23 weeks to issue a decision in trade marks inter partes cases once the case is ready.

7. Make the correct decision on registrability for at least 98.5 per cent. of trade mark applications.

Construction Industry (Payment Practices)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Nigel Griffiths): I am pleased to announce that today, with Edwina Hart AM, the Welsh Assembly Government Minister for Social Justice and Regeneration, I have launched a joint consultation on "Improving Payment Practices in the Construction Industry".

The consultation proposes a number of amendments to part 2 of the Housing Grants Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 and the Scheme for Construction Contracts (England and Wales) Regulations 1998.

The proposals are aimed at improving the ability of parties to a construction contract to:

reach agreement on what should be paid and when given the work done under the contract or, where they cannot agree, to make an informed referral to, or response at, adjudication; manage cash flow and enable completion of work on the project in the event of problems such as defaulted payments, disputes or insolvencies elsewhere in the supply chain; and, refer disputes to adjudication without disincentives such as avoidance, frustration or unnecessary challenge.

Fair payment practice is something everyone agrees with and a fair payment culture underpins any progressive and modern industry.

This consultation considers a number of issues around the key principles of improving the ability of people in the construction industry manage cash flow on construction projects and to bring about effective delivery, on time and to budget. It provides the opportunity for the whole industry and its clients to come together around a shared set of proposals.

The consultation considers issues and proposals identified during Sir Michael Latham's initial review of the Construction Act, published in September 2004. Following the announcement of the review in the Budget in March 2004, I appointed Sir Michael to produce his report with input from the construction industry representative bodies and other stakeholders. Sir Michael's report raised some key issues. While the continued support of the construction industry representative bodies is vital to the effectiveness of this consultation process, we also hope to build a wider and deeper consensus on how to improve the construction contracts legislation and payment practices in the construction industry.

We have come a long way since the announcement of the review in the 2004 Budget and I hope this consultation process can take the dialogue within the industry further forward over the coming months.

The consultation considers 14 key proposals for amending part 2 of the Housing Grants Construction and Regeneration Act 1996 and the Scheme for Construction Contracts (England and Wales) Regulations 1998. These are:

Payment framework

- Defining the content of an adequate payment mechanism in Section 110(1) of the Construction Act
- Removing the requirement to serve a Section 110(2) notice in the Construction Act
- Providing an application for payment in the legislation
- Redefining the content of withholding notices under Section 111
- Restricting the use of pay-when-certified clauses

Other payment proposals

- Introducing a right to reimbursement for the costs of suspension and remobilisation and providing additional time for remobilisation under Section 112 of the Construction Act
- Making contractual provisions on cross contract set-off ineffective
- Making "pay-when-paid" clauses ineffective in cases of "upstream" insolvency proceedings
- Allowing stage payments under the scheme for construction contracts to be made for materials in advance of their arrival on site

Adjudication proposals

- Preventing the use of trustee stakeholder accounts to suspend an adjudicator's award pending litigation other than when the recipient is involved in insolvency proceedings.
- Providing the adjudicator with the power to rule on certain aspects of his own jurisdiction and providing a right to payment in cases where the adjudicator stands down due to lack of jurisdiction.
- Providing the adjudicator with the right to overturn "final and conclusive" decisions where these are of substance to interim payments only
- Extending the adjudicator's immunity under the Construction Act to claims by third parties
- Applying provisions on adjudicator independence from the scheme for construction contracts to all adjudications in section 108 of the Construction Act

The consultation period will close on 21 June 2005.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Claims Management Companies

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor, Lord Falconer of Thoroton, has made the following written ministerial statement in the other place yesterday, 22 March 2005.

"I am announcing today the intention, when I bring forward proposals for new legislation giving effect to the government's proposed reform package for legal services following Sir David Clementi's report, to bring the claims management company sector within the new statutory regulatory net. I anticipate this would be with a front-line regulator subject to oversight by the proposed new oversight regulator the Legal Services Board.

The Government's response to the Better Regulation Task Force's report Better Routes to Redress made it clear that claims management companies, which often largely deal with acquiring personal injury claims, sector must be properly regulated. Claim management companies are well known for their high-pressure selling, sharp practices and targeting of vulnerable people and a major driver in fuelling the perceptions of a compensation culture.

Claims management companies are currently relatively lightly regulated. There has been an attempt to introduce further voluntary regulation by a non-profit making body called the Claims Standards Council (CSC). The CSC has worked hard to produce comprehensive rules, consumer and commercial codes of practice and to secure the engagement of the companies working in the unregulated sector. However, claims management companies have failed to demonstrate anything like the commitment that I would hoped to have seen by now to clean up their act. I must therefore consider how best to safeguard consumer interests, for now and for the future. The CSC can still play an important role in helping to close the current regulatory gap. If it is able to make sufficient progress to preparing the sector to be regulated it could also be a candidate for the role of the new front line regulator, subject to being judged as fit for purpose by the LSB.

For now I believe that we have the best opportunity to ensure consumers get a better deal through a combination of more rigorous use of existing protections and the introduction of compulsory insurance regulation via the FSA and the CSC's voluntary regulation initiative. For the future we will work towards developing and delivering the watertight statutory regulatory mechanism for claims management companies that is self evidently needed".

Justice and Community Safety Inspectorate

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): Today the Government will publish their report "Establishing an Inspectorate for Justice and Community Safety". Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The proposals for consultation outlined in the report aim to introduce root and branch reform, changing the structure of inspection in the criminal justice system and enhancing the capacity for leadership and decision making.

Independent inspection in the criminal justice system plays an important role in improving services and holding organisations to account for their performance. In recent years every criminal justice agency has undergone reform to deliver improvements to services; it is essential that the inspection regime is reformed to support these changes.

The five justice inspectorates have done an excellent job in driving up performance. Therefore the Government propose to build on the current base of expertise and create an inspectorate for justice and community safety that continues the rigorous independent inspection of criminal justice agencies, including the treatment and conditions of those in custody, whilst broadening this to inspect across organisational boundaries to deliver a more joined up inspection system; an inspection regime that inspects the criminal justice process from end to end, supports the frontline by reducing unnecessary burden and bureaucracy and examines how the system can better deliver for those who come into contact with it.

The Government welcome views on the precise design of the new inspectorate before 15 June 2005.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Television

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell): I have today published the report of the digital television project which sets out advice to Government on the process of digital switchover. The report is the culmination of nearly three years work by broadcasters, regulators and industry working with Government and other stakeholders. The report sets out a detailed strategy for achieving digital switchover and will help inform Government decisions about how and when to proceed with digital switchover.

There are still important questions that need to be resolved before we can announce the final timetable for switchover. We are currently working with the BBC to assess the scope of assistance schemes to help vulnerable consumers through switchover. We will only confirm the timetable once all remaining issues relating to digital switchover are resolved and we are satisfied that the interests of consumers, especially the most vulnerable, are well protected.

Copies of the report of the digital television project have been placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Warship Support Agency

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): The House will wish to be aware that, as part of an internal restructuring of the Defence Logistics Organisation, the decision has been taken to disestablish the Warship Support Agency with effect from 1 April this year and to subsume its work in the new defence logistics structure.

The DLO restructuring is aimed at establishing the most effective and efficient organisation to support modern operations. In particular, we are seeking to achieve a clear customer focus, clarity of outputs and objectives, strong performance management, visibility of targets and performance and a strong governance regime in a way that is common across the whole of logistics support to the front line.

I expect the agency's annual report and accounts for financial year 2004–05 to be ready to be laid in Parliament before the summer recess.

Medical Supplies Agency

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): With effect from 1 April 2005 the Medical Supplies Agency (MSA) will cease to hold agency status. This has been decided as a result of Defence Logistics Organisation (DLO) restructuring proposals and the findings of the DLO/MSA integration review report.

Following the medical quinquennial review and the DLO/MSA integration review report, the ownership of the MSA transferred from the Surgeon General's Department (now the Defence Medical Services Department) to the DLO on 1 April 2002. The MSA is now integrated into the broad supply chain within the DLO. The MSA has ceased to be a storage and distribution organisation, has adopted DLO's business processes and has reduced in size. The MSA's role and business have undergone significant change and are no longer appropriate or large enough to justify agency status. I have therefore decided that agency status for the Medical Supplies Agency should cease and that the organisation should be retitled the Medical Supplies Integrated Project Team

Northern Ireland Patrol Vessels

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence previously announced to the House our intention to pay off the Northern Ireland Patrol Vessel (NIPV) Squadron by April 2007, 21 July 2004, Official Report, column 347. Further discussions have taken place with the Chief Constable and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. We have now decided that the vessels will be decommissioned in September 2005.

When the NIPV cease operations, the maritime security of Northern Ireland will be maintained under the same arrangements as the rest of the United Kingdom. While there will be no permanent assignments of Royal Navy vessels for Northern Ireland, the Chief Constable is satisfied that routine Royal Navy activities around the UK and specific intelligence led maritime operations will deliver an appropriate level of support to the police in countering terrorism.

Reservists (Financial Assistance)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): I am pleased to be able to announce that new regulations governing the payment of financial assistance to reservists and their employers during mobilisation were laid before Parliament today and that subject to usual parliamentary scrutiny will then come into effect on 14 April 2005.

These changes represent a significant improvement in the assistance available to reservists and employers. They reaffirm our continuing commitment to the reserve forces, and reflect the value we place on them and their contribution to the United Kingdom's defence commitments.

These regulations have been prepared following a comprehensive consultation process, which I announced on 22 July 2004, Official Report, column 62WS. They replace the previous complex and intrusive scheme which only matched individuals' earnings up to a rank-related threshold or band, with a separate hardship award scheme for those whose earnings exceeded the band for their rank. Payments to employers under that scheme were limited and complex.

The full details of the scheme of both reservists and employers are available in the documents laid before the House.

I also propose that the financial limit shall be subject to annual review commencing in April 2006.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

High Hedges

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Phil Hope): I am today announcing that we will be commencing the remainder of part 8 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 in England on 1 June. From this date, local authorities will be able to deal with complaints about high hedges that are having an adverse effect on a neighbour's amenity.

Alongside the commencement order, we have laid regulations specifying the grounds on which appeals can be brought against local authority decisions under the legislation, and setting out how such appeals will be handled. The appeals procedure has been streamlined in the light of responses to the public consultation held last year.

Consultation comments have also led us to decide that we should not exercise our power to set a ceiling on what local authorities can charge for dealing with high hedges complaints. Section 68 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 specifies that any such fee must be paid by the complainant. As a result of our decision, local authorities in England will be free to decide whether, and at what level, it is appropriate to charge for this service, taking account of local circumstances and local taxpayers' wishes. Should they so wish, authorities may provide this service for free, or charge different amounts to different groups of people. This is in line with the Government's general policy of allowing such decisions to be made at the local level.

We have published a full Regulatory Impact Assessment on implementing the high hedges legislation. It includes an estimate of what it might cost a local authority, on average, to deal with a high hedge complaint. It also contains, as an Annex, a summary of the consultation responses.

To support local authorities as they prepare to take on this new responsibility, we will publish shortly detailed guidance on administering complaints and enforcing any action that hedge owners may be required to take to remedy the problems caused by the hedge. We also plan to hold, during May, regional workshops to provide training for local authority officers.

For the public, we are publishing two free explanatory leaflets. "Over the garden hedge" is a revision of the previous leaflet of this name and offers advice on how people can settle these disputes for themselves. Negotiation is a necessary precursor to submitting a formal complaint to a local authority. The authority can reject a complaint if they consider the complainant has not done everything they reasonably could to settle the matter themselves. The second leaflet "High hedges: complaining to the council" explains what complaints local authorities can consider and how they will deal with them.

Copies of the Regulatory Impact Assessment and both leaflets will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and have been published on the website of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister at www.odpm.gov.uk. The guidance for local authorities "High hedges complaints: prevention and cure" will similarly be deposited in House Libraries and published on the web as soon as it is available.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Student Finance

The Minister for Lifelong Learning, Further and Higher Education (Dr. Kim Howells): The Regulatory Impact Assessment that was published alongside the Higher Education Act 2004 contained estimates of the fee income for the HE sector and the costs of student loans and grants. These estimates were based on two scenarios for the pattern of fee charging by higher education providers: 75 per cent. of students charged £3,000 and 25 per cent. charged £1,200; and 50 per cent. charging £3,000 and 50 per cent. charging £1,200. The figures below update that analysis on the basis of findings from the Office for Fair Access that 91 per cent. of higher education providers are likely to charge £3,000. The figures below also update the analysis to take account of the new £2,700 grant, replacing the previous £1,500 HE grant and £1,200 fee remission grant; they also update the analysis to put it all on a 2006–07 student number basis.

FEE INCOME AND STUDENT SUPPORT FORECASTS

Table 1: Fee income for higher education providers

Fee Income from standard fee (based on 2006–07 standard fee of £1,200).	£950 million
Additional income from variable fees (based on 91 per cent. of universities charging full £3,000 fee).	£1,350 million
Total	£2,300 million

Table 2: Cost of Student Support

	Cost
New grant of £2,700	£890 million
Maintenance Loans	£740 million
Fee Loans	£830 million

Notes:

1. All costs are in steady state 2006–07 terms.
2. Fee loan forecasts are based on the assumption that 9 per cent. of students are charged £2,000 and 91 per cent. charged £3,000, so the average fee for new students will be £2,910. We are also assuming 80 per cent. take-up of fee deferral.
3. The maintenance loan forecasts assume 82 per cent. take up.
4. The forecasts are based on a RAB charge for maintenance loans of 29 per cent. and for fee loans of 42 per cent., under 3.5 per cent. discount rate.
5. Fee income forecasts have been rounded to the nearest £50 million. All other figures have been rounded to the nearest £10 million.
6. Forecasts are based on setting a grant threshold so that 30 per cent. of students receive the full grant.
7. The combined grant costs represent an extra £440 million over and above expenditure on the £1,200 fee remission grant as it would have been.
8. Adopting the £2,700 grant has the effect of moving costs from maintenance loans to fee loans, because the £1,200 fee remission grant would have substituted for fee loans whereas some of the £2,700 grant substitutes for maintenance loan. The level of the substitution rate will be set to ensure overall cost neutrality.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

State Veterinary Service

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr. Ben Bradshaw): With my colleagues in Scotland and Wales, I am delighted to announce that on 1 April 2005 the state veterinary service (SVS) will launch as an executive agency of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, retaining the title the state veterinary service.

The first chief executive will be Glenys Stacey who will take responsibility for a challenging programme of reforming the way that the services are delivered to its many stakeholders. The SVS has a long, commendable history of engagement with the farming and rural community. The agency will build on this as it enhances its operational and financial effectiveness and continuously improves on the vital role it plays in the fight against animal disease.

The agency will work in close partnership with its policy customers in the Department and the devolved administrations; other delivery agents; and its customers in the rural and livestock community, to deliver services that maximise the use of modern information technology and ensure the optimum utilisation of its staff.

At the forefront of protection against animal-borne diseases and their potential impact on public health, the economy and the rural community, the agency will also be in the front line to deal with any outbreak.

The chief executive has been set some demanding key targets for the first year.

Copies have been placed in both Libraries of the House.

Copies of the agency's framework document and any subsequent amendments will also be placed in both Libraries of the House. Further copies and other information about the agency can be obtained from the chief executive.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Intelligence on Weapons of Mass Destruction

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Jack Straw): On 14 July 2004, in his statement to the House, Official Report, column 1431, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced to the House that the Government accepted the conclusions of Lord Butler's review. In my written statement of 15 November 2004, Official Report, column 54WS, I said that Sir David Omand, the Security and Intelligence Co-ordinator, would lead the work on implementation of those conclusions. Sir David Omand has now completed this work and I should like to report the outcome to the House.

A considerable amount has been done in a short time by Sir David, the Heads of the Security and Intelligence Agencies and senior officials in Government Departments to implement the conclusions. The detail is set out in a report (Cm 6492) that I am today laying before the House. Copies will also be placed in the Library of the House. A number of key actions have already been taken:

Secret Intelligence Service has developed new procedures, provided additional resources and revised line management arrangements to improve evaluation and to oversee the quality of intelligence reporting. Work has taken place to ensure that source descriptions in intelligence reports across the intelligence community use standardised terminology and are consistent;

Arrangements have been put in place across the community to ensure that the distribution of sensitive reporting can be extended when necessary;

Joint Intelligence Committee processes have been reviewed and tightened up. Arrangements have been made so that in future the annual process to set the requirements and priorities for the collection and analysis of intelligence will apply to the Defence Intelligence Staff as well as to the three statutory agencies. A confidential guide for readers of intelligence, including information on the limitations of intelligence, has been produced and distributed; and

Access to the Agencies' Staff Counsellor has been agreed for members of the assessments staff and fully analogous arrangements have been put in place for members of the Defence Intelligence Staff.

Further work is in hand to improve the analytical support provided to the intelligence community following a study carried out by a senior Foreign Office official. That study has recommended and the Government have endorsed:

the establishment of a Professional Head of Intelligence Analysis to advise in the security, defence and foreign affairs fields on analytical capability and methodology; recruitment and career management of analysts; and the development and oversight of more substantial training of analysts; and the expansion of the assessments staff, by about one third. This will provide additional internal review and challenge functions for Joint Intelligence Committee assessments; resource work on countries at risk of instability; and allow increased production of regular warning papers highlighting significant threats or other issues likely to face the Government in the near to medium term in the fields of security, defence and foreign affairs. Other small increases to make the assessments staff more effective are also recommended.

Sir David Omand's successor as Security and Intelligence Co-ordinator has been asked to give high priority to implementing these measures.

In addition to the publication of the detailed report on implementation of the conclusions of the Butler review, the Cabinet Office is publishing today an updated National Intelligence Machinery booklet. Copies of this are also being placed in the Library of the House. It is also on the Cabinet Office website: www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk. This booklet sets out the roles, responsibility and organisation of the UK intelligence community and reflects the changes made as a result of the Butler review. It also includes an unclassified version of the guide for readers of intelligence that has been circulated within Government.

Lord Butler's review has contributed greatly to the process underway to fit the UK's intelligence community for the future. The Government recognise the need to move substantially to implement its conclusions and have done so.

HEALTH

Prudential Borrowing

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Mr. John Hutton): Section 12 of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 requires Monitor (the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of NHS foundation trusts) to make a prudential borrowing code for determining the limit on the total amount of borrowing by NHS foundation trusts.

In accordance with section 12(4) of the Act, the executive chairman of Monitor has today published the code. Copies are available in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Leave to Remain (Turkey)

The Minister for Citizenship and Immigration (Mr. Desmond Browne): Following my statement on 20 December 2004 about Ken Sutton's report on allegations about the handling of applications under the European Community Association Agreements (ECAA), work has continued on next steps. This work includes putting in place procedures and guidance for the agreement with Turkey, consistent with recommendation 15 of Mr. Sutton's report.

In line with Ken Sutton's second report recommendation 15, guidance for handling in-country applications was reviewed in order to take account of experience of procedures and revised guidance on handling in-country applications from Romania and Bulgaria. Turkish ECAA in-country applications were held during this time. The robust procedures we put in place on ECAA further leave to remain cases are reflected, as far as possible, in procedures for handling in-country Turkish cases. This guidance will be published on the Home Office website and consideration of these cases will re-commence shortly.

Guidance to manage Turkish applications made at port under this association agreement has already been published and we began consideration of applications for leave to enter at ports on 4 January 2005.

Corporate Manslaughter

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): I am pleased to announce the publication today of the Government's draft legislation on corporate manslaughter. In summary, this is intended to remedy a particular defect in the present law which can lead to companies escaping liability for manslaughter because no senior single individual can be shown to be personally liable. It builds on earlier work by the Law Commission in 1996 and consultation by the Government in 2000 on the law on involuntary manslaughter. No new standards or regulations will be created with the proposed new offence.

Current laws for prosecuting companies for gross negligence manslaughter fail to operate in a sufficiently flexible way to reflect the reality of decision making in large organisations and therefore fail to provide proper accountability or justice for victims. It is too restrictive to say that a company cannot be prosecuted for manslaughter unless a person who effectively embodies the company is also guilty of the offence. The Government are committed to reforming this area of the law and today's draft Bill marks an important step in delivering that commitment.

Our proposals would introduce a clearer, more effective offence that would see organisations held properly to account for gross failings by their senior management that have had fatal consequences. This would continue to be an extremely serious offence, reserved for the very worst cases of corporate mismanagement leading to death, and the threshold for committing it would therefore remain at the same level of gross misconduct currently required. But the new test of senior management failure would allow courts to consider a wider picture of failure at the senior levels of an organisation, making it easier to bring prosecutions.

The new offence would complement, not replace, other forms of accountability such as prosecutions under health and safety legislation. And it would be clearly linked to the standards required under those laws. This is not about introducing new regulatory burdens, stifling entrepreneurial activity or creating a risk averse culture and organisations taking a conscientious approach to their current obligations have nothing to fear. Nor is it about the individual liability of directors or others, which is not affected by the proposals. It is about ensuring that the law is effective in bringing to account, for a specific serious offence and corporately, organisations that have shown a clear disregard for the law with fatal consequences for members of their workforce or others.

The proposals would apply to Crown bodies, such as Government Departments, as well as the wider public sector and industry. They create a broad level playing field between public and private sectors, applying when both are carrying our similar activities, for example, in respect of ensuring the safety of their workforce and premises and when supplying goods or services or operating commercially. But the Crown and other bodies performing public functions are not in an identical position to private industry and certain core Government activities will be outside the scope of the Bill. These include key public functions such as setting and inspecting regulatory standards, issuing guidance and standards to public services or providing central procurement for public bodies. A narrow band of activities requiring specific lawful authority, such as the detention of prisoners (whether in a publicly or privately managed prison), and public policy decisions involving the allocation of public funds or competing social or political factors will also be exempt. The organisation and management of these functions involve wider questions of public policy where Parliament, public inquiries or the broader democratic process provides accountability.

I welcome the process of scrutiny and consultation that will follow publication of this draft Bill. Consultation will run until 17 June and I welcome comments from across the board: industry, unions and other stakeholders. The draft Bill is also being published for parliamentary pre-legislative scrutiny and I look forward to receiving the report that will follow that process.

Copies of the draft Bill have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The draft legislation is also available on the Home Office website at: www.homeoffice.gov.uk/.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

World Bank

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses a copy of a new DFID report, "The UK and the World Bank 2004".

This report describes the UK's work with the World Bank over the bank's financial year 2004 (known as FY04: July 2003–June 2004). In line with my commitment to greater transparency on our relations with the bank, it sets out the broad positions the UK took in a number of discussions at the bank—on the bank's support to poor countries' development, its role in responding to debates on global issues such as debt and trade, and its institutional effectiveness. The report also records the UK's position on resolutions adopted by the Board of Governors. It will be an annual publication; the next report will cover the period July 2004–June 2005.

The UK believes that the World Bank is an effective development organisation, but its performance can still be improved. In FY04, the UK pressed the bank to improve performance in a number of areas, for example: ensuring that country assistance strategies focus on poverty reduction; using more poverty and social impact analysis (PSIA), and making more bank information available to the public. Since the end of FY04, we have also successfully pressed the bank to review its use of conditionality. We will report on this initiative in our next report on the UK and the World Bank.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

R v. Rayment and Others

The Solicitor-General (Ms Harriet Harman): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following ministerial statement:

"The trial judge in the case of R v. Rayment and Others at the central criminal court has today, 22 March 2005, discharged the jury, ending the proceedings.

The trial dealt with an alleged fraud over contracts for the construction of London's Jubilee line extension project. The prosecution arose from allegations that the defendants conspired to defraud London Underground by gaining access to confidential insider information, which was used against London Underground Limited's interests during the course of its dealings with tenderers and contractors on the Jubilee line extension project. The information was relevant to the award of contracts worth tens of millions of pounds and also two substantial claims for additional monies under contracts awarded in connection with the Jubilee line extension project. The allegations also concerned corrupting public officials entrusted with safeguarding London Underground Limited's interests.

Experienced lawyers considered the evidence in detail and a decision to prosecute was taken. Charges were brought in February 2000. Lord Williams, when he was Attorney General, granted consent in February 2000 to prosecute the corruption case on the basis that there was sufficient evidence for a realistic prospect of conviction and it was in the public interest to prosecute.

The CPS were ready for trial in 2001 but the case was split into two trials. The first trial started with a jury on 26 June 2003. The case has been affected by delays and breaks. Time has been lost due to illness, scheduled holidays, periods of paternity leave, an operation and sickness of defendants. Legal argument has also involved substantial periods where the jury were not required to hear evidence. For example, in the last seven months the jury has heard evidence on only 13 days of the 140 available.

The judge's ruling followed submissions by all parties in response to a request from the judge.

Prosecuting counsel have advised that it is their clear view that there have been such delays and interruptions to this case that a fair trial is now impossible. Counsel formed a judgement that the case ought to be stopped. The DPP and I agree with that view and, therefore, approved prosecution counsel's statement to the trial judge informing her of this view.

I agreed with the DPP last year the need for more control and robust management of large cases. The DPP has responded by developing a system, which will see a case management panel, chaired by the DPP, to consider the management of very large cases. The panel will consider issues such as the selection of charges, the number of defendants, likely number and length of trials and selection of trial advocates. It will also monitor progress of the case and key case management decisions during its life. It will be coupled with a similar process across the 42 CPS areas where chief Crown prosecutors will review the most serious and lengthy cases in their areas. This will be implemented from 4 April 2005 and I believe, offers real potential for getting a better grip on cases such as the current matter.

In addition, the DPP has recently announced a new structure to deal with the most serious and complex cases in CPS headquarters. This will involve the DPP in more direct and substantial control over such cases. I welcome this restructuring.

On 22 March the Lord Chief Justice issued a protocol for dealing with lengthy trials, which I welcomed. The protocol emphasises the need for robust and well-informed case management to identify and allow the court to focus on the real issues in the case. The new protocol fits clearly with the criminal case management framework that I issued last July together with Lord Falconer, Baroness Scotland and the Lord Chief Justice. The protocol and framework will continue the culture change in the way in which all criminal justice practitioners operate. The public are entitled to an efficient and effective criminal justice system and cases such as the present one must never be allowed to happen again.

This decision will cause great public disquiet as it causes me considerable disquiet. Most serious allegations have not in the end been brought to a final conclusion. It is important and in the interest of the defendants, to underline that these allegations have not been proved and that they have maintained they are not guilty.

Very considerable public money has been expended. Much time for a jury and for judge and defendants has been expended. It is important to learn what lessons we can. I have therefore asked Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of CPS, Stephen Wooler, to report to me on this case under section 2(1)(b) of the CPS Inspectorate Act 2000. The terms of reference of this review will be drawn up shortly. The DPP has confirmed that the prosecution will provide full cooperation in this inquiry."

TRANSPORT

Light Dues

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. David Jamieson): I am pleased to announce that light dues rates and the tonnage threshold will remain the same for 2005–06. The Government remain committed to a cost recovery system yet rates have been reduced significantly in the last 12 years. They were last reduced in 2004.

Despite the General Lighthouse Authorities having undertaken a programme of major capital investment—the redevelopment of the Trinity House Lighthouse Service depot at Harwich and the replacement of GLA ships, costs to the industry have remained static. These projects will be funded out of the General Lighthouse Fund. We shall continue to work closely with the General Lighthouse Authorities to maximise efficiency where we can and to ensure that the benefits that have been achieved are returned to light dues payers.

The Study into the Economic Effects of Light Dues carried out by consultants, MDS Transmodal and DTZ Pieda, was commissioned in 2003. The study examined the direct economic impact of light dues charges on shipping lines, ports and owners of fishing vessels and pleasure craft and on the wider UK economy and the economic implications of alternative charging options. The study concluded that the requirement to pay light dues did not distort trading by commercial shipping to and from the UK. The charge had negligible effects on the economy. Removal of most of the existing exemptions would also have little impact on overall economic activity, as would an annual charge of around £100 on pleasure craft. This level of charge being an assumption, and chosen because it is the equivalent approximately to the annual cost of other Government levies, such as an annual television licence and the road fund licence for a small car.

I have considered the case for restructuring the current light dues system and in particular, extending the scope of the charge to all pleasure craft. A number of charging approaches have been discussed—for example registration of vessels, a charge based on moorings, or a charge based on vessel movements. All of these systems would be expensive and time consuming to establish, relative to the levels of charge to be levied. I have decided, therefore, that a cost effective, enforceable, collection mechanism for pleasure craft cannot be introduced at the present time.

I do not propose to change the structure of the current charging system for the foreseeable future.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Opportunity Age

The Minister for Pensions (Malcolm Wicks): Today we are breaking new ground by publishing, for the first time, a comprehensive strategy for an ageing society, entitled "Opportunity Age—Meeting the challenges of ageing in the 21st century".

British people are living much longer and on the whole healthier lives. The evidence points to a continuation of that trend. The strategy plans ahead for the changes this will bring and gives a lead to the broad partnership we need to bring change about.

The strategy complements the Government's pension principles and the work of the Pensions Commission, by focusing on other aspects of economic and social life affected by demographic change: employment, healthier and more active ageing, and the services—health, care and housing—which an ageing society demands.

The Government see population ageing as an opportunity to be seized to raise our already impressive level of employment, engage older people in contributing to society actively, and to transform public services for older people to extend choice and support independence.

Our people, firms and partners in local authorities and the voluntary sector will need to adapt. The task of Government through this strategy is to identify the issues and the outcomes we want, give a lead, invest sustainably in support, where needed, and co-ordinate action effectively.

It reports progress to date—on higher employment levels among the over-50s, on reducing pensioner poverty, on better access to more effective healthcare delivered by our investment in the National Health Service. And it plans ahead by setting out a programme of Government action to promote wider change in society.

We are striving for change in employment, by setting a world-leading aspiration of an 80 per cent employment rate, so that we provide opportunities for people to sustain and extend their working lives by choice. We will legislate to consign age discrimination in the workplace to history; we will support inactive and unemployed older people so that they find jobs; we will enable working people to improve their skills and plan their later careers, retirement and pension options; we will extend opportunities for people to combine work and caring responsibilities.

We are promoting change, to support active ageing in communities which respect age and diversity: we will remove barriers which can prevent older people from taking up opportunities to learn, enjoy leisure activity or to contribute through volunteering. We will extend free local public transport. We will encourage local authorities to engage with older people so that their needs are built into the priorities of local communities.

We are delivering change, to extend independence and choice in the way we deliver the support services older people need: we will offer an individual budget which older people will be able to use to buy in their care package, exercising real control like any customer. We believe that independence can be sustained even when infirmity sets in. We will pilot this new approach and also include Supporting People funding in nine of these pilots up to a maximum of 1 per cent. of each authority's annual allocation for that programme.

And through our link-age programme, we will build over time, an integrated home visiting service which can offer older people a personal care, benefit, heating and housing check up, so they receive their full entitlement to support for independent living at home.

Part of this strategy will be consultative. We are seeking views on the outcomes, and indicators assess progress towards improved quality of life. We will involve a wide range of central and local government partners and voluntary bodies in regular assessments. Consultation will finish on 17 July 2005.

We look forward with optimism to a future without ageism and in which older people are respected members of our communities contributing even more than they do now to society. Our strategy sets a sustainable path.

TREASURY

HM Customs and Excise (Contingencies Fund)

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): On 29 September 2004 the Economic Secretary informed the Treasury Select Committee that

> "In parallel with the Operation Gestalt investigation the Metropolitan Police have also provided advice on a number of other Customs and Excise investigations concerning money service bureaux (MSB). David Varney, Chairman has asked the police to extend their investigation to cover these additional issues."

The police are examining the preliminary material and will soon be ready to start the investigation. In order to progress the investigation most efficiently, the police have proposed using a joint team. This would mean a team of Customs investigators working with the police. Departmental accommodation will also be made available.

Parliamentary approval for additional resources of £5,000 for this new service has been sought in the spring supplementary estimate for HM Customs and Excise. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure of this £5,000 has been met by repayable cash advances from the contingencies fund.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Family Justice System (Family Courts)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): My noble Friend the Baroness Ashton of Upholland, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, has made the following written ministerial statement:

> "With the agreement of the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs, I am pleased to inform the House that I have today placed in the Libraries of both Houses a copy of the Government's response to the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee's report of their inquiry into the operation of the family justice system".

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Planning Regulations (Hazardous Substances)

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I am announcing today the publication of a consultation document on draft regulations to amend the town and country planning regulations that give effect to the land use planning requirements of council directive 96/82/EC on the control of major accident hazards involving dangerous substances, as amended by directive 2003/105/EC. Amendments are proposed to the Planning (Hazardous Substances) Regulations 1992 (SI 1992 No 656) and the Town and Country Planning (Development Plan) (England) Regulations 1999 (SI 1999 No 3280).

The main change is an amendment to schedule 1 of the Planning (Hazardous Substances) Regulations 1992 to reflect changes to some definitions and qualifying quantities of dangerous substances that fall within the ambit of the Seveso II directive and for which hazardous substances consent may now be required. A minor amendment is proposed to the Development Plan Regulations 1999. Similar, relevant changes have already been incorporated in the Development Plan Regulations made in 2004 for the new local and regional plan systems.

The consultation will run until 16 June 2005 and will apply to England only. Copies of the consultation document will be made available in the Libraries of both Houses and from The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website www.odpm.gov.uk.

Planning Policy Guidance Note 25

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I am announcing today my intention to prepare and consult on a revision of Planning Policy Guidance note (PPG) 25, development and flood risk, and a direction in respect of certain development in areas at risk of flooding.

PPG25 was published in July 2001. Its key aim is to ensure that flood risk is properly taken into account in the planning of new developments, so as to reduce the risk of flooding and the damage which floods cause. Since it was published it has succeeded in raising the profile of flooding matters in the planning process. A review of its working last year, after three years of operation, showed that its core policies remain valid, but that more needs to be done to implement them fully.

I therefore plan to issue a draft of a new Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 25 for consultation later in 2005. In particular, the new version will clarify the core sequential test that matches types of development to levels of flood risk. It will also strengthen the requirement for flood risk assessments to be prepared to inform the consideration of development plans and of individual development proposals in flood risk areas.

The consultation draft of PPS25 will be prepared on the basis that a standing planning Direction in respect of certain proposed developments in areas at risk of flooding will be made under article 14 of the General Development Procedure Order 1995. This would require an application for major development to be referred to the Government Office, to consider whether it should be called in for decision by the First Secretary of State, if the Environment Agency sustains an objection to it on flood risk grounds, after having been re-consulted following an initial objection.

This consultation forms an important component in the Government's wider response to their general consultation last year on their forward strategy for flood and coastal erosion risk management in "Making space for water". My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Environment and Agri-environment is making a separate statement on this today.

DEFENCE

Future Rotorcraft Policy

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): I am pleased to announce that the Ministry of Defence has agreed a Heads of Agreement with Agusta Westland which commits us to working together towards a long-term partnering and business transformation arrangement. Although the details are subject to further negotiation with the company over the coming months, we expect this to provide significant efficiency and effectiveness improvements in how we support our helicopter fleet.

Competition remains the cornerstone of our procurement policy. This applies to our Future Rotorcraft Capability requirements, as elsewhere, in particular for the Land Lift (Medium) element. As the Defence Industrial Policy makes clear, however, value for money judgments can sometimes suggest different approaches. Since the Agusta Westland Future Lynx project has already benefited from extensive assessment work and de-risking, it would be our preferred procurement option for meeting the Land Find and Maritime (Surface) Attack element. This is, however, subject to continuing negotiations with the company to agree acceptable contract conditions and prices, which must meet clearly defined parameters.

This approach is excellent news for Agusta Westland, for the highly skilled staff at its Yeovil plant, and for the British defence industry. Other key partners include Smiths Industries in Cheltenham and Thales(UK) in Raynes Park and Taunton, GD(UK) in St Leonards-on-Sea and South Dorset Engineering Ltd. in Weymouth.

We believe that, subject to negotiating the precise commercial details, the Future Lynx represents a highly capable, value for money, solution to our requirement. We expect to make a final "Main Gate" procurement decision later this year. The contract is potentially worth over £1 billion.

This is a key first milestone for the Future Rotorcraft Capability programme, and is part of the commitment we made in last year's supplement to the Defence White Paper to invest some £3 billion in our helicopter fleet.

Agency Status

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): With effect from 1 April 2005, the Defence Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency and the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre will both cease to have agency status. This change will facilitate improved management across current agency boundaries, enable simpler management and budgeting processes, reduce overheads, and enable a more effective response to customers' strategic and operational requirements.

MOD Medal Office

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): In my previous statement, 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 162WS, I gave an undertaking to keep the House informed of the progress with regard to the creation of the Ministry of Defence Medal Office.

I am pleased to report that on 22 March I officially opened the MOD Medal Office which is now established at a single location within the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA) at Innsworth, Gloucester.

The change from separate offices for each service to the new office is affording the opportunity to adopt common procedures based upon best practice. The significant investment in personnel, laser engraving and computer technology has already led to a substantial reduction in the backlog of medals assessment and engraving and underlines the priority and commitment MOD attaches to the prompt delivery of medals to veterans, their relatives and serving personnel. Indeed, since the introduction of a new laser engraving facility at Innsworth, around 40,000 extra medals have been handed out to recipients.

AFPAA assumed full responsibility for the management of medal output, target setting and performance monitoring with effect from 1 October 2004 and has successfully filled all of the 61 medal-related posts. Whilst the introduction of the Suez Canal Zone and Iraq medals has resulted in unprecedented numbers of medal applications (117,425 since 10 April 2004), the backlog for the Canal Zone medal today is 13,275 compared with 21,371 as at 24 September 2004 and for the Iraq medal is 13,382 compared with 25,178.

The formation of the MOD Medal Office is already producing significant benefits and I should like to pay tribute to the staff of the single service medal offices and the MOD Medal Office for their part in bringing about this improvement.

Armed Forces Compensation Scheme

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced last week in his Budget statement that there would be a change to the tax regime for the new compensation scheme which will commence on 6 April 2005.

I am pleased to confirm that because of the special demands of service in our armed forces, the Government have now decided that lump sums awarded to those who are able to remain in service after their injury or illness will be paid tax-free.

This change reflects the importance that this Government attach to our armed forces in the event of injury or disability.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Flood and Coastal Erosion (Government Strategy)

The Minister for the Environment and Agri-environment (Mr. Elliot Morley): Over the autumn of 2004 the Government carried out a proactive consultation exercise on "Making space for water", a new Government strategy for flood and coastal erosion risk management. There were 268 formal responses to that consultation, and overall they were very supportive of the proposed new strategic direction.

I am pleased to announce that I am today publishing a First Government response to the points made during the consultation. Copies of the response "Making space for water: Taking forward a new Government strategy for flood and coastal erosion risk management in England, First Government response to the autumn 2004 Making space for water consultation exercise, March 2005", have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Government response confirms that strategic direction of travel on key issues, taking account of the points made during the consultation exercise.

The programme of work set out in the response will make a significant contribution to our ability to adapt to climate change, in line with the recently published UK sustainable development strategy, "Securing the future", and Defra's five-year strategy, "Delivering the Essentials of Life". The response considers how we should continue to incorporate allowances for climate change and build adaptability into our risk management measures.

The new strategy encompasses all types of flooding and a range of Government policies relevant to flooding and coastal erosion. We will be adopting a more holistic approach so as to achieve a better balance between the three pillars of sustainable development (economic, environmental and social). We will also make more use of a portfolio of measures so as to achieve multiple objectives from the way we identify and implement solutions. We will be seeking to make the involvement of stakeholders more effective at all levels of decision making.

To facilitate the new approach we will work towards extending the strategic role of the Environment Agency to cover all sources of flooding as well as coastal erosion.

The response covers a wide range of important issues. In relation to land use planning policies on development and flood risk, my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Housing and Planning is today making a separate statement which supports the direction of travel and which I strongly welcome.

The response commits the Government to piloting a range of different approaches to improve the integration of the management of urban drainage, an area identified as a potential source of major future risk.

In response to the call for more attention to social impacts, we will be expanding our risk management tools to put greater emphasis on flood warning and flood awareness, and on developing measures to promote resistance and resilience to flooding, including the funding of a pilot scheme.

As far as coastal issues are concerned, the Government will take forward work both to improve the evidence base in relation to, and to investigate the practical implications of considering, a wider portfolio of coastal erosion risk management tools. We will also be exploring different models to ensure there is appropriate democratic input into future decision-making on the management of coastal risks.

The Government are committed to ensuring that the flood risk management programme takes proper account of the environmental impacts of our interventions. As a practical example of this I am pleased to announce that we shall be taking measures to offset damage occurring to the Ouse Washes Natura 2000 site. This will allow the site to continue to protect people and property from flooding at the same time as addressing the environmental value it provides for birds.

We will be announcing shortly details of a new challenge fund to stimulate innovative approaches to achieving multiple objective schemes, and we are also developing broadly based performance measures to track the impact of our programme and to ensure our management of flood and coastal erosion risk contributes to sustainable development.

Our new strategy will provide an excellent basis for guiding how we spend the record levels of funding we will be making available for flood and coastal erosion risk management so as to maximise the social, economic and environmental benefits. Over the next three years this will be at £570 million per year compared with a total of £310 million in 1996–97.

Energy and Environment Ministerial Round Table

The Minister for the Environment and Agri-environment (Mr. Elliot Morley): Last week the UK held an Energy and Environment Ministerial round table, attended by Ministers from 20 countries and representatives from international organisations, business and non-governmental organisations.

Participants welcomed the opportunity to consider the key practical approaches to climate change and energy policy in an informal and innovative forum and contributed positively to the discussions which identified areas of common interest around the issues of the accessibility and affordability of modern energy systems, security of energy supply and the need for local and global environmental protection. The discussions also identified a range of priorities for further working, both in terms of methodology and in relation to specific issues such as energy efficiency.

The wide and committed participation of all concerned enabled the round table to provide a real opportunity to build trust and to look for ways in which the international community might continue to work together in future.

A record of the discussion has been captured in the co-chairs summary, which can be found on the DEFRA website at: www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/international/energy-env/index.htm

British Waterways

The Minister for Rural Affairs and Local Environmental Quality (Alun Michael): I am pleased to advise that DEFRA and the Scottish Executive have today published a joint report on the policy review of British Waterways.

The report confirms the prime purpose of British Waterways is to deliver public benefits and promote social inclusion. It provides a firm foundation for developing these objectives further as well as proposing a framework within which British Waterways can work towards its aim of become largely self sufficient.

DEFRA will now work with the Scottish Executive and British Waterways to consider how best to implement the review's recommendations and formalise a development plan for taking them forward.

A public consultation exercise formed part of the review.

Copies of the report on the review and the report on the analysis of responses to the public consultation exercise will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The reports can also be viewed on DEFRA's website at:

G8 Environment and Development Ministerial

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Margaret Beckett): Under the UK's Presidency of the Group of Eight countries, the Secretary of State for International Development and I co-hosted a meeting of G8 Environment and Development Ministers in Breadsall, Derbyshire on 17 and 18 March. Also attending were Luxembourg Ministers (representing the EU Presidency) and senior officials from the World Bank, United Nations Environment Programme, United National Development Programme, the European Commission and the World Conservation Union. This was the first time that G8 Environment and Development Ministers have met in this formation.

Ministers discussed two main items, climate change in Africa and action to tackle illegal logging. On climate change in Africa, Ministers considered a report, commissioned by my Department and the Department for International Development which outlined the lack of African capacity to monitor and make effective use of climate information and what more needs to be done to improve the scientific basis for adaptation to help "climate proof" Africa's development.

Ministers agreed that African countries are particularly vulnerable to climate variability and climate change, and noted that like many developing countries, they are already experiencing more frequent dangerous climate effects. Ministers then discussed what more needed to be done, including assisting Africa in reducing vulnerability by building resilience to climate variability and by developing capacity to adapt to climate change. Ministers then identified the key elements needed for an effective international response as building scientific capacity and integrating measures to address the impact of climate change in international development assistance and regional and national development plans. The vulnerability of developing countries to climate change in Africa and throughout the developing world will be discussed by Heads of State and Government at the Gleneagles summit. This meeting helped to define the priorities and options for international responses to these issues.

In response to this, my Department announced a further £100,000 towards regional predictions of climate change for Africa and £400,000 over the next three years towards a new multi-country initiative on advancing knowledge, capacity and networks in support of climate change in Africa.

On illegal logging, G8 Ministers agreed what would be done by both producer and consumer countries to tackle the problem. Ministers looked at what more would be done by G8 countries to support timber producing countries to improve governance of their forest resources and tackle wildlife trafficking. Ministers also agreed what G8 countries as major consumers of timber, would do to tackle the demand for illegally logged timber, including action such as halting the import and marketing of such timber, and using public procurement policies. There was also agreement that illegal logging policy experts would meet to review progress towards these commitments in 2006.

To help tackle illegal logging, the Secretary of State for International Development and I, committed extra resources to support producer countries, particularly those in west and central Africa. We have allocated up to £500,000 over three years to extend my Department's central point of expertise on timber to encourage the wider public sector to procure legal timber; and undertook to share our knowledge on procurement with the G8 and other countries. My Department also announced additional spending of over £1 million for forestry biodiversity projects under the Darwin Initiative spread over three years.

Ministers agreed that the outcomes on illegal logging will be forwarded as a statement to the G8 Summit at Gleneagles, while the discussions on Africa and climate change will be forwarded as a Chair's Summary for further consideration.

In addition, Ministers had an interactive meeting with civil society representatives (non-Governmental organisations, industry representatives and research institutes). Ministers also had informal discussions on the Commission for Africa Report, which was widely welcomed, reform of humanitarian aid and the importance of biodiversity for sustainable livelihoods.

Copies of the report on "Climate Proofing Africa" and the outcome paper from the G8 Environment and Development Ministerial will be available in the Libraries of both Houses.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Palestine: Security

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Bill Rammell): In his written statement of 2 March 2005, Official Report, column 89WS, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs informed hon. Members of the outcomes of the 1 March London meeting in support of the Palestinians. In respect of security sector reform the international community committed itself to providing financial support to re-equip the security services; establishing a fund for early retirement of security personnel; and helping to address the cost of pensions for security officers.

In his written answer to the hon. Member for Moray (Angus Robertson) on 3 February 2005, Official Report, column 1109, my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade and Investment set out our on-going assistance to the Palestinians to improve the performance of their security forces, through provision of technical assistance and equipment. On 23 December we informed Parliament, by means of a Departmental minute, of a gift of equipment to the Palestinian Central Intervention Forces (CIF) to help them provide public order security for the 9 January Presidential elections and beyond. In the event, the CIF were disbanded as part of Palestinian moves towards rationalising their security services and members returned to their original units, notably the national security forces. Officials from the Consulate General in Jerusalem and the Embassy in Tel Aviv have kept in close contact with Palestinian security officials to ensure that the equipment supplied (communications equipment, tents, uniforms and office equipment) will be used effectively by Palestinian security forces.

The Palestinian security forces, including the civil police, with whom we have also been working, performed well in the run-up to, and during, the 9 January elections, when security was good.

We had intended to donate twenty cars to the CIF but the delivery of these was delayed and did not take place before disbandment of the CIF. We have waited until after the London meeting to see how Palestinian security sector reform was likely to progress and have now decided to give the cars to the national security forces, units of which will play a security role similar to that envisaged for the CIF. We have received assurances from the Palestinian Minister of the Interior on the use to which these cars will be put. A recently appointed military liaison officer from the MOD is working closely with the NSF to improve their capacity. He has identified a shortage of transport as one of their strategic weaknesses and will monitor closely the deployment of these vehicles.

We are working closely with US security co-ordinator General Ward who is leading the Quartet's oversight committee on security. We will continue, in co-ordination with General Ward and the rest of the international community, to assist the Palestinian security sector to improve its capacity to maintain public order security and prevent terrorist attacks, in the crucial period leading up to the proposed Israeli withdrawal from Gaza in July, and beyond.

HEALTH

Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Ms Rosie Winterton): The eighth report to Parliament on the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme (PPRS) was published today.

The report, entitled "PPRS: Eighth Report to Parliament", covers the negotiations and the 2005 scheme and the management and operation of the 1999 scheme including the delivery of the 4.5 per cent. price cut and consolidated information on company annual financial returns. The report sets out the contribution made to the economy by the UK based pharmaceutical industry and gives an update on international price comparisons.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

United Kingdom Passport Service Corporate Business Plans 2005–10

The Minister for Citizenship and Immigration (Mr. Desmond Browne): The United Kingdom Passport Service has today published its corporate and business plans for 2005–10. Copies of the plans have been placed in the Library of the House.

The Prison Service Business Plan 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): The prison service business plan for 2005–06 (including the previously agreed key performance indicator targets) has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Police Pensions Finance Reform

The Minister for Crime Reduction, Policing and Community Safety (Ms Hazel Blears): We have today published a consultation paper which sets out detailed proposals for implementing a reformed system of police pensions financing. We intend that the new system should be in place by April 2006 in line with the introduction of a new police pension scheme.

In 2001 a working party from the Treasury, Home Office and the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions completed a joint review of arrangements for the financing of police and fire pensions. The police pension scheme is currently financed on a pay-as-you-go basis. This means that officers' pension contributions go into police authorities' operating accounts from which the pensions of retired officers are paid. Authorities receive central Government funding support to pension payments as part of police grant.

The joint review recommended revised financial arrangements based on officers' contributions and a new employer's contribution being paid into a separate pensions account from which pensions payments would be made. The new pensions account would be locally administered but central Government would either top up the account or recover any surplus as necessary. The recommended system is similar to those used for other unfunded public service pension schemes such as for NHS staff, teachers and civil servants. Similar changes have been proposed for the firefighters' pensions.

The new arrangements would cover the financing of both existing and new police pension schemes, but would have no impact on their terms and conditions. The arrangements would benefit police authorities by removing year-to-year volatility in pensions expenditure arising from the uneven incidence of lump sum retirement payments. They would also enable the rising burden of police pensions expenditure due to increasing numbers in retirement over the coming years to be kept separate from police forces' operational expenditure.

While welcoming the recommendations of the joint review it was recognised that work was still needed to map out the details of how the new system could be successfully implemented. A Home Office led working group has now considered these issues in the context of the police pension scheme and has produced a report with recommendations. A key point of the report is that the changes, at an aggregate level, will be cost neutral and will have no impact upon either the local or national tax payer. However, we recognise the need for police authorities, forces and other stakeholders in the police service to contribute to the debate on these detailed proposals before we come to a final decision on implementation.

Copies of the consultation document are available in the House Library and on the Home Office website www.homeoffice.gov.uk/.

The consultation period will last for 12 weeks and will close on 17 June 2005.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Prison Service Pay Review Body

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Ian Pearson): The third report of the Prison Service Pay Review Body (PSPRB) on the pay of governor and officer grades in the Northern Ireland Prison Service has been published today and copies placed in the Library. I would like to thank the chair and members of the PSPRB for their hard work in producing their recommendations.

This completes the PSPRB's work for the current year, their recommendations for HM Prison Service having been published and accepted by the Government last month.

My right honourable Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has decided that the recommendations will be implemented in full, with effect from the operative date of the award of 1 April 2005. The cost of the award will be met from within the existing budget allocation for the Service.

Rosemary Nelson Inquiry

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Paul Murphy): On 16 November 2004, I announced the terms of reference for the inquiries into the deaths of Robert Hamill, Rosemary Nelson and Billy Wright. All three inquiries have now begun their work.

In the light of its considerations so far, the Rosemary Nelson inquiry has asked me to consider amending its terms of reference in order to make clear beyond any doubt that the actions of the Army and the security and intelligence agencies fall within their scope.

I am happy to do so and I am giving notice today that I am amending the Inquiry's terms of reference at their request so that they now read as follows:

> "To inquire into the death of Rosemary Nelson with a view to determining whether any act or omission by or within the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland Office, Army or other state agency facilitated her death or obstructed the investigation of it, or whether attempts were made to do so; whether any such act or omission was intentional or negligent; whether the investigation of her death was carried out with due diligence; and to make recommendations".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Insolvency Service: Performance Targets 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe): Against a planning assumption of dealing with 45,000 new insolvencies and 81,000 new claims for redundancy payments, I have set the Insolvency Service the following targets for the year 2005–06.

Published Targets 2005–06	Target
Process Redundancy Payment claims for payment within:
3 Weeks	70 per cent
6 Weeks	92 per cent
Reduce the unit cost of enforcement activity by	25 per cent
Increase enforcement activity outputs (disqualification, bankruptcy restrictions orders and reports by official receivers of criminal conduct) by	41 per cent
Reduce average time for concluding disqualification proceedings to	22 months
Increase the level of public confidence in the service's enforcement regime to	55 per cent
Increase the level of user satisfaction index to	88 per cent
Reduce the bankruptcy administration fee by 1 April 2006 to	£1,600*
Reduce the company administration fee by 1 April 2006 to	£1,920*

* Not adjusted for inflation

In addition to the above targets I have asked that, as part of its efficiency promise, the service looks to reduce the costs of accommodation and procurement by 8 per cent. by 31 March 2006 from the 2003–04 baseline and further reduce the costs of redundancy payment processing by 2.5 per cent. by 31 March 2006. Overall I have asked the Service to produce efficiency gains of at least £6 million over the period to 2007–08.

The Service will also be seeking re-accreditation to the Investors in People standard by January 2006. The Service is also required to meet centrally promulgated targets relating to replying to correspondence from hon. Members, reducing the level of sick absence and processing payments to suppliers. From 1 April 2004 the Service's case administration work has been funded by its fee income and the Service is also required to ensure that it balances its costs and income over a three-year period.

Companies House (Performance Targets)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe): I have set Companies House the following targets for the year 2005–06:

By March 2006 to provide the capability for 80 per cent. of documents,[1] which it would be possible to e-enable, to be submitted on line.

To ensure that the following services: Companies House Direct; WebCheck; and webfiling, are available for 99 per cent. of the time between the hours of 7 am and midnight, Monday to Saturday.

To achieve 35 per cent. take-up for electronic submission of documents[1] by the end of 2005–06, 55 per cent. take-up by the end of 2006–07 and 75 per cent. take-up by the end of 2007–08.

To achieve, on average, a monthly compliance rate for accounts and annual returns submitted of 92 per cent.

To ensure that 97.5 per cent. of all forms submitted to Companies House are captured error-free.

To ensure that of 99.5 per cent. of images placed on the Companies House image system are legible.

[1] a document is an individual transaction that a company can make with Companies House to submit or register information.

To achieve for 2007–08 a reduction in real terms of 10 per cent. compared to 2004–05, in the unit cost of the range of transactions covering registration, company search and active register size.

To achieve a score of more than 85 per cent. in each quarterly Companies House Customer Satisfaction Survey.

To resolve 97 per cent. of complaints within five days.

To achieve, taking one year with another, a 3.5 per cent. average rate of return based on the operating surplus expressed as a percentage of average net assets.

To pay all bills due within 30 days, or on other agreed credit terms, on receipt of goods or services or a valid invoice whichever is later.

The Chief Executive to reply within 10 days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to her for reply.

TRANSPORT

Highways Agency Business Plan

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. David Jamieson): The Highways Agency's 2005–06 business plan is published today and contains eight key targets for the agency to deliver by 31 March 2006. These are:

Indicator	2005–06 Target
1. Deliver the programme of improvements to the strategic road network.	Achieve: At least 450 of 474 progress points for the major national schemes (contributing to a 3 year target of 1,424 progress points). Achieve at least 565 of 595 progress points for the approved major regional schemes (contributing to a 3 year target of 1,397 progress points). Introduce variable speed limits on the Active Traffic management (ATM) pilot on M42 by December 2005. Complete a cumulative total of at least 60 of 92 priority action sites at junctions.
2. Deliver a demonstrable reduction in incident-related congestion and minimisation of road works-related congestion.	In rolling out the Regional Control Centres (RCCs) and Traffic Officer Service, achieve at least 430 of 505 progress points (contributing to a 2 year target of 649 progress points). For the busiest sections of motorway in the West Midlands, HA Traffic Officers will attend 75% of incidents within 15 minutes of being deployed. In the West Midlands, HA Traffic Officers will clear 75% of incidents within 30 minutes of taking full responsibility for re-opening the road to traffic.
3. Make information available to influence travel behaviour and inform decisions.	Make a demonstrable improvement to the accuracy of the variable message signs (VMS) by March 2006 and develop an action plan for further improving their accuracy and effectiveness. Introduce travel plans to at least three sites by March 2006. Identify and announce a further pilot site for car sharing lanes on the motorway network by December 2005.
4. Deliver the Agency's agreed proportion of the national target. By 2010 reduce by a third (ie to 2,238) the number of people killed/seriously injured on trunk roads compared with the 1994–98 average of 3,357.	Reduce by 653 to 2,704.
5. Maintain the network in a safe and serviceable condition.	Maintain a road surface condition index score of 100 ± 1.
6. Mitigate the potentially adverse impact of strategic roads and take opportunities to enhance the environment taking into account value for money.	Achieve at least 95% across the 5 sub targets: Air Quality: implement measures to improve the air quality of at least 2 out of 21 prioritised Air Quality Management Areas (AQMA). Biodiversity: Achieve at least 7% of the published HA Biodiversity Action Plan (HABAP), which extends across 15 priority targets (making a cumulative total of 35% of the HABAP complete). Landscape: Introduce at least 12 planting schemes to enhance the landscape. Noise: Treat at least 200 lane km of concrete road surface with lower noise surfacing. Water: Treat at least 4 pollution risk water outfall sites.
7. Deliver a high level of road user satisfaction.	Customer satisfaction of 83.5% for trunk roads and 87.5% for motorways.
8. Deliver the Highways Agency's contribution to the Department's efficiency target.	Deliver improvements in roads procurement through adding value to service delivery of £66 million in 2005–06. Deliver our programme within the allocated administration budget, which requires an efficiency improvement of at least 2.5% per annum.

Explanatory notes against each of these indicators are provided in the business plan, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Dartford-Thurrock Crossing Road User Charging Scheme Accounts 2003–04

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. David Jamieson): The Dartford-Thurrock Crossing Road User Charging Scheme accounts for 2003–04 have been laid before Parliament today under section 3(1) of the Trunk Road Charging Schemes (Bridges and Tunnels) (Keeping of Accounts) (England) Regulations 2003. Copies of the accounts have been placed in the House Library.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Agency Business Plans 2005–06

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Alan Johnson): I am today able to announce the annual performance targets in 2005–06 for each of the executive agencies of the Department for Work and Pensions.

BEST COPY AVAILBLE

The targets I have agreed are set out below.

Further information on the plans of each of the businesses in 2005–06 is contained in their individual business plans which have been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

JOBCENTRE PLUS

Job entry target[1]

To achieve 6,659,148 points based on Job Entry outcomes achieved.

This excludes performance in the seven Jobcentre Plus Districts piloting a new Job Outcome Target (JOT) measure. As the existing target and the new JOT are completely different measures of performance, it is not appropriate to include the pilot areas in the national target. By way of comparison, the 2004–05 target would have been 6,580,647 points had the seven Districts been excluded. The pilots will be set separate performance targets.

Monetary value of fraud and error target

By March 2006, to reduce losses from fraud and error in working-age Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance to no more than 5.2 per cent. of the monetary value of these benefits paid during the year.

Employer outcome target

To ensure that at least 84 per cent. of employers placing their vacancies with Jobcentre Plus have a positive outcome.

Customer service target

To achieve an 81 per cent. customer service level in the delivery of the standards set out in the Customers' and Employers' Charters.

Business delivery target

To ensure that specified key Jobcentre Plus business processes are delivered efficiently, accurately and to specified standards in 90.3 per cent. of cases checked[2].

Unit cost target

Targets for benefit processing and job-broking (cost per job entry point) are being finalised and will be published after the Easter recess.

Notes:

[1] This target is measured by a points score system, which focuses efforts and resources on helping people in priority groups into work such as lone parents and Incapacity Benefit customers. For each person that Jobcentre Plus helps into work, it earns from one up to 12 points. For example, earning one point for already employed customers to 12 points for a customer with a health condition or disability in receipt of an inactive benefit.

[2] These processes are: Income Support accuracy, Jobseeker's Allowance accuracy; Incapacity Benefit accuracy; Labour Market Interventions; attendance at an independent assessment following a Basic Skills referral; action taken with lone parent customers who are due a review/trigger Work Focused Interview.

THE PENSION SERVICE

Pay the guarantee element of Pension Credit to at least 2.1 million pensioner households.

Reduce losses from fraud and error in Pension Credit, with a 20 per cent. reduction by 2006 against the 2001–02 Minimum Income Guarantee baseline.

Ensure that 92 per cent. of telephone calls to The Pension Service Centres are answered by Customer Advisors and less than 1 per cent. of attempted telephone calls receive the engaged tone or message.

Ensure Pension Credit applications are processed on average within 10 days.

Achieve a Pension Credit accuracy rate of 96 per cent.

Clear 95 per cent. of State Pension claims in 60 days (non-complex cases)[3].

Clear 91 per cent. of State Pension claims in 85 days (complex cases)[3].

Achieve a State Pension claims accuracy rate of 98 per cent.

Deal with State Pension Forecast requests in an average of 15 days.

Issue Winter Fuel Payments for 2005–06 (all automatic payments, and successful claims received before 24 September 2005) by Christmas 2005.

Unit cost targets are being developed and will be published later in the year.

Notes:

[3] Complex claims are claims to State Pension from customers who have been widowed or divorced and the spouse's National Insurance contributions are taken into consideration.

CHILD SUPPORT AGENCY

The performance targets for 2005–06 will focus on progressing CSA's priorities. The targets set out below, with the exception of the debt target which is new, have been rolled forward from 2004–05. Ministers will review the overall package of targets once the new Chief Executive is in post and has had a chance to develop more detailed plans for the delivery of the child support service in 2005–06. Revised targets resulting from this review will be published as appropriate later in the year.

Case compliance	By 31 March 2006 to be collecting child maintenance and/or arrears from 78 per cent. of all cases with a maintenance liability using the collection service.
Cash compliance	By 31 March 2006 to be collecting 75 per cent. of child maintenance and/or arrears due to be paid through the collection service.
Accuracy	By 31 March 2006 accuracy on the last decision made for all maintenance calculations checked in the year to be correct to the nearest penny in at least 90 per cent. of cases.
Debt	To collect arrears equivalent to 30 per cent. of the amount accruing between 1 April 2005 and 31 March 2006.
Unit Costs	Achieve a cost per case of £202.

DISABILITY AND CARERS SERVICE

		2005–06 target

Disability Living Allowance		90%
Attendance Allowance		90%

Carer's Allowance	New claims	22 days
	Appeals	35 days
Helpline—telephone service		90% of calls answered with less than 1% receiving engaged tone.

THE APPEALS SERVICE

The average waiting time for an appeal to be heard will be no more than 11 weeks from the time of receipt by the Appeals Service[4];

The number of cases over 20 weeks old as at 31 March 2006 will be at the same level, or lower, than the projected number as at 1 April 2005 (It is assumed that the number of cases over 20 weeks old as at 1 April 2005 will reflect delivery of our 2004–05 target of a 15 per cent. reduction in these cases);[4] and

For cases returned by the Commissioner, the average waiting time for an appeal to be re-heard will be no more than eight weeks from the date of return to the Appeals Service.[5]

Notes:

[4] Excludes stayed cases awaiting decision in lead cases in a higher court (the effective date will commence from withdrawal of stay being notified).

Social Fund Allocations 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Chris Pond): I am pleased to announce that the gross discretionary Social Fund budget for 2005–06 will be £719 million. This includes a further increase in net treasury funding of £10 million compared with last year and means that net funding is now £40 million higher than 2002–03. It is the final one of three annual increases from a £90 million boost for the discretionary Social Fund announced in the autumn 2002 pre-budget report.

After careful consideration, I have decided to allocate all the extra net funding to community care grant needs. I have therefore increased the community care grant (CCG) budget by £10 million. This is a further significant increase that will help the most vulnerable. It has been distributed so that every district benefits by an increase in their CCG budget and districts move closer to meeting the same proportion of demand nationally.

My current priorities are for the grants budget. The net loans budget, however, received a significant investment of £10 million in the first year (2003–04) and this, plus higher loan recoveries have promoted steady growth in the gross loans budget. The gross loans budget for 2005–06 will be £580 million, which represents an increase of £20 million over the April 2004 allocation. To maintain fairness within the scheme, the gross loans budget will continue to be allocated to districts to support consistency of outcome for applicants wherever they live.

£1 million will be retained centrally as a contingency reserve. For example to provide additional help to districts facing unexpected and unplanned expenditure.

Details of individual district budget allocations have been placed in the Library.

The discretionary social fund budget is cash limited. Budgets are allocated to districts on 1 April each year.

The gross discretionary SF budget allocated for 2005–06 is £719 million made up of:

New money (AME)	£178.2m
Forecast loan recovery	£540.8m
This was allocated as follows:
Loans	£580m
Grants	£138m
Contingency reserve	£1m

If the forecast for loan recoveries proves to be an underestimate, any additional recoveries can be allocated to districts during the year.

The contingency reserve is held centrally and allocations made from it re-imburse districts for expenditure resulting from a local accident or disaster (eg, flooding)

Since April 1997, the gross discretionary social fund budget has increased by £251.5 million from £467.5 million to £719 million, an increase of over 53 per cent.

Since April 1997, the community care grant budget has increased by £41 million from £97 million to £138 million, an increase of just over 42 per cent.

New Child Support Scheme

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Alan Johnson): The new arrangements for child support came into operation for new cases and some linked old scheme cases from 3 March 2003. Despite recent progress, some significant problems remain with the new computer and telephony systems. These continue to slow progress on business recovery. The Department continues to retain substantial payments from EDS. The payment each year is determined by the contract and is linked to service levels and to the degree of functionality delivered. Between 27 January 2003 and 16 January 2005, the agency retained £13.3 million of payments otherwise due to EDS.

This report forms part of the Department's response to the Work and Pensions Select Committee report into the performance of the Child Support Agency. It therefore includes information up to the end of February 2005 (my last progress report covered the quarter ending September 2004). During this period the agency's performance has continued to improve. More families continue to benefit from the new scheme—a further 16,600 families have received child maintenance premium. The quarter ending December 2004 produced the highest quarterly total since the new arrangements were introduced and this upward trend is continuing. It brings the total number of beneficiaries to almost 50,000. Similarly, the number of first payments of maintenance received through the agency's collection service during the quarter ending December was the highest achieved so far.

The number of cases cleared during the period from October to February (both calculations and closures) was over 72,000, bringing the overall total of clearances to around 310,000. The position fell back somewhat in the run up to Christmas. However, this was not unexpected and the underlying position is recovering as we move through the next quarter. During both October and November, the monthly volume of clearances grew faster than at any other point in the year.

Based on regular monthly sampling the current level of accuracy (to the nearest penny) is estimated at around 78 per cent. against a target of 90 per cent. This is lower than the preceding quarter. The agency is taking urgent action to correct this trend but it is now clear that the end of year target is unlikely to be achieved. Regular monthly sampling will continue to be used to monitor accuracy levels and determine the end of year position. As a result of improvements with the agency's management information systems, case compliance performance will now be reported on a rolling last quarter basis. Previously published estimates of case compliance in the new scheme have been measured on a monthly basis. This is not consistent with either the definition used to measure old scheme compliance, or the basis on which the new scheme target was set. Both relied on a rolling last quarter measure. Reporting performance using a rolling last quarter basis provides a more accurate reflection of performance and gives a direct comparison between old and new scheme performance.

This change in reporting has resulted in an uplift in case compliance performance by around eight percentage points. At the end of February case compliance stood at 65 per cent. against a target of 78 per cent. Cash compliance at end of February stood at 58 per cent. against a target of 75 per cent. Focus on improving compliance continues, with activities targeted on core operational service teams together with the creation of the agency's enforcement directorate. Early indications show that for cases newly calculated in September and October 2004, case compliance in February 2005 has stabilised at around 75 per cent.

Although the rate at which work-on-hand is increasing has slowed down, clearances are still less than intake. An agency business transformation programme is being developed, which will contain short-term tactical initiatives and also places significant emphasis on ensuring medium to long-term sustained recovery.

The agency has made progress in investigating the anomalies in its management information. Some over counting of cases has been identified, which has reduced intake reported since March 2003 by 34,000 cases. Indications are that there is potential for further reductions in intake of around 12,000 cases and an understatement of around 17,000 clearances. Overall this is likely to equate to a downward revision in the work on hand of 63,000 cases. Some of these cases are still within the system and some operational intervention will be required. Work is continuing to identify and examine the full range of issues and apply necessary remedies. The revised data in the tables is the agency's best current estimate.

Summary of Agency Performance to February 2005

The method by which these figures are calculated has been changed to include, in the calculation, those collections of child maintenance made (on behalf of the Secretary of State) in those cases in which the parent with care is on benefit.

Notes:

1. Average weekly child support maintenance payments to parents with care are shown in the table. The method by which these figures are calculated has been changed to include, in the calculation, those collections of child maintenance made (on behalf of the Secretary of State) in those cases in which the parent with care is on benefit. Figures are for February 2005 only and are calculated as the total amount received and allocated divided by the number of cases.
2. Based upon our best information on the extent of the double-counting of applications that has taken place and emerging findings from the management information improvement project. These figures may be subject to change.
3. Figures from quarter four 2003–04 onwards and scheme to date figures include clerical cases (new scheme cases unable to be progressed on the new system). Quarter two 2004–05 figures also incorporate some adjustments to take account of a reconciliation of clerical cases. The clerical case position is as follows:

	Scheme to date June 2004	Scheme to date September 2004	Scheme to date December 2004	Scheme to date February 2005
Applications cleared	1,345	2,130	2,340	3,063
Maintenance Calculations	1,134	1,937	2,069	2,673
Closures	211	193	271	390

4. Closures: Applications close for a variety of reasons. The main reasons are that the parent with care withdraws the application, perhaps due to reconciliation, or having agreed private arrangements with the non-resident parent.
5. Closures for February include 1,000 un-progessable cases that have been deleted from the IT system.
6. Figures for child maintenance premium payments include an estimate of the number of parents who receive the premium by way of a disregard to their income support/income-based jobseekers allowance.
7. Cash compliance is measured on a three-month rolling average basis, as this best illustrates performance. Case compliance is measured on a rolling-last quarter basis (in line with old scheme reporting).
8. A proportion of cases that have a maintenance calculation in place may already be receiving payment directly, but will not be reflected in the figures shown above.

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): A note has been placed with the Mental Capacity Bill's draft code of practice in the Libraries of both Houses. CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Gambling Bill: Amendments

The Minister for Sport and Tourism (Mr. Richard Caborn): This statement provides information about a number of amendments tabled on the Gambling Bill, which is currently being considered in Committee in the House of Lords. The Government believe it may be of assistance to Members of both Houses if they were to provide their view on amendments to the Bill that have not yet been considered formally, but which have been the subject of extensive discussions between Ministers and Members in both Houses, as well as a range of interested parties. The Government have also placed a copy of associated letters to Opposition spokespersons, setting out its position on all amendments tabled to the Bill, in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Government hope that this statement reflects the level of consensus that these constructive discussions have brought about, which has been reflected in a considerable number of improving amendments being tabled by the Government. References to clauses and schedules in this statement are to those in the Gambling Bill, in the draft brought from the House of Commons on 25 January.

Schedule 1 and 2: Payment to enter lotteries and betting prize competitions

This section deals with amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that seek to clarify the meaning of payment to enter which concern entry into betting prize competitions and lotteries.

The Government acknowledge that effective definitions in this area are of great importance, and sympathise with the intention of the amendments. However, we do not believe that the amendments would add clarity to the schedules or improve their effect.

We consider that the addition of the words "has been calculated so as to reflect", in relation to the cost of goods that may constitute payment to enter the competition or lottery, would not make a practical difference. Where the cost of an item "reflects" the opportunity to enter an arrangement, the price of that item must include a calculated increase that is attributable to the opportunity to enter the arrangement. We also believe that amendments relating to the normal rate are unnecessary as this will necessarily exclude any supplement or premium that reflects the opportunity to enter the lottery or competition.

The Government agree with amendments requiring free communications—offered as an alternative to a payment to enter the competition or lottery—to be genuine, realistic and not unduly inconvenient nor more expensive than payment to enter. We believe, however, that this is the effect of schedules 1 and 2. Paragraph 8 of both schedules requires a choice between paying to enter and entering through a form of communication. If the communication is not a genuine or realistic option, the requirement for a choice cannot be said to have been fulfilled.

This paragraph also requires that the free communication route must be no less convenient than entry by paying. This is designed precisely to rule out schemes that are not genuine or realistic, if, for example, an individual has a choice between paying to enter, and travelling to an inconveniently located office. It will not prevent companies from using what might be legitimate free entry routes such as e-mail.

Amendments have been tabled that seek to clarify that a requirement to pay in order to collect a prize will only be deemed to be payment to enter where the payment is to the arrangement promoter or his associate. The Government do not believe these amendments are necessary: payment for anything other than possession of the prize itself cannot be payment to enter for the purposes of the Bill.

Clause 14: Definition of lottery

This section concerns the definition of "lottery" included in clause 14 of the Gambling Bill and, specifically, amendments tabled about the level of skill needed to fall outside lottery regulation.

A number of amendments have been tabled that represent contrasting views in the debate over the level of skill required in a prize competition for it to fall outside lottery regulation under the Bill.

The Government do not agree with the amendments which would weaken the protection of charity lotteries, offering commercial prize competitions a wide discretion to encroach on the area of activity that the Government believe should remain the preserve of charity lotteries. Conversely, the Government believe that the amendments that introduce the notion of 'substantial skill' into the definition of a lottery bring an unreasonably stiff test.

The Government prefer their own amendments to clause 14, which seek to make the definition of lottery more user-friendly, without diluting the level of the test or the principle underpinning it.

The Government amendments introduce the notion of "reasonable expectation" into the test. This changes the nature of the test from a strictly empirical one to a normative one, and thereby improves its practical application. It is also important to note too that the Bill provides for a gambling commission with the powers it needs to investigate and tackle any abuses.

Clause 24 Sports betting codes of practice

This section concerns proposals relating to sports betting codes of practice, and their inclusion in the Gambling Bill.

Amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill would require the proposed gambling commission to issue, to betting licensees, codes of practice on betting on sports. Clause 24 of the Bill already provides the commission with powers to issue such codes.

The Government agree that protecting the integrity of sport from potential threats posed by betting will be a priority for the commission. Indeed, one of the commission's licensing objectives is to ensure that gambling is conducted in a fair and open way. The Government also published, last month, their code of practice for betting on sports. In future, this code will complement codes of practice issued by the gambling commission. The Government believe, therefore, that further requirements to issue codes of practice are unnecessary, as both the powers and objectives of the commission are already in place to tackle this issue.

Clause 25: Guidance to local authorities

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that would involve the Government, rather than the proposed gambling commission, offering guidance to local licensing authorities about the exercise of their functions under the proposed legislation.

Amendments tabled require the Secretary of State to issue guidance to licensing authorities under clause 25, in place of the gambling commission. The Government disagree with these proposed amendments. The commission, not the Government, will be the primary regulator of gambling in Great Britain and, with its experience of regulating and communicating with the industry, will be the main source of knowledge on gambling issues.

The commission, along with licensing authorities will also be responsible for monitoring and inspecting gambling activities, ensuring those activities take place in accordance with licence conditions.

In the light of this, the Government hold to the view that the gambling commission is best placed to guide licensing authorities in the pursuit of their functions.

Clause 26: Duty to advise Secretary of State

This statement concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that relate to the release of advice offered by the proposed gambling commission to the Government.

Amendments tabled require the gambling commission to make any advice given to the Secretary of State available to the general public. The Government agree with the objectives of this amendment, but do not think it necessary to add this amendment to the Bill.

The gambling commission will be bound, like other bodies, by the Freedom of Information Act 2000. Requiring the commission to publish all the advice given to the Secretary of State will, however, put an unnecessary burden on the gambling commission. However, where it is appropriate to do so (having regard to the 2000 Act), the Government agree that the gambling commission should make public the advice it gives to the Secretary of State.

After Clause 26: Test purchasing

This section concerns Government amendments that have been tabled to the Gambling Bill to allow the gambling commission to assess whether the offences under the Bill are being complied with.

The main purpose of the amendments is to enable test purchasing to be carried out to assess compliance with under-age gambling. The commission will be able to use children and young persons in test purchasing activities to assess whether the offences of under-age gambling are being complied with. The amendments follow the model suggested by the Trading Standards Institute, which is involved in the protection of children from harm and the prevention of children from access to restricted goods, such as alcohol, cigarettes and lottery tickets.

Clause 35: Territorial Application

This statement addresses concerns raised by remote gambling operators about licensing of remote gambling under the Gambling Bill. The Government have held detailed discussions with the operators on these issues, and has accordingly tabled Government amendments Nos. 79, 82, 84, 89, 142, 143 and 158.

Clause 35(4)(a) of the Bill defines remote gambling equipment as that which registers a person's participation in the gambling. Operators believed this an unduly onerous approach. Amendment No. 80, therefore, would require gambling operators to only verify the identity of customers. The Government do not think this sufficient, so Government amendment No. 79 requires this and requires operators to keep records of customers' gaming and transaction history.

Amendment No. 81 deals with operator concerns that clause 35(4)(c) would capture all poker-room equipment used by British operators, which is often based overseas and whose location in Great Britain need not be necessary for the effective regulation of such remote gambling. The Government acknowledge that this is a legitimate concern and accordingly tabled Government amendments Nos. 142, 143 and 158 which allow the gambling commission to take a case by case approach to deciding which items of gambling equipment can be located outside Great Britain.

Amendment No. 83 and Government amendment No. 82 address the same issue—the records which remote gambling licensees must keep. We believe that amendment No. 83 would retain a requirement on the operators to maintain financial records, whereas Government amendment No. 82 has withdrawn this requirement and replaced it with a requirement to record game result history.

Amendment No. 84 is a minor drafting amendment, which recognises that equipment other than computers may be used for remote gambling e.g. mobile phones.

Amendment No. 88 seeks to exclude remote communications software from the offence of installing or supplying gambling software. The Government agree with this objective, but believe that Government amendment No. 89 achieves it more effectively by clarifying that a person does not supply or install gambling software if they provide solely communications equipment, e.g. a mobile telephone network, even if it is subsequently used to download gambling software.

Amendment No. 141 would require the gambling commission to regulate equipment outside its jurisdiction. The Government believe this impractical, but have instead tabled amendments Nos. 142, 143 and 158, which allow the gambling commission flexibility to judge which equipment can be located offshore.

The Government are confident that their amendments, which were shown in draft to the Association of Remote Gambling Operators, deal effectively with the remaining issues of concern to the remote gambling industry.

Clause 41: Cheating

This section concerns amendments that have been tabled to the Gambling Bill that seek to alter or supplement the definition of cheating in the Bill.

Amendment No. 90 seeks to replace clause 41(1), which makes it an offence to cheat at gambling (without defining cheating) with a new subsection which includes a definition of cheating. The Government appreciate that the intention of the amendment is to make the scope of the offence more specific; but we believe that, while it may achieve this objective, it involves undesirable consequences.

First, and most importantly, it narrows the scope of the offence, by excluding forms of cheating which do not alter the element of chance in a game of chance or its outcome. Second, by tying the definition of cheating specifically to games of chance it raises a question mark about cheating in the context of other forms of gambling than gaming, such as betting and lotteries.

The Government believe that it is an important strength of clause 41 that the expression "cheating" is not defined. This will enable the commission and the courts, in prosecuting and punishing cheats, to deal with the full range of culpable conduct. The Government believe that the practical effect of a specific definition (however desirable from a drafting perspective) will make things easier, not harder, for cheats.

Amendment No. 91 appears to be intended to broaden the definition of the offence. It would bring within the definition of the offence any act which allows an advantage not intended by the manufacturer or operator of a game. The Government fear, however, that the effect of the amendment will be uncertain, because the operator's intention can only be a wholly subjective concept.

Amendment No. 92 seems intended to ensure that the offence of cheating catches the type of scam that involves using electronic equipment to reduce the odds on games like roulette, of which there was a high profile alleged incident last year at a London casino. The amendment makes specific provision concerning use of equipment in a casino that could be used to record, analyse or predict the outcome of, or the manner in which a game is played. The amendment would make the possession of any electronic equipment capable of recording games in a casino an offence. The Government are unclear about whether such activity will always constitute cheating, and accordingly think it unsafe to accept the amendment.

Following the incident last year, the Government considered carefully the use of electronic equipment to narrow the odds of casino games, and whether we needed to strengthen the offence of cheating in the Bill. We concluded that the Bill already covers everything that it should. A person who does anything unfairly to increase the chance of winning is cheating at gambling, and already falls within the offence. We are afraid that being more specific than this would risk making the clause too complicated, and vulnerable to evasion.

Clause 50: Employment to provide facilities for gambling

This section concerns amendments to the Gambling Bill, which relate to the employment of children, particularly those intended to allow gambling operators to employ children to work on category D machines and otherwise than in the provision of gambling in betting offices, adult gaming centres and casinos.

The Government believe that children should not be employed in a way that involves interfering with any category of gaming machine, even category D machines.

The control of machines is an adult responsibility and we think it would be irresponsible to allow children to be involved. Of course, children can be employed in family entertainment centres and in other places, to man the change counter or to serve food. There is no harm in that and the Bill allows it to continue.

The Bill prevents children from entering betting offices and adult gaming centres when they are being used in reliance on the premises licence, and the Government think this is an important principle. The Bill does not prevent persons aged under 18 from entering these premises at other times, however, so that 16 and 17 year- old apprentice joiners could work on the refurbishment of the premises.

Clause 58: Age limit for Category D gaming machine

This section concerns Government amendments to the Gambling Bill which require that the Secretary of State, before setting any age limit for playing category D gaming machines, consults the gambling commission, the industry and those with knowledge of the social problems relating to gambling. Government amendments also allow age limits to be set for only certain types of gaming machine e.g. we could exclude cranes and grabbers from any age limit.

These Government amendments follow up the commitment made by the Government during the Second Reading of the Bill in the House of Lords, to give Ministers power to limit the effect of any new age requirements for category D machines to particular types of gaming machines.

Government amendments insert new subsection (3) into clause 58. This subsection means that, before using this power, the Secretary of State must consult the gambling commission, relevant parts of the gambling industry and people involved with problem gambling. Government amendments also insert new subsection (4) into clause 58. This subsection allows the Government to distinguish different types of category D machines. This means that the Government can exclude machines such as penny pushers and crane machines from any future age restriction, if necessary.

Clause 79: Credit and inducements

This section concerns Government amendments proposed to the Gambling Bill which prevent the use of credit cards for gambling payments in casinos. This delivers on a commitment the Government offered at Second Reading.

The Bill as drafted already prohibits the use of credit cards in gaming machines, and these amendments extend the effect of that prohibition to all gambling in a casino. The amendments tabled do allow cash machines to remain in casinos, as long as there is no commercial relationship between the casino and the machine provider. The casino must also ensure that conditions about the location of such machines are observed properly.

Clause 91: Pool betting operating licence

This section concerns amendments to the Gambling Bill relating to greyhound pool betting.

The Government understand the concerns of the greyhound racing industry. At present, occupiers of greyhound tracks have an exclusive right to offer pool bets on the races taking place at their tracks. Betting offices cannot offer pool bets on greyhound tracks. The Government propose to lift this restriction; to widen consumer choice and allow the more substantial off-course pools to flow into on-course pools, thereby enhancing the attractiveness of greyhound pools.

The Government acknowledge, however, that there have been concerns expressed in the greyhound industry about the potentially disruptive effects of a rapid move to an open market.

Following detailed discussions with representatives of the greyhound industry, the Government have therefore decided to table their own amendment on this issue. This will require pool bets on greyhound racing to be offered in betting premises only where they are offered in accordance with an arrangement with the greyhound track occupier. This restriction will apply until 31 December 2012, after which it will cease to have effect. The Government hope this transitional measure will provide reassurance to the greyhound industry, but note that it will also allow a wider range of betting choices for the betting consumer than exist at present.

Clause 97: Mandatory conditions of lottery operating licence

This section concerns amendments that have been tabled to the Gambling Bill that seek to alter or supplement the limits on the proceeds of society and local authority lotteries licensed under part 5.

Amendment No. 147 seeks to remove the limits altogether; amendment No. 148 would increase the maximum permitted proceeds of any one lottery (£10 million); amendment No. 149 would remove any limit on the annual proceeds of a lottery (currently £10 million); amendment No. 150 doubles the maximum prize that can be won in a lottery to £50,000 (if 10 per cent. of the proceeds is less than £50,000); and amendment No. 152 would make it a statutory obligation for the gambling commission to review proceeds and prize limits every three years.

The Government acknowledge that society lotteries raise a great deal of money for good causes, in part as a result of the recent increases in maximum permitted prizes and proceeds. In most cases, it seems unlikely that the limits in the Bill will act as a restraint for most lotteries—as few approach the limits on proceeds set out in the Bill.

The Government think it important to retain some control over the size of large society lotteries. In particular, prizes for these types of lottery are limited to a maximum 10 per cent. of the proceeds of the lottery. If the limits on the proceeds were removed it could lead to a situation where people were tempted to gamble more to chase higher prizes. We think the existing limits, which were doubled in 2002, are fair, but we agree that there should be flexibility to alter them.

The Secretary of State has the power to vary any monetary amount or percentage in clause 97. She will, of course, keep these limits under review and increase them as necessary. With respect to the proposals in amendment No. 152 for a triennial review, it will be well known that the arrangements for a review have arisen as a matter of custom and practice on the part of the Gaming Board. We expect those arrangements to continue, and the Bill already makes provision, in clause 26, for the gambling commission to offer advice to the Secretary of State.

Amendment No. 151 is intended to remove the requirement that electronic tickets must be sent in a way that enables them to be retained, replacing it with a requirement only that the information contained on it should be accessible. The Government do not think it prudent to accept this amendment.

We do think it important that a person should be sent his ticket in a way that enables him to retain it, whether electronically or otherwise. This is both so that he can prove his entry, and so that the information is there to be checked if necessary by those responsible for monitoring gambling activity. We believe these are reasonable requirements.

Clause 121: Levy

This section concerns amendments which have been tabled to the Gambling Bill which seek to ensure that any levy raised under clause 121 is not raised in such a way that society lotteries pay more than reflects their impact on problem gambling or their relative size in terms of gambling revenue.

The Government hope that it will not be necessary to commence the levy provisions of clause 121. If, however, that proves necessary, there are a number of options for determining the levy allowed under the current clause 12—including provision to determine it by reference to receipts. In raising any levy, the Government will of course discuss with the gambling commission how best to ensure that contributions, including any from the society lottery sector, are fair and reasonable. We do not consider that we should limit our options in the way that these amendments imply.

In addition, we do think that to tie the levy applicable solely to the incidence of problem gambling—whether or not linked also to revenue, and for society lotteries only, would be unfair. We, therefore, believe that the possible operation of a levy should be dealt with in the round, in the manner facilitated by clause 121.

Clause 157 etc: Fees

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that would remove the Secretary of State's power to set annual premises licence fees. Licensing authorities would be able to set their own fees for premises licences in accordance with guidance issued by the Secretary of State.

The Gambling Bill gives to the Secretary of State a power (in respect of England and Wales) to set bands of fees for premises licences, with a prescribed maximum. This maximum is proposed because the Government believe it important that fees are fair and consistent. Within these bands, authorities will be able to set the precise fee in order for them to be able to recover their costs. We recognise that, in some circumstances, it would be appropriate to devolve fee-setting to licensing authorities, so long as the principle of cost-recovery is maintained.

Therefore, the Secretary of State has a power under clause 206 to devolve fee-setting to some, or all, licensing authorities. The Government have been, and will continue to liaise with the local government association and LACORS regarding the setting of all fees charged by licensing authorities under the Gambling Bill. The Government consider that this approach balances a desire for a degree of local autonomy with a reasonable desire on the part of gambling operators for a level of consistency.

Clause 166: Default conditions

This section concerns amendments to the Gambling Bill that seek to restrict the opening times of betting offices during winter months.

The Government intend to use powers under clause 166 (default conditions), to set opening hours for gambling premises. The Government have no detailed proposals to make about the future opening hours of betting offices, other than to confirm that they believe they should be standard over the year. The Government will continue to consider this matter in consultation with all interested parties.

Clause 174: Bingo door supervision

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that address requirements for door supervision of gambling premises. Amendment No. 250 would exclude bingo hall door supervisors from needing to be licensed, as security operatives, under the Private Security Industry Act 2001. The Government have now tabled Government amendments Nos. 247, 248, 249 and 381. These ensure that where bingo and casino operators use their own staff for door supervision purposes, they continue to be exempt from being licensed under the Private Security Industry Act 2001. We believe that the controls in the Bill are sufficient to regulate these matters. As a result, there is no longer a need for amendment No. 250. We understand that the Bingo Association is also satisfied that the matter has been dealt with satisfactorily.

After Clause 177: Christmas Day

This section concerns Government amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill. The Government note concerns in the House of Commons and Lords about the availability of commercial gambling services on Christmas day. Accordingly, the Government have tabled amendment No. 251, which will have the effect of preventing licensed premises from being used to offer facilities for gambling on Christmas day.

Clause 230: Gaming machines: categories A to D

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that seek to allow the practice of trading up of two smaller prizes from a gaming machine, for a larger one to continue. The Government agree with this aspiration and believe that this is achieved in clause 337(3), which permits trading up so long as the value of the prize received is not greater than the total value of the prizes that could have been lawfully won by the player.

However, the proposal to introduce the phrase "be permitted without restriction", which is included in amendments, is of concern to the Government because it could be interpreted to mean that trading up to any value of prize could occur. If the amendment were interpreted in this way, two £5 prizes could be traded up to a prize of the value of £100, which would clearly be undesirable.

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that would have the effect of making a triennial review of gaming machine stakes and prizes a statutory obligation. It also concerns amendments that would increase the maximum prize payable by a category C machine from £25, as proposed by the Government, to £35.

A triennial review of stakes and prizes has been carried out by the Gaming Board for Great Britain, as a matter of custom and practice. However, the Government do not think it desirable to make the process binding. The proposed gambling commission (which will take on the responsibilities of the Gaming Board in this area) might have reason to undertake a review more frequently than every three years. Conversely, there may be circumstances that lead the commission to conclude that a review of stakes and prizes is certainly not appropriate. Nor would the Government wish to encourage an assumption that they had ruled out adjustments to stakes and prizes that were thought necessary in response to advice and research from sources other than the gambling commission, even if the Government would always consult the commission about the use of its powers in part 10 to adjust stakes and prizes.

As will be known, the Gaming Board for Great Britain recommended, in their triennial review last year, an increase in category C machine prizes to £35.

The Government gave careful consideration to the board's advice, but came to the conclusion that stakes and prizes for these gaming machines, which are available in pubs and other premises not dedicated to gambling, should stay where they are, pending the passage of this Bill. That means retaining the £25 maximum prize for category C machines for now, while keeping this under review in the future. The Government are not minded to change their view on this point.

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that seek to ensure that the stakes and prizes for category D machines under the Bill will be, respectively, 30p and £8.

During the Second Reading of the Bill in the House of Lords, on 22 February, the Government announced that the existing maximum prize of £8 for gaming machines that offer non-monetary and non-exchangeable prizes (i.e. goods, like teddy bears) will remain. The Government have previously announced that maximum stake for these machines will remain at 30p.

For other types of category gaming machine, like those that pay out in either cash or in tokens that can be accumulated and traded for significant prizes (known generally as 'redemption' machines, the Government continue to take the view that the appropriate stake and prize limits for these machines are 10p and £5.

Machines with cash or exchangeable prizes involve incentives for repeat play that the Government believe justify a more cautious approach than for non-monetary and non-exchangeable prizes, particularly where these machines can be played by children. Clause 230 gives Ministers power to adjust stakes and prize limits for all categories of machine. The Government believe that this flexible approach is the correct one in relation to machine stakes and prizes.

Clause 258: Preventing Repetitive play

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that seek to ensure that the gambling commission cannot arbitrarily attach conditions to licences for rapid draw lotteries, without first having evidence that these lotteries are harmful.

The Government agree with the intention of this amendment, and can confirm that we have no desire to place restrictive conditions on lotteries in the absence of compelling evidence of harm.

Following discussions with representatives of lottery providers, the Government have decided to take a slightly different approach to this issue, but with the same objective of protecting consumers.

The Government have therefore tabled amendments to delete clause 258. The Government intend, instead, to rely upon the powers in clauses 73, 75, and 76 to facilitate such conditions, as are necessary, on the offering of lotteries. Under clauses 73 and 75, the gambling commission may attach conditions to lottery operating licences. Under clause 76 the Secretary of State may make regulations which require specified conditions to be added to operating licences. The Government will consider, with the gambling commission and lottery providers whether it is necessary to use these powers in relation to lotteries. We will do so through the processes for consultation provided for in parts 2 and 5 of the Bill.

Schedule 13: Licensed Premises Gaming Machine Permits and Clause 279: Removal of Exemption

This section concerns amendments tabled to the Gambling Bill that address the provision of gaming machines in pubs and other alcohol licensed premises.

Amendment No. 316 seeks to prevent a licensing authority from taking away the entitlements of alcohol licensed premises to provide gaming and up to two gaming machines until representations relating to the licensing objectives have been received and upheld. Amendment No. 310 imposes the same requirements on a licensing authority before it can cancel a licensed premises gaming machine permit.

Amendment No. 317 removes the condition under which a hearing is only required to be held if the licence holder requests one. It provides for a hearing to be held specifically to consider the relevant representations; and for that hearing to take place unless the authority, the licensee and each person who made representations agreed that a hearing is unnecessary. Amendment No. 311 makes the same provisions with regard to the cancellation of a licensed premises gaming machine permit.

The Government take the view that these amendments are unnecessary. Clause 279 and paragraph 16 of schedule 13 already restrict the circumstances in which an authority can take away an alcohol licensed premises' entitlements to offer gaming and gaming machines. We are confident that licensing authorities will act reasonably in the exercise of their functions in this regard. If the licence holder believes the authority's actions are unjustified, there is a right of appeal to the magistrates' court (or, in Scotland, to the sheriff). We believe this provides an adequate protection for licence holders.

There are also dangers in preventing a licensing authority from being able to act unless it has considered representations from a responsible authority. There may be cases where the authority has received information from other sources, or has gathered on its own initiative, that would justify it in taking action urgently to remove gaming or gaming machine entitlements. In these circumstances, the amendments would potentially put consumers and children at risk, if the licensing authority could only act in response to representations.

The Bill also already provides for a licensee to request a hearing if he or she wants one. The Government believe that this provides sufficient opportunity for the licensee to make representations to a licensing authority before any entitlements can be taken away.

Clause 325: Foreign gambling

This section concerns amendments to the Gambling Bill proposed by the Government. These amendments provide further clarification in respect of foreign gambling. Government amendment No. 345 is a technical amendment designed to rectify an overlap between parts 11 and 16 of the Bill. As a result of this amendment, lotteries will be regulated, largely, under part 11. This will mean that advertising foreign lotteries will not be prohibited. However, there will be little point in doing so because no ticket for such a lottery will be permitted to be sold to a person in Great Britain.

Government amendment No. 346 fulfils a commitment that the Government gave to clarify the position that gambling operators based in Gibraltar will be permitted to advertise in the United Kingdom. Government amendment No. 347 widens the Secretary of State's powers to specify "places" as well as "countries" that can be 'white listed' under clause 325(3).

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): Following Ministerial approval of the business plan, key performance targets have been agreed for the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre for the period 1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006.

The agency's principal financial target for 2005–06 is to achieve a minimum dividend payment to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister of £1,400,000.

An operational target has been set to achieve combined room occupancy of the three key conference areas within the centre in excess of 470 days and not less than out-turn in 2004–05.

The agency also has the following quality of service targets:

Overall score for value for money satisfaction of 90+ per cent.

The number of complaints received to be less than two per 100 events.

An average response time when answering complaints of less than four working days.

Telecommunications Developments

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): The Government are today announcing they will be commissioning research to identify the future direction of mobile phone technology and the future need for mast developments. The research will also look at the potential for increased sharing of masts. The research will consider the effectiveness of the Sitefinder database and options for its future development. The Government are currently reviewing planning arrangements for mobile masts.

DEFENCE

Defence Medical Education and Training Agency

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): The following key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Medical Education and Training Agency (DMETA) for the financial year 2005–06:

Key Target 1—Meeting Operational Manpower Requirements

To meet 100 per cent. of the commanders-in-chief requirements for secondary care personnel under DMETA command for operational deployments.

Key Target 2—Individual Military Continuation Training

To ensure that 90 per cent. of all DMETA personnel, whose medical category permits, achieve their service's annual mandatory individual military training.

Key Target 3—Medical Professional and Career Training

Initial Training (Phase 2)

To provide initial training (phase 2) that meets the requirements, professional standards and timescales defined by the single services.

Career. Professional and Continuation Training (Phase 3)

To provide career, professional and continuation training (phase 3) that meets the requirements, professional standards and timescales defined by the single services.

Key Target 4—Efficiency DMETA Estate

Ensure the rationalisation and efficient usage of the current DMETA estate, reducing the balance sheet value of the estate as at 1 April 2003 by at least 50 per cent. by 2010, thereby reducing the cost of training.

Cost Measurement

To comply with centrally led Departmental initiatives in support of the cost of defence outputs and RAB exploitation.

Key Target 5—Customer Focus.

To improve upon the customer confidence index baseline score, as assessed at the end of financial year 2004–05, by 5 per cent.

Key Target 6—Harmony/Separated Service

To ensure 100 per cent. compliance with the single services' harmony guidelines for all deployable personnel under DMETA's command.

Fleet and Second Sea Lord Budgets

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): In the 2004 Defence White Paper "Future Capabilities" we announced plans to merge the Fleet and Second Sea Lord Headquarters in Portsmouth. This is part of a programme to create a modern, effective and efficient command structure for the Royal Navy. It will build on the collocation of both headquarters in Portsmouth in 2002 and the enhanced capabilities provided by Fleet's new Leach Building on Whale Island, which opened last year.

Since that announcement work has progressed and our aim is to stand up the new merged headquarters on 1 April 2006. By cutting out duplication, streamlining back-office functions, and maximising the benefits of collocation, modern working practices and better IT, we expect to redirect significant resources to the front line. In particular, the new headquarters will require some 450 fewer posts (125 military, 325 civilian) than the two existing headquarters. These reductions will contribute to the wider MOD manpower reductions also announced in the White Paper.

We are doing everything possible to mitigate the impact on the people concerned. Our current plans envisage that the civilian reductions, most of which will take place in the Portsmouth area, will be achieved through a combination of natural wastage and voluntary early release. Should compulsory redundancies prove necessary, we will do all we can to keep them to a minimum. There will be no service redundancies. Staff and the trade unions are being kept fully informed of developments through meetings, briefings and a formal consultation exercise.

Creation of the new headquarters will have no impact on the Royal Navy's footprint in the Portsmouth area. The main focus of the headquarters will be Whale Island, but elements of the new command structure will remain in the naval base.

Support Vehicle Contract

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am pleased to announce that following the successful completion of negotiations MAN ERF UK Limited has been awarded the contract for the Ministry of Defence's support vehicle programme.

The award of this contract, which has a value of £1.1 billion, will see the delivery of a modern, more effective and more efficient fleet of trucks and trailers—a vital support capability—to our armed forces. The contract will create and secure a large number of jobs in the automotive sector across the UK, and is an excellent deal for both UK industry and the British armed forces.

Defence Fixed Telecommunications System

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am pleased to announce that a five year extension to the Defence Fixed Telecommunications System (DFTS) contract with British Telecommunications plc (BT) was signed on 1 April. The extension takes the contract term to July 2012. The extended contract will secure the continuation of voice, data and video telecommunications which are vital to the daily operations of the Department and UK armed forces. It will involve the introduction of new technology, producing benefits which contribute to operational effectiveness and the Department's future capabilities, as set out in the Defence White Paper on "Delivering Security in a Changing World (July 2004)". It will provide substantial savings, in the order of £15 million a year, and improve the ability of the Department to ensure ongoing value for money. The five year extension has a value in excess of £1.5 billion and will bring the total value of the DFTS contract to over £3 billion.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Student Loans Company

The Minister of State for Lifelong Learning, Further and Higher Education (Dr. Kim Howells): A copy of the annual performance and resource agreement with the Student Loans Company (SLC) for 2005–06 has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses today.

The SLC plays a key role in the delivery of the Government's student finance arrangements and the agreement sets five objectives for the company over the coming year. The main objective is to provide an accessible an effective system for handling applications for student support and processing payments, so that students get paid the correct amount of support at the start of term. The other objectives relate to improving the collection of student loans; providing a high quality service to customers; offering information to the Government to assist in developing policy and strategy; and securing the best use of funding provided to the company. Performance measures have been set for the SLC in these areas and new monitoring arrangements will track the company's progress in delivering against these.

The agreement is also available on the SLC website at www.slc.co.uk

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ivory Coast

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Chris Mullin): It is with regret that last Friday my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, decided temporarily to suspend operations in our embassy in the Ivory Coast with immediate effect. This decision is based on the uncertain security situation and our inability adequately to protect our staff or UK nationals in the case of a further outbreak of violence. But the decision also reflects the lack of progress in the peace process; until leaders truly commit to finding a political solution, there is little point in us remaining.

On Friday we changed our travel advice to urge British nationals to leave while there is calm and commercial means are available. Consular and visa services will be provided from Accra.

We have informed the Government of Ivory Coast of our decision, and that we will review the situation in June.

UN Report: "In Larger Freedom"

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Bill Rammell): The Government warmly welcome United Nations Secretary-General Annan's report "In Larger Freedom", released in New York on 21 March.

As my right hon. Friends the Foreign Secretary and International Development Secretary said in a joint press statement on Monday 21 March, the report offers bold proposals to enable the UN to deal with the challenges faced by the international community. We agree with Kofi Annan that we need a shared global agenda that recognises that security, development and human rights are not competing priorities, but fundamentally interrelated goals, underpinned by rule of law. Nations will never be truly secure unless they are built on stable institutions, social progress and development, the rights of the individual and rule of law.

We are studying the report carefully and hope that it will lead to a successful outcome at the UN millennium review summit in New York in September. We intend to play a major role in helping deliver a successful outcome, not least as G8—and from July, EU—presidency.

We strongly support the SG's lead in putting key issues on the agenda for leaders in September, including:

the need for action now to make faster progress towards the millennium development goals, including on related sustainable development commitments, and to improve human rights;

support for: increased aid and launch this year of the international finance facility; the recommendations of the Prime Minister's Commission for Africa; and UK ideas for more effective international responses to natural and man-made humanitarian crises; more effective support for countries emerging from conflict, including in particular through the establishment of a new peace-building commission: and the development of comprehensive strategies to meet threat of terrorism and proliferation.

The Government will make a full contribution to the summit and its preparations. Our G8 priorities—on Africa and climate change—reflect key themes on the UN summit agenda. We hope the Gleneagles summit will help build momentum for a successful UN summit.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has launched, with the UN association, an extensive public debate on the secretary generals' earlier high level panel report aimed at informing our approach.

I have placed copies of the "In Larger Freedom" report in the Library of the House. It is also available on the internet at: www.un.org/largerfreedom

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Bill Rammell): The Westminster Foundation for Democracy (WFD) is well known to many Members of this House who have committed time and effort to work on behalf of the WFD, promoting democracy around the world through training; sharing experiences; and mentoring. I would like to make particular mention of the efforts of those Members who have served on, or are current members of, the WFD's Board, and especially to the hon. Member for Ilford, South (Mike Gapes), the chairman of the board.

In May 2004, the FCO and WFD commissioned jointly a firm of consultants, River Path Associates, to conduct a full review of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy. The review was conducted according to Government guidelines on reviewing non-departmental public bodies.

The final report of the review has now been presented to me and I am placing copies of it in the Library of the House. The report is also available on the FCO website, www.fco.gov.uk.

The Government have considered the recommendation of the review carefully. We are seized in particular of a need for the WFD to operate with proper accountability and transparency. We have decided not to accept the recommendation that the work of the non-political part of the WFD, known as WFD central, be brought back into the FCO. WFD central will remain in its current form and the FCO will work with it to continue to improve the effectiveness of WFD central in building democracy overseas. This decision is based on two points: (i) our judgement that WFD central deserves recognition for the progress made in recent years; and (ii) the added benefits of conducting democracy building work through an arms-length body, rather than directly through Government.

We have also considered carefully the review's recommendations on the WFD's work with British political parties. We see merit in the recommendation of the reviewer, that this work be funded through Parliament. But this is an important issue and we want to be sure that we reach a decision that has broad support.

To this end I am announcing today the beginning of a three-month consultation exercise on the future of the WFD. I would encourage all Members of both Houses to involve themselves in the consultation.

There are two elements to the exercise:

consideration of the River Path Associates report; consideration of a response to the report, produced by WFD.

These documents are all available on the FCO website. Alternatively, I would be happy to send copies to Members who write to me to request them.

We will also be seeking views from a wide range of others in the consultation process. We will particularly target those who know the WFD, but will also welcome views from specialists in democracy promotion from within the UK and abroad. I would encourage Members to make this exercise known to those they believe might be interested in commenting.

HEALTH

Cancer Drugs

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Miss Melanie Johnson): Following continuing interest in both Houses about variations across the country in the use of cancer drugs approved by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE), this statement informs the House of the key messages from cancer network action plans provided to the Department of Health by strategic health authorities (SHAs) following the National Cancer director's report of 14 June 2004 on this subject.

SHAs have confirmed that:

funding is available for NICE approved cancer drugs;

where cancer networks were significantly below the national average for specific drug usage their investigations have identified that the drugs are available if required or there are reasons for low usage such as clinical preference for alternatives and cross boundary flows;

where areas such as staffing and capacity have been highlighted, actions to address them are being taken including demand and capacity modelling, recruiting to new posts (including medical & clinical oncology and nursing) and investment in infrastructure such as new facilities; many networks have taken the opportunity to strengthen their arrangements generally to ensure appropriate implementation of NICE appraisals.

The National Cancer Director has analysed the action plans and said that they are encouraging, confirming that the profile of implementing NICE appraisals has increased and that where problems have been identified they have been, or are in the process of being, addressed. A repeat analysis will be conducted in the autumn to confirm if variations have been reduced as a result of this action.

A letter to key cancer stakeholders in the National Health Service, voluntary sector and pharmaceutical industry has also been issued today setting out these messages in more detail. Copies will be placed in the Library.

The Department will continue its work to support the NHS in implementing NICE guidance.

NHS Foundation Trusts

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Mr. John Hutton): The chairman of Monitor (the statutory name of which is the Independent Regulator of NHS foundation trusts) announced on 1 April 2005 that, in accordance with section 6 of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003, Monitor authorised the following NHS trusts to operate as NHS foundation trusts from 1 April 2005, as part of its second group in wave 1a:

Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull NHS Trust

Frimley Park Hospitals NHS Trust

Lancashire Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust

Liverpool Women's Hospital NHS Trust

The Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch NHS Trust

The Royal National Hospital for Rheumatic Diseases NHS Trust

Monitor has deferred consideration of the applications from Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust, East Somerset NHS Trust and Newcastle upon Tyne Hospitals NHS Trust. Further decisions on these trusts may be made at a later date by Monitor.

West Suffolk Hospitals NHS Trust and Wrightington, Wigan and Leigh NHS Trust have not been authorised. In the coming weeks, officials at the Department will work with these trusts to ensure that full support is provided for a further application for authorisation at a later date.

A copy of Monitor's press notice has been placed in the Library.

Monitor's announcement brings the total number of NHS foundation trusts to 31.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Attenuating Energy Projectile

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Caroline Flint): The then Home Secretary, my right hon. Friend the Member for Blackburn, announced on 2 April 2001, Official Report, column 372W, that the Government were continuing with a programme to establish whether an acceptable, effective and less potentially lethal alternative to the baton round was available.

A new safer attenuating energy projectile (AEP) is now available and is being issued to police forces in England, Wales, and Northern Ireland, and to the Army in Northern Ireland. The existing baton round, the L21A1 will be withdrawn once all personnel have been trained in the use of the AEP. It is planned to begin deployment of the AEP on an operational basis from 21 June 2005.

The AEP will be used only in accordance with guidance which is intended to provide authorised firers with a less lethal option in situations where they are faced with individual aggressors whether such aggressors are acting on their own or as part of a group. It is not a crowd control technology; it is designed to be used against specific individuals in a variety of scenarios. Although there will be a reduced risk of serious injury or death when the AEP is used, that risk has not been completely eliminated. Where a round inadvertently strikes the head, the risk of serious and life threatening injury from the AEP will be less than that from the L21A1 baton round, which already has a low risk of such injury. This has been verified by an independent medical assessment, a copy of which I have placed in the Library today. Police guidance produced by the Association of Chief Police Officers and Army guidance on the use of the AEP will be published shortly and copies will be available in the Library of the House.

Details of use by the police will be reported on every occasion to the Independent Police Complaints Commission in England and Wales and to the Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland and copied to the policing board. Details of use by the Army in Northern Ireland will also be reported on every occasion and copied to the Special Investigation Branch of the Royal Military Police (SIB RMP) and the Independent Assessor of Military Complaints Procedures (IAMCP).

The Government and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) remain committed to research and development in furtherance of recommendations 69 and 70 contained in the report of the Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland. A research programme is continuing with the intended publication of a report marking the end of the fifth phase of the programme in the near future.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia Earthquake

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I would like to report to the House on the relief effort following the earthquake in Indonesia on 28 March 2005.

On 28 March an earthquake measuring 8.7 on the Richter scale hit northern Sumatra at 22:09 local time (16:09 GMT). It was 30 km deep and was felt in Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand. The epicentre was between the Indonesian islands of Nias and Simeulue. This is about 180 km south south-east of the major earthquake of the 26 December 2004, which was the second largest in recorded history at 9.3 on the Richter scale.

The 28 March earthquake prompted tsunami alerts across the region. Early warning and disaster preparedness initiatives were tested for the first time since the 26 December earthquake and tsunami. In Thailand and Malaysia, populations vulnerable to the effects of a tsunami were immediately alerted and where necessary, evacuated. The Government of India issued a tsunami warning through the media to coastal areas including the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, where tremors were also felt. In the Maldives, the Government issued a tsunami warning through the media and a national disaster management centre was fully activated.

The destruction and loss of life caused by the 28 March earthquake was mostly localised to the islands off the west coast of Sumatra, which have a total population of around 525,000. Early estimates from assessments still ongoing give the estimated death toll as around 1,700. Latest figures from the national authorities in Nias place the death toll at around 560 with the number of injured at about 3,000 (10 per cent. seriously injured). On Simeulue there are nine confirmed dead and 47 injured, although the UN estimates some 100 dead and 177 injured, whilst on the mainland there are unconfirmed reports of nine deaths. Figures received today indicate that there may be as many as 300 killed (from a population of about 5,000) on the Banyak Islands, according to the authorities. It is likely that the final death toll will be between 1,500 and 2,000.

Because of the extensive relief and recovery operation already underway in Sumatra, following the earlier earthquake and tsunami, the Government of Indonesia and the international community were well placed to respond quickly to the new earthquake. Assessment teams were formed quickly by the Government, the UN's Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the World Food Programme, and international non-governmental organisations to carry out rapid assessments in Nias and Simeulue. This included British non-governmental organisations, and I would like to commend them for their immediate response to those in need on the affected islands.

Initial feedback from rapid assessments of the islands confirm that the earthquake hit the island of Nias, with a population of around 450,000, hardest. Estimates of building damage in the capital, Gunungsitoli, range between 20 per cent. and 50 per cent. severely damaged. Most damage was done to cement and brick buildings. Damage is also reported to essential infrastructure, roads, airport, electricity distribution and water supplies. On Simeulue, the most recent reports indicate that 12,000 homes may have been destroyed or damaged.

Over the weekend we heard the news that a helicopter operated by the Australian Navy had crashed while on operations near Nias. Nine military personnel were, tragically, killed, and another two survivors are being treated for their injuries. We extend our heartfelt sympathies to the families of those killed, and wish those injured a speedy recovery.

The rescue and relief operation is well underway, although damage to infrastructure, including to the airport runway on Nias, and adverse weather conditions have caused difficulties. Search and rescue teams, medical teams and medicines, tents, food, water and non-food items have been arriving on the islands by air and sea and distributed to the affected areas. Medical evacuations from Nias are being carried out to Medan and Meulabpk on the mainland. The World Food Programme have estimated that 200,000 Nias residents will need food assistance for about two months.

The United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs has been co-ordinating the relief effort jointly with Government of Indonesia from Bandah Aceh, consulting closely with the Red Cross Movement, non-governmental organisations and other agencies. An on-site Operational Coordination Centre has been established in Sibolga, on the west coast of Sumatra, and over the weekend, a six-person United Nations Disaster Assessment and Coordination (UNDAC) team was mobilised to reinforce UN co-ordination. Relief assistance for Nias is now being channelled through Medan, while assistance for Simeulue is channelled through Banda Aceh.

The Department for International Development had two humanitarian advisers in Indonesia, one in Banda Aceh and one in Jakarta, at the time of earthquake. They have worked alongside the United Nations and other humanitarian organisations to support the relief effort. From the outset we offered whatever assistance might be appropriate, including financial support if needed. The main requirement was to support fast needs assessment and transport provision. Department for International Development funded Mi8 and Super Puma helicopters were used for the initial assessments and were also used for the transport of medical supplies and water to Nias as well as medical evacuations. Department for International Development supplied tents have been moved by the UN to Sibolga for use as shelter on the islands. Following the tsunami, there were already large quantities of relief items in Indonesia, together with numerous humanitarian workers. Nevertheless, gaps in provision might become evident as the assessments on the islands provide more information. Through our staff on the ground and contact with the UN, Red Cross and NGOs, we are monitoring the situation constantly and, should any gaps in provision emerge, we remain prepared to provide additional assistance that may be requested by the United Nations or the Government of Indonesia.

The Government of Indonesia have not requested further international assistance to respond to the earthquake and has allocated approximately £2 million for emergency relief.

In general there appears to be sufficient personnel and material in the immediate region, following December's tsunami, to meet all additional needs, including search and rescue capacity. As a result United Kingdom search and rescue teams that were put on standby did not need to deploy to the region.

This earthquake will have come as a terrible shock to those still recovering from last year's devastating tsunami, and the further loss of life and suffering will be hard to bear. On behalf of the House, I send our condolences to those affected.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Education and Library Boards

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Barry Gardiner): Last November, following substantial overspends by the Belfast and the South Eastern education and library boards in 2003–04, I announced that a statutory inquiry would be held into financial management and control standards in the two boards. The inquiry, conducted by Dr. Bill Jack, former Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland, considered the extent to which the boards and their chief executives, as accounting officers, fulfilled their responsibilities.

The report highlights serious failings in the execution of responsibilities within both boards and makes 49 specific recommendations for improvement relating to each board, its chief executive and chief finance officer. I would like to thank Dr. Jack for his professionalism in conducting the inquiry and for producing a comprehensive and meticulous report. Copies of the inquiry report have been placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

The overspends have had serious consequences — this was real money, not paper deficits on a set of accounts. In total it is estimated that the SEELB has now overspent by £21.4 million and the BELB by £11.4 million. If the boards had contained spending within their approved limits, additional resources would have been available for education and wider public services.

The problem of overspending is a matter of grave concern. The Government cannot and will not tolerate persistent failure to exercise control of expenditure, which is a fundamental responsibility of public bodies and of accounting officers, who are answerable to Parliament for their stewardship of public funds. The boards are obliged under statute only to incur expenditure within plans approved by the Department, and the Government will take all the steps necessary to ensure this is secured, and that there is no recurrence of the overspending. The recommendations in the inquiry report represent a strong reminder, not only to the two boards in question, but to all those responsible for managing public funds, of the need to live within their budgets.

Proper stewardship of public moneys allocated to each board must be restored. This will require full and speedy implementation of the 49 recommendations contained within the Jack report. I will ensure that the necessary steps are taken by the boards and the Department of Education to achieve this, including the establishment of an effective regime to monitor progress on implementation. Through these arrangements, proper standards of financial management and control will be re-established in the Belfast and South Eastern education and library boards.

I have asked the permanent secretary to write to the chief executives of both boards making it clear that accounting officer status will continue only on a probationary basis until June 2006, at which point it will be reviewed formally by the Department. It is my intention that, during this period, there will be continuous monitoring to ensure the effective implementation of Dr. Jack's recommendations.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Financial Assistance Scheme

The Minister for Pensions (Malcolm Wicks): Today we have published for consultation draft regulations setting out our detailed proposals for the Financial Assistance Scheme (FAS). In our previous statement on 22 February, Official Report, columns 16–18WS, we said that there are at least 380 schemes in which members might be potentially eligible for financial assistance, and placed a list in the Library. That list is indicative and based on information provided by scheme representatives.

We will be unable to confirm formally that any scheme will definitely qualify for the FAS until the regulations containing detailed eligibility criteria have been approved by Parliament and until schemes have been formally assessed under those criteria.

However, if the information we hold is confirmed during the qualification process and if the further information which may be needed to confirm scheme eligibility is provided by scheme representatives within prescribed timescales, then those schemes will meet FAS scheme qualification criteria. There is no reason to expect that any scheme should otherwise be taken off the list.

As indicated in the statement made on 22 February, the FAS will provide assistance to members of defined benefit pension schemes in circumstances where the sponsoring employer is insolvent. We are aware that some trustees and members of schemes that start to wind up with a solvent employer before 5 April 2005, but where the employer may enter insolvency after 5 April 2005, have been concerned that they will be excluded from both the FAS and the Pension Protection Fund (PPF).

I can reassure members of those schemes that start winding up before 5 April 2005 that they will potentially be eligible for assistance from the FAS should a relevant insolvency event occur after 5 April 2005. This is in order to minimise the administrative risk that members of those schemes will find themselves falling between the FAS and the PPF. However, to ensure its effective operation, it will still be necessary to set a cut-off date for the occurrence of the insolvency. That cut-off date will coincide with the end of the period by which schemes must have notified the FAS of their potential eligibility. The date will be prescribed in the regulations.

As solvent employers have a duty to support their schemes and provide the benefits members were expecting, it is right that the FAS focuses on insolvent employers. We have however taken action to facilitate operation of the arrangements for deemed buy back which enables some members of severely under-funded contracted-out pension schemes in wind-up, who meet the qualifying conditions, to choose to be reinstated into the state system.

On 31 March we laid new regulations to speed up the process and ensure schemes get their calculations quickly. These regulations clarify that as well as being available to members of some insolvent schemes (helping ensure that the funding allocated to the FAS can help as many people as possible), this option is also available to some members in schemes with solvent employers.

As we announced on 22 February, the FAS will provide help to those within three years of their scheme pension age on 14 May 2004. The assistance will top up individuals' pensions to a level broadly equivalent to 80 per cent. of the core pension rights accrued in their scheme. The draft regulations provide a detailed explanation of what this will cover.

Payments will commence at age 65 and assistance will only be provided to those who will receive at least £10 a week (or equivalent) from the FAS. There will also be a cap on the total amount of assistance and pension payable so that FAS payments do not top up people's pensions to more than £12,000 per year.

Payments will be backdated to the date we announced the Financial Assistance Scheme (May 2004) or the recipient 65th birthday, whichever is the later. These are likely to be in the form of a lump sum.

Surviving spouses of scheme members who were within three years of their scheme pension age on 14 May 2004 (or who would have been had they not died) will be eligible to receive payments from the date of the death of the member, regardless of the survivor's age. The FAS will provide support at 50 per cent. of the member's level of assistance.

Getting assistance quickly to people who are older, especially where they are ill, is obviously a pressing concern. So, although not included in these regulations, we are exploring how to ensure that seriously ill people within three years of their scheme pension age can be paid very soon, before their pension scheme has finally wound up, and including survivors' rights. We are also exploring whether we might be able to fast track payments to people who are already 65 and putting in place arrangements to ensure those reaching 65 start receiving FAS payments as soon as possible after their 65th birthday.

We will make a further announcement on these options as soon as possible.

More details on these issues are in the draft regulations. A copy has been placed in the Library. We have invited comments on these for a period of six weeks until 16 May. Subject to the outcome, we plan to lay the regulations in June with the intention that they come into force as quickly as possible.

Written Ministerial Statements

Tuesday 5 April 2005

TREASURY

UK Debt Management Office

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): The UK Debt Management Office (DMO) has published its business plan for the year 2005–06, together with an updated executive agency framework document. Copies of both documents are available in the Libraries of both Houses and are accessible from the DMO's website: www.dmo.gov.uk.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Ratification of Protocol Number 14 to the European Convention on Human Rights

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): Her Majesty's Government ratified protocol 14 to the European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms on 28 January 2005.

Protocol 14 is designed to maintain and improve the efficiency of the European Court of Human Rights for the long term, mainly in the light of the continuing increase in the workload of the Court, to ensure that the Court can continue to play its pre-eminent role in protecting human rights in Europe.

Judicial Appointments Commissioners

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs, Lord Falconer of Thoroton, has made the following written ministerial statement in the other place.

"I am pleased to announce that, with the agreement of the Lord Chief Justice, I have invited Sir Nigel Wicks to chair the panel to be appointed under the Constitutional Reform Act to select the members of the Judicial Appointments Commission. Sir Nigel, who has a distinguished record of public service including as a former chairman of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, has kindly agreed to do so".

DEFENCE

Defence Transport and Movements Agency

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): Key targets have been set for the chief executive of DTMA for the financial year 2005–06.

The targets are as follows:

Key Target 1

To achieve at least a "Satisfactory" rating in the provision of planning and delivery of transport and movements support to emerging operations, an increase in the tempo of existing operations or other requirements.

Key Target 2

To achieve at least a "Satisfactory" rating in the planning and delivery of transport and movements support to enduring operations.

Key Target 3

To provide roll-on/roll-off (ro-ro) vessel capability at the readiness states required.

Key Target 4

To meet customers' requirements as negotiated and agreed in customer supplier agreements (CSAs) to deliver:

(1) 98 per cent. (previously 97 per cent.) or more of agency transactions and services, however provided, to be within agreed time, quantity, quality and cost (TQQC) criteria.

(2) At least 94 per cent. (previously 92 per cent.) of transactions against each service to be within agreed TQQC criteria.

Key Target 5

To reduce the average unit cost of output by 1 per cent. (previously 2 per cent.), on the actual unit cost achieved in 2004–05, in real terms.

New Call-out of Reservists for Operations in the Balkans

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): A new call-out order has been made under section 56 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996 so that reservists may continue to be called-out into permanent service to support military operations in the Balkans. The order will take effect from 4 April 2005.

At present, over 80 reservists are serving in the Balkans. They are providing a wide range of individual skills. We are most grateful for their continuing support to an important stabilisation operation.

Special Reconnaissance Regiment

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): The Strategic Defence Review (SDR) New Chapter published in July 2002 stated that we planned to enhance and build upon the capabilities of UK special forces. As part of this programme, the "Special Reconnaissance Regiment" (SRR) will stand up on 6 April 2005. This regiment has been formed to meet a growing worldwide demand for special reconnaissance capability. Consistent with the SDR New Chapter, this regiment will provide improved support to expeditionary operations overseas and form part of the defence contribution to the Government's comprehensive strategy to counter international terrorism. The SRR will bring together personnel from existing capabilities and become the means of the further development of the capability. Due to the specialist nature of the unit, it will come under the command of the director special forces and be a part of the UK special forces group.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ordnance Survey

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): Following ministerial approval of the business plan, the following performance targets have been set for Ordnance Survey in 2005–06:

Ordnance Survey will report externally against a set of agency performance monitors (APMs) as required of all executives agencies in Government:

To achieve an operating profit before interest and dividends of £5.8 million for the financial year 1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006.

Some 99.6 per cent. of significant real world features are represented in the database within six months of completion.

To continuously improve the timeliness of the supply of our data to customers with a success rate not lower than 95 per cent.

To achieve an efficiency gain in our data collection activity averaging at least 5.5 per cent. per annum over the period April 2003 to March 2006.

To reduce carbon emissions from Ordnance Survey Headquarters by 26 per cent. against the base year of 2000–01.

To achieve an increase of at least 5 per cent. in business with customers transacted through our OS Options and OS Leisure Map shop e-channels.

These targets reflect Ordnance Survey's continuing commitment to customers, improved value for money for all of its stakeholders and commitment to Government policies.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Microbicide Development Programme

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I am pleased to announce the approval of additional DFID funding of up to £23.8 million to the Microbicide Development Programme (MDP). The MDP is co-ordinated by the UK Medical Research Council's clinical trials unit and Imperial College, London. This funding will enable the completion of a phase III clinical trial of one of the leading candidates for a microbicide protecting against HIV infection.

The potential benefits of an effective microbicide are very significant. Research has shown that an effective microbicide could prevent up to 2.5 million infections worldwide over three years. Microbicides, prepared in the form of a gel, provide a potential means for women to protective themselves against infection.

This investment is part of the Government's strategy for tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing world, as set out in "Taking Action" published in July 2004.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland Security Vetting Review

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Ian Pearson): In December 2002, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced a review of security vetting arrangements in Northern Ireland, with the aim of ensuring that these were effective; proportionate; compliant with human rights and other statutory requirements; and in line with UK-wide best practice.

The review, which has involved representatives from Government Departments, the police and security agencies, and Government legal services, has now completed its detailed work. I have accepted its recommendations, which have improved security vetting procedures through the following significant changes:

a range of enhancements to protective security in the areas of personnel, physical and IT security; an increased focus on risks and improved safeguards in vulnerable areas, enabling a major reduction in the number of posts requiring vetting on grounds of national security across government while improving, through better use of resources, the protective security of key areas; and the introduction, now underway, of internal appeal processes for existing employees against the refusal or withdrawal of national security vetting clearances, to provide better transparency and fairness.

I believe that these are positive steps which will both promote confidence in the equality of opportunity afforded by Government employment, and improve the protections for and integrity of important Government activities and public services.

The Government attach particular importance to addressing all aspects of protective security. Work to drive the changes forward will continue. It is essential that in Northern Ireland, as in the UK as a whole, sound protective security regimes are in place to protect vulnerable and critically important public functions and activities from the whole range of threats, including domestic and international terrorism.

Independent Monitoring Commission Report on Paramilitary Activity

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Paul Murphy): On 3 February 2004 I received a report from the Independent Monitoring Commission (IMC). The IMC concluded that the Northern Bank robbery was planned and undertaken by the Provisional IRA. The commission also concluded that PIRA was responsible for a number of other robberies that are referred to in the report.

The commission concluded that Sinn Fein must bear its share of responsibility and recommended that I should consider exercising the powers I have in the absence of the Assembly to implement the measures which are presently applicable, namely the financial ones.

I announced in Parliament on 22 February that I was minded to remove for a period Sinn Fein's entitlement to financial assistance payable to political parties in Northern Ireland. Yesterday, having provided Sinn Fein with an opportunity to make representations to me, I laid in Parliament a direction to remove Sinn Fein's entitlement to financial assistance for 12 months from 29 April 2005, the maximum period permitted under the relevant legislation.

Discretionary Social Fund

The Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office (Mr. John Spellar): I am pleased to announce that the Northern Ireland discretionary social fund budget for 2005–06 will be £59.59 million. £13.32 million will be allocated to grants; £46.17 million to loans and £0.1 million will be held as a contingency reserve. The new allocations represent an increase of £1.34 million over the initial gross budget set at April 2004. This increase will be funded through higher loan recoveries, plus an increase in net treasury funding of £0.68 million for this year. This £0.68 million is the third and final instalment of the increases to the discretionary social fund announced in the autumn 2002 pre-budget report.

The community care grant budget has been increased by £0.68 million to £13.32 million. This will provide more help to customers, in particular families with children and the disabled.

The loans budget has been increased to £46.17 million, an increase of £0.66 million on the initial 2004–05 loans budget. To improve the fairness of the scheme, budgets will be allocated in a way that will over time achieve greater consistency of outcome for customers wherever they live.

Details of the budget allocations, together with a note explaining the basis on which they have been made, have been placed in the House of Commons Library today.

Juvenile Justice Centre

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Paul Murphy): The Government have received and welcome a report from the chief inspector of criminal justice in Northern Ireland, Kit Chivers. The report is on the Juvenile Justice Centre and has today been published.

Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

TRANSPORT

MCA Ministerial Targets 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. David Jamieson): I am pleased to announce the ministerial targets for the Maritime and Coastguard Agency for 2005–06.

The Ministerial Targets are:

1. In at least 96 per cent. of incidents, within five minutes of being alerted, take a decision on the appropriate search and rescue response and initiate action if necessary;

Deliver at least 97 per cent. of planned ship inspections;

Carry out 95 per cent. of mandatory expanded ship inspections.

2. Ensure, by working with UK shipowners, that no more than 3 per cent. per cent. of UK ships inspected under the Paris memorandum of understanding (MOU) arrangements are detained, and also ensure that the UK shipping register maintains a position on the Paris MOU white list which is comparable to registers of a similar size and reputation.

3. Reduce the proportion of people who suffer death or injury while involved in beach activities, coastal swimming and recreational diving, by increasing MCA prevention activities, working in partnership with other organisations.

4. From a baseline of 76 per cent., increase customer satisfaction with seafarer documentation services to at least 80 per cent.

5. Establish a fully operational automatic identification system (AIS) network around the UK coast, to implement real-time tracking and monitoring of shipping movements from the shore. This will ensure the UK meets its obligations under the vessel traffic monitoring directive, and will assist monitoring of SOLAS convention traffic in transit through UK coastal waters, providing real time situational awareness to all rescue co-ordination centres within their operational area for the first time. This will enhance capability for SAR co-ordination activity, Marine pollution control co-ordination, monitoring of voluntary (MAREP) reporting schemes and vessels in transit through traffic separation schemes around the UK.

Development Targets:

Prevention—in addition to Target 3 above

6. In 2006–07, reduce the proportion of machinery failures on commercial ships and leisure craft in the UK, by increasing prevention activities, working with other relevant organisations.

In 2007–08 review the implementation, effectiveness and impact of the comprehensive prevention strategy.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Gravesham Borough Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on Gravesham borough council was published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

In 2003–04, Gravesham borough council administered some £21 million in housing benefits, about 41 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure. Between April 2001 and March 2004 the council raised only two administrative penalties and no formal cautions or prosecutions had been made. Weaknesses in counter-fraud work included a lack of up-to-date policies and procedures, limited awareness of benefit fraud as an issue and ineffective work with Jobcentre Plus and the Pension Service.

However, some progress had been made since the appointment of a benefits manager and a fraud and inspections manager, including the completion of 48 investigations, with three sanctions administered and the recruitment of four staff to carry out reviews of postal claims and home visits from October 2004. There are also plans to recruit two more fraud investigators.

The performance development team is now working with the council to help develop a long-term performance improvement strategy for the counter-fraud unit.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to the BFPs findings.

Hinckley and Bosworth Borough Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on Hinckley and Bosworth borough council was published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

In 2003–04 Hinckley and Bosworth borough council administered some £10 million in housing benefits, about 35 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure. BFI's comprehensive performance assessment in April 2004 found weaknesses in the council's counter-fraud activity. The inspection found that since then the situation has improved and the counter-fraud service is now performing to a reasonable standard. It is clear that the council is now committed to improving its counter-fraud service and this was shown by the prompt and positive reaction from members, senior managers and staff to BFI's findings and recommendations.

There is now a comprehensive set of policies and procedures to guide staff and investigators are experienced and generally well trained, although did not fully comply with legislation and guidance in some investigations.

Senior managers and members need to ensure that internal and external auditors support their efforts to ensure that the benefits system is safe and secure.

In September 2004, the council made a successful bid for performance standards funding to provide training and support officer and was keen to explore further funding for other counter-fraud initiatives.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings.

South Buckinghamshire District Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on South Buckinghamshire district council was published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

In 2003–04, South Buckinghamshire district council administered some £9 million in housing benefits, about 38 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure. BFI found that the council's counter-fraud work and audit arrangements were not at standard.

The council had contracted out counter-fraud work in 1997 but little meaningful counter-fraud work was done under these arrangements. Following a best value review of the revenues and benefits service, direct responsibility for managing counter-fraud was returned to the council on 1 September 2004.

BFI found that existing strategic and policy plans contained too little detail to be fully effective and that some were still in draft. In many cases no fraud file was set up to hold details of the investigation and where a fraud file did exist it contained insufficient information. The management of the council's counter-fraud resources and quality of the investigative work was poor. No fraud sanctions had been applied in over 10 years. The performance development team is now working with the council to develop a long-term strategy to improve counter-fraud work.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings.

Flintshire County Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on Flintshire county council was published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

In 2003–04, Flintshire county council administered some £26.5 million in housing benefits, about 10 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure. In the final quarter of 2003–04 the council was taking 89 days on average to process new claims to housing benefits against the Standard of 36 days. This performance placed it in the bottom quartile of performance.

BFI found that the council had bought a new benefits IT system in November 2003 but had some difficulty implementing it and this led to backlogs of work. The council had cleared these by June 2004 but in doing so training and the development of effective management information were neglected. By October 2004 Flintshire county council was processing new claims in 70 days, a useful improvement but still almost twice the standard time. Significant problems remain with the IT system and these must be addressed urgently. While the benefits service is integral to the council's corporate aims, objectives and targets for it were not prioritised, job descriptions did not reflect staff duties and lines of responsibility for benefits staff were not clear.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings.

DEFENCE

Sea King Helicopter

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): I am announcing today the award of a contract to Westland Helicopters Ltd. for phase one of the Sea King Integrated Operational Support Programme, part of the wider Defence Logistics Transformation Programme, which is seeking to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of military logistics support to the front line. The contract is worth £300 million over the first five years, with a price review thereafter, and includes the provision of technical and spares support to the Sea King fleet. It will result in savings of some £50 million over ten years, which is a considerable improvement on current support costs.

There are seven different variants of Sea King currently in service with the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force in a variety of roles including maritime, air sea rescue operations and support to land forces. The Sea King Integrated Operational Support programme will improve the way in which support is provided for the Sea King platform, focusing on maximising aircraft availability, improving spares delivery and reducing through-life costs. It will secure the ability of the Sea King to continue operations in support of the UK Armed Forces in the future.

Phase 2 of the programme is expected to be implemented in around eighteen months' time, subject to a successful performance review against Phase 1 implementation.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Houses in Multiple Occupation

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): The Government are today publishing the summary responses on the key issues raised in our consultation on the implementation of HMO licensing. Copies of these responses have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. In addition, the Government are announcing the decisions we have made in respect of a number of issues which are necessary to achieve implementation in October 2005. An analysis of responses on the complete range of questions asked will be published in due course.

"Licensing in the Private Rented Sector: Consultation on the Implementation of HMO Licensing" sought to explain the Government's proposals for licensing in the private rented sector, as contained in the Housing Act 2004. It invited interested parties to comment on how these powers should be implemented, in particular through asking questions about the possible form that the necessary items of secondary legislation should take.

The paper asked a series of questions on a number of different subjects, including the following key issues:

the threshold for mandatory licensing,

the property types to be exempted from HMO licensing, whether to enact management regulations for all HMOs (licensable and non-licensable), whether to prescribe national amenity standards, whether to specify a cap for licensing fees.

The consultation period ended in February and we have now analysed responses and reached decisions on these key issues so that we can start drafting the appropriate secondary legislation that will allow these important measures to be commenced by autumn this year. We are also keen that all relevant stakeholders are made aware of these decisions as early as possible to allow them to begin preparing for the introduction of licensing.

On most of these issues, the majority of respondents agreed with the proposals set out in the paper. Discussions have also been held between officials and stakeholders at a working group comprising representatives of local government, landlords and tenants.

The Government are introducing licensing as a measured response to the problems of the private rented sector. And in doing so we are keen to strike the right balance between setting clear national benchmarks and giving local authorities the discretion to respond to local housing market conditions. This is a difficult trade off and there is no single solution that applies in all cases. We propose a mixed solution as follows:

i) the threshold for mandatory licensing will apply to HMOs comprising of three or more storeys and occupied by five or more persons (comprising at least two households);

ii) we will define for these purposes, "storeys" as including basements and attics if they are occupied (including by a resident landlord) or have been converted for occupation or which are in use in connection with the occupation of the HMO. Commercial premises on the ground or any upper floor will also be included in the calculation of number of storeys, but not basements in purely commercial use. We will not specify when a mezzanine floor is to be included, as this will depend on a case by case basis the actual use of such a floor in the HMO e.g. whether or not it used for habitable purposes,

iii) we will not make any rules concerning the calculation of persons for licensing purposes, in effect this means children will be counted from birth in the same way as adults;

iv) student accommodation owned and managed by educational establishments will be exempted from the licensing requirements, on condition that the body has in place an approved code of practice;

v) we will not specify a cap on licence fees at this stage, relying on CBPFA guidance on the treatment of costs and the audit process to ensure that fee levels remain proportionate. Discussion will begin shortly with the landlord associations and local government on ways in which license applications can be processed as quickly as possible, subject to important safeguards;

vi) we will enact management regulations that will apply to all HMOs, whether licensed or not. The regulations will take the form as set out in the consultation paper listed at SectionS;

vii) we will set national minimum amenity standards that will enable authorities to ensure that HMOs are licensed for the requisite number of occupants. We will make a further statement in May which sets out the details of those standards.

viii) we will not set maximum national room sizes for HMOs as we believe the appropriate sizes will depend on the quantity and condition of the often diverse HMO stock in an authority's area as well as the pressure on the rented market.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Parliamentary Database

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Jack Straw): In order to ensure that we can provide hon. Members with a better service, both in London and when they travel overseas, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has set up a new database which will enable us to record the foreign affairs issues in which they are interested. We will keep solely factual information which is already in the public domain, for example details of the all party groups and assemblies of which hon. Members are a member, and of overseas and inward visits (eg Inter-Parliamentary Union and Commonwealth Parliamentary Association delegations) in which they have taken part. This should enable us better to tailor information and assistance to hon. Members' needs.

Hon. Members who wish to register an interest in a particular country, region or foreign affairs topic, or to see a copy of their entry in the database, are invited to e-mail to PRDTEnquiries@fco.gov.uk

Barcelona Process

The Minister for Europe (Mr. Denis MacShane): At last November's EuroMed Foreign Ministerial in the Hague, EuroMed Foreign Ministers launched a review of the first 10 years of the Barcelona process and its future direction. A copy of the UK's national contribution to the Barcelona review has been placed in the Library of the House.

We believe that the review provides the opportunity to refocus the priorities of the Barcelona process and help ensure it delivers results that have a real positive impact for EU and Med Partner citizens. We want to see the review generate a real debate among all EuroMed Partners, and in their civil societies, of how to enhance the partnership. We believe that EuroMed should be guided by the principles of the EU's strategic partnership with the Mediterranean and Middle East and the European Neighbourhood Policy, but mostly by the desire of Mediterranean Partners for the EU's engagement and assistance in meeting the challenges of political, social and economic development.

Our national contribution proposes a strategic approach to achieving the vision set out in the 1995 Barcelona declaration. We want to focus EuroMed on achieving a limited number of 10 year targets on governance, education and economic reform. Improved education systems and more vigorous open market competitive economies are crucial to economic growth in EuroMed countries. Without these countries will not be able to take advantage of trade liberalisation and the creation of a EuroMed Free Trade Area by 2010. And improved governance based on democratic institutions, and civil society institutions especially for women and free media, will facilitate the achievement of these targets, as will focused and effective development assistance from the EU.

This is an ambitious agenda, but one whose success is critical to removing the barriers to development in the Middle East and North Africa and to enhancing the relationship between Europe and that region. The review will be negotiated amongst the 35 EuroMed Partners, all of whom will have their own aims and objectives. It will be submitted to Ministers at the EuroMed Foreign Ministerial in May and will constitute the main input to the EuroMed 10th anniversary event, which the UK will host jointly with Spain in November in Barcelona.

Sudan

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Bill Rammell): With the support of Her Majesty's Government, the United Nations Security Council on 29 March 2005 adopted resolution 1591, which extends the Darfur arms embargo to cover all parties to the N'djamena Ceasefire Agreement and any other belligerents in the states of North Darfur, South Darfur and West Darfur.

Resolution 1591 (2005) also imposes an assets freeze and a travel ban, with conditional exemptions, on individuals who impede the peace process, constitue a threat to stability in the Darfur region, commit violations of international humanitarian law or human rights law or other atrocities, violate the arms embargo or are responsible for offensive military overflights in an over the Darfur region. The measures are effective 30 days after the adoption of the resolution, unless the Security Council decides that the parties concerned have complied with their commitments in the peace process and demands made by the Council in this and previous resolutions. Resolution 1591 (2005) also established a UN sanctions committee and a panel of experts to monitor implementation and enforcement of the measures.

PRIME MINISTER

General Election Guidance (Civil Servants)

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I have written to ministerial colleagues providing guidance on the conduct of Government business during the election period. Guidance for civil servants on their conduct during this period has also been issued to Departments. The guidance comes into force with immediate effect.

Copies of all the documents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and on the Cabinet Office website.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

General Election Costs 2005–06

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. David Lammy): Subject to parliamentary approval, the Department for Constitutional Affairs Departmental expenditure limit (DEL) will be increased by £71,000,000. This will be in addition to the DEL limit due to be published in the main estimate for 2005–06.

The change in the resource element of the Department for Constitutional Affairs DEL follows HM Treasury approval to transfer £71,000,000 from the non-voted consolidated fund in relation to general election costs.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Football Betting

The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell): The Government are aware of the recent European Court of Justice rulings concerning sport and the use of database rights. I have recently met representatives of the football sector, who have concerns about how these rulings affect them.

In light of the on-going domestic court case, currently before the Court of Appeal, it would be inappropriate for me to pass comment on the details of any case.

This Government take the integrity of sport very seriously. I am aware that in its present data licensing arrangements with betting operators, the football authorities include a code of practice covering integrity issues. I am also aware that in some cases these licensing arrangements have now come to an end, and not been renewed. The vast majority of betting on sport in this country is conducted lawfully. Betting operators, sporting organisations and the Government have worked together in the past to safeguard the integrity of British sport. I expect all parties to continue to do so in the future.

The Gambling Bill will provide substantial new powers and protections to help achieve this. Indeed, one of the Gambling Commission's licensing objectives is to ensure that gambling is conducted in a fair and open way. The commission will have powers to issue codes of practice to betting operators. The Bill also makes it an express condition of all operating licences that operators comply with any codes concerning social responsibility. This is in addition to the commission's powers to investigate suspicious betting patterns, and void unfair bets or bring about prosecutions.

We will monitor the situation carefully, and officials in my Department will continue to discuss this issue with football and betting operators. We will also continue to explore the wider impact on sport of the EC database directive with Patent Office colleagues.

DEFENCE

Queen Victoria School

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): Hon. Members will wish to be aware that with effect from 1 April 2005, the Queen Victoria School (QVS), Dunblane, Perthshire, will cease to hold agency status.

QVS is presently the smallest of the Ministry of Defence agencies with a budget of less than £5 million per annum, compared to an average of £473 million. Following a recent review it has been decided that the additional overheads relating to agency status are no longer proportionate to the size of the school.

The removal of agency status will not affect the role or outputs of the school and the headmaster will remain fully accountable for the school's performance. In terms of governance the school will have an improved reporting regime within the Adjutant General Command, while maintaining a link with the Directorate of Educational and Training Services (Army) who has an interest in wider educational matters and in promoting the benefits of the QVS to service families. The school will continue to publish an annual report and, as now, academic results will be published in the Scottish league tables.

Otterburn Accidents

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): On 25 January 2005, Official Report, column 241W in response to the question raised by the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) about accidents at the army training ground at Otterburn, I stated that six people had been injured as a result of accidents at the Otterburn military training area. It has since come to light that this figure was incorrect. This was brought to my attention when a branch of the Department not previously known to hold information relating to this matter came forward.

The answer should have stated that 35 people have been injured as a result of accidents during exercises at Otterburn since 1 January 2000.

I apologise to the House for this error.

Oman

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): The Royal Army of Oman (RAO) purchased Challenger 2 main battle tanks (MBT) from the UK and is the only operator of this tank other than the UK. They currently use Discarding Sabot/Training (DS/T) ammunition as their training round but production of the DS/T round (L20 shot and L5 charge) has now ceased. RAO have purchased a new training round (CHARM 3 training round (C3TR)) but their tanks require an upgrade to allow these new rounds to be fired. This will take a minimum of 12 months from contract signature. During this period, their current stocks of the DS/T round will be exhausted and unless additional DS/T rounds are made available their tank crews will be unable to train. This will adversely affect the proficiency of the crews and the operational readiness of the Royal Army of Oman.

DS/T ammunition is no longer produced and is no longer used by the British Army. All remaining stocks were gifted to Jordan under the Al-Hussein arrangement under the auspices of a departmental minute laid before the House of Commons in July 2004. It is proposed to divert 3,000 rounds of DS/T ammunition from this Jordanian consignment (22,874 L5 charges and 26,044 L20 shot), due to be shipped in May 2005. and gift them to Oman in order to alleviate the training shortfall. This will have negligible effect on Jordan.

This proposal will have no cost for the UK. Oman will meet all transport and handling costs.

Disposal Services Agency

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): Key targets have been set for the chief executive of the Disposal Services Agency (DSA) for financial year 2005–06. The targets are as follows:

KEY TARGET—1

To achieve a disposal sales income of £50 million from sales of surplus Government-owned equipment and repayment business within an agency net operating cost of £7.5 million.

KEY TARGET—2

To meet the key performance standards required under the Internal Business Agreements (IBA) with MOD customers including the Customer Supplier Agreement (CSA) with the Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO).

KEY TARGET—3

To ensure that the agency is at the standard or above the public sector benchmarking report for overall customer satisfaction. The agency should maintain the level of current customer satisfaction (89 per cent.) and improve to 19 per cent. the number of very satisfied customers.

KEY TARGET—4

To develop a benchmark to enable the agency to both measure and exceed HMG's target (currently 25 percentage by volume) for environmental re-use and recovery for all MOD material through the DSA.

KEY TARGET—5

To secure £370,000 sales per person employed for commercial sales activities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland Prison Service Corporate and Business Plan 2005–08

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Ian Pearson): I have placed copies of the Northern Ireland Prison Service's corporate and business plan for 2005–08 in the Libraries of both Houses.

The corporate and business plan contains the key performance targets I have set for the service for 2005–06. They are:

No escape for top and high-risk prisoners.

No more than three escapes per 1,000 medium and low risk prisoners.

The number of staff assaulted by prisoners is less than a ratio of 3 per 100 prisoners.

The number of prisoners assaulted by prisoners is less than a ratio of 4 per 100 prisoners.

An average of at least 20 hours constructive activity per week for each sentenced prisoner.

An average of at least 10 hours constructive activity per week for each remand prisoner.

To ensure 87 per cent. of prisoners serving six months or more are working to a resettlement plan and that 97 per cent. of lifers work to a resettlement plan, including preparation of the plan, in the first six months from sentence.

Each member of staff should receive an average of five training days.

Reduce the rate of absenteeism across the service by 100 per cent.

Lay the annual report and audited accounts before Parliament prior to the summer recess.

Ensure the average cost per prisoner place does not exceed £86,290.

PRIME MINISTER

Intelligence and Security Committee Annual Report 2004–05

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I am grateful to the Intelligence and Security Committee for its latest annual report. Following consultation with the Committee over matters that could not be published without prejudicing the discharge of the function and operation of the intelligence and security agencies, I have laid the report before the House today.

I have also laid the Government's response to this report before the House today. Copies of the report and the response have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Intelligence Personnel (Handling of Detainees)

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I am today laying before the House the Government's response to the Intelligence and Security Committee's report "The Handling of Detainees by UK Intelligence Personnel in Afghanistan, Guantanamo Bay and Iraq". Copies have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Official Histories: Special Operations Executive in Italy

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): I have appointed Professor David Stafford, from the Centre for the Second World War Studies at the University of Edinburgh, to write Volume II of the history of Special Operations Executive (SOE) in Italy.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Trade Unions

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Mr. Gerry Sutcliffe): The certification officer maintains a list of trade unions. I am placing in both Libraries of the House a copy of the list of trade unions as at 31 March 2004, which was presented in the latest annual report of the certification officer.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 14 March 2005

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Surplus Assets Sales

Mr. Evans: To ask the Leader of the House whether his Office sold any surplus stock on the eBay auction website, in each year since 2000–01. [220942]

Mr. Woolas: No.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Leader of the House what the value of sales of surplus assets from his Office was in each year since 2000–01. [220960]

Mr. Woolas: This Office has not sold any surplus assets since 2000–01.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Pollution

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Government intends to respond to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's Report entitled Aircraft in Flight; and if he will make a statement. [221400]

Charlotte Atkins: The Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's (RCEP) report "The Environmental Effects of Civil Aircraft in Flight" was their response to the Government's 2002 consultation on the future development of air transport in the UK. The Secretary of State for Transport met the chairman of the RCEP, Sir Tom Blundell, in March 2003 to discuss the report. The report was one of over 500,000 responses to the consultation, which informed decisions on "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper published in December 2003.

M5

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when an evaluation was last carried out of the need for traffic light controls at Junction 14 on the M5; who was consulted on the results; and whether the results were published. [220902]

Mr. Jamieson: The last evaluation of the need for traffic light controls at Junction 14 on the M5 was undertaken by the Highways Agency in October 2004. The agency consulted South Gloucestershire council, who are the highway authority for the B4509 at Junction 14.

The traffic light controls will prevent traffic queuing back onto the motorway and improve safety for right turning traffic from the B4509 onto the M5, which has been the cause of a number of collisions. In accordance with normal practice, the results of the evaluation were not published.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of the newly installed traffic lights at Junction 14 on the M5. [220903]

Mr. Jamieson: The lights at this junction have been installed to help improve safety for all road users by reducing the number of personal injury accidents and decreasing congestion. The Highways Agency and its contractor are currently working to rectify a component problem and the lights should be operational by the end of March.

Motor Cycling Strategy

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects of the Government's motor cycling strategy, with particular reference to the proposal to amend the Government's guidance on bus lanes, on levels of use of powered two wheelers; and what assessment he has made of the consequent effects of any changes in levels on (a) the Government's objectives to encourage increased walking, cycling and public transport use, (b) the safety of pedestrians and cyclists, (c) overall road safety, (d) pollutant emissions and (e) noise emissions. [220851]

Mr. Jamieson: The National Motorcycling Strategy is a framework for developing policy and action to ensure that motorcycling is fully recognised as a mode of transport. The Department has published research by consultants Halcrow and Rand Europe and WSP into factors affecting the level of use of motorcycles, which included preliminary assessments of environmental effects of greater use, although not specifically in the context of allowing motorcycles to use bus lanes. The Government is aware of a number of concerns relating to motorcycling in bus lanes which is why we are working with local authorities to evaluate the safety and other effects of this before revising our guidance. We will consult widely on any resulting changes to the guidance.

Penalty Payments

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport where responsibility will lie for the collection of penalty payments from train operating companies once the Railways Bill comes into force. [221005]

Mr. McNulty: Penalty payment provisions are contained in some, though not all, passenger rail franchise agreements. Under the Railways Bill, responsibility for passenger rail franchises would pass to the Secretaries of State for Transport and Scotland as appropriate.

Pollution (Ships)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding the timescale for UK compliance with (a) MARPOL, (b) the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships 1973, (c) the Protocol of 1978 and (d) associated regulations. [221132]

Mr. Jamieson: The United Kingdom has ratified the MARPOL Convention and the protocols to the Convention. The United Kingdom has already implemented Annexes I, II, III and V to MARPOL in national law, and is in the process of implementing Annexes IV and VI. I have received no representations regarding the timescale for UK compliance with MARPOL.

Rail Services

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will include the introduction of new rolling stock as part of the negotiations for the new East Coast Mainline contract. [220348]

Mr. McNulty: Bidders for the franchise have been allowed to propose their own rolling stock solutions for the provision of the service within the specifications laid out in the Invitation to Tender. This does not exclude new rolling stock as a potential option.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on increases in rail fares for 2005–06; and what action he plans to take to invest in the rail network and improve services. [220355]

Mr. McNulty: Following the Strategic Rail Authority Fares Review in 2003 we announced that regulated fares would in future rise by RPI plus 1 per cent. from January 2004. This would help redress the balance of funding between the taxpayer and the fare payer. Increases in unregulated fares are a commercial matter for the train operating companies.

Government funding and investment in the rail network continues to run at unprecedented levels. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, made a detailed statement on this matter on 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 93WS.

Regional Offices

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) Executive agencies within the remit of his Department have regional offices based on the Government offices for the regions' regional structure; and when the regional offices were established in each case. [219885]

Charlotte Atkins: None of the non-departmental public bodies and Executive agencies within the remit of this Department have regional offices based on the Government offices for the regions' regional structure.

SS Richard Montgomery

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether there were (a) chemicals and (b) biological weapons or component parts on board the SS Richard Montgomery when it sank in the Thames Estuary. [220435]

Mr. Jamieson: The cargo manifest for the SS Richard Montgomery does not list any chemical or biological weapons, or component parts. However, I have recently commissioned work to examine the current risks posed by the ordnance that remains on board. The results of this study will inform consideration of possible future management options for the wreck.

Thameslink

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the reliability of Thameslink services from Mill Hill and Hendon. [220522]

Mr. McNulty: Reliability problems with the train fleet used by Thameslink during the CTRL blockade affected the performance of its services in the run up to Christmas. Action has been taken to address these problems and performance has since improved.

Train Operating Companies (Compensation)

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid, and on which dates, through the Strategic Rail Authority to train operating companies in respect of compensation for loss of revenue during industrial disputes in each of the last three years. [221003]

Mr. McNulty: The arrangements under which the Strategic Rail Authority is able, at its discretion, to compensate train operators for loss of revenue in these circumstances have existed only since March 2003. Since then, payments have been made in March 2003 (£12.65 million); June 2003 (£3 million); January 2004 (£6.8 million); July 2004 (£143,000); and November 2004 (£701,000).

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds he has set aside to compensate train operating companies in the event of industrial disputes on the railways in the 2004–05 financial year. [221004]

Mr. McNulty: None. Payments of this sort are made entirely at the discretion of the Strategic Rail Authority and there may well be years in which none is made. No specific provision is therefore made and any payment would have to be funded from within the SRA's existing budgets.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether the 29 March deadline for the introduction of the Working Time Directive regulations applicable to road haulage operators will be met. [218634]

Mr. Darling: I have laid the implementing regulations for this directive before Parliament today.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Bird Control

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she plans to issue to the police on criteria to be used in deciding whether non-lethal methods of control under General Licence WLF18 are ineffective or unpracticable. [221095]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 March 2005]: There is no requirement for the police to decide whether non-lethal methods of control are either ineffective or impracticable. There are, therefore, no plans to issue guidance to the police on criteria to be used in making such an assessment.

Farmland Rental Prices

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average rental price of farmland in each (a) Welsh and (b) English county was in each of the last five years. [221327]

Alun Michael: Farmland rental prices are collected through the Tenanted Land Survey (TLS), previously called the Annual Survey of Tenanted Land (ASTL). We do not produce results on a regional basis for two reasons.

Firstly, analysis has shown that most of the variation in rental prices is between farm types, with rental consistent across regions within this—i.e. rental prices for a cereal holding are similar no matter where the holding is located.

Secondly, the relatively small sample size means that data would not be sufficiently robust to make valid and precise conclusions on a county level basis.

Instead we publish data by farm type. Results, by farm type, for the each of last five years for Full Agricultural Tenancies (FATs) and Farm Business Tenancies (FBTs) are shown as follows:

A full set of results for England and Wales are available on the web at the following locations:

http://statistics.defra.gov.uk/esg/statnot/astl.pdf

http://www.wales.gov.uk/keypubstatisticsforwales/content/publication/agriculture/2002/sdr71-2001.xls

Please note that the survey was not run in England in 2003. This is because we moved from the annual survey (ASTL) in 2002 to the biennial one (TLS) in 2004. No results for Wales are available since 2000.

Please note also that agriculture in Wales is a devolved matter and so falls under the remit of the National Assembly for Wales. The statistics are publicly available and so are quoted here with references.

The survey will next be run in England in 2006.

Horse Exports

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many horses have been exported live from the UK in the last 10 years. [220687]

Alun Michael: According to the Department's system for issuing export health certificates, the number of equines exported from the United Kingdom are as follows:

	Number
1996	1,169
1997	8,119
1998	11,086
1999	9,579
2000	9,176
2001	14,284
2002	10,785
2003	9,130
2004	21,936

The above figures were produced from data obtained from an electronic export health certificate issuing system which became operational towards the end of 1996.

These figures include the temporary export of equines as well as the re-export of imported animals.

These data do not include equines exported in accordance with the tripartite agreement, under which export health certificates are not required for the movement of horses to the Republic of Ireland or registered horses to France.

The tripartite agreement was suspended during the foot and mouth outbreak which led to exports of equines to the Republic of Ireland and France requiring export health certificates.

Soil Guideline Values Task Force

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what sub-groups have been set up to the Soil Guideline Values Task Force; when she expects them to report to the Task Force; and if she will make a statement; [220900]

(2) what the aims of the Soil Guideline Values Task Force are; and if she will make a statement; [220901]

(3) what discussions she has had with local councils regarding contaminated land and the Soil Guideline Values Task Force; and if she will make a statement; [220914]

(4) what guidance she has given local councils regarding dealing with (a) contaminated land and (b) contaminated residential land with regard to the Soil Guideline Values Task Force; and if she will make a statement; [220915]

(5) when she expects the Soil Guidelines Values Task Force to report; whether its report will be publicly available; and if she will make a statement. [220916]

Mr. Morley: The Soil Guideline Values Task Force is an initiative of the Cabinet Office Business Regulation team and the Government Departments and Agencies most involved in the publication of the Defra/Environment Agency soil guideline values and related materials. This technical guidance helps in assessing risk to human health in connection with land contamination, for example when considering regulatory action or proposals for development of land. Two subgroups have recently been set up to explore training and possible additional guidance. The Local Authority Standing Conference on Land Contamination is represented on the Task Force, and all local authorities in England were notified about the initiative earlier this year. No other guidance has been given to local authorities in respect of the Task Force. We currently expect proposals from the Task Force later in the year, and that these will be made publicly available.

Sustainable Development

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what additional resources she plans to commit to the Sustainable Development Commission in support of the new role of evaluating and reporting progress made by Government in delivering their sustainable development commitments, as announced in the recent report on sustainability. [221443]

Mr. Morley: Work is ongoing to define and address specific requirements of the Sustainable Development Commission (SDC) in meeting its enhanced role as watchdog for sustainable development. That role is still being developed alongside other changes to the way the SDC works and is managed which will ensure that the SDC continues to be viewed as making a valuable contribution.

Once we have a firmer view of these requirements Defra will provide the resources necessary for the SDC to carry out its enhanced remit effectively and efficiently.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Education Business Links (Kent)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the budget for Education Business Link in Kent is for 2004–05; and what she expects it to be in 2005–06; [221122]

(2) how much Business Link Kent has charged for administering the Education Business links in the county in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04 and (c) 2004–05. [221121]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Funding to support Education Business Link activities is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Mark Haysom the LSC's Chief Executive will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Direct Grants

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the private and voluntary organisations to which her Department has made direct grants since April 2004. [221215]

Derek Twigg: The information in the form requested is not held by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Department is developing a more comprehensive management information system and has data from April 2004 onwards for voluntary sector organisations, but does not yet hold data centrally about grants to other organisations. The following list sets out those voluntary organisations that have received direct grants from the Department since April 2004.

Education Funding

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money the Government allocated per child in (a) primary, (b) middle and (c) upper schools in each constituency in (i) Norfolk and (ii) Suffolk in 2004–05. [221320]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Funding is allocated to local education authorities by age rather than phase and cannot be broken down by constituency. The following figures show funding provided by the Government for pupils aged 3–10 and 11–15 in 2004–05:

LEA	Pupils aged 3–10	Pupils aged 11–15
Norfolk	3,420	4,200
Suffolk	3,230	4,070

Notes:
1. The government allocates funds to LEAs via Education Formula Spending and grants. These funds are then distributed by the LEA to schools within their area according to their own local formulae. Education Formula Spending is part of the wider local government finance system and is supported by council tax as well as central government grant.
2. Total funding includes funding via Education Formula Spending and revenue grants. These figures include the pensions transfer to EFS and the Learning and Skills Council, and are in cash terms.
3. Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of education EFS settlements and include the pensions transfer to EFS and LSC.
4. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES Departmental Expenditure Limits relevant to pupils aged 3–10 and 11–15 and exclude EMAs and grants not allocated at LEA level.
5. The pupil numbers used to convert £ million figures to £ per pupil are those underlying the EFS settlement calculations.
6. Figures are reported in cash terms and rounded to the nearest 10 as reported by the LEA.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level of funding per pupil in North Tyneside was in each year from 1996 to 2001. [221276]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: As a result of data changes and changes to the funding system, comparable figures are not available for 1996–97. The following table shows total funding per pupil aged 3 to 19 in North Tyneside from 1997–98 to 2001–02 in real terms.

North Tyneside LEA

	Per pupil (£)
1997–98	2,690
1998–99	2,750
1999–2000	2,870
2000–01	3,150
2001–02	3,320

Notes:
1. Price base: Real terms at 2003–04 prices GDP deflators as at 30 September 2004.
2. Figures include formula funding and grants within the DfES Departmental Expenditure Limit.
3. They exclude Education Maintenance Allowances and grants not allocated at LEA level.
4. The pupil numbers used are those underlying the SSA settlement calculations plus PLASC 3-year-old maintained pupils and estimated 3 to 4-year-olds funded through state support in maintained and other educational institutions where these are not included in the SSA pupil numbers.
5. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Further Education (Tunbridge Wells)

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects the funding gap between school sixth forms and further education colleges in Tunbridge Wells to be closed. [221446]

Dr. Howells: The Department does not have information on what the funding gap is between school sixth forms and further education colleges in Tunbridge Wells specifically.

However, we have brought up funding levels for Further Education as we said we would, without penalising schools. The Learning and Skills Council's funding rates per course in FE have been rising faster than school sixth forms and the gap has narrowed.

Our policy has been to raise the level of funding for colleges, as and when we are able to secure the resources to do so.

GCSEs

Mr. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many entrants graded A*, A and B at GCSE level in (a) mathematics, (b) chemistry and (c) physics were from (i) independent, (ii) grammar and (iii) maintained schools in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004; and what percentage of each cohort this was in each case. [221216]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The tables show for (A) 2003 and (B) 2004 the numbers of entrants and those achieving grades A*-B at GCSE (a) mathematics, (b) chemistry and (c) physics by type of institution, together with the proportions of the whole cohort that these numbers represent.

(A) 2003

School type (admissions basis)	Number of 15-year-old pupils	Entered		Achieving A*-B
		Number	Percentage of cohort	Number	Percentage of cohort

Liverpool Local Education Authority

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding her Department has provided to the Liverpool local education authority in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [221190]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is contained within the following table:

	Total funding (£)
1997–98	252.9
1998–99	262.7
1999–2000	273.1
2000–01	302.1
2001–02	313.5
2002–03	318.8
2003–04	323.6
2004–05	327.9

Notes:

1. Real terms at 2003–04 prices, based on GDP deflators as at 30 September 2004.
2. Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of education SSA/EFS settlements and exclude the pensions transfer to EFS and LSC in 2003–04 and 2004–05.
3. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES departmental expenditure limits relevant to pupils aged 3–19 and exclude EMAs and grants not allocated at LEA level.
4. Total funding figures are rounded to the nearest £0.1 million and funding per pupil figures are rounded to the nearest £10 as reported by the LEA.
5. 2003–04 and 2004–05 figures are provisional as some grants have not yet been finalised/audited.

London Metropolitan University

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will undertake an inquiry into the management of the London Metropolitan University. [220259]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend will not be undertaking such an inquiry as universities are autonomous, independent bodies that are responsible for determining their own management practice.

However, a condition of funding by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) is that institutions must have effective governance and internal control. HEFCE monitors how institutions are meeting these requirements and reviews institutional systems of risk management.

Any individual who has concerns about an institution's governance and control, can raise these through HEFCE's public interest policy and procedure.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take-up representations urging her to seek a resolution of the industrial dispute at London Metropolitan University. [220260]

Dr. Howells: As universities are autonomous, independent bodies they are responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including terms and conditions for their staff. The Government play no part in setting conditions of service for higher education staff, and as such is unable to intervene in this matter. This dispute can only be resolved by the university, as the employer, in negotiation with the relevant trade union body, in this case, NATFHE.

Oxford Dictionary of National Biography

Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding was provided to support the new Oxford Dictionary of National Biography project; at what stage; and through what channels. [220501]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 7 March 2005]: The Oxford Dictionary of National Biography project received £3.7 million in public funding between 1992 and 2004. Funding was in the form of an annual grant from the British Academy, via Oxford University, to the Oxford University Press (OUP), and supplemented OUP's own investment in the project of over £22 million.

Plymouth Local Education Authority

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total per pupil funding in the Plymouth local education authority area was in (a) 1999 and (b) 2004–05. [221607]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: In Plymouth LEA the total funding per pupil aged 3 to 19 was £3,000 for 1999–2000 and £3,640 for 2004–05.

Notes:

1. This figure includes funding via Education Formula Spending and grants allocated at an LEA level. It excludes the pensions transfer to EPS and the Learning and Skills Council, and is in real terms.
2. Real terms at 2003–04 prices, based on GDP deflators as at 30 September 2004 and rounded to the nearest 10.
3. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES Departmental Expenditure Limits relevant to pupils aged 3 to 19 and exclude EMAs and grants not allocated at LEA level.
4. The pupil numbers used to convert £ million figures to per pupil are those underlying the SSA/EFS settlement calculations plus PLASC 3-year-old maintained pupils and estimated 3 to 4-year-olds funded through state support in maintained and other educational institutions where these are not included in the SSA pupil numbers.

Sex Education

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance her Department issues to schools on the provision of sex and relationship education. [221221]

Derek Twigg: The Department issues to all maintained schools our sex and relationship guidance which we have provided since July 2000.

The responsibility for determining a school policy on sex and relationship education rests with governing bodies and head teachers. Copies of the guidance can be downloaded at www.dfes.gov.uk/sreguidance.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance her Department has issued to local education authorities on reporting of expenditure under section 52 on special educational needs. [221212]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department issues detailed instructions and guidance on the reporting of expenditure under section 52 on special educational needs to every local education authority in England. I have placed a full copy of those instructions and guidance on section 52 in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department has taken to ensure the (a) descriptors and (b) guidance for the section 52 special educational needs (SEN) lines reflect practice in SEN provision. [221213]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department undertakes an annual consultation with every local education authority on the contents of the section 52 instructions and guidance notes. As part of this process, my Department also consults with practitioners responsible for the development and implementation of the SEN framework.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on interaction between local education authorities and the Learning and Skills Council in funding post-16 education for children with special educational needs. [221272]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: In addition to the normal communications concerning funding matters, I expect the Learning and Skills Council and local education authorities to liaise and to plan their activities to best meet the needs of all learners including those with special educational needs.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has conducted on the accuracy and consistency of reporting by local education authorities, under section 52 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998, of expenditure on provision for special educational needs; and if she will make a statement. [221273]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department undertakes a detailed and robust data checking process of all the section 52 data, submitted by local education authorities including that provided for expenditure on special educational needs. In addition, my Department analyses the validated data and discusses any inconsistencies found in the time series with the relevant LEA.

Student Loans

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list companies involved in the collection of student loan repayments. [221243]

BEST COPY AVAILBLE

Dr. Howells: Mortgage-style student loans are collected by the Student Loans Company (SLC) on behalf of the Government and the Royal Bank of Scotland (the owner of a portfolio of loans sold in 1998). The SLC advises that it also uses the following companies as agencies for arrears collection, although some work might be further outsourced: Allied International Credit; Financial Trace and Collections; J B Debt Recovery; Lewis Group; Logic Group; NCO Financial Services (UK) Ltd.; and Wescot Credit Services.

A further portfolio of loans, sold to Honours Trustee Limited in 1999, is administered and collected by Ventura (Club 24 Limited), trading as Honours Student Loans. Ventura advises that it also uses the following companies as agents for arrears collection: Clarity Credit Management Solutions Ltd. and Dryden's.

Income-contingent student loans are collected by the Inland Revenue, mainly through deduction at source by employers.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent in 2004 on keeping graduates informed of changes in collection arrangements for student loan repayments. [221244]

Dr. Howells: The Department and the Student Loans Company (SLC) regularly keep students and graduates informed of the latest arrangements for student finance, and these communications have been updated to reflect the rise in the repayment threshold for income contingent student loans, to take effect from April 2005, and the annual change in the repayment threshold for mortgage-style loans. The Department and the SLC incurred no specific additional expenditure in 2004 for these changes to the collection arrangements.

Student Visas

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many overseas students requiring visas to study in the UK are studying in (a) higher education, (b) further education and (c) other education sectors in the academic year 2004–05. [218422]

Dr. Howells: The latest available figures are for 2003/04 and are given in the table. Corresponding figures for other education sectors are not held centrally.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) teachers and (b) teaching assistants were employed in (i) Dartford primary and secondary schools and (ii) the Kent local education authority area in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [221100]

Teenage Mothers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of teenage mothers aged under 18 years were in paid employment or full-time education in each year since 1997. [221444]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Between 1997–99 and 2002–04 there has been an increase in the proportion of teenage mothers in education, employment or training (EET), from 23.1 per cent. in 1997–99 to 29.7 per cent. in 2002–04.

Data on the proportion of teenage mothers in EET are derived from the Labour Force Survey and are presented as three year averages to smooth out annual fluctuations that can occur due to the small sample size from which the data are derived. Data for 2003–05 will be available in August 2005. EET figures include those in part-time as well as full-time EET.

Under-achievement

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps the Government are taking to assist under-achieving pupils in schools in England. [221600]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Primary National Strategy and the KS3 National Strategy (which is developing into a secondary strategy covering the whole 11–16 stage) are designed to raise standards for all pupils by spreading effective teaching and learning to every classroom. Through the national strategies we have provided teachers with a suite of age specific intervention materials which allow children who are struggling to catch up with their peers. Specific programmes, such as the Strategies' English as an Additional Language (EAL) pilot and Aiming High "Raising the Achievement of Minority Ethnic Pupils", also address the needs of particular groups of under-achieving pupils which include African-Caribbean pupils, Gypsy and Traveller pupils, pupils from mainly Muslim backgrounds and isolated minority ethnic pupils. In addition, schools now have access to better data on individual pupils and comparative performance than ever before which enables them to identify underperformance and set appropriately challenging pupil targets.

PRIME MINISTER

Arctic Convoys Medal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from the Honours and Decorations Committee concerning a medal for veterans of the Arctic convoys. [221282]

The Prime Minister: I have received advice from the Chairman of the Honours and Decorations Committee on this matter. Such advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Iran

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has held with President George W. Bush on relations with Iran. [221280]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Kingston and Surbiton (Mr. Davey) on 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 193W.

DEFENCE

Tsunami (Military Assistance)

16. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force staff have been involved in delivering humanitarian aid and support equipment to Indonesia after the tsunami. [221305]

Mr. Caplin: I begin by paying tribute on behalf of the whole House to all those civilian and military personnel from the United Kingdom who were involved in the tsunami relief effort in December and January.

The RAF's main contribution has been the airlift of both aid and equipment. Eleven C17 Globemaster loads were delivered to Banda Aceh in Indonesia.

Several hundred RAF personnel have been involved in the operation, in one way or another, most notably from RAF Brize Norton and RAF Lyneham.

Defence Intelligence

19. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes have been made to Defence Intelligence in the last two years, with particular reference to quality, methods of gathering and relevant onward transmission. [221308]

Mr. Ingram: The mission of the Defence Intelligence Staff is to provide timely and highly valued intelligence that will guide departmental decisions on Defence policy and the commitment and employment of the United Kingdom's armed forces; inform decisions on the generation and maintenance of operational military capability, including through the equipment programme; and contribute to wider national intelligence collection and assessment. The Defence Intelligence Staff is continually striving to improve working methods and capabilities to meet both current and future demands. The Butler Review made a number of recommendations, which were accepted by the PM, and we are working to address those specific to Defence Intelligence.

Army Strength

20. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on changes in the number of trained personnel in the Army since 1997. [221309]

Mr. Caplin: In April 1997 the number of trained service personnel in the Army was 101,360. In January 2005, the latest period for which figures are available, the number was 103,560.

Future Infantry Structure Review

22. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the conduct of the Future Infantry Structure Review. [221311]

Mr. Hoon: Work to restructure the Infantry has been an important part of our effort to reshape the Army's structure to ensure that it evolves to meet the challenges of current and future operations. The Infantry work was led by the Army itself and involved a consultation period to allow the Infantry divisions to express their views on constructing the future Infantry structure. The results were considered by the Executive Committee of the Army Board, which were then passed to me. I accepted this advice and announced the outcome to the House on 16 December last year.

Infantry Battalions

23. Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) regular and (b) territorial infantry battalions were in service in the British Army (i) in 1997 and (ii) on the latest date for which figures are available. [221312]

Mr. Caplin: On 1 April 1997 there were 40 regular and 33 territorial infantry battalions in service in the British Army. Today there are 40 regular and 15 territorial infantry battalions.

Aircraft Carrier Project

25. Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the first new aircraft carriers to become fully operational; and if he will make a statement. [221314]

Mr. Hoon: Full operating capability will be determined by both air group and ship readiness. The target date for the full operating capability will not be set before the main investment decision is taken.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's aircraft carrier programme. [221307]

Mr. Hoon: The Future Aircraft Carrier (CVF) programme remains in the Assessment Phase. Following the recent announcement of the selection of Kellogg Brown and Root UK Ltd. as the preferred Physical Integrator, the company has joined the Department, BAE SYSTEMS and Thales UK as a participant in the CVF Alliance. Work is continuing to discuss and agree the detailed alliancing arrangements, including the role and responsibilities of the participants, in preparation for taking the major investment decision for the Demonstration and Manufacture Phases, currently targeted for the latter half of 2005.

Armoured Vehicles

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the gross weight is of the Panther armoured reconnaissance vehicle; and which aircraft type can airlift such a vehicle. [208299]

Mr. Ingram: The current gross vehicle weight of a Panther Command and Liaison Vehicle is 7.1 tonnes. The vehicle is to be air transportable, underslung beneath a Chinook helicopter or carried inside C130, C17 and A400M aircraft.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which nations (a) manufactured and (b) developed the Panther armoured reconnaissance vehicle. [208300]

Mr. Ingram: The Panther Command and Liaison Vehicle is based upon an Italian designed IVECO Multi-role Light Vehicle which is due to enter service with the Italian Army. BAE Systems Land Systems is responsible for converting the vehicle to meet UK specification.

Arms Ban (China)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he had with his EU counterparts regarding the EU proposals for lifting the ban on arms sales to China; and if he will make a statement. [220928]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

The Government supported the decision of the European Council in December 2003 to review the EU Arms Embargo on China. This review is on-going.

Member states discussed the embargo at the European Council in December 2004. The Council invited the Luxembourg presidency of the EU to take forward work on the review. The Government could envisage embargo lift subject to satisfaction on the issues laid out in the Conclusions of that Council.

Until the review process is complete, the Government continues to implement the Arms Embargo as set out by the then Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the late Derek Fatchett, in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 240–41.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department's officials had with US Department of Defense officials regarding the EU proposals for lifting the ban on arms sales to China; and if he will make a statement. [220929]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

The Government recognises that the US has a legitimate and understandable interest both in the effectiveness of the EU's system of arms control and in the stability of the East Asian region. Representatives of the UK and US governments, at all levels, have therefore discussed the issue. Such discussions will continue, as they will also between the US and our EU partners. Although the EU will take all relevant factors into account in its review of the EU Arms Embargo, any decisions arising from it are for the EU alone.

British Military Camps (Iraq)

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been made for the disposal of sewage from British military camps in Iraq; what environmental assessment has been conducted in respect of such arrangements; and what liaison has taken place with the local environmental management authorities on these arrangements. [217605]

Mr. Ingram: Private contractors undertake the disposal of sewage from British military camps in Iraq. There are no central Government or regional government environmental management authorities in Iraq but UK standards are applied where it is reasonable to do so.

Civil Servants

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants were (a) suspended and (b) sacked from employment by his Department in each year since 2001 under suspicion of breaching the Official Secrets Act 1989. [220236]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Information on the number of civil servants suspended while under suspicion of breaching the Official Secrets Act is not held centrally, and would incur disproportionate cost to obtain the data from individual units or business areas. Civil servants are not sacked while suspended under suspicion of breaching the Official Secrets Act.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants were (a) suspended and (b) sacked from employment by his Department in each year since 2001 for gross professional misconduct. [220239]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Information is not held centrally on the number of MOD civil servants that have been suspended from employment for possible acts of gross misconduct, and it would incur disproportionate cost to collate the data. The number of MOD civil servants that have subsequently been dismissed from the Department in each year since 2001 for gross misconduct offences is as follows:

	Number of civil servants dismissed
2001	15
2002	17
2003	19

Clothing Contracts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many samples produced in China for battle dress under the cut and sew contract have been tested. [221039]

Mr. Ingram: All of the samples produced in China were tested at independent accredited test houses in China and the United Kingdom. All tests confirmed that Ministry of Defence specification requirements had been met. The Ministry of Defence requires proof that its specifications are being met and it is the responsibility of the prime contractor to ensure that sufficient samples are submitted for testing.

Deaths in Service (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what figure he recognises as representing the total number of personnel from each of the armed services that have died in or in connection with operations in Northern Ireland since 1969; and how many of those deaths were deemed to have been (a) accidental, (b) self-inflicted and (c) from natural causes. [217800]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Expenditure (Scotland)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of its personnel budget for financial years (a) 2001–02, (b) 2000–01, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 1998–99 and (e) 1997–98 the Defence Export Services Organisation spent in Scotland in (i) monetary terms and (ii) as a percentage of the total personnel budget for that year; how many personnel were employed in Scotland in each year; and if he will make a statement. [216283]

Mr. Ingram: From 1997–98 to 2001–02, the Defence Export Services Organisation employed no staff permanently based in Scotland other than those working in the Disposal Services Agency (DSA) in respect of which I have undertaken to write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Costs

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on the production of in-house magazines in the Department in each year since 1997. [213636]

Mr. Caplin: Detailed expenditure on the many in-house magazines produced within the Ministry of Defence is not available and could be provided only by incurring disproportionate cost. However, details of production costs (excluding staff costs) of the principal MOD-wide publication, FOCUS, for each year since 1998–99 are as follows:

	Production costs (£)
1998–99	167,791
1999–00	174,329
2000–01	161,950
2001–02	164,750
2002–03	205,268
2003–04	179,280
2004–05 (to January 2005)	150,656

Information for 1997–98 is no longer available.

Departmental Efficiency Programme

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the cashable savings attributable to his Department's efficiency programme are for the (a) Disposal Services Agency, (b) Duke of York's Royal Military School, (c) Medical Supply Agency, (d) Ministry of Defence and Guarding Agency and (e) Naval Recruiting and Training Agency for financial years (i) 2006–07 and (ii) 2007–08; [209336]

(2) what the planned cashable savings attributable to his Department's efficiency programme are for the (a) Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency, (b) Army Training and Recruiting Agency, (c) British Forces Post Office, (d) Defence Analytical Services Agency and (e) Defence Bills Agency for financial years (i) 2006–07 and (ii) 2007–08; [209340]

(3) what the planned cashable savings attributable to his Department's efficiency programme are for the (a) Defence Communication Services Agency, (b) Defence Dental Agency, (c) Defence Estates, (d) Defence Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency and (e) Defence Intelligence and Security Centre for financial years (i) 2006–07 and (ii) 2007–08; [209341]

(4) what the planned cashable savings attributable to his Department's efficiency programme are for the (a) Pay and Personnel Agency, (b) Queen Victoria School, (c) RAF Training Group Defence Agency,

(d) Service Children's Education, (e) Veterans Agency and (f) Warship Support Agency for financial years (i) 2006–07 and (ii) 2007–08. [209330]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 18 January 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 25 January 2005, Official Report, column 242W.

Equipment Programmes

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which equipment programmes have been (a) reassigned, (b) moved and (c) removed from (i) EP04 and (ii) EP05. [220547]

Mr. Ingram: The broad impact of the outcome of the 2004 equipment planning round (EP04) was described in the Defence White Paper supplement 'Delivering Security in a Changing World: Future Capabilities' (Cm 6269), published in July 2004. However, changes to planning assumptions arising during our annual planning round form part of internal advice to Ministers on the overall affordability of the defence programme. Announcements will continue to be made as appropriate when decisions are taken on specific projects.

European Defence Agency

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the UK financial contribution to the European Defence Agency was in the last financial year; what it is expected to be over the next five years; and what percentage the UK contribution is of the overall agency cost. [221486]

Mr. Ingram: Member states' percentage contributions towards the budget of the European Defence Agency are based on assessments of their gross national income. The agency's budget for 2004 covered the period from its formal establishment in July to the end of that year. The United Kingdom contributed 17.28 per cent. of this budget, equating to €308,775.51. For the calendar year 2005, the UK contribution is 18.07 per cent. equating to €3,596,803. There are no formal estimates of the agency's budget for the next five years. However, the budget for 2006 is expected to be less than the 2005 budget which included non-recurring costs associated with the initial set-up of the agency.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the feasibility of reintroducing the Southern Atlantic standing patrol task for the Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement on Royal Navy operations around the Falkland Islands. [220548]

Mr. Ingram: A Royal Navy frigate or destroyer, together with a Royal Fleet Auxiliary support tanker, is allocated 365 days per year to the Atlantic Patrol Task (South) APT(S). The APT(S) duty ship provides a tangible presence in the Falkland Islands Area of Responsibility (AOR) while also retaining a commitment, together with the Atlantic Patrol Task (North) ship, to provide a presence off the West African littoral. When not in theatre, the APT(S) duty ship remains within 14 days' sailing of the AOR. In addition, a permanent presence is maintained in theatre by the Falkland Island Patrol Vessel.

The Royal Navy's Ice Patrol Vessel, HMS Endurance, also deploys annually to the South Atlantic region during the austral summer.

Hercules Crash (Iraq)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his Written Statement of 7 March 2005 on Iraq: C130 Hercules Crash Update, Official Report, column 101WS, what the mission was of the UK soldiers on the Hercules flight which crashed in Iraq; what role they were due to fulfil; what related documentation they had in their possession; what joint mission they had with US forces (a) on the flight and (b) at the US base at Balad; and if he will make a statement. [221248]

Mr. Hoon: There was a single soldier of the Royal Corps of Signals and nine members of the Royal Air Force on board the Hercules C130K which crashed on Sunday 30 January 2005. The soldier was providing communications support to the flight. Standard RAF flight documentation was on board.

The mission of all United Kingdom forces in Iraq is to help it to become a stable, united and law abiding state, within its present borders, co-operating with the international community, no longer posing a threat to its neighbours or to international security, abiding by all its international obligations and providing effective representative government for all its people.

Our forces are in Iraq as part of a multinational effort (which includes the US) under UN Security Council Resolution 1546 to take all necessary measures to contribute to the maintenance of security and stability in Iraq. The use of the C130K was entirely within the scope of that mission but for reasons of force protection we cannot give further details of the operation. The board of investigation continues to work to determine the cause of the crash.

Intellectual Property (Germany)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what intellectual property held by QinetiQ was obtained from the then German government (a) between the commencement of hostilities to the unconditional surrender of Germany in 1945 and (b) between the unconditional surrender of Germany and the founding of the Federal Republic of Germany; [219024]

(2) what intellectual property held by Qinetiq was obtained from private companies (a) between the commencement of hostilities to the unconditional surrender of Germany and (b) between the unconditional surrender of Germany in 1945 and the founding of the Federal Republic of Germany; [219025]

(3) what the status is of intellectual property obtained by his Department from (a) private companies and (b) ministries of the former German government between the unconditional surrender of Germany in 1945 and the founding of the Federal Republic of Germany; and if he will make a statement; [219026]

(4) what the status is of intellectual property obtained by his Department from (a) private companies and (b) the then German Government between the commencement of hostilities to the unconditional surrender of Germany in 1945; and if he will make a statement. [219027]

Mr. Ingram: The events mentioned occurred so long ago that it is unlikely that any intellectual property rights exist in any information within the Department originating from Germany prior to its unconditional surrender in 1945. However, as is well known, some technologies now used widely in defence have their origins prior to the founding of the Federal Republic of Germany.

No intellectual property rights owned by QinetiQ were obtained from Germany prior to the founding of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Iraq

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost of UK military operations in Iraq and the theatre of conflict have been since September 2002, broken down by costs to the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force. [221425]

Mr. Ingram: The net additional costs of operations are calculated on a joint basis reflecting the joint nature of military operations. It is not possible, or meaningful, to break down these costs by individual service.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the recently elected political representatives of Iraq concerning the role of the UK armed forces in training Iraqi security forces. [221302]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no representations as yet, since the new Iraqi Government has still to be appointed.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects British troops to complete the present mission in Iraq. [221313]

Mr. Hoon: British Forces are serving in Iraq as part of the Coalition Force authorised under United Nations Security Council Resolution 1546. This mandate will expire upon the completion of the political process or if requested by the Government of Iraq.

The United Kingdom is committed to Iraq for as long as the Iraqi Government judge that the coalition is required to provide security and assist in the development of the Iraqi Security Forces.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom military personnel were in Iraq on (a) 1 January 2004 and (b) 1 January 2005; and if he will make a statement. [216425]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 February 2005]: On 1 January 2004, some 8,700 personnel were deployed on Operation Telic, of which some 7,650 were serving within Iraq. On 1 January 2005, some 9,150 were deployed on Operation Telic, of which some 8,000 were serving within Iraq.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Rules of Engagement in Iraq were changed to reflect the transition from war-fighting to military occupation. [218604]

Mr. Ingram: Two adjustments were made to the United Kingdom Rules of Engagement in Iraq to reflect the transition from war-fighting to military occupation. These took effect on 11 July 2003 and 17 October 2003. A further ROE change was promulgated in November 2004 in recognition of the challenges UK armed forces face in dealing with the current insurgency.

We do not comment on the content of ROE for reasons of operational security.

Museums

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) capital and (b) revenue costs of the regimental museum based at Fort George Army Base were in the last year for which figures are available. [216579]

Mr. Caplin: The information requested for financial year 2003–04 is shown as follows:

Capital costs	0
Revenue costs	77,000

Naval Refit Contracts

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the contracted price was for the refit package for HMS Richmond placed with FSL. [219454]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The contracted price agreed with FSL for the refit package of HMS Richmond is commercially sensitive information and is, therefore, being withheld. However, it can be revealed that the total cost of the work, including the FSL refit and the installation of additional MOD supplied equipment, is in excess of £20 million.

Naval Sector Strategy Study

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who the members are of the Naval Sector Strategy Study; what its terms of reference are; and when it will report. [220571]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 March 2005]: The Naval Sector Strategy Study is an industry-led initiative. Its terms of reference and when it will report are matters for them.

Near Air Misses

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1342W, on Near Air Misses, when he expects to (a) complete his investigations and (b) publish his conclusions. [221125]

Mr. Caplin: Investigations into Airprox ("near-miss") incidents in the UK are carried out by the UK Airprox Board (UKAB), not the Ministry of Defence. UKAB is an independent body jointly sponsored by the Civil Aviation Authority and the Ministry of Defence. The timing of the investigation is a matter for the UKAB.

The UKAB publishes the results of its investigations twice a year in the form of the report "Analysis of Airprox in UK Airspace". Each report covers a six-month period, and is issued approximately nine months after the end of the period being reported on. Therefore, the report dealing with the Airprox in December 2004 will appear in September or October 2005, and that covering the February incident some six months later.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many parliamentary questions relating to manning control have not been answered due to disproportionate cost since 1997. [201843]

Mr. Caplin: Our records indicate that, since 1997, 11 parliamentary questions relating to manning control have not been answered due to disproportionate cost.

Pierre Bolangi

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the result was of the inquiry into the death of Pierre Bolangi on 9 August 2000 while in the care of the School of Physical Training at Aldershot. [220493]

Mr. Caplin: The police investigation into Mr. Bolangi's death was the responsibility of the Hampshire constabulary. The investigation led to the conviction of a serving soldier for manslaughter by gross negligence. A Service Board of Inquiry was also convened to investigate the circumstances surrounding Mr. Bolangi's death. The Board made a number of key recommendations related to the policy and conduct of income generation activity within the Army. The Ministry of Defence has since revised its guidance on Selling Government Services into Wider Markets which sets out the framework within which income generation activities can be conducted, and the constraints governing them.

RAF Marham

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost is of providing depth support facilities for the Tornado GR4 at RAF Marham. [220521]

Mr. Ingram: The cost of providing depth support facilities for the Tornado GR4 at RAF Marham was estimated in the investment appraisal to be some £13.8 million.

Further work is currently being undertaken to refine the estimate as the end-to-end programme is implemented.

RFA Tankers

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the planned decommissioning dates are for each of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary tankers. [221120]

Mr. Ingram: On current plans the RFA tanker decommissioning dates are as follows:

	Decommissioning dates
Fort George	2019
Fort Victoria	2019
Wave Knight	2028
Wave Ruler	2028
Grey Rover	2006
Gold Rover	2009
Black Rover	2010
Brambleleaf	2009
Orangeleaf	2009
Oakleaf	2010
Bayleaf	2010

Two of these vessels, Orangeleaf and Bayleaf, are chartered.

These dates are, however, kept under review in the light of the Royal Navy's requirements.

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the Home Service part-time officers and soldiers of the Royal Irish Regiment are excluded from the Armed Forces Pension Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [200351]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 29 November 2004]: I will write to the hon. Member about this issue.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the crisis manning requirement is for the Tornado GR4; and how this number is arrived at. [220842]

Mr. Ingram: The current planned Crisis Manning Requirement (CMR) for Tornado GR4 is around 1,850 posts.

The CMR is a complex equation, derived from totalling the RAF regular and reservist manpower required to meet deployed and non-deployed Defence outputs and commitments, taking into account personnel training requirements, the potential impact of illnesses or injury and guidelines on the amount of time RAF personnel should spend on deployed duties.

Trident

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the threats the UK's Trident nuclear weapons are (a) intended to deter and (b) targeted against; when this assessment was last (i) reviewed and (ii) changed; and if he will make a statement. [214377]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 30 January 2004, Official Report, column 577W.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the last review of command and control procedures for the Trident missile system was (a) started and (b) completed; and if he will make a statement. [221032]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 1 March 2005, Official Report, column 1148W. The last such audit took place between February and September 2003. Command and control procedures are routinely exercised.

UK Nuclear Capability

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the command and control procedures are for authorisation of the launch of a UK nuclear missile in the event of a nuclear attack on the UK which leads to the destruction of the UK Government. [221029]

Mr. Hoon: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made clear in the answer he gave on 28 January 2003, Official Report, column 774W, to the hon. Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Marsden), the use of the United Kingdom's nuclear weapons may be ordered only by the Prime Minister. It would not be in the interests of national security to comment further on command and control arrangements for the nuclear deterrent.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure compliance with antisocial behaviour orders. [220449]

Ms Blears: Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced in April 1999. From data reported to the Home Office, we know that up to September 2004, 3,826 ASBOs have been issued since they were introduced. An ASBO is a civil order, but a breach of it is a criminal offence.

The granting of the ASBOs is not the end of the process. Local agencies need to work with those subject to ASBOs as well as their families to ensure that the ASBO is observed and complied with.

Since February 2004, Parenting Orders can be attached to ASBOs issued to 10–15 year olds. Since May 2004, Individual Support Orders can be attached to ASBOs issued to a 10–17 year old to direct the young person to activities that can address the underlying causes of the antisocial behaviour.

In the Drugs Bill currently, before Parliament there is a proposal for an Intervention Order that could be attached to an ASBO issued to an adult and which would direct the individual to activities to address the underlying causes of their antisocial behaviour when these are drug related.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many curfew orders have been issued in (a) Essex and (b) Southend for antisocial behaviour since their inception. [220498]

Paul Goggins: Curfew orders were not made in Essex prior to 2000. The available information, for the years 2000 to 2003 is contained in the table.

The offences for which curfew orders are made are classified by statute and no further circumstances of the offences are collected centrally. Antisocial behaviour is not a statutory classification. The table therefore shows all offences for which curfew orders have been made in Essex.

Statistics for 2004 will be published in the latter part of this year.

Autonomy plc

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police authorities have contracts with Autonomy plc. [212204]

Ms Blears: This information is not held centrally and, in any event, decisions on who the police authority and force contract with are made locally.

Begging

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of individuals who were successfully prosecuted for begging in each year since 1990 (a) had a home address and (b) did not have a home address; and if he will make a statement; [220678]

(2) how many individuals convicted for begging in each year since 1990 were found to have psychiatric problems; and if he will make a statement. [220679]

Paul Goggins: Information relating to the residency or psychiatric condition of a defendant is not centrally collected on the Home Office court proceedings database.

However, available information on the number and percentage of successful prosecutions for begging under S3 and S4 Vagrancy Act 1824, England and Wales 1990–2003 is contained in the table.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of how the introduction of the National Offender Management Service will affect levels of drug use in prisons. [220922]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service published its National Drug Strategy for the management and treatment of problematic drug users on 20 January. It will strengthen the co-operation and effectiveness of those involved in the delivery of drug interventions across the criminal justice system and will ensure that problematic drug users are managed in a way that optimises chances of success. The strategy can be found online at the Home Office and Prison Service websites.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there will be duplication of responsibility between the headquarters of the National Offender Management Service and the headquarters of the Prison and Probation Services. [220391]

Paul Goggins: The new National Offender Management Service headquarters is being designed to ensure that there is no duplication of responsibility.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration was given to merging the Prison and Probation Services into one, prior to the publication of the Carter Report. [220392]

Paul Goggins: Organisational issues affecting prisons and probation are discussed from time to time. However there was no formal proposal for a merger of the prisons and probation services, nor any preparation of a business case for this, in the period prior to Lord Carter's review. The Carter review itself did not propose such a merger. The last time such a merger was considered was in the 1998 Prisons—Probation review (final report), available at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/docs/pprcont.html

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the Departments within the National Offender Management Service headquarters that did not previously exist within either the prison or probation services. [220476]

Paul Goggins: The new National Offender Management Service headquarters, alongside the Prison Service and Probation Service headquarters, is being redesigned. A proposal, including the allocation of individual units to directorates, has been put forward to staff and trade unions for their comments. The new headquarters is being planned for April 2005 and I will write to the hon. Member once the design of the new headquarters has been agreed.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made of the change in the number of civil service posts consequent on the creation of the National Offender Management Service; and if he will make a statement. [220477]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) consists of the three former organisations—the Prison Service, Probation Service and Correctional Services. The number of civil servants has remained the same with the introduction of the new service, except for the development of a small programme office (12 new posts) to manage the organisation's change programme and the appointment of 10 new regional offender managers. The new NOMS headquarters is being redesigned by April 2005.

Although there may be temporary increases in civil service posts over the next two years, NOMS remains committed to reducing civil service posts by almost 900 posts to reach a target figure of 2,540 posts by March 2007. To date, 50 per cent. of this reduction has been achieved.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans there are to move (a) Prison Service Headquarters, (b) Probation Service Headquarters and (c) National Offender Management Service Headquarters out of London; and if he will make a statement. [220518]

Paul Goggins: I am considering relocating the Headquarters of the National Offender Management Service, including the present National Probation Directorate and the Headquarters of the public sector Prison Service, out of London provided that a business case shows that this is cost-effective and that the move could be afforded. Any such relocation is unlikely to take place before 2007–08.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budget is for the National Offender Management Service headquarters for each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [220519]

Paul Goggins: The budget for the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) for 2005–06 is £4.035 billion resource and £321 million capital.

The budget for NOMS central functions, including the office for contracted prisons, is currently £301 million resource for 2005- 06. This is expected to increase as functions are transferred from the prison and probation service headquarters.

Budgets for 2006–07 and 2007–08 have not been finalised but indicative budgets for the overall NOMS budget in 2006–07 are £4.253 billion resource and £287 capital and, for 2007–08, £4.512 billion resource and £312 million capital.

Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will provide a substantive answer to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Southend, West on 13 January 2005 for named day answer, reference 209465, on correspondence. [211452]

Ms Blears [holding answer 27 January 2005]: I replied to the hon. Member on 1 February 2005, Official Report, column 822W.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the decision to extend the jurisdiction of the Criminal Cases Review Commission's jurisdiction to court martial convictions; and when will this be implemented. [218714]

Paul Goggins: Agreement in principle has been reached between the Criminal Cases Review Commission (CCRC) and the Ministry of Defence concerning the extension of the CCR's jurisdiction to enable them to review convictions at court martial and Standing Civilian Court. Consideration is being given to the possibility of including appropriate provisions within the Armed Forces Bill planned for the 2006 legislative timetable.

Private Mario Clarke

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 1 February 2005, Official Report, columns 847–48W, on Private Mario Clarke, what steps were taken by the family liaison officer to inform Deveen Clarke of the date of the inquest into the death of her husband; what steps were taken to inform her that public funds would be made available to enable her to attend the hearing; and if he will ensure she is provided with a full transcript of proceedings. [217803]

Ms Blears: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis reports that Mrs. Deveen Clarke was informed of the impending inquest by telephone and by letter when the date of the inquest was known.

The Metropolitan police also contacted Mrs. Clarke by telephone when they had been informed that she had not been successful in obtaining a visa and to inform her that the coroner was not calling her as a witness.

As Mrs. Clarke had been unsuccessful in obtaining a visa and therefore could not travel back to the UK, the question of public funds being made available was not an issue.

Mrs. Clarke was informed of the result of the inquest by letter. The Metropolitan police will on request from Mrs. Clarke make arrangements to provide her with a full transcript of the proceedings.

Defence Equipment Projects

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the approved cost at main gate was for (a) A400M, (b) Astute Class submarine, (c) Bowman and (d) Nimrod, broken down by (i) direct resource DEL, (ii) indirect resource DEL and (iii) capital DEL. [219038]

Mr. Ingram: Approved costs at original Main Gate or equivalent approval were as follows:

Project	Approved cost (£ million)	Year
A400M	3,500	2000
Astute Class submarine	1,900	1997
Bowman	1,984	2001
Nimrod MRA4	2,200	1996

These projects went through the Main Gate or equivalent point prior to the full introduction of Resource Accounting and Budgeting (RAB). Approvals were therefore on a cash basis and not broken down in the format requested. The latest approved procurement costs at main gate or equivalent on a RAB basis taken from MPR 04 are:

Project	Approved procurement cost at Main Gate or equivalent as taken from MPR 04 (out turn) (£ million)
Astute Class submarine	2,578
Bowman	2,041
Nimrod MRA4	2,813

Departmental Policies (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Coventry, South constituency, the effects on Coventry, South of changes to his Department's policy since 1997. [220371]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 9 March 2005]: The Government have put in place policies in the areas of crime reduction, antisocial behaviour, policing and active communities that are yielding considerable benefits for the Coventry, South constituency, as well as for all parts of the UK.

For example, between March 1997 and September 2004, the number of police officers in West Midlands police force increased by 917 from 7,113 to 8,030. The Government's introduction of community support officers (CSOs) in 2002 has put 134 CSOs on West Midlands streets to tackle crime and antisocial behaviour. Between 1997 and 2003–04, the West Midlands police force area has seen a reduction in recorded domestic burglary crimes of 35 per cent. and in recorded vehicle crimes of 28 per cent.

West Midlands police force is receiving £426.5 million in general grants for 2005–06, an increase of 6.81 per cent. (£27.2 million) over 2004–05. West Midlands also gains around £0.8 million from the Amending Report for 2003–04, bringing the overall increase to 7.0 per cent. General grants funding to West Midlands has increased by 34 per cent. between 1997–98 and 2005–06. In addition to general grants, West Midlands will also receive around £29 million in specific grants funding for targeted initiatives and capital provision in 2005–06. The distribution of resources locally is a matter for the Police Authority and the chief constable.

As crime prevention requires action across communities, every area has had a local Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) since 1998 which brings together the police, health services, drugs agencies and council and community representatives to decide how to prevent and deter crime and antisocial behaviour.

The Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) was a pioneering Government intervention programme which ran for three years from April 1999 in England and Wales and took an evidence-based approach to crime reduction. Grants of over £340 million were allocated to over 1,470 projects, including CCTV, under 20 initiatives that formed part of the programme. Four CCTV projects in the Coventry CDRP area received a total of £528,226 from the CRP.

Since 2001, successive initiatives have provided direct funding to each of the 376 Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships in England and Wales. These initiatives include Communities Against Drugs, the Safer Communities Initiative, the Small Retailers in Deprived Areas scheme and the Building Safer Communities Fund. Since 2001, a total of £1.93 million has been allocated to Coventry CDRP under these initiatives. A further £2.03 million has been provided over the two years 2003–04 and 2004–05 to the Home Office regional director in the West Midlands for CDRP capacity building across the region.

It is estimated that out of a million active offenders, 100,000 have three or more convictions and are responsible for half of all crime. There is a Prolific and other Priority Offenders (PPO) scheme in Coventry set up to target those offenders who cause a disproportionate amount of crime, disorder and antisocial behaviour in the community.

The Government's crime reduction website provides further information on the work being done to reduce crime across the country, including information about action and results in local areas. It is available at http://www.crimereduction.gov.uk.

New legislation has given local agencies a raft of powers, from antisocial behaviour orders to local dispersal orders and crack house closure powers, to work with local people to tackle antisocial behaviour and nuisance. In Coventry a total of 73 antisocial behaviour orders have been issued as of 4 March 2005. Coventry is one of the 50 antisocial behaviour action areas across the country set to get extra help to tackle antisocial behaviour. In addition, £25,000 has been awarded to Coventry to tackle families who cause nuisance and misery. Nuisance neighbours are offered intensive family support and given a "last chance" to turn around their behaviour, by nuisance neighbour expert panels. Local contacts for tackling antisocial behaviour can be found on http://www.together.gov.uk/authority.asp.

Tackling drug misuse is a priority of this Government and their policy is set out in the 10-year National Drug Strategy launched in 1998 and updated in December 2002. (A copy of the updated Drug Strategy 2002 is held in the Library.) Under this, the Government have invested substantially in measures to reduce the harms caused by illegal drugs, focussing on the four strands of:

reducing the supply of illegal drugs;

preventing young people from becoming problematic drug users;

providing effective treatment to all who need it; and

Direct annual funding nationally to tackle drug misuse amounted to £1,244 million in 2003–04, rising to £1,344 million in 2004–05. Coventry has seen a significant increase in direct funding for tackling drugs, in particular for drug treatment services and the through care and aftercare elements of the Drug Interventions Programme. In 2003–04 the allocation for Coventry drug action team amounted to £2.08 million, rising to £2.83 million in 2004–05. Details of action taken to tackle drugs in the Coventry, South constituency can be obtained from the Coventry drugs action team, for contact details see http://www.drugs.gov.uk/Links/DrugActionTeams.

The Government are working to ensure that citizens, communities and the voluntary sector are more fully engaged in tackling social problems, and there is more equality of opportunity and respect for people of all races and religions. Active community participation in England has increased by 1.5 million people between 2001 and 2003. Charities have been supported more effectively, and £125 million is being invested across the country through the future builders fund in voluntary and community organisations that help provide valuable public services. Advice on ways to engage local people in helping their communities is available on the Active Citizenship Centre website http://www.active-citizen.org.uk.

This year, 2005, is the year of the volunteer which is being delivered by the Home Office in partnership with Community Service Volunteers and Volunteering England. This will include a whole range of events in local communities across the country that aim to celebrate the contribution which volunteers make to the quality of people's lives, and encourage more people to volunteer. We are particularly keen to encourage young people, black and minority ethnic groups, those with no qualifications and disabled people to get involved. More details can be found at www.yearofthevolunteer.org.

Detailed information on the impact of Home Office policies across the full range of responsibilities is set out in the Home Office Annual Report and in the Strategic Plan for 2004–08, available on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

Driving Convictions

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for (a) causing death by dangerous driving, (b) dangerous driving and (c) careless driving there were in Greater London in each year since 2000. [220107]

Caroline Flint: Available information for the years 2000 to 2002 (latest available) is given in the table.

2003 data will be available shortly.

Drugs

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what measures are being taken to educate and inform potential users of crystal meth of its dangers; [220488]

(2) what measures are being taken to encourage nightclubs to take action against the use of crystal meth; [220489]

(3) what measures his Department plans to take to prevent amyl nitrates in any form being sold in nightclubs; [220505]

(4) what plans he has to introduce new legislation to combat the use of illegal substances. [220506]

Caroline Flint: The use of the methylamphetamine or crystal meth in the UK is negligible. We continue to monitor the incidence of methylamphetamine through liaison with police and customs officials. There are no plans to embark on a general education campaign nor one specifically aimed at nightclubs. Talk to Frank provides general information on the harm of all amphetamines.

There have been no reports of methylamphetamine being sold as amyl nitrate. Methylamphetamine is predominantly in the form of crystals, powder or pill whereas amyl nitrate is a volatile liquid.

The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD), set up a working group in 2004 with a remit of producing a comprehensive report on methylamphetamine. The report is to be discussed at the meeting of the ACMD on 19 May.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the prevalence of drug use data relating to the British Crime Survey 2003–04. [221177]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I expect the report "Drug Misuse Declared: Key findings from the 2003–04 British Crime Survey" to be published shortly.

Mr. Osten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the resources saved from the reclassification of cannabis; to what extent savings have been reallocated to the policing of (a) dealing and (b) tackling misuse of class A drugs; and if he will make a statement. [220850]

Caroline Flint: Arrests for cannabis possession have fallen by a third in the first year since reclassification in January 2004, which amounts to an estimated saving of 199,000 police hours. It is an operational decision for each police force to determine the level of resources employed in tackling Class A offences. Operation Crackdown, launched in January and involving 33 forces, demonstrates how forces are working to combat drug misuse and dealing. In the first four weeks of the Operation, 963 arrests were reported for Class A supply offences.

Full Sutton Prison

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to develop the land owned by the Prison Service adjacent to Full Sutton Prison; whether plans for the site remain under consideration; when he expects to reach a decision on the future of the site; and if he will make a statement. [219567]

Paul Goggins: [holding answer 8 March 2005]: We have no plans at present to develop Prison Service land adjacent to HMP Full Sutton. Development of this site remains an option for providing additional prison capacity as and when it may be needed.

Illegal Immigration

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal entrants to the UK have been detected for each of the past five years. [213183]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 1 February 2005]: The following table shows published data on persons against whom illegal entry action was initiated for each of the past five years. Data was not of sufficient quality for publication in 2003, however it is estimated that 22,950 persons had illegal entry action initiated against them in this year. This figure is based on management information and does not constitute a national statistic. Data for 2004 will be published later this year. Illegal entry action is initiated against those people who are detected having entered or attempted to enter the country clandestinely or by means of deception, either verbal or documentary.

Persons against whom illegal entry action was initiated, 2000 to 2004[1]

	Total persons
2000	47,325
2001	69,875
2002	48,050
2003	—
2004[2]	—

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 5.
[2] Not available

Official statistics on immigration matters are available from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Annual data for 2004 will be available in summer 2005.

Overseas Students

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many appeals by international students who had their visa applications rejected were upheld by the Immigration Appellate Authority in each of the last five years; [218898]

(2) how many appeals were made to the Immigration Appellate Authority by international students who had their visa applications rejected in each of the last five years; [218899]

(3) if he will provide a breakdown by visa issuing posts of the number of appeals made by international students who had their visa applications rejected in each of the last five years. [218901]

Mr. Browne: Reliable statistical data in relation to international students who had their visa applications rejected and whose appeals the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA) subsequently upheld are available only for the year 2003. Full year data for 2004 have not yet been collated. Data for years prior to 2003 are not available in the form requested.

In 2003,1,772 appeals by students who had been refused entry clearance were allowed.

Data on the number of appeals made by international students relate to appeals lodged with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate rather than with the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA). In 2003, 6,900 appeals were lodged by students who were refused entry clearance. The IAA heard 6,430 student entry clearance appeals. In addition 1,805 appeals were lodged by international students in the United Kingdom whose leave to remain application had been refused.

In relation to a breakdown by visa issuing post of the number of appeals made by international students (excluding student nurses) who had their visa applications rejected, UK Visas has provided the following data covering the full five-year period. This information was obtained from UK Visas' Central Reference System. It should be noted that, due to the complexity of UK Visas global business, including occasional inconsistencies in data entry across over 150 offices, 100 per cent. accuracy cannot be guaranteed.

Policies

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policies in the areas of (a) crime reduction, (b) antisocial behaviour, (c) policing and (d) active communities have been put in place since 1997 by his Department (i) for all parts of the UK and (ii) in Scotland. [220337]

Ms Blears [holding answer 4 March 2005]: The Government has put in place policies in the areas of crime reduction, antisocial behaviour, policing and active communities that are yielding considerable benefits for all parts of the UK. For Scotland these are devolved matters for the Scottish Executive and for Northern Ireland are matters for the Northern Ireland Office.

In England and Wales between March 1997 and September 2004, the number of police officers increased by 12,977 from 127,158 to 140,135. The Government's introduction of community support officers (CSOs) in 2002 has put 4,599 CSOs on the streets to tackle crime and antisocial behaviour. Between 1997 and 2003–04, there has been a reduction in recorded domestic burglary crimes of 23 per cent. and in recorded vehicle crimes of 20 per cent.

Expenditure on policing supported by Government grant or spent centrally on services for the police in England and Wales has increased by over 53 per cent. (26 per cent. in real terms) between 1997–98 and 2005–06.

As crime prevention requires action across communities, every area in England and Wales has had a local Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) since 1998 which brings together the police, health services, drugs agencies and council and community representatives to decide how to prevent and deter crime and antisocial behaviour.

The Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) was a pioneering Government intervention programme which ran for three years from April 1999 in England and Wales and took an evidence-based approach to crime reduction. Grants of over £340 million were allocated to over 1,470 projects, including CCTV, under 20 initiatives that formed part of the programme.

Since 2001, successive initiatives have provided direct funding to each of the 376 Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships in England and Wales. These initiatives include Communities Against Drugs, the Safer Communities Initiative, the Small Retailers in Deprived Areas scheme and the Building Safer Communities Fund. Since 2001, a total of £301.3 million has been allocated under these initiatives. A further £20 million has been provided over the two years 2003–04 and 2004–05 to Home Office Regional Directors for CDRP capacity building.

The Government's Crime Reduction Website provides further information on the work being done to reduce crime across the country, including information about action and results in local areas. It is available at http://www.crimereduction.gov.uk

New legislation has given local agencies a raft of powers, from antisocial behaviour orders to local dispersal orders and crack house closure powers, to work with local people to tackle antisocial behaviour and nuisance. There are currently 50 TOGETHER antisocial behaviour action areas in England and Wales. Between April 1999 and September 2004 a total of 3,826 antisocial behaviour orders have been issued. Further information on tackling antisocial behaviour can be found on http://www.together.gov.uk/authority.asp

Tackling Drug Misuse is a priority of this Government and its policy is set out in the 10 year National Drug Strategy launched in 1998 and updated in December 2002. (A copy of the Updated Drug Strategy 2002 is held in the House Library.) Under this, the Government has invested substantially in measures to reduce the harms caused by illegal drugs, focussing on the four strands of:

reducing the supply of illegal drugs;

preventing young people from becoming problematic drug users;

providing effective treatment to all who need it; and reducing drug-related crime.

Direct annual funding nationally to tackle drug misuse amounted to £1,244 million in 2003–04, rising to £1,344 million in 2004–05. Details of action taken to tackle drugs can be obtained from http://www.drugs.gov.uk/Links/DrugActionTeams

The Government is working to ensure that citizens, communities and the voluntary sector are more fully engaged in tackling social problems, and there is more equality of opportunity and respect for people of all races and religions. The Home Office has allocated £15 million in grants under the Connecting Communities race equality grant scheme over the three years (2003–06). Active community participation in England has increased by 1.5 million people between 2001 and 2003. Charities have been supported more effectively, and £125 million is being invested across the country through the futurebuilders fund in voluntary and community organisations that help provide valuable public services. Advice on ways to engage local people in helping their communities is available on the Active Citizenship Centre website http://www.active-citizen.org.uk

This year, 2005, is the year of the Volunteer which is being delivered by the Home Office in partnership with Community Service Volunteers and Volunteering England. This will include a whole range of events in local communities across the country that aim to celebrate the contribution which volunteers make to the quality of people's lives, and encourage more people to volunteer. We are particularly keen to encourage young people, black and minority ethnic groups, those with no qualifications and disabled people to get involved. More details can be found at www.yearofthevolunteer.org

Detailed information on the impact of Home Office policies across the full range of responsibilities is set out in the Home Office Annual Report and in the Strategic Plan for 2004–08, available on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) by how much the Prison Service's budget has changed in 2004–05; and what the planned budget is for each of the next three years; [216747]

(2) what changes have been made to the operational budgets of prisons in 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [216748]

Paul Goggins: The original budget allocation to the Public Prison Service for 2004–05 was as follows:

Resource costs budget—£2,202.7 million

Capital budget—£205.9 million

Changes from the original allocations were made during the year. Additional funding from the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) for immigration detainees held at Dover and Haslar, and End Year Flexibility for resource funding (£7 million) and capital funding (£65 million) increased the budget.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of family visits to prisoners on prisoners' prospects of (a) accommodation and (b) employment on release; and if he will make a statement. [220352]

Paul Goggins: The "Resettlement outcomes on release from prison in 2003" report was published on the Home Office website on 24 February 2005.

The findings indicate that good family ties, as measured by the fact of at least one family or partner visit during custody, were strongly associated with prisoners having positive expectations of accommodation and employment arranged prior to release.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratio of mental health professionals in the penal system to prisoners is. [220682]

Paul Goggins: It would not be practicable to attempt any such estimate. Prisoners with mental health problems will be treated by a wide range of mental health professionals from a variety of service providers. We have met and exceeded the commitment in the national health service plan that by 2004 300 additional staff would be employed to provide mental health services in prisons.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the average salaries of prison officers in (a) public and (b) private prisons were on the latest date for which figures are available; [217296]

(2) what comparison he has made of terms and conditions of staff in public and private prisons. [217298]

Paul Goggins: The latest figures available for the average salary of a prison officer employed in the England and Wales Prison Service are for January 2005. Excluding allowances this is £23,307 for a prison officer, £27,380 for a senior officer and £29,508 for a principal officer.

The Prison Service Pay Review Body provided a comparison of the terms and conditions of staff in public and private prisons as part of its September 2004 analysis of Prison Service pay. The results are as follows.

	Prison officer	Prison custody officer
Average starting pay (£)	16,896	[3]16,076
Average basic pay (£)	23,307	17,148
Pay range (£)	[2]16,896–25,788	[3]16,076
Average working week (hours)	39	41

[1] After training.
[2] Normal scale ends at £24,868. Staff can then receive long service awards taking them to £25,285 and £25,788 after a further four and six years respectively.
[3] Maximum of range not available.

A prison officer is an officer who works for the public sector prison service. A prison custody officer works for a contracted out prison.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison staff have taken sick leave for (a) two to four consecutive weeks, (b) one to two consecutive months, (c) two to four consecutive months and (d) more than four consecutive months in each year since 1997. [218247]

Paul Goggins: The information is provided in the following tables for each year since 1999–2000 for the public sector Prison Service. Reliable data on sickness absence is not held centrally for periods prior to 1999 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Data is not available in respect of contracted out prisons. Since 1999, the Prison Service has improved significantly the recording of sickness absence data on corporate systems and is now satisfied that recording arrangements are robust. However, the following data for the earlier years may understate the actual position at the time.

(a) Staff with two to four consecutive weeks absence

	Cases	Percentage of total cases
1999–2000	3,599	6.4
2000–01	4,121	6.6
2002–03	4,856	6.9
2003–04	5,044	7.5

(b) Staff with one to two consecutive months absence

	Cases	Percentage of total cases
1999–2000	2,150	3.8
2000–01	2,567	4.1
2001–02	3,100	5.1
2002–03	3,325	4.8
2003–04	3,235	4.8

(c) Staff with two to four consecutive months absence

	Cases	Percentage of total cases
1999–2000	1,340	2.4
2000–01	1,605	2.6
2001–02	1,879	3.1
2002–03	2,046	2.9
2003–04	2,172	3.2

(d) Staff with more than four consecutive months absence

	Cases	Percentage of total cases
1999–2000	975	1.7
2000–01	1,551	2.5
2001–02	1,979	3.3
2002–03	2,143	3.1
2003–04	1,959	2.9

Note:
Two to four weeks has been defined as 14–28 calendar days inclusive; One to two months as 29–60 calendar days inclusive; Two to four months as 61–120 days inclusive; more than four months as greater than 120 calendar days.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Government have introduced to combat drug use in prisons. [220921]

Paul Goggins: The prison elements of the National Offender Management Service Drug Strategy provides a comprehensive framework to reduce the amount of illegal drugs in prisons. Passive drug dogs are used to detect traces of drugs on visitors, and other dogs are used actively to search for drugs within prisons, as part of a general drug search strategy. Closed circuit television systems are installed in all visits areas to monitor behaviour, and fixed and low-level furniture is used in visits areas to make it difficult to pass drugs undetected. Sanctions are taken against visitors suspected of smuggling drugs, including visit bans and closed visits. Where there is adequate evidence they are prosecuted. Prisons and police share intelligence about drug routes into prisons.

Each month a random sample of the prisoners in each prison (5 per cent. or 10 per cent. depending on the size of the prison) is required to submit to a drug test, and a positive test result will lead to disciplinary proceedings. All establishments use and contribute to a drug supply reduction good practice guide and a monthly security bulletin, both of which share information on ways of protecting against drugs.

Prisons work with the Police Scientific Development Branch to strengthen physical and technical barriers, particularly in prisons, such as those in city centres, where public spaces are close to perimeter walls. Prisons have a Professional Standards Unit to help identify staff who may be involved in or at risk of corruption. It will provide relevant information to facilitate investigations.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the re-offending rates for (a) individuals who participated in rehabilitation programmes and (b) individuals who did not participate in rehabilitation programmes during their time in prison have been in each year since 1997. [220925]

Paul Goggins: Reconviction rates for adults and juveniles are published on an annual basis, to assist with the measurement of the PSA target on reducing reconvictions. Information on reconviction rates from rehabilitation programmes undertaken in prison are not recorded centrally, so it is not possible to calculate reconviction rates separately for these offenders.

Although reconviction rates for those who participated in rehabilitation programmes are not available on a yearly basis, evaluations of rehabilitation programmes for prisoners are and have been regularly undertaken. The results of those that have been completed can be found in Home Office Research Study 291, which reviews the evidence on the impact of corrections on re-offending.

The most recent national figures for reconviction rates are published as on line reports RDS OLR 08/05—Juvenile reconviction: results from the 2003 cohort (February 2005) and RDS OLR 59/04—Adult reconviction: results from the 2001 cohort (December 2004).

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what rehabilitation programmes are available in prisons. [220926]

Paul Goggins: In addition there are other activities in prison which support rehabilitation and address prisoners' resettlement needs, including learning and skills, prison work, pre-release programmes, housing advice and support services, Jobcentre Plus employment surgeries and job search training and support.

Rehabilitation programmes, accredited by the Correctional Services Accreditation Panel, available in prisons include general offending behaviour programmes such as Enhanced Thinking Skills (ETS) and Controlling Anger and Learning to Manage it (CALM), sex offender treatment programmes, a range of drug treatment programmes and therapeutic communities.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether prisons are subject to Crown immunity for trading standards; and if he will make a statement. [214998]

Paul Goggins: Trading standards covers an extremely wide area of law and involves statutes dealing with matters such as weights and measures, consumer credit and sale of goods. An answer dealing with Crown immunity under all these statutes would cause disproportionate costs to be incurred.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether US-based firms have been approached by (a) the Government and (b) its executive agency with regard to the contracting-out of (i) prison and (ii) probation services. [218258]

Paul Goggins: Three US-based firms were invited to a National Offender Management Service (NOMS) conference for private sector companies on 8 December 2004. It is open to them, and any other private sector companies that meet the operational specification, to bid for a contract in any future NOMS competitions.

Pub Watch/Shop Watch (Workington)

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the (a) pub watch and (b) shop watch scheme in Workington; and what measures he plans to take to strengthen each scheme. [220453]

Ms Blears [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Examples of partnership working, such as the pub and shop watch schemes in Workington, can contribute significantly to reducing levels of retail crime as well as combating alcohol-related violence and disorder.

The Government are working with the British Retail Consortium to increase the number and effectiveness of such partnerships, and has provided £899,000 to the Action against Business Crime (AABC) group to form a national association and set up 100 new business crime partnerships.

The North West regional manager for AABC has identified Workington as a strong scheme and a priority area for development. AABC are meeting with the Workington Town Centre Manager, alongside those from neighbouring towns, to encourage and assist the towns to achieve the Safer Business Award which will help identify Workington as a safer town centre and a successful, well run partnership.

Pub watches, like the one in Workington, can particularly help to keep troublemakers from pubs and clubs as well as providing early warning to bar staff, door staff and the police of instances of possible disorder. The Government welcome the contribution that pub watches can make to tackling alcohol-related violence and disorder.

Rail Warrants (Disciplinary Procedures)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of (a) the police service and (b) the Prison Service were (i) disciplined and (ii) dismissed for misuse of rail warrants in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [208213]

Ms Blears: Information concerning the number of members of both the police service and Prison Service that have been disciplined and dismissed for misuse of rail warrants in each of the last five years is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Restorative Justice

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to introduce measures to increase levels of victim participation in restorative justice. [212321]

Paul Goggins: The Government aim to promote the further use of restorative justice (RJ) in the adult criminal justice system, particularly as a service to victims. We know from research evidence that over 75 per cent. of victims who choose to participate are glad to have done so. On 16 March, we will issue RJ implementation guidance for Local Criminal Justice Boards and their constituent agencies, encouraging them to develop provision of restorative justice at local level, particularly as a service to victims. The implementation guidance will also include advice to local agencies about publicity and communications about RJ, so that more victims are aware of what it is and what is available to them locally.

We believe that the best way to encourage victim participation is through high quality, victim-sensitive provision of RJ services, and appropriate locally based communication about what is available for them.

In the youth justice system, RJ has been available Since 1998. Youth offending teams reported that during 2003–04 over 16,000 victims were consulted or participated in restorative processes and over 90 per cent. expressed satisfaction. The Youth Justice Board has a target for youth offending teams that by 2005, 75 per cent. of victims of all youth crime will be offered the opportunity to participate in a restorative process and 75 per cent. of victims participating should be satisfied. The provisional figure for victim participation between April and December last year is 80.1 per cent.

Rough Sleepers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions he has put in place to dissuade rough sleepers from sleeping on the street; and if he will make a statement. [220671]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are committed to tackling all forms of homelessness and part of our approach to this has been focussed on developing measures to prevent rough sleepers from hitting the streets in the first place and to provide targeted help for those who are out on the streets.

We have successfully reduced the number of rough sleepers by 70 per cent. since 1998 and we are continuing to sustain this reduction. All local authorities had to appoint a rough sleepers' co-ordinator and we continue to work closely with local authorities to monitor their progress on their homelessness strategies and to offer them advice and support to prevent people from becoming homeless.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has produced a range of good practice material guidance and advice notes for local authorities, housing associations and other agencies on effective ways to tackle homelessness.

We are making around £60 million available in 2005–06, rising to £74 million in 2007–08, to help local authorities and voluntary organisations take action on homelessness prevention. In addition, we are investing £90 million in capital works over the next four years to bring older hostels up to 21st century standards so that they provide better opportunities for homeless people and prevent them from becoming homeless again. This will help sustain reductions in rough sleeping and go further in tackling single homelessness.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working closely with the Home Office in the delivery of the Reducing Reoffending National Action Plan. A number of developments are under way to ensure that all prisoners receive a housing needs assessment through custody and into the community. In addition the Prison Service will be introducing a shadow Key Performance Target in April 2005 to measure the housing need assessment at induction. Data will also be collected showing where prisoners at risk of homelessness will be returning to, so that housing authorities and advice agencies can plan services and support.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is also working with the Home Office's Active Communities Unit and the voluntary sector to develop a new approach to capacity building and infrastructure support for the homelessness sector. The Change-Up programme will be providing additional funding of £650,000 to improve refuge provision for the victims of domestic violence and to strengthen the voluntary sector by improving leadership, information exchange and best practice, create regional and sub-regional support arrangements and develop practical support for smaller, harder to reach, frontline agencies.

Sexual Abuse

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of individuals under the age of 18 years who were sexually abused in each of the last five years. [218654]

Paul Goggins: In the recorded crime series there are four sexual offences where, by definition, the victim is a child. The available statistics for the last two years are given in the table. It is not possible to identify the age of the victim for other offences within the sexual offences group.

Recorded sexual offences against children in England and Wales

Number of offences

Offence	2002-03	2003-04
Unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 13	184	212
Unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16	1,515	1,907
Gross indecency with a child	1,880	1,942
Abuse of position of trust	678	792

Special Constables

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make further funding available to chief constables to finance allowances under the Special Constables (Amendment) Regulations 2002 to assist schemes aimed at the recruitment and retention of special constables; and if he will make a statement; [220551]

(2) what assessment he has made of local schemes introduced under the Special Constables (Amendment) Regulations 2002 to assess the effect of payment on recruitment and retention of special constables; [220552]

(3) how many police authorities have applied to his Department for approval to introduce an allowance for special constables under the Special Constables (Amendment) Regulations 2002; how many his Department has (a) approved and (b) refused; and what measures have been taken to monitor the scheme; [220553]

(4) if he will discuss with the Chancellor of the Exchequer exempting special constables from income tax being levied on allowances paid under the Special Constables (Amendment) Regulations 2002; and if he will make a statement. [220554]

Ms Blears: All schemes approved under the Special Constables (Amendment) Regulations 2002 are locally funded. It is for the police authority, following a recommendation by the chief constable, to decide whether an allowance scheme for specials offers value for money. To date, five forces—Cumbria, West Midlands, Humberside, Thames Valley and Durham—have put forward proposals for allowance schemes for specials. All the applications were approved. The schemes in West Midlands and Thames Valley operate in one basic command unit only. The Cumbria scheme has been discontinued at the request of the force in the light of evaluation results. The remaining schemes are subject to ongoing evaluation by forces.

There are no plans to exempt allowances paid to specials from current tax regulations.

Support and Rehabilitation (Women)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what gender-specific community programmes seeking to create local support and rehabilitation centres for women are supported by his Department; [213361]

(2) what community programmes his Department funds that provide support and rehabilitation centres for women. [212323]

Paul Goggins: The Women's Offending Reduction Programme, published on 11 March 2004, is focused on women's offending and aims to reduce the number of women in prison. The programme will improve community based services and ensure they are better tailored to meet women's needs.

The programme contains a commitment to develop a community based one-stop-shop approach to tackling the different factors which impact on women's offending. We are attracted to the idea of having local community supervision and support centres for women where they can access a whole range of interventions and services to meet their needs, including housing, child care, mental health, substance misuse, histories of abuse, employment and training. Following the announcement of funding in the 2004 Spending Review, we are considering how this will be used to develop radical new approaches for women offenders and provide community interventions and support specific to women's needs.

Tampere Agenda

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has held to take forward the EU's Tampere Agenda. [220282]

Caroline Flint: The Home Secretary and other UK Ministers have had discussions with the current and future Presidencies of the ED, and Vice-President Frattini, to plan the delivery of the inherited JHA programme. The successor to the Tampere Programme, The Hague Programme, was agreed by Heads of State at the European Council in November 2005. The European Commission are in the process of producing an Action Plan to implement The Hague Programme, informed by discussions at the informal meeting of EU Justice and Home Affairs Ministers, in Luxembourg in January.

Under-age Driving

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to communicate with the parents of a child who is convicted of driving a motor vehicle when under age. [219012]

Paul Goggins: When a young person is initially charged with an offence, issues relating to contacting the parents will be dealt with by the police. If the young person is summonsed to appear in court the parent(s) will be asked to attend.

If a young person is convicted of driving a motor vehicle while under age the Youth Offending Team (YOT) would attempt to contact the parents, as involvement with family is critical to any intervention. Youth Offending Teams include representatives from a wide range of services and aim for a comprehensive response following assessment. Parents with a child who has become involved with the youth justice system may be invited to attend a voluntary YOT parenting programme. If voluntary participation cannot be achieved the YOT may seek a parenting order which requires attendance.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to review Huntingdon Life Sciences' Certificate of Designation following his Chief Inspector's compliance review; and if he will make a statement. [200027]

Caroline Flint: In common with all establishments designated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, Huntingdon Life Sciences is subject to scrutiny by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate. The inspection schedule takes into account the size of the establishment, the nature of the work undertaken, and the management practices. Inspectors make frequent, usually unannounced, visits of inspection to Huntingdon Life Sciences, as they do to all other designated establishments, to monitor compliance with its certificate and licence conditions under the 1986 Act.

In addition aspects of compliance were formally reviewed by the then Chief Inspector in 1997 and 2001 following allegations made by animal protection organisations. As a result of the 1997 review, notice was given that the Certificate was to be revoked, and that a new application would be considered only if 16 pre-conditions were met to remedy the problems uncovered. A fresh application was subsequently received, with evidence the 16 pre-conditions had been met, and a new Certificate granted. The 2001 compliance review revealed no new management failings related to the Certificate of Designation.

Conditions of issue attached to all Certificates are periodically reviewed. This was last done as regards Huntingdon Life Sciences in October 2004.

Young Offenders

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders from London are located in prison establishments more than (a) 50 miles and (b) 100 miles from the city; and if he will make a statement. [220515]

Paul Goggins: As at 25 February 2004, the latest date for which information is available, the distance away from home that young offenders were held from London, was as set out in the following table.

Distance	Number of young offenders
Under 50 miles
Total number of prisoners	1,120
50 to 100 miles
Total number of prisoners	192
100 plus miles
Total number of prisoners	299
Total	1,600

Note:
Where an individual prisoner's home address is not recorded the prisoner's committal, remand, convicting or sentencing court is used.

Youth Inclusion Projects

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Youth Inclusion Programmes in reducing anti-social behaviour; [219321]

(2) what plans the Government have to increase the number of youth inclusion projects. [219360]

Ms Blears: The overall aim of the Youth Inclusion Programme is to reduce crime in the 72 neighbourhoods in England and Wales in which the programme runs. Each scheme targets the 50 young people, aged 13 to 16, who are most at risk of criminality in the local area. Programme objectives include reducing arrest rates amongst the target group and helping them to engage in suitable full-time education, training or employment.

An independent evaluation of the Youth Inclusion Programme in 2003 showed that overall arrest rates were reduced by 64 per cent. We have not undertaken a separate assessment of the programme's impact on anti-social behaviour, but we do consider that this is likely to be one of the additional benefits.

The Home Office five-year strategic plan includes a commitment to increase the number of Youth Inclusion Programmes by 50 per cent. by 2008.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Exports (Indonesia)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the Answer of 13 January 2005, Official Report, column 627W on Arms Exports (Indonesia), what the estimated cost to the Government of rescheduling Indonesia's debts is. [217444]

Mr. Alexander: The rescheduling of Indonesia's debt has not resulted in a cost to the Exchequer; as it has not reduced the value of Indonesia's debt.

Biomass Power Plants

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many biomass power plants have been built in England under the Renewables Obligation Order 2002. [221188]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of new bio-energy power stations commissioned in England since 2002 and accredited by Ofgem to receive Renewable Obligation Certificates is four. They are:

Station	Commissioned
Peabody Trust, Surrey	1 May 2002
Thornton Power Station, Lancashire	1 June 2002
Weston Industrial Estate, Worcestershire	1 May 2002
Holsworthy Biogas, Devon	1 April 2002

This listing does not include those stations holding ROC's under the co-firing provisions of the Renewables Obligation, or those currently under construction.

China

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effect on the UK defence industry of the proposed lifting of the EU embargo on sales of arms to China. [221253]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

In terms of the direct impact on UK defence industry, lifting the EU arms embargo should not lead to an increase in arms exports to China. There are however concerns about the possible indirect consequences for UK defence industry if action were taken in the US in response to a lifting of the embargo. We do not consider that such action—which would be damaging to both countries' interests—would be justified. We continue to work with the US to achieve a satisfactory conclusion. I am in regular contact with my ministerial colleagues on this issue.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government is taking to assist the People's Republic of China in tackling the trade in illegal cigarettes. [220293]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

UK and Chinese Customs cooperate in a wide range of areas to tackle the trade of illegal cigarettes. Recent examples include:

training Hong Kong and Chinese delegations to assist in identifying suspect containers for interception and examination; sharing information about seizures of cigarettes of Chinese origin in Europe for further investigation; posting officers to act as liaison between the two countries; and assisting and supporting the Chinese authorities in a regional initiative to tackle the illegal cigarette trade.

Further to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's visit to China on 21–23 February 2005, UK and China Customs are currently finalising an agreement to maximise this co-operation and the successful effort against illicit cigarette trafficking and manufacture.

Competitive Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the outcome was of the Competitiveness Council on 7 March; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [221258]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My noble Friend the Minister for Science and Innovation attended the Competitiveness Council on 7 March.

The Council held a discussion of the Lisbon mid-term review based on the Commission's Communication to the Spring European Council. The Commission called on member states to work together for growth and employment to contribute to the EU's longer term sustainable development, and for concrete action to implement economic reform. The UK said the Competitiveness Council should focus on delivering practical outcomes in the key areas of Better Regulation, Chemicals (REACH), Services and the 7th Framework Programme on Research and Development (FP7). The Council adopted its contribution to the Spring European Council, which included particular reference to encouraging growth and innovation, making Europe more attractive to investment, developing and deepening the Internal Market and ensuring an integrated approach to competitiveness.

The Council held an exchange of views on Better Regulation and the Simplification process, which are seen as key elements in the Lisbon agenda and increasing competitiveness. The Council noted the Commission's intention to improve impact assessments on the competitiveness implications of new legislative and policy measures. The Commission is to analyse a number of key sectors in 2005 to identify obstacles to growth and innovation. The UK welcomed the Commission's renewed commitment in this area and underlined the importance of the Better Regulation agenda.

The Council had an exchange of views on stimulating entrepreneurship, based on the Commission's 5th Annual Report on the Implementation of the European Charter for Small Enterprises. The Council recognised the role of the Charter in reinforcing SME policy and will continue to follow its progress, taking into account the Lisbon mid-term review.

The Council took note of information from the Commission on the current stage of negotiations concerning the future construction of an International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor (ITER). The Council will return to this issue during its next meeting, on 18 April 2005.

The Council had an informal discussion of the proposed Services Directive over lunch.

The Council took note of an update from the Presidency on Working Group discussion of REACH (proposal for a Regulation concerning the Registration, Evaluation, Authorisation and Restriction of Chemicals).

The Council took note of information from the Presidency and Commission on the European Parliament's second reading of the Unfair Commercial Practices Directive.

The Council took note of written information from the Italian delegation and interventions from the Commission and a number of member states on difficulties encountered in the textiles, clothing and footwear sectors.

The Council adopted without discussion its Common Position on Computer Implemented Inventions, confirming the political agreement reached last May. The UK voted in favour.

Correspondence

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Manchester, Withington, dated 22 November 2004, on behalf of a constituent Mr. Dave Bush, which was originally sent to the Lord Chancellor and forwarded to her Department. [220500]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 March 2005]: I responded to the letter from my right hon. Friend on 2 March. I have asked my office to send another copy of the letter to his office.

Dounreay Nuclear Power Station

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken by staff at the nuclear establishment at Dounreay to ensure that (a) the seabed of Sandside Bay and the surrounding area and (b) nearby beaches are clear of irradiated material. [218238]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Environmental monitoring and the regulation of radioactive discharges are devolved matters for the Scottish Executive.

However, UKAEA undertakes an extensive beach monitoring programme using sophisticated vehicular radiation detection systems. Since 1999, these systems have regularly monitored five local beaches: Sandside, Crosskirk, Brims, Scrabster and Thurso. These are situated between 3 km west (Sandside) and 13 km east (Thurso) of Dounreay. Reassurance surveys of Melvich beach, some 10 km west of Dounreay, have been carried out on two occasions and an extensive survey of Dunnet beach, approximately 23 km east of Dounreay, has now commenced. The foreshore at Dounreay is also monitored by the vehicular system.

UKAEA have advised the department that:

Radioactive particles have only been found on one public beach, Sandside (although on 2 March, the third day of a 60 day survey, a stone-like object emitting low levels of radioactivity was found at Dunnet Beach which has been taken to Dounreay for laboratory analysis). When a particle is detected it is immediately removed.

The monitoring detects radioactivity down to a level in the top 10cm of sand that is below that considered by independent experts to be of significant risk to human health.

The current monitoring has been demonstrated to be capable of being compliant with the regulatory requirements of SEPA.

All particles detected during monitoring are removed and returned to Dounreay for analysis. The results are reported to regulators.

UKAEA is currently investigating whether there are detection systems which are superior to those available at present for beach monitoring.

In the case of particles buried in the seabed off Dounreay, UKAEA have undertaken an extensive series of research programmes aimed at understanding the distribution, mobility and properties of particles in the marine environment.

Since 1997, divers have been mapping the number and distribution of particles in offshore sediments. As part of this work, the divers have detected and retrieved over 800 particles from the seabed off the coast at Dounreay.

UKAEA is concerned about the inherent occupational risks associated with extensive use of divers. Consequently, UKAEA seeks to limit the use of divers and has developed with their contractor a remotely-operated vehicle (ROV) capable of crawling the seabed and identifying the radiation emitted by particles present within the sediment. Last year, it mapped the locations of over 120 buried particles in survey areas totalling 30,000 sq. metres.

A further 2 or 3 year programme of mapping of the offshore particles will commence in summer 2005 using a remotely operated system. The information from this work will be used to assess the extent of the particle distribution offshore, to validate a computer model of particle dispersion and to assess the risks to any of the local beaches.

This information from offshore studies will be used, together with the information from beach monitoring, as inputs to the consultation process which will identify the Best Practicable Environmental Option for dealing with this legacy.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will establish an inquiry into possible risks to human health from irradiated material found on Sandside Beach, Caithness and the conduct of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority in dealing with the material. [218239]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Public health is a devolved matter for the Scottish Executive.

However I am informed that in recent years, a number of independent expert organisations including the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE), the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee and the National Radiological Protection Board have investigated and advised the Government, UKAEA and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) on the potential health risks from particles of radioactive material found on Sandside Beach. This advice has considered both the likelihood of exposure to such a particle by inhalation, ingestion or skin contact and the resultant health risks should such an exposure occur. COMARE tells the DTI that the probability of a member of the public encountering a particle remains extremely small and the estimated radiation dose to an individual consequent upon ingestion of a typical particle from Sandside Bay is roughly equivalent to the average UK-annual background radiation dose (2 milliSieverts). SEPA has commissioned additional research to further refine this latter estimate.

Energy Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the outcome was of the Energy Council meeting held on 28 to 29 November; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [202522]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer to my previous answer to my hon. Friend.

I represented the UK at the EU Energy Council in Brussels on 29 November.The Council considered several matters of interest to the United Kingdom. Chief among these were the Energy Services Directive and the Security of Electricity Supply Directive.

A general approach on the Security of Electricity Supply Directive was agreed, though the Commission, which seeks a more interventionist regulator-led approach to promote actively new interconnector build and thereby competition, maintained a reserve on Article 7 on interconnector construction.

Council conclusions were agreed on the Commission's Communication on the share of Renewable Energy in the EU.

An orientation debate was held on the proposed Energy End Use Efficiency and Energy Services Directive. Member states expressed a strong preference for indicative not mandatory energy saving targets though views were mixed on whether a uniform target at EU level would be helpful; many delegations preferred individually set targets. There was general recognition that the public sector could play a leading role in promoting energy efficiency but the majority of member states opposed specific targets for the sector. On the question of the placing of obligations on suppliers there was a clear preference for a broader more flexible approach rather than a focus on one energy efficiency approach-energy services. There was broad agreement that a harmonised approach to measuring energy savings was needed, but there was a split on whether a top down or bottom up approach was best.

The UK noted our support for a uniform, but indicative, six-year target taking account of already captured efficiency gains; a more broadly defined obligation on energy suppliers to actively offer and promote energy efficiency; and agreement with the Presidency proposal for either a top down or a hybrid approach to measuring efficiency gains.

The Commission's preference for a mandatory target reflected what they saw as the poor record of achievement against indicative targets and they suggested that flexible mandatory targets might be the way forward. The Presidency concluded by proposing an annual debate on progress towards achieving indicative national targets, the first of which would fall to the UK Presidency, and looked forward to concluding the dossier in the Luxembourg Presidency.

The Commission reported progress on the negotiations of the Energy Community for South East Europe Treaty, which it hoped would be a model for other sectors. Signature was foreseen for 2005. Some member states had substantive comments on the language regime, others on the distinction between participating and observing member states. The next negotiation meeting on 13 December will be an opportunity to discuss outstanding matters.

The Commission reported on its communication on progress on the EU/Russia energy dialogue 2000–04, claiming it showed positive outcomes across a range of fields. More progress in Russia was needed on the reform process, energy efficiency and Kyoto implementation, promoting and protecting investment and positive developments in the gas and oil markets. The Commission undertook fully to involve member states.

The Presidency concluded by noting, in the context of the recent "Energy in Motion" conference aimed at improving cleaner road traffic, that transport accounted for a third of energy consumption. The conference conclusions would be discussed at the next Transport and Environment Councils and the Commission were urged to take account of them.

Luxembourg finished by saying they would take forward the Dutch Presidency approaches and singled out Energy TENS as a priority dossier.

Equality Bill

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether it is the intention that the provisions of the Equality Bill should change the legal status of certain types of religious discrimination. [221257]

Ms Hewitt: The Equality Bill, which was published on 3 March with its explanatory notes, will make unlawful (save for the exemptions specified in the Bill) discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief in respect of the provision of goods, facilities and services, the management and disposal of premises, education, and public functions. The Bill does not affect the scope of the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003, which already make unlawful discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief in respect of employment and vocational training. The definition of "religion" and "belief" for the purposes of these Regulations has been reformulated, but this does not have any material impact on the effect of the Regulations.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the (a) Italian, (b) Irish and (c) Dutch presidency of the EU the EC-India RTD Co-operation Steering Committee met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement. [215424]

Mr. Alexander: The first meeting of the EC-India S&T steering committee with India took place in Brussels on 3 March 2004 and the second will take place in Delhi on 29 April 2005. These meetings are convened by the Commission and Member States are not invited to participate—UK officials do not therefore attend.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the (a) Italian, (b) Irish and (c) Dutch presidency of the EU the Committee for Implementation of the Action Programme to Promote Gender Equality met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if he will make a statement. [217889]

Ms Hewitt: The EU Committee for Implementation of the Action Programme to Promote Gender Equality meets twice a year in Brussels. The meetings do not necessarily tie in with the presidencies and the last three meetings were held on 11 November 2003 (during the Italian presidency), 20 July 2004 and 15 October 2004 (both of which were in the Dutch presidency). There was no meeting during the Irish presidency. A DTI representative attended all three of these meetings.

Gender Pay Gap

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the gender pay gap for full-time workers in her Department was in (a) 1997 and (b) 2004. [220662]

Ms Hewitt: The difference between male and female salaries for the DTI as at 1 April 2004 was 16 per cent.[1] The earliest period for which I can give an accurate comparable figure is April 2001 when it was 18 per cent.

The DTI has successfully taken measures to reduce the gender pay gap and continues to do so. In 2003 a new pay system was introduced as part of a 3 year proposal and includes transparent pay progression to a target rate for the job within a specified period of time. Moreover, there has been significant shortening of pay scales over the past two years and further action is planned this year.

Diversity implications are considered as a matter of importance, and continuous promotion of flexible working practices and family friendly policies encourage women to join the DTI and to stay. The Department has also introduced a course "Development for Women" which is specifically targeted at helping women develop their careers within DTI.

[1] median of full time equivalent salary for all staff working across the whole organisation

Generation IV Nuclear Reactors

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding she plans to allocate to the multilateral collaboration with France, Japan, Canada and the United States on research and development for Generation IV Nuclear Reactors; what mechanisms will apply to the administration of the funds; and whether the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority will have a role in this research. [221186]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: DTI expects to provide funding of up to £5 million per annum for UK participation in international research collaborations on advanced nuclear reactor systems. The mechanisms for administering these funds are under development. The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) does not have an interest in Generation IV research, except where that research relates to decommissioning plants in the future.

Housing

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to publish proposals for the introduction of independent redress schemes for estate agents which are wider in scope than those contained in part V of the Housing Act 2004. [221363]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I am aware of my right hon. Friend's Private Members' Bill that would enable estate agents redress schemes, established by the Housing Act, to consider consumer complaints not connected to Home Information Packs, and also to extend their coverage to Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Government supports the aims of the Bill and is monitoring its progress with interest. If there is insufficient time for the Bill to succeed, the Government will seek a suitable legislative vehicle to extend the scope of redress schemes.

Hydrogen Economy

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent by her Department in each year since 1997 on research connected with the hydrogen economy. [207208]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information is in the table and indicates money spent by EPSRC on research specific to the hydrogen economy.

Nuclear Industry IT System

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what safety procedures are in place in relation to the nuclear industry's IT system. [208248]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK's civil nuclear industry does not share a common information technology system: the major companies in the industry each have their own main data network. These data networks have all been accredited to UK Government security standards.

Nuclear Waste

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on the possible import of nuclear waste from Italy into the UK for disposal. [208352]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 13 January 2005]: It is not Government policy to import nuclear waste into the United Kingdom. Recent press reports have incorrectly claimed that waste from Italy may be exported to either France or the UK. Instead, it is understood that there is the possibility that some spent fuel from Italy may be reprocessed overseas but this has not been confirmed and no tenders have been issued.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her policy to prevent the import for disposal of nuclear waste until a solution has been agreed upon to deal with the existing United Kingdom nuclear waste stockpile. [208353]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not Government policy to import nuclear waste into the UK. Following my statement on 13 December 2004, the small amount of Intermediate Level Waste which will be retained in the UK as a result of substitution (which provides for the return of an additional amount of radiologically equivalent High Level Waste to BNFL's overseas reprocessing customers) has no material implication for the long-term management of nuclear waste in the UK.

Pregnancy Discrimination

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the results of the Equal Opportunities Commission's formal investigation into pregnancy discrimination were. [214590]

Ms Hewitt: The Equal Opportunities Commission is due to publish the final report and recommendations of its General Formal Investigation into pregnancy discrimination later this year. An Interim Report was published in September 2004 and can be obtained from the EOC website at http://www.eoc.org.uk/cseng/policyandcampaigns/p_interimreport.pdf

The Government welcome the EOC's investigation and look forward to receiving the final report and recommendations.

Solar Power

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans her Department has to ensure continuity of capital grant support for domestic and other small installations under stream 1 of the solar PV Major Demonstration Programme when current funding ends in August; and if she will make a statement. [221374]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The DTI is monitoring the number of applications made under Stream 1 of the Major PV Demonstration Programme. When this programme ends in March 2006 the Department will continue its support for PV through a "low carbon buildings" programme. The low carbon buildings programme is currently under development and there will be formal consultation on this this year. The programme is expected to being operating in 2006–07.

Women's Employment

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to assist black and ethnic minority women's (a) entry to and (b) progression in the workplace. [220855]

Ms Hewitt: DTI is working with a cross-Whitehall group, led by the Department for Work and Pensions, to tackle the barriers to labour market participation faced by ethnic minorities. This work stems from the Strategy Unit Report "Ethnic minorities in the Labour Market" published in March 2003. DTIs specific contribution is around working with business to promote race equality and diversity in the workplace and promoting enterprise.

DTI also shares a Public Service Agreement "in the three years to 2006, taking account of the economic cycle, to increase the employment rate and significantly reduce the difference between the overall employment rate and the employment rate of ethnic minorities". This will clearly benefit women as well as men.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the number of black and ethnic minority women who believe that they are working below their potential, with particular reference to black and ethnic minority women who (a) are working in jobs where they have less of a role in staff management or supervision than they did in previous jobs and (b) made more use of higher qualifications or higher skills levels in previous jobs; and what estimate she has made of the economic cost of black and ethnic minority women working below their potential in the latest year for which figures are available. [220930]

Ms Hewitt: DTI is working with a cross-Whitehall group, led by the Department for Work and Pensions, to tackle the barriers to labour market participation faced by ethnic minorities. This work stems from the Strategy Unit Report "Ethnic minorities in the Labour Market" published in March 2003. DTIs specific contribution is around working with business to promote race equality and diversity in the workplace and promoting enterprise.

Through the Ethnic Minority Employment Task Force we are committed to closing the employment gap for ethnic minorities. The employment gap is decreasing but remains substantial. Ethnic minorities are twice as likely to be unemployed and one and a half times as likely to be economically inactive as the overall working age population. Economic activity varies considerably between ethnic minority groups and by gender. The Indian and Black Caribbean ethnic groups have the highest employment rates and the Bangladeshi and Pakistani groups have the lowest. For most ethnic groups, the employment rate for women is well below that for men.

The Ethnic Minority Employment Task Force Year 1 Progress Report was published in November 2004 and can be accessed at www.emetaskforce.gov.uk.

Alcohol-related Deaths

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how many (a) women and (b) men alcohol was found to be the primary cause of death in each year since 1997, broken down by age group. [221245]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Amess, dated 14 March 2005:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for how many (a) women and (b) men alcohol was found to be the primary cause of death in each year since 1997, broken down by age group. (221245)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2003. The attached table shows the number of deaths by sex and age group that were certified as due to alcohol abuse, dependence and poisoning, and diseases directly related to alcohol use from 1997 to 2003.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) definition of alcohol-related deaths only includes those causes regarded as being most directly due to alcohol consumption. Apart from deaths due to accidental poisoning with alcohol, this definition excludes external causes of death, such as road traffic deaths and other accidents, and alcohol-related suicides and homicides. Estimates of the annual total number of deaths in which alcohol has played a role can therefore vary widely depending on the criteria used. The definition used by ONS allows for consistent comparisons over time for those deaths where a clear association with alcohol consumption can generally be assumed.

[1] For the years 1997–2000 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9). The codes selected to define alcohol-related deaths are listed as follows:

291—Alcoholic psychoses

303—Alcohol dependence syndrome

305.0—Non-dependent abuse of alcohol

425.5—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy

571—Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis

E860—Accidental poisoning by alcohol

For the years 2001–2003 the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) was used. To maintain comparability with earlier years the following codes were selected:

F10—Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol

142.6—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy

K70—Alcoholic liver disease

K73—Chronic hepatitis, not elsewhere classified

K74—Fibrosis and cirrhosis of liver

X45—Accidental poisoning by and exposure to alcohol

The selection of codes to define alcohol-related deaths is described in:

Baker A. and Rooney C. (2003). Recent trends in alcohol-related mortality, and the impact of ICD-10 on the monitoring of these deaths in England and Wales. Health Statistics Quarterly 17, pp 5–14.

Censuses

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action was taken by Ministers in his Department to establish that the Registrar General had statutory authority to state that personal information from the 1981 and 1991 decennial population censuses for England and Wales would be retained in his Department for 100 years before being released. [221179]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Taylor, dated 14 March 2005:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what action was taken by Ministers to establish that the Registrar General had statutory authority to state that personal information from the 1981 and 1991 decennial population censuses for England and Wales would be retained for 100 years before being released. (221179)

A Registrar General is empowered to conduct a census under the provisions of the Census Act 1920 as amended by the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991. The protection of personal information is covered by Section 8(2), which makes provisions with respect to unlawful disclosure of information. Censuses from 1921 onwards have been taken under this Act and, as records which are retained in my custody, remain covered by these provisions. The necessary permission to retain these census records once they are over 30 years old has been granted by the Lord Chancellor under the provisions of Section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958, and has continued to be granted at periodic intervals.

Particularly at the time of a census there is great public concern about confidentiality and the use to which personal census information is put, and it has been the practice to give strong declarations of strict confidentiality including on the front of the census form, to allay these concerns. At the time of the 1981 and the 1991 Censuses, there was legislation in force that closed Census records for a period of 100 years. This legislation was Instrument 12 dated 1966 made under the provision of Section 5(1) of the Public Records Act 1958. The declarations however, did not specifically make reference to this legislation.

In an attempt to simplify the confidentiality message on the front of the 1981 and the 1991 Census forms, the assurances, as worded, stated that the Registrar General had authority himself to retain the records for 100 years. This pledge asserts authority that the Registrar General does not have. As explained above the authority for the Registrar General to retain Census records rests with the Lord Chancellor. Notwithstanding this, the legal basis of access to, and confidentiality of, Census records was not affected. Assurances given on the 2001 Census form, however, more accurately referred to the relevant statutory authority as existed at the time.

Central Government Staffing

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects of central Government staffing levels on the level of taxation. [221476]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 10 March 2005, Official Report, column 1949W, to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess).

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221119]

Mr. Timms: No such directions have been issued by Treasury Ministers since 1997. The Treasury, which has a wider policy responsibility for the financial accountability mechanisms under which such directions are issued, has not been notified of any directions by Ministers in Departments to their Accounting Officers beyond those already disclosed to Parliament in the following written answers:

The former Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Andrew Smith) on 23 October 2000, Official Report, columns 73–74W and 8 May 2002, Official Report, columns 253–54W; myself on 10 June 2002, Official Report, column 1037W; the Economic Secretary (John Healey) on 13 January 2003, Official Report, column 412W and 23 June 2003, Official Report, columns 618–19W; and the former Financial Secretary (Ruth Kelly) on 30 October 2003, Official Report, columns 319–320W and 24 March 2004, Official Report, column 841W.

The circumstances in which an Accounting Officer should seek a direction from a Minister before authorising expenditure are set out in paragraphs 15–18 of the Treasury document, "The Responsibilities of an Accounting Officer" (as updated in March 2004). This document is published as Annex 4.1 of the Treasury guidance, Government Accounting and is accessible at www.government-accounting.gov.uk.

Dothiepin Deaths

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths have occurred in each of the last 10 years in which death certificates cited Dothiepin as a possible cause. [221628]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 14 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many deaths have occurred in each of the last 10 years in which death certificates cited dothiepin as a possible cause. (221628)

Double Trust Schemes

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his proposals for excluding tax on the associated gifts made in double trust schemes. [221189]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to my ministerial statement of 8 March 2005, Official Report, column 103–04WS, outlining the relief we propose to allow against double tax charges on such schemes.

Employment

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people on average were in employment in each parliamentary constituency (a) in 1997 and (b) on the latest date for which figures are available, ranked according to the change over the period. [221427]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 14 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment in each Parliamentary Constituency in UK. (221427)

Since the information requested is so extensive, copies have been placed in the House of Commons Library. The information provided shows the estimates of the number of people in employment, in each Parliamentary Constituency of Great Britain in 1997 and 2004, ranked according to the greatest change in employment over the period. These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Similar information for Parliamentary Constituencies in Northern Ireland is not available.

European Union

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) net and (b) gross contributions by the UK to the EU in each year since 1975, in pounds sterling at 2005 value; and if he will break down the contributions by (i) traditional own resources, (ii) VAT and (iii) GNI contributions. [221229]

Mr. Timms: A breakdown of contributions by category, including the UK abatement, in real prices, is published in the Government's Annual Reports on EC Finances, latest edition published in April 2004 (Cm 6134). We do not have this information in constant prices, or going back to 1975.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the operation of the UK budget rebate mechanism within the EU budget. [221231]

Mr. Timms: The European Commission Allocated Expenditure Report for 2003 (September 2004) indicates the UK's share of receipts by percentage GNI was the lowest of all member states. As a result of continued inefficiencies and inequalities on the expenditure side of the budget, and the resulting unfairness of the UK position the abatement remains fully justified and not up for negotiation.

The operation of the abatement is explained on page 26 of European Community Finances: Statement on the 2004 EC Budget (Cm 6134), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Medical Drug Deaths

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths have occurred in each of the last 10 years in which death certificates cited as a possible cause (a) co-proxamol, (b) paracetamol, (c) non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs, (d) selective serotonin re-uptake inhibitors, (e) codeine, (d) Cox 11 inhibitors and (f) cerivastatin. [221368]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 14 March 2005:

Readily available figures relate to deaths where the underlying cause was drug poisoning. The most recently available information is for deaths in 2003. Figures are shown in the attached table for the calendar years 1994 to 2003.

Figures on deaths where an adverse reaction to a drug taken in therapeutic dosage was involved, are not included in the table below as these are not poisonings. Figures on these deaths are not readily available and are known to be under-reported until the adverse reaction is well known. Adverse reactions to drugs are reported to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency using the yellow card scheme.

Paper Currency

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average lifespan is of UK paper currency, broken down by denomination. [221384]

Mr. Timms: The life of a Bank of England banknote in normal circulation averages between 12 to 18 months for the £5; three to four years for the £10 and £20; and over five years for the £50.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax can be reclaimed by people aged (a) between 16 and 64, (b) between 65 and 74 and (c) over 75 years, when contributing to stakeholder pensions; and if he will make a statement. [221688]

Dawn Primarolo: Tax relief is given on contributions to approved stakeholder pension schemes up to the higher of £3,600 a year or a percentage of capped earnings (the earnings cap for 2004–05 being £102,000). Earnings above this amount cannot be pensioned through a tax approved stakeholder pension scheme. Tax relief is given at the basic rate of tax (currently 22 per cent.) on tax relievable contributions paid by the scheme member. Where an individual is liable to tax at higher rate, additional relief of 18 per cent. may be obtained.

The maximum tax relievable contributions, expressed as a percentage of capped earnings, depends on an individual's age on the 6 April of the tax year concerned.

(a) For those under 36 it is 17.5 per cent.,

(b) From 36 to 45 it is 20 per cent.,

(c) From 46 to 50 it is 25 per cent.,

(d) From 51 to 55 it is 30 per cent.,

(e) From 56 to 60 it is 35 per cent., and

(f) From 61 to 74 it is 40 per cent.

No further contributions can be made once the member reaches the age of 75.

Stamp Duty

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2005, Official Report, column 1519W, on stamp duty, if he will estimate the revenue impact for the UK; for what reasons a reliable estimate cannot be made for countries and regions of the UK; and if he will make a statement. [221394]

Mr. Timms: The cost of raising the stamp duty threshold for residential properties to £100,000, £120,000 and £150,000 in each of the next five years is estimated for the UK in the following table:

Projections are based on the number and value of residential and commercial transactions, derived from the Survey of Property Transactions in England and Wales, projected to the required year, in line with the pre-Budget 2004 forecast for price and volume trends. By comparing UK stamp duty receipts with England and Wales survey estimates in historic years it is possible to derive projections for the UK. However forecast trends for price and volume are not produced for countries and regions of the UK to enable production of reliable stamp duty projections at the sub UK level.

John Thurso: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the qualifying areas for stamp duty relief in disadvantaged areas in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [221008]

John Healey: We have no plans to change the qualifying areas for stamp duty land tax disadvantaged areas relief before the end of 2006.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) in how many cases where a TC846 has been returned requesting the Inland Revenue to reconsider its decision to recover tax credits had the earnings of one of the partners been omitted from the tax credit award in (a) 2003–04 and (b) the current tax year; [221097]

(2) in how many cases where a tax credit case has been calculated and paid out manually has the claimant been overpaid as a result of the computer system automatically sending out any arrears due. [221098]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested.

Unemployment (Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of people were (a) long-term unemployed and (b) long-term youth unemployed in each constituency in Wales in each of the last 20 years. [219894]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 4 March 2005]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 14 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about long-term unemployment. (219894)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) following International Labour Organisation definitions. Tables 1 and 2 attached below, show, for those resident in each Parliamentary Constituency in Wales, the numbers and rates for long-term unemployment, and long-term youth unemployment. Long-term is classified as those unemployed for 12 months or more. The data are for the twelve-month periods ending from February 1999 to February 2004. Comparable information for earlier years is not available. As with any statistical sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to sampling variability.

ONS also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for local areas. For the years 1996 to 2004, Tables 3 and 4 show, respectively for all JSA claimants and those aged 18–24, the annual average numbers and percentages of claimants resident in each Parliamentary Constituency in Wales claiming for over 12 months. Comparable information for the years 1984 to 1995 is not available for Parliamentary Constituencies in Wales according to their present boundaries. Information for these years for the Constituencies, according to their boundaries as they were from 1984 to 1995, could be compiled, but only at disproportionate cost. The information needed to produce those estimates is accessible by the House of Commons Library via the Nomis system.

Since the information in Tables 1 to 4 is so extensive, copies have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Africa (Departmental Groups)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been allocated to support the work of cross-departmental groups working on Africa-related issues in each of the last five years; how many members of staff were supporting this work in each year; and if he will make a statement. [219415]

Mr. Rammell: There are three formal cross-departmental bodies working on Africa related issues: Africa Conflict Prevention Pool (ACPP), Sudan Unit (SU), and the Post-Conflict Reconstruction Unit (PCRU). The creation of the PCRU was announced last September but it has not yet reached the point of doing any specifically Africa related work. The following table shows the resources and staff allocated to support the work of these teams since their inception.

	ACPP		SU
	£ million	Staff	£ million	Staff
2001–02	50	1
2002–03	50	1	18	5
2003–04	50	0	23	10
2004–05	60	3	94	22

Arms Sales

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on UK arms sales to (a) Somalia, (b) Iran, (c) Lebanon, (d) Zambia, (e) Uzbekistan, (f) Yemen and (g) Syria referred to in OJ C316 of volume 47 of 21 December 2004. [211373]

Mr. MacShane: Details of UK arms sales can be found in the Government's most recent Strategic Export Controls Annual Report, published on 7 June 2004. It covers all export licensing decisions and policy developments in 2003. Information covering the first three quarters of 2004 is published in the Strategic Export Controls Quarterly Reports. All reports and further information on our work in this area can be found on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at www.fco.gov.uk, including full details of sanction regimes, embargoes and restrictions on the export of strategic goods.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what scope the UK Government have under the proposed constitutional treaty for the European Union to opt out of EU policies which have as their treaty base title IV of the TEC, with particular reference to scope to opt out of the ongoing development of European asylum and migration policy. [220276]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Title IV of the EC treaty covers measures on visas, asylum, immigration and other policies related to free movement of persons. The UK's policy on participation in these measures remains unchanged since 1999 when the treaty of Amsterdam, including our opt-in protocol, came into effect. The UK's rights in this area are not restricted by the proposed constitutional treaty for the European Union: protocol 19 to the treaty retains our right to opt in to, or stay out of, these measures. Where measures are in our interest, we will opt in. Where they do not benefit the UK, we do not participate. We have successfully used our opt-in for over five years, and we will continue to do so.

Burma

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he had with the government of Burma, regarding the detention and treatment of Dr. Than Nyein, an elected Member of Parliament. [221015]

Mr. Alexander: We have not made representations about this particular case.

I met the Burmese ambassador on 29 November and called for the release of all political prisoners in Burma. My statement on 30 November also called for their release. A copy of the statement is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth website: www.fco.gov.uk/policy/news/press-releases.

An EU statement, issued before the National Convention reconvened on 17 February, called for the release of all political prisoners. The EU raised these, and other concerns, during the EU/Association of South East Asian Nations Ministerial in Jakarta on 9–10 March.

In January, our ambassador in Rangoon wrote to the Burmese Foreign Minister to highlight the serious concerns expressed by members of both Houses on human rights abuses in Burma.

We hold the Burmese regime responsible for the health of all political prisoners in Burma.

China

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he has made representations to the Chinese authorities on why people were detained on 7 March by the Chinese authorities; and if he will make a statement; [221317]

(2) what reports he has received on (a) the number and (b) the age of people detained by the Chinese authorities on 7 March in Tiananmen Square; and if he will make a statement. [221451]

Mr. Straw: We are aware of reports that up to 20 people, including some children, were detained after holding a protest on Tiananmen Square on 7 March during the annual session of the National People's Congress.

We regularly raise concerns about freedom of association with the Chinese authorities. We did so most recently during the last round of the UK/China human rights dialogue, held in Beijing on 22 November 2004.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman (Manchester, Gorton): To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, when he will reply to the letter dated 1 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Sohail Khalid Dar. [221913]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. Friend will reply shortly.

Departmental Equipment

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many items of Civil Service property within his Department are unaccounted for, broken down by type. [205582]

Mr. Rammell: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in replying, and refer him to the reply I gave him on 24 February 2005, Official Report, column 815W.

Diego Garcia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what inspections are made by British officials of the passengers on US ships and aircraft making use of Diego Garcia. [221342]

Mr. Rammell: All ships, aircraft and personnel entering or departing Diego Garcia (including its waters) are subject to inspection by British Indian Ocean Territory (BIOT) Imports and Exports Control officers and must present passports and immigration documentation to BIOT Immigration Officers.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British officials are in permanent residence in Diego Garcia; and what their responsibilities are. [221343]

Mr. Rammell: There are no British officials in permanent residence on Diego Garcia. There are 40 British military personnel stationed on the island, where they usually serve for a period of one year. Their responsibilities are as follows:

One Royal Navy Commander—Commissioners Representative, Magistrate, Principal Immigration Officer, Imports and Exports Control Officer, Coroner, Postmaster

One Royal Marine Major—Deputy Representative (and deputy to all the above) Public Prosecutor, Fisheries Officer

One Royal Marine Captain—military remit only

10 British Indian Ocean Territory (BIOT) Peace Officers—to enforce BIOT civilian law

14 Imports and Exports Control Officers/Immigration Officers

Two Administration staff

11 Security staff—military remit only

All 40 are military staff and have a military remit in addition to the civilian roles above.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he receives from British officials on the use made by US forces and officials of facilities on Diego Garcia. [221344]

Mr. Rammell: The UK and US hold annual talks to discuss issues relating to Diego Garcia. In addition, my officials are in regular contact with US officials in London, Washington and Diego Garcia.

European Constitution

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1380W, on the European Constitution, if he will bring forward proposals for a mechanism to give the Scottish Parliament and other devolved bodies a role under this protocol regarding measures that are (a) devolved and (b) wholly or largely relating to Scotland, Wales or Northern Ireland; if he will make it his policy to allow devolved bodies, singularly or collectively, to determine one of the UK votes in these circumstances; and what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive on the operation of the protocol. [221399]

Mr. MacShane: The Government have had discussions with the devolved administrations about the possible operation of Protocol 2 of the EU Constitutional Treaty should it be approved. Article 6 of that Protocol states that "It will be for each national Parliament or each chamber of a national Parliament to consult, where appropriate, regional parliaments with legislative powers".

The nature and extent of that consultation is for national Parliaments to decide, although the Government believe it would be desirable for views of devolved legislatures to be taken into account. It is the Government's view that for the purposes of this Article the UK national Parliament constitutes the House of Commons and the House of Lords.

Gibraltar

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the British military presence in Gibraltar. [221385]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 340W.

Grievance Procedures

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures govern the investigation of grievances by senior civil servants within his Department; and if he will make a statement. [221031]

Mr. Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's grievance procedures apply to all staff and comply with best practice guidelines and the requirements of the Employment Act 2002 (Dispute Resolution) Regulations 2004. Staff are encouraged to attempt to resolve a grievance informally. If this approach fails, there is a three-stage process for investigating the concern either through line management or Human Resources. We have placed a copy of our Grievance procedures in the Library of the House.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date Her Majesty's High Commission, Islamabad, sent the papers on the application for settlement of Mrs. S., wife of Mr. I.U.R., of Aylesbury (ISB/750278) to the Independent Appeal Authority. [221714]

Mr. Mullin: The papers were sent from the visa section at our High Commission in Islamabad to the Appeals Processing Centre (APC) at the Home Office on 30 October 2004. The APC are responsible for sending the papers forward to the Immigration Appellate Authority.

Intelligence Gathering

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1712W, on intelligence gathering, on how many occasions in the last year his Department has used information obtained by the use of torture in another country. [218763]

Mr. Straw: I again refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 11 January 2005, Official Report, column 413W. I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence gave him on 7 February 2005, Official Report, column 1257W.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the individuals detained in Iraq by coalition forces because of alleged connection with weapons of mass destruction programmes; how long each has been detained; when they are expected to be released; and if he will make a statement. [215145]

Mr. Rammell: The Multi-National Force (MNF) has the power to intern individuals for imperative reasons of security in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1546 and the annexed exchange of letters between Prime Minister Allawi and the then US Secretary of State Colin Powell.

Each case of detention is regularly reviewed by the detaining power and a decision taken on whether continued detention is necessary. While the reasons for these decisions are recorded, they have not been collated in a form that would enable us to answer this question on behalf of all multi-national forces. We would not, as a matter of policy, in any case release the names of those who had been detained so as to respect their privacy and to ensure there were no security repercussions for them.

We can, however, confirm that the United Kingdom is not detaining any individuals in Iraq on the basis of alleged connection with weapons of mass destruction programmes.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Iraqi Administration on holding new elections in (a) ChaldoAssyrian areas and (b) other parts of northern Iraq where problems with the delivery of ballot boxes may have occurred; and if he will make a statement. [220433]

Mr. Rammell: We are aware of the allegations of voting irregularities. A complaint was submitted to the Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq (IECI), the only body competent to investigate alleged irregularities in the 30 January elections. The IECI is in the process of investigating all official complaints they have received. Once their investigations are completed, the IECI will write to each complainant and publish a report detailing their findings and the action they intend to take.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) of 1 March 2005, Official Report, column 1052W, if he will publish the letters from Dr. Rod Barton of the Iraq Survey Group to which reference is made. [221027]

Mr. MacShane: Dr. Barton's letters, to which he drew attention in a television documentary programme broadcast by the Australian Broadcasting Corporation (ABC), were addressed to the Australian authorities. It is a matter for them to determine whether they should be published.

The transcript of the documentary programme, and some of the papers relating to Dr. Barton's allegations, are available on the ABC website at www.abc.net.au/4corners.

Lisbon Agenda

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of the Lisbon agenda to date. [220297]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to numerous Government publications on the Lisbon Agenda, including the Treasury's 2004 and 2005 Progress Reports, which are available in the Library of the House, the Commission's 2005 Spring Report (http://europa.eu.int/growthandjobs/) and former Dutch Prime Minister Wim Kok's High Level Group report on Lisbon progress also available in the Library of the House.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the implementation of the Lisbon agenda; what the Government's priorities are in relation to the Lisbon agenda; and what the new arrangements are for the governance of the Lisbon strategy. [220341]

Mr. MacShane: The Government strongly support the Commission's focus on "jobs and growth", as the immediate Lisbon reform priorities and the best way to boost prosperity and living standards for all (Commission Spring Report, launched on 2 February, http://www.europa.eu.int/growthandjobs/). As the former Dutch Prime Minister, Wim Kok, noted in his Lisbon report to EU heads in November "Lisbon's direction is right and imperative, but much urgency is needed in its implementation". The Commission has identified urgent reforms and proposed a strengthened system of governance—National Growth and Employment Action Plans—to accelerate and increase political ownership of the reform process. These proposals will be discussed at the March European Council.

Middle East

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what payments the Government have made to (a) Turkey, (b) Syria, (c) Jordan, (d) Israel and (e) Egypt in each of the last three years; for what purposes; and if he will make a statement. [218891]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 10 March 2005]: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken since 2001 to improve specialisation within his Department in the Middle East; and if he will make a statement. [218892]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has long had a cadre of staff with expertise in the Middle East region, both specialist analysts and diplomatic staff with regional expertise and regional language skills. Since 2001 the FCO has maintained this cadre, and continued to develop staff with these specialisations. The figures for Arabic speaker positions in the Gulf region show a 10 per cent. increase between 1999 (40 positions) and 2004 (44 positions). As at November 2004 there were 49 trainees undergoing Arabic language training.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list how many country specialists for each of the Persian Gulf states there have been in his Department in each of the last 10 years. [218893]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 10 March 2005]: British diplomatic staff in each of the Gulf states are listed in the diplomatic service overseas reference list. Back-copies of this should be available through the Library of the House.

It is not possible to identify exactly the number of country specialists working in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London on states bordering the Persian Gulf over the past 10 years, but the total number of staff working in London on these states in the Arabian Peninsula and Iran Group (and its predecessor, the Middle East Department) and in the Research Analysts Department has normally been around 20.

Oil for Food Programme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department gave evidence to the Volcker investigation into the Iraq Oil for Food scandal. [220823]

Mr. Rammell: The Government fully support the work of the Independent Inquiry Committee (IIC) led by Paul Volcker set up by the UN Secretary-General to investigate the administration and management of the Oil for Food Programme. The Government is co-operating fully with the IIC's investigations and to date nine former or serving Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) officials have given evidence. We have also released hundreds of FCO documents requested by the IIC and continue to review our records for further documents of relevance to their investigations.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations his Department is undertaking into (a) the Iraq Oil for Food scandal and (b) illegal oil movements from that country prior to and following the invasion in 2003. [220825]

Mr. Rammell: The Government continue to study carefully the interim report published on 3 February by the Independent Inquiry Committee (IIC) set up by the UN Secretary-General to investigate the administration and management of the Oil for Food Programme. We take very seriously all allegations of wrongdoing under the programme and are co-operating fully with the IIC's investigations. It would be inappropriate to comment on the allegations of corruption surrounding the Programme or oil smuggling outside of the Programme until the IIC has completed its investigations. We will pass on any information received concerning possible wrongdoing by UK entities to the relevant UK authorities for investigation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether British companies were implicated in (a) the Iraq Oil for Food scandal and (b) illegal oil movements from Iraq prior to the invasion in 2003. [220927]

Mr. Rammell: The involvement of some 3,500 companies—including UK companies—in the Oil for Food Programme will be the subject of a future report of the Independent Inquiry Committee (IIC) set up by the UN Secretary-General to investigate the administration and management of the programme. It would be inappropriate to speculate on the nature of UK companies' involvement in the programme until the IIC has completed its investigations. The Government take very seriously all allegations of corruption surrounding the Oil for Food Programme. Any information we receive concerning possible wrongdoing by UK entities will be passed to the relevant UK authorities for investigation.

Project Coast

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests the Government have received from South Africa for information relating to Porton Down's involvement with scientists associated with the biological warfare programme of the former Apartheid Government and Project Coast, with particular reference to Dr. Wouter Basson; and if he will make a statement. [219402]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The present Government have no record of any such requests from the South African Government.

Rajasthan State

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indian Government concerning the attacks in February on Christian students in Kota, Rajasthan State, by activists from militant Hindu groups. [220910]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 9 March 2005]: We have not raised this specific incident with the Indian authorities, but we continue as a matter of course to raise our concerns with them about religious intolerance in India, including attacks against Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs and Christians. We will continue to urge the Indian authorities to ensure the right to freedom of religion enshrined in its constitution is upheld, and that those responsible for attacks against people because of their religion are brought to justice. We will remind them that the UK Government condemn the persecution of individuals or groups because of their religion or beliefs. The UK Government believe that the democratic process in India is the best protection for a peaceful and secure country. We appreciate the remarks by Dr. Manmohan Singh in his first press conference as Prime Minister, when he said

> "We are the most tolerant civilisation and we cannot divide people on the basis of religion and race."

Sudan

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press the UN Security Council to refer the situation in the Sudan, including Darfur, to the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court in accordance with Article 13*(b)* of the Rome Statute. [220778]

Mr. Rammell: Our preference is for the situation in Darfur to be referred to the International Criminal Court (ICC), as recommended by the International Commission of Inquiry. Since Sudan is not a State Party to the ICC Statute, and is unlikely to refer the situation to the Court, a decision by the Security Council will be required.

Turkey

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to encourage Turkey to remove trade barriers for ceramic goods; and if he will make a statement. [220542]

Mr. MacShane: The European Commission successfully lobbied the Turkish authorities last year to remove the requirement for a conformity assessment on imported ceramic tableware goods. The British Embassy in Ankara has also assisted a number of British companies who have experienced difficulties in exporting ceramic goods to Turkey. The Embassy continues to monitor any cases brought to its attention by British firms and will, if a problem cannot be resolved, ask the Commission to raise the issue with the Turkish authorities.

Ukraine

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what special restrictions are in place on the issue of visas to visitors from Ukraine. [221286]

Mr. Mullin: There are no special restrictions placed on the issue of visas to visitors from the Ukraine. All applications for entry to the UK as visitors are considered under the Immigration Rules.

The visa section aims to provide a same-day service for straightforward applications.

UN Human Rights Commission

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what UK representatives will attend the 2005 meeting of the UN Human Rights Commission; and what consultation he will undertake with non-governmental groups that have recognised UN status in advance of the meeting; [203130]

(2) who the UK representative will be at the forthcoming UN Human Rights Commission; and what statement will be presented by the UK Government. [210767]

Mr. Rammell: Officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Human Rights, Democracy and Governance Group in London, and from our missions in New York and Geneva, will form the UK delegation to the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) from 14 March-22 April. I plan to attend and address the High Level Segment in the first week—it is too early to give details of what the statement will cover.

In terms of NGO involvement, I am pleased to say that I am planning to take an NGO representative with me when I visit Geneva to address the High Level Segment. I hope this will further strengthen links between our work and that of the NGO community. I also host a regular pre-CHR NGO forum, which took place this year on 9 February, where NGOs can discuss priorities and policy on the range of resolutions with myself and the officials who will form our delegation at the Commission. We, and I believe the NGOs, find this an invaluable exercise in sharing views and informing our preparations for the Commission. Our mission in Geneva also has regular contacts with the NGO community there during the course of the Commission.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Uzbekistan's human rights record. [220595]

Mr. Mullin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Bill Rammell) gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 7 March 2005, Official Report, column 1582W.

Yemen

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet the hon. Member for Leicester, East to discuss the closure of the British consulate in Aden. [220098]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. and noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean, Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the Middle East, would be pleased to discuss this with my hon. Friend. I have asked that her office arrange a suitable date.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of reports of (a) government harassment of journalists in Zimbabwe and (b) the raiding of the offices of journalists Jan Raath and Brain Latham; [220217]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Zimbabwe about freedom of the press. [220218]

Mr. Mullin: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) on 1 March 2005, Official Report, column 801. As regards the latest harassment of journalists, we see this as further evidence of a climate of intimidation that makes the prospect of a free election unlikely.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Application Forms

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how benefit application forms are made available; and what the cost is of each method. [217478]

Mr. Pond: Application forms are widely available for the benefits administered by the Department for Work and Pensions in a variety of formats.

The Pension Service is now primarily a telephone-based service and the main method for making applications for state pension and pension credit is by telephone. Staff complete application forms based on information provided by customers over the telephone and completed forms are then sent to customers to check, sign and return.

This method is also available for benefits administered by Jobcentre Plus and The Disability and Carers Service. This service is also available in Welsh and in a Braille/large print version. For other languages customers can use Language Line which enables applications to be taken via a telephone interpreting service, in up to 150 languages, to customers whose first language is not English.

Paper application forms, in either English or Welsh, can be issued on request. These forms are available to the public from the departmental outlets of Jobcentre Plus offices, Social Security offices, Contact Centres, Local Service outlets of The Pension Service and from organisations such as Citizens Advice Bureaux, medical centres, MPs' surgeries, hospitals/hospices and social services.

Information on the cost of making application forms available by the various methods is not available separately.

Benefit Offices (Weymouth)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans have been made for the future operation of benefits offices in Weymouth, with particular reference to (a) opening hours to members of the public, (b) the level of staffing and (c) the number of social security customers who would be expected to be affected by any changes; and if he will make a statement. [221161]

Mr. Pond: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Stephen O'Brien, dated 14 March 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about what plans have been made for the future operation of benefits offices in Weymouth, with particular reference to (a) opening hours to members of the public, (b) the level of staffing and (c) the number of Social Security customers who would be expected to be affected by any change. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Following rollout of Jobcentre Plus in Dorset, Weymouth Jobcentre and Weymouth Social Security office were amalgamated into Weymouth Jobcentre Plus. This is now the only benefit office in Weymouth. The table below contains full details of the office opening hours, and there are no plans to change them.

Opening times for the Weymouth Jobcentre Plus office

Weymouth office	Opening time	Closing time
Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday	9.00 am	5.00 pm
Wednesday	10.00 am	5.00 pm

The District Manager for Dorset and Somerset is currently awaiting a final calculation of resource allocations before deciding how the resources should be allocated across the district, but we do know that efficiency savings will mean a reduction of staffing levels in the Weymouth office.

Weymouth Jobcentre Plus currently deals with both frontline enquiries from benefit customers and benefit processing. Nationally there are plans in place to brigade benefit processing into a reduced number of sites. Although Weymouth Jobcentre Plus will not be processing benefit claims in the future, a final date for the transfer of this work and where it will be located, is yet to be decided.

Under Jobcentre Plus operations, claims to Jobseeker's Allowance, Income Support or Incapacity Benefit usually start with a telephone call to the Contact Centre. Weymouth Jobcentre Plus has the facility for all visiting customers to use telephony linked direct to the Contact Centre in Poole. After obtaining initial details about the customer the Contact Centre arrange to call them back to complete a claim for benefit. They also arrange an appointment for the customer to attend their local Jobcentre Plus office to see both a Financial Assessor and a Personal Adviser. For Weymouth customers this is the Weymouth Jobcentre Plus office.

Although it is anticipated that benefit processing will be moved from Weymouth Jobcentre Plus, the movement of this work will not affect the processes currently in place.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefits

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what financial help is available to applicants for (a) income support, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) jobseeker's allowance between the date of application and the conclusion of a work-focused benefit interview. [212302]

Mr. Pond: A customer for any of these benefits may express a need for immediate financial help any time during the new-claim process. The action to take will depend upon what stage the request is made.

Where a benefit claim has been assessed and payment of benefit is due, the payment is issued immediately.

If the request is made at First Contact Stage, wherever possible, an urgent appointment (preferably the same day) is made with the Financial Assessor and Personal Adviser to complete the claim process and allow any payment due to be released.

If an immediate appointment cannot be booked or the benefit claim cannot be assessed, because for example information is outstanding, an interim payment is considered. An interim payment is a payment on account of benefit and is considered when, from the information provided already, it appears the customer may be entitled to benefit but it is not possible to fully assess the claim immediately.

Where a benefit claim has been assessed, but it is established the first payment is not due immediately, then consideration can be given to a Social Fund Crisis Loan.

Dunley Jobcentre

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) when the decision was made to bring forward the announcement of the planned closure of Dunley Jobcentre; what interim arrangements are being put in place; and what contracts are being negotiated with Gloucestershire city council on access to IT facilities in the new library; [220652]

(2) what redeployment of staff is being undertaken regarding the planned closure of the Dunley Jobcentre; and whether the provision of a continuing staff presence in Dunley was considered. [220653]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. David Drew, dated 14 March 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the planned closure of Dursley Jobcentre. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It may be helpful if I explain that on 22 October 2004 we wrote to our stakeholders to inform them that Dursley Jobcentre had been earmarked for closure, providing the reasons why and inviting views from stakeholders. As a result of the consultation exercise, the final decision concerning the closure of Dursley Jobcentre was made in February 2005 and the office will close on 31 March. The communication of this decision began on 4 March via a press release, then in writing to Jobcentre Plus customers and other stakeholders. At no time between October 2004 and February 2005 did we confirm the closure of Dursley Jobcentre and therefore our announcement was not brought forward.

Jobcentre Plus is currently in local negotiations with Gloucestershire County Council for provision of a Flexible Service Delivery (FSD) option in Dursley Library. This negotiation has not yet been concluded as the Local Authority are considering the terms of the formal written agreement proposed by Jobcentre Plus. The FSD option includes the provision of a free telephone link and the use of the Library Internet services. Interim arrangements have been made to provide a limited service to customers from the existing Jobcentre site on one day per week until the FSD option is in place and fully operational.

Jobcentre Plus has taken every appropriate step in redeploying staff affected by the closure of Dursley Jobcentre. There are currently two staff members who have yet to agree a permanent alternative. The provision of a continuing staff presence in Dursley was fully considered in light of stakeholder feedback.

It is important to remember that the shape of the network in future is in response to the changing business need. Increasingly we will be delivering our services through the premises of our partners and siting facilities such as touch-screen Jobpoints or free telephone access in local public buildings. The need for face-to-face facilities for jobsearch and other aspects of our business has been superseded in many instances by different business processes and the use of information technology. For example, over the last 12 months we have seen an increase of over 40 per cent. in the number of hits on our jobsearch web-site.

EU Councils

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the outcome was of the Employment and Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council on 3 March; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [220826]

Mr. Pond: I represented the UK at the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council in Brussels on 3 March 2005.

The main focus of business was preparation towards the Spring European Council. This took the form of a policy debate, based on a Presidency questionnaire and a Key Issues paper from the Employment and Social Protection Committees (EMCO and SPC), to finalise the ESPHCA Council's contribution to the Spring Council.

Commissioner Spidla summarised the Commission's position, to set growth and employment at the heart of the revision of the Lisbon strategy.

For the UK, I stressed that there was no conflict between the economic and social agendas. On the contrary, a focus on employment should be seen as an affirmation of Europe's commitment to its social goals, as without growth social policies might not be sustainable.

The Key Messages paper was adopted for transmission to the Spring European Council.

The Presidency presented an information note on Working Time outlining the current positions of the member states. There was no debate on this point.

The Council agreed a partial general approach on a decision establishing the PROGRESS social spending programme, which would replace five existing social programmes from 2007. For the UK I maintained a parliamentary scrutiny reserve. A Council declaration explained that the partial agreement covered all articles except Article 17, on the budget and internal allocations between different strands of activity. The agreement could be re-opened in the light of the EP's opinion or agreement of the Financial Perspectives.

The Presidency informed the Council that it intends to hold a Tripartite Social Summit on the eve of the European Council to discuss the mid term review of the Lisbon agenda.

The Council also agreed a general approach on a regulation making routine miscellaneous amendments to social security co-ordination regulation 1408/71.

The Council also heard presentations on the work programmes of the Employment Committee and the Social Protection Committee (SPC) and a study by the SPC on private pensions.

The Council adopted without debate conclusions on the Social Aspects of Globalisation.

Fuel Direct

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of customers included in the Fuel Direct payment scheme in the last 10 years; and what the cost of operating the Fuel Direct payment system has been in each of the last 10 years. [221331]

Mr. Pond: Information regarding the cost of running the Fuel Direct scheme is not available. Information regarding the number of customers included in the scheme is in the following table.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the projects being undertaken by his Department in respect of which information cannot be given in answer to parliamentary questions as a result of commercial confidentiality. [216636]

Maria Eagle: The Department considers each request for information on an individual basis. Any decision not to release information relating to a project as a result of commercial confidentiality would be made on the basis of the specific request.

Pensioners

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on pensioners in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [219664]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Notes:
1. The information in the table provides benefit expenditure for pensioners in Great Britain.
2. Benefit expenditure in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Office and is not included in the above table.
3. Table consists of the expenditure on the main pensioner benefits: pension credit, winter fuel payments to all those 60 and over, retirement pension, disability living allowance and attendance allowance to people over state pension age, the over-80s payment.
4. Housing benefit and council tax benefit has been excluded from the table as the local authority level data cannot be broken down between pensioners and other recipients, and no information is available at constituency level.
5. Expenditure has been apportioned to pensioner groups using Quarterly Statistical Enquiry data for the relevant benefits, which is based on a 5 per cent. sample and therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Social Security Fraud

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of social security fraud were dealt with by officers in benefit offices in Weymouth in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [221159]

Mr. Pond: The information is in the following table.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many fraud officers he expects will be based in benefits offices in Weymouth in 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [221160]

Mr. Pond: There are currently five benefit fraud investigators based in benefit offices in Weymouth. Staffing levels for 2005–06 have not yet been decided.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the public service agreement target to reduce losses from fraud and error for people of working age in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 33 per cent. by 2004 was met. [220133]

Mr. Pond: Our tough action against fraud and error is paying off for the taxpayer. We have reduced fraud and error in income support and jobseeker's allowance by 37 per cent., exceeding the original target of 33 per cent. by March 2004.

This shows we are getting results in preventing, detecting and deterring fraud.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to improve children's communication, social and emotional development; [220135]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of whether the public service agreement target to ensure that 50 per cent. of children reach a good level of development at the end of Foundation Stage by 2008 will be met; [220136]

(3) what recent assessment he has made of whether the public service agreement target to increase the take-up of formal child care by lower income families by 50 per cent. by 2008 will be met; [220139]

(4) what recent assessment he has made of whether the Public Service Agreement target to introduce a successful light-touch child care approval scheme by April will be met. [220140]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Minister for Children, Young People and Families (Margaret Hodge) on 8 March 2005, Official Report, column 1784W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment he has made of whether the public service agreement target to increase the stock of Ofsted-registered child care by 10 per cent. by 2008 will be met. [220138]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Minister for Children, Young People and Families (Margaret Hodge) on 8 March 2005, Official Report, columns 1785–86W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target of full employment in every region. [220142]

Jane Kennedy: Since 1997, employment nationally has risen by over two million and the number of people in work is up in every region. While every region has an employment rate above the EU average, describing the labour market at regional level can be misleading as there is much greater variation within, rather than between, regions.

Around 90 per cent. of all local authority districts in Great Britain have an employment rate above the EU average, and a key element of the Government's labour market policies is improving the performance of the relatively small number of areas within each region where this is not the case.

Since 1997 claimant unemployment has halved, long-term unemployment has fallen by more than three quarters and the number of lone parents on benefit has fallen by a fifth. In addition, the number of people on incapacity benefits has peaked after two decades of substantial growth. The improvements have been greatest in the areas where, in 1997, benefit receipt was highest.

While this has moved us closer to the aim of full employment in every region, the Department's five year strategy set out the Government's long-term aspiration to achieve an employment rate equivalent to 80 per cent. of the working age population. This will mean continuing to focus on those who can get back into work, including people on incapacity benefits, lone parents, older people and the long-term unemployed.

Women's Employment

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what discussions the Ethnic Minority Employment Taskforce has had with the Equal Opportunities Commission on ensuring that research for the taskforce identifies issues specific to women's employment; [220801]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Equal Opportunities Commission on commissioning research into the factors affecting ethnic minority women entering and re-entering the labour market. [220834]

Jane Kennedy: The Taskforce recognises that addressing gender issues will be essential to the success of the ethnic minority employment strategy. Officials from the Department for Work and Pensions have had a number of discussions with the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) on issues affecting the employment of ethnic minority women. The EOC have submitted a research proposal on factors affecting the progression of ethnic minority women entering and re-entering the labour market and officials are currently considering the proposal in the context of the ethnic minority employment strategy.

I am meeting with the Chief Executive of the EOC on 16 March to discuss these issues further.

Work-focused Interviews

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the target time is for the holding of a work-focused benefit interview following the initial claim by an individual for income support, incapacity benefit or job seeker's allowance; and what the average time between the initial call and the interview being conducted was at the job centres in (a) Blandford,

(b) Bridport, (c) Christchurch, (d) Poole and (e) Wareham in the most recent period for which figures are available. [212339]

Mr. Pond [holding answer 3 March 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 14 March 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the target time for holding a Work Focused Interview (WFI) following an initial claim to Income Support, Incapacity Benefit or Jobseeker's Allowance, and the average time between the initial call and the interview being conducted at the Jobcentres in Blandford, Bridport, Christchurch, Poole, and Wareham. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Under Jobcentre Plus operations, a claim to Income Support, Incapacity Benefit or Jobseeker's Allowance usually starts with a telephone call to the Contact Centre. After obtaining initial details, Contact Centre staff call the customer back to obtain the necessary information to complete a claim to benefit. They also arrange an appointment for the customer to attend their local office to see both a Financial Assessor and a Personal Adviser.

At present Jobcentre Plus has separate targets for processing Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support and Incapacity Benefit. These are known as Actual Average Clearance Targets (AACT). The target for Jobseeker's Allowance is 12 days from the first contact with the Contact Centre and the processing of the claim. For Income Support the target is again 12 days however this commences from when a customer has provided all the necessary information to process the claim because Income Support claims are subject to the Evidence Requirement. Incapacity Benefit claims have a target of 22 days from the date of claim to the date of processing. The WFI stage is a component part of the process.

There is no current target for the holding of a WFI following the initial claim to benefit although it is our aim to conduct the interview within 5 days of initial contact. Unfortunately as there is no target the information you require on the performances of particular offices is not available.

As part of Jobcentre Plus' future performance measures, we are looking into the possibility of introducing an internal key performance indicator to measure the time between the customer's initial call and the WFI being conducted. This would be included in a suite of measures to manage the end to end process from when a customer makes contact with us to when they find work or are awarded benefit. A decision will be made on this later in the year.

I am sorry that I can't be more helpful.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Census Records

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Lord Chancellor has ever exercised a power or authority to apply Public Records Act Instrument No. 12 (1966) to decennial population census records for England and Wales that have been retained by the Registrar General and have not been deposited in the Public Record Office/National Archives. [221178]

Mr. Leslie: Instrument number 12 was signed by the Lord Chancellor in exercise of the power conferred on him under section 5(1) of the Public Records Act 1958. This section governed access to public records in the Public Record Office, now The National Archives, including decennial population records held there.

The Instrument did not cover those decennial census records held by the Registrar General, including those retained by him under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958, and from which the disclosure of information is protected by the provisions of section 8(2) of the Census Act 1920.

Magistrates/County Courts

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) magistrates and (b) county courts there have been in each of the last 20 years. [221406]

Mr. Leslie: (a) The provision of magistrates courthouses and the collection of statistics relating to the numbers of courthouses is a matter for each of the 42 Magistrates Courts Committees (MCCs). From 1 April 2005 Her Majesty's Court Service (HMCS) will take responsibility for the administration of all courts below the House of Lords. HMCS will be an executive agency of the Department of Constitutional Affairs (DCA). Since 2000, the DCA have collected the information in the table on the number of places used as magistrates courthouses:

	Number of magistrates courts[1]
2000	442
2001	413
2002	394
2003	390
2004	387
2005	387

[1] This includes occasional places used as courtrooms (e.g. where a "town hall" is used).

(b) Data and information on the number of county courts in each of the last 20 years is not available. However, data since 1989 is provided as follows.

	Number of county courts
1989	292
1990	291
1991	291
1992	290
1993	283

1998	233
1999	227
2000	225

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list the projects being undertaken by his Department in respect of which information cannot be given in answer to parliamentary questions as a result of commercial confidentiality. [216632]

Mr. Leslie: A decision not to release information relating to any project as a result of commercial confidentiality is made on the basis of the specific request made in each parliamentary question.

An assessment of commercial confidentiality may apply to specific element within a project as well as to an entire project. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Regional Offices

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what regional (a) bodies, (b) institutions, (c) taskforces, (d) panels, (e) offices and (f) organisations the Government have established since May 1997 which are the responsibility of his Department; [219910]

(2) which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) Executive agencies within the remit of his Department have regional offices based on the Government offices for the regions' regional structure; and when the regional offices were established in each case. [219915]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) is responsible for two organisations which have regional offices. The Legal Services Commission, a non-departmental public body, was established under the Access to Justice Act 1999, replacing the Legal Aid Board. From January 2000, it adjusted its regional boundaries so that in the main they matched those of the Government offices for the regions[1] regional structure in England. However, in addition to the North West (Manchester) Regional Office, they have a Merseyside Regional Office.

The Court Service is an Executive agency of the DCA, which from the 1 April 2005 will become part of a new agency, Her Majesty's Courts Service (HMCS). Both the current and future agencies are made up of seven regions, which match Government regions with the following exceptions. For business reasons, HMCS combines the following into single regions:

the east of England and south east Government regions, the north east and Yorkshire and the Humber Government regions;

the east and west Midlands;

Wales with Cheshire (which is in the north west region); and Hampshire with the south west (which is in the south east region).

Youth Defendants

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average time was from offence to completion for youth defendants in criminal cases coming before magistrates courts in each of the last three years. [221477]

Mr. Leslie: Average times for all youth defendants in all criminal cases, by stage of proceedings 2002 to 2004 are shown in the table as follows.

Average times for all youth defendants in all criminal cases, by stage of proceedings 2002 to 2004

Days

	Offence to charge or laying of information (Days)	Charge or laying of information to first listing	First listing to completion	[1]Offence to completion
2002	35	10	45	91
2003	36	11	46	92
2004	40	11	46	97

[1] The total in the Offence to completion column may not sum exactly the previous three columns, as each stage will have been rounded independently.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Emergency Evacuations

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on contingency plans for evacuating (a) Ascension Island, (b) St. Helena and (c) Tristan da Cunha in the event of an emergency. [220324]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

All three territories have disaster management plans. These include contingency plans for moving the populations to designated areas of safety, in an emergency. Depending on the severity of any emergency, the Governor, in consultation with the local legislature, and the UK Government, will consider whether an evacuation of the territory is appropriate.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Civil Servants

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many medical retirements there were in each (a) department, (b) agency, (c) non-departmental public body, (d) education and library board and (e) health and social services board in Northern Ireland in each of the last two financial years; and what proportion of all retirements that were medical retirements this represented in each case. [208580]

Mr. Pearson: The number of medical retirements and the proportion of all retirements that were medical retirements in each of the last two complete financial years i.e. 2002–03 and 2003–04 are outlined in the following tables, in respect of (i) the main Civil Service Pension Scheme, broken down by Department, Agency, non-departmental public body, (ii) the Health and Personal Social Services Pension Scheme (HPSS), broken down by health boards, and (iii) the Teachers Pension Scheme (Northern Ireland), broken down by education and library board, and (iv) all other non-departmental public bodies, has been placed in the Library.

Deaf People (Public Service Delivery)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what assessment he has made of the amount of training provided for civil servants in Northern Ireland to enable them to communicate with the deaf and hard of hearing; and how many civil servants in Northern Ireland are (a) trained and (b) undertaking training in sign language; [218663]

(2) what funding has been made available to enable civil servants in Northern Ireland to learn (a) British Sign Language and (b) International Sign Language to (i) Level 1 and (ii) Level 2 in each of the last five years; and what measures he is taking to encourage civil servants to undertake such training. [218664]

Mr. Pearson: Assessment of the amount of the amount of training required is made at the business level, in most cases by front-line managers, who are best placed to identify the need.

A record of the total number of staff with signing skills is not currently maintained. However, training records over the past three years (from 1 April 2002 to date) show that nine civil servants have been trained in British Sign Language, eight at Level 1 and one at Level 2. A further eight are currently undertaking training in British Sign Language, seven at Level 1 and one at Level 2. This training has been provided at a cost of £1,539 for Level 1 and £473 for Level 2. In addition to sign language training, 774 staff have received training in deaf awareness/introduction to sign language/ communication with the deaf and hard of hearing/use of text phones.

Funds are made available to meet identified need in a particular business area. When a need is identified, staff are encouraged to put themselves forward for the appropriate training.

This response includes the Northern Ireland Departments and their agencies and the Northern Ireland Office.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a communication audit has been conducted to assess the extent to which Government services are accessible to deaf people in Northern Ireland. [218850]

Angela Smith: A communication audit has not been conducted but several departments are working in partnership with representatives of the deaf community, to develop ideas for improving access to public services for sign language users.

Hyponatraemia-related Deaths

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether witnesses at the Inquiry into Hyponatraemia-related Deaths will be allowed to appear by video-link. [220658]

Angela Smith: This is a matter for John O'Hara QC, chairman of the inquiry. I understand, however, that the chairman intimated, in his opening remarks at the preliminary hearing held on 3 February 2005, that in certain circumstances he would consider the use of video-link evidence. A copy of the transcript of the hearing has been placed in the House Library.

Equality Commission

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much was spent on legal assistance by the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland in each of the last four years, broken down by section 75 group; [217670]

(2) how many requests for assistance were received by the Equality Commission, broken down by section 75 group; [217671]

(3) how much was spent by the Equality Commission on legal assistance in each of the last four years; and whether there was (a) an overspend and (b) an under spend against budget in each of those years. [217723]

Mr. Spellar: I understand that the Chief Executive of the Equality Commission has written to the hon. Gentleman.

Letter from the Chief Executive of the Equality Commission (Evelyn Collins) to Mr. Eddie McGrady.

As your Parliamentary Questions fall within the operational remit of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland, they have been forwarded to me for response.

Question 217670: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how much was spent on legal assistance by the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland in each of the last four years, broken down by section 75 group.

I would being by clarifying that under the legislation the Commission is only empowered to assist cases in the areas of sex discrimination, racial discrimination, religious belief and political opinion, disability and sexual orientation. It was in December 2003 that sexual orientation was added as a ground on which to base a complaint of discrimination and, consequently, does not appear in the figures you request for the past four years, as there was no expenditure on legal assistance for that ground in December 2003-March 2004 period. Although the Commission has duties with regard to each of the nine Section 75 grounds, we are not presently empowered to assist cases on the grounds of age, and having or not having dependants.

Information on our legal work and the expenditure on legal assistance is contained in our Annual Report and Accounts. With regard to the specific information requested, I trust the following is helpful.

Question 217671: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how many requests for assistance were received by the Equality Commission in each of section 75 group.

Information on requests for assistance is based on the date at which the request was considered by the Commission's Legal Funding Committee.

Question 217723: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, how much was spent by the Equality Commission on legal assistance in each of the last four years; and whether there was (a) an overspend and (b) an under spend against budget in each of those years.

In each of the four years the spend on legal assistance was higher than originally planned; however, the Commission's total spending was within the budgets agreed with OFMDFM.

Medical Negligence

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost to the Northern Ireland economy of medical negligence in each of the last five years. [220619]

Angela Smith: Information in relation to the last five years is detailed in the following table:

Amounts paid in settlement of clinical negligence claims

1999–2000	4,859
2000–01	9,409
2001–02	7,415
2002–03	13,550
2003–04	15,194

The amount paid in any one year in respect of clinical negligence can vary considerably due to the uncertain timing of the settlement of cases.

The Department remains committed to taking appropriate action to address and reduce the incidence of medical negligence, and the subsequent number and amount of claims.

Pension Credit

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) female and (b) male pensioners in Northern Ireland are in receipt of pension credit. [221501]

Mr. Spellar: In my answer of 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1071W, the figures provided were incorrect. The correct figures are as follows, there are 29.7 per cent. of female pensioners and 24 per cent. of male pensioners currently in receipt of pension credit.

Pensioners

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) female and (b) male pensioners in Northern Ireland are in receipt of the full basic state pension. [221500]

Mr. Spellar: In my answer of 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1071W, the figures provided were incorrect. The correct figures are as follows, there are 34 per cent. of female pensioners and 78.1 per cent. of male pensioners currently in receipt of the full basic state pension.

Project Funding

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been allocated by the Department of Finance and Personnel under Priority 4-Outward and Forward Looking Region; and what percentage of such monies relates to projects operating on (a) a Northern Ireland-Republic of Ireland basis, (b) a Northern Ireland-Great Britain basis and (c) a Northern Ireland-rest of world basis. [210501]

Mr. Pearson: Priority 4 has two measures Measure 4.1 (Networking in Europe and beyond) and Measure 4.2 (Marketing the region for tourism).

Measure 4.1 is implemented by OFMDFM in Northern Ireland and SEUPB in the border region of Ireland. Information on project operational costs is not held in the format requested and the following estimates have been made by the implementing bodies based on knowledge of projects.

Measure	Implementing body	Total estimated allocation (£)	Percentage (a)	(b)	(c)
4.1	OFMDFM	6,435,897	20	10	70
	SEUPB	684,780	78	—	22

Measure 4.2 is implemented by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board in Northern Ireland and the SEUPB in the border region of Ireland. The activities in this measure include international advertising, international promotion, support for market research and website design. A breakdown of the expenditure in the format requested is not possible. To date NITB have allocated £12,371,843 to such projects for the benefit of Northern Ireland only. Similarly £1,309,000 has been allocated by the SEUPB for border region projects only.

Retirement (Health Grounds)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what circumstances individuals would be entitled to retire on health grounds following the implementation of proposed Government pension scheme changes in Northern Ireland. [220692]

Mr. Pearson: It is assumed that this question is referring to the proposed changes to the pension schemes for civil servants, staff employed in the NHS and for teachers.

Consultation on proposed changes to pensions, including those for ill health retirement, of the main civil service pension scheme in Great Britain and the NHS and teachers schemes for England and Wales are currently under way. As the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme for Northern Ireland, the Health and Personal Social Services Superannuation Scheme, and the Teachers Superannuation Scheme in Northern Ireland operate on a principle of parity with these schemes, the normal approach would be to introduce similar changes for Northern Ireland staff.

The proposals relating to ill-health retirement in the consultation document "Building a Sustainable Future—Proposals for Changes to Civil Service Pension Arrangements" are broadly similar to those presently available to members of the premium arrangement of the current civil service pension provisions with the recognition that higher benefits should be paid to those who are most incapacitated. The proposals relating to ill-health retirement for the teachers pension schemes are similar to those proposed under the civil service scheme.

The proposals are as follows:

Where the scheme's medical adviser agrees that a member's ill-health is such that they are no longer able to do their job and that this is likely to continue to pension age, the member should receive their pension immediately without any reduction for early payment.

If the scheme's medical adviser considers that the member is virtually unable to do any job, not just their present job, they should receive an increase to their pension, under a formula yet to be determined.

Civil service members who are covered by the current classic arrangements are subject to a slightly modified approach, compatible with an employee contributions rate of 1.5 per cent. rather than the premium contribution rate of 3.5 per cent. Regardless of the degree of incapacity a single level of ill-health pension will be payable.

The review partners of the NHS pension scheme consider that the pension scheme cannot deal with ill health in isolation and that it is important that any changes to the pension scheme are part of an integrated approach to managing ill-health absence. They have proposed that a separate partnership review of sickness and ill-health arrangements should be carried out, which will help the pension review determine this aspect of pension scheme design. The consultation document is seeking views on this approach to reviewing sickness and ill-health retirement arrangements.

Sewerage

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the Government's Reform of Water and Sewerage Services in Northern Ireland on (a) the elderly and (b) those who have elderly dependants, based on each of the broad policy options. [221340]

Mr. Spellar: The draft Integrated Impact Assessment published on 29 November set out Government's assessment of the impacts of its policy proposals and options. The draft equality impact assessment element of the IIA noted that the proposal to base domestic water and sewerage charges on property value would have a marginal negative differential impact on the elderly and on those who care for them. A number of measures to mitigate the negative equality impacts were identified, including the provision of discounts for certain low income households. The proposal also envisages that the impact of the low income protection measures should be kept under review to determine how effectively they are mitigating differential equality impacts.

No other impacts on the elderly or those who care for them were identified in the IIA.

Consultation on the draft Integrated Impact Assessment of the proposals for the reform of water and sewerage services in Northern Ireland closed on 4 March 2005. Work is under way to analyse and evaluate the comments received. A considered response will be issued in due course along with a final equality impact assessment.

Shellfish and Whitefish

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed in the (a) shellfish and (b) whitefish sectors of the fishing industry in Northern Ireland on the last date for which figures are available. [221336]

Mr. Pearson: Information in respect of the number of people employed in the processing and marketing, catching and other sectors of the Northern Ireland fishing industry is shown in the following table.

The data does not distinguish between employment in the shellfish and whitefish sectors and to provide this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Note:

"Others" includes harbour jobs, boat building and chandlery supplies.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much and what value of (a) shellfish and (b) whitefish was exported from Northern Ireland to EU countries outside the UK in each of the last five years. [221335]

Mr. Pearson: Records are not kept in respect of Northern Ireland exports and to provide this information would incur disproportionate cost.

However, data is held for the UK as a whole, including Northern Ireland. Tables showing the UK exports of shellfish and whitefish species to EU countries over the last five years have been placed in the Library.

Social Deprivation

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the review of the boundaries of the Noble indices on social deprivation will be published. [221381]

Mr. Pearson: Following a consultation exercise last year, a blueprint document detailing the indicators and methods to be used in producing the new measures of deprivation has been published on the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency website. The final report from the Noble team, incorporating the actual measures of deprivation, is currently planned for publication in late May 2005.

Mr. Paul Murphy: In common with the other Whitehall Departments, the Northern Ireland Office reports progress against the targets and objectives in the public service agreement (PSA) in its Departmental Report and Autumn Performance Report. In the 2004 Spending Review PSA, the NIO agreed seven main objectives and, within these, four key target areas which commit it to a specified level of performance or achievement. Since the SR2004 PSA commences in April 2005 no material is available to monitor progress against these targets. However the Department has provided extensive public information on progress against the PSA targets agreed as part of the SR2002 settlement. Because the targets are clearly measurable they are reported on in detail in the Departmental Report and Autumn Performance Report. Progress against objectives is reported on in more general terms.

The NIO's 2005 Departmental Report is in draft and will be published soon on a date to be set by HM Treasury. It will provide detail on the targets and give information on performance to the end of the SR2002 PSA period. It and the Autumn Performance Report are available from the Stationery Office or on the NIOs website (http://www.nio.gov.uk). In addition, HM Treasury's performance website (http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/performance/index/cfm) currently reports specifically on performance against the targets in the SR2002 PSA and will be updated regularly to report on SR2004 PSA targets.

Autumn Performance Report are available from the Stationery Office or on the NIOs website (http://www.nio.gov.uk). In addition, HM Treasury's performance website (http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/performance/index/cfm) currently reports specifically on performance against the targets in the SR2002 PSA and will be updated regularly to report on SR2004 PSA targets.

Water Charging

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what comparative studies have been carried out by his Department into the proposed water charging system for Northern Ireland and those operated in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [221504]

Mr. Spellar: In developing water and sewerage charging options for Northern Ireland, careful consideration was given to the existing regimes in Great Britain. As in the rest of the United Kingdom, the proposed self-financing arrangements will mean that customers' bills will, in general terms, reflect the costs which that customer imposes on the water and sewerage systems for a supply of clean water and the disposal of dirty water. Details of the approach taken to developing the proposed water and sewerage charging regime are set out in the Integrated Impact Assessment Policy Proposals Paper published on 29 November 2004 http://www.waterreformni.gov.uk/consult2004.asp

In England and Wales, unmeasured domestic charges, in general, consist of a standing charge and a charge based on the property's rateable value. It is proposed in Northern Ireland that charges will consist of a standing charge and a charge based on the property's capital value—which will be the basis for calculating domestic rates in NI from 1 April 2007. In Scotland unmeasured charges are based on the council tax band which, in turn, is based on the property's capital value.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Catering

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many departmental (a) canteens and (b) bars there are; and how much has been spent on the (i) running, (ii) staffing and (iii) supply costs of each in each year since 1997. [213630]

Mr. Miliband: There are currently three staff canteens and no bars on the Cabinet Office's central London estate. There are two canteens and two bars at the Centre for Management and Policy Studies (CMPS) College residential training centre in Berkshire and one canteen at the non-residential training centre in London. The Emergency Planning College (EPC), who transferred to the Cabinet Office in June 2001, has a canteen and bar at its residential training centre in York. The Cabinet Office's sole Executive Agency, The Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA), has one canteen at its London Headquarters.

Since 2002, canteen facilities at the Cabinet Office's central London estate have been provided on a nil subsidy basis by the Cabinet Office's Total Facilities Management provider. Prior to 2002 there was only one staff canteen and no bars. Spending on specific running, staffing and supply costs in each year since 1997 and prior to 2002 cannot be readily retrieved and separately identified without incurring disproportionate costs.

Canteen and bar facilities at the CMPS Colleges and the EPC are provided as part of a PPP/PFI and Facilities Management contract, respectively. Specific spending on running, staffing and supply costs cannot be readily retrieved and separately identified without incurring disproportionate costs.

For 2002–03 and 2003–04, the GCDA incurred expenditure of £35,000 in each year for the running of its canteen. Spending on specific running, staffing and supply costs prior to 2002–03 cannot be readily retrieved without incurring disproportionate costs.

Intestacy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many people in the Duchy died intestate in 2003–04. [220376]

Mr. Milburn: During the calendar year of 2003, there were 354 intestate cases reported to the Duchy of Lancaster. Similarly, in the year 2004, 291 cases were reported.

Job Relocation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he has taken to co-ordinate Government policy on whether Government-funded agencies compete to attract jobs from less wealthy parts of the UK. [221564]

Mr. Milburn: None.

Regional Offices

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) executive agencies within the remit of the Cabinet Office have regional offices based on the Government Offices for the Regions' regional structure; and when the regional offices were established in each case. [219887]

Mr. Miliband: None of Cabinet Office's non-departmental public bodies or executive agencies have regional offices based on the Government Offices for the Regions' regional structure.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to promote standards that ensure good governance, including adherence to the ministerial and civil service codes; [220219]

(2) whether the public service agreement target to achieve a 2.5 per cent. efficiency saving each year on administrative resources was met in 2004; [220220]

(3) what recent assessment he has made of whether the public service agreement target to achieve a 2.5 per cent. efficiency saving each year on administrative resources will be met in 2005; [220221]

(4) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to co-ordinate security, intelligence and civil contingencies matters to protect the UK against disruptive challenges; [220222]

(5) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to improve services by working with departments to embed the four principles of public service reform. [220223]

Mr. Miliband: The Cabinet Office's role is outlined in our public service agreement (PSA). Work in support of the Cabinet Office objectives and targets included in the PSA is accounted for in the departmental report, autumn performance report and the annual report and resource accounts, all of which are published annually.

The latest assessment of progress against the Cabinet Office's PSA targets was made in the 2004 autumn performance report (Cm 6414). The next assessment will be made in the 2005 departmental report, due to be published later this spring.

Copies of the publications referred to are available in the Library of the House.

Transport Subsidies

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he has taken to co-ordinate Government policy in relation to subsidy to (a) airports, (b) ports and (c) passenger ferries across the UK; what his objectives were; and what the outcome of his action was. [221409]

Mr. Milburn: None.

HEALTH

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time for ambulances attending 999 calls was in (a) Suffolk and (b) England in each year since 1997. [221322]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally in the format requested. Data on response times for East Anglian Ambulance Service National Health Service trust and for all ambulance services in England is shown in the table.

Data is only available from the date trusts introduced call prioritisation. East Anglian Ambulance Service introduced call prioritisation in 2000–01. All ambulance services in England had introduced call prioritisation by 2001–02.

Further information can be found in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2003–04." A copy is available in the Library and on the Department's website at www.publications.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0411.htm

Avian Flu

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to deal with (a) disruption of the supply of essential medicines and (b) health care workers falling ill in an avian flu pandemic. [220285]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As part of their ongoing local planning, national health service trusts have put measures in place to deal with these issues. The United Kingdom influenza pandemic contingency plan sets out a framework for trusts to ensure their plans are suitable for an influenza pandemic.

Cleaning and Hygiene

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the total expenditure by NHS hospitals on cleaning in each year since 1997. [219410]

Mr. Hutton: Collection of information on the total amount that national health service organisations spend on cleaning began in 2000. The details for the financial years since then are shown in the following table.

£ million

	Total expenditure on cleaning services
2000–01	403
2001–02	418
2002–03	460
2003–04	493

Counter Fraud and Security Management Service

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults on NHS staff have been reported to the Counter Fraud and Security Management Service under the national reporting system; and what proportion of these assaults have results in criminal prosecutions. [216140]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A national reporting system for physical assaults against national health service staff has been put in place and will be fully operational by summer 2005; after which the data collected will be evaluated and made available.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) investigations and (b) investigations specifically relating to timesheet fraud by bank and agency staff the NHS Counter Fraud and Security Management Service and its predecessor, the NHS Counter Fraud Service, have conducted since September 1998; and how many of these investigations resulted in (i) unsuccessful criminal prosecutions, (ii) successful criminal prosecutions and (iii) civil and disciplinary cases. [216143]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The total number of investigations completed by the national health service counter fraud and security management service since September 1998 is 2,096.

The number of investigations specifically relating to timesheet fraud by bank and agency staff is 120. Fraud was found to be present in 43 cases and not present in 77 cases. A breakdown of sanctions applied in relation to timesheet fraud is listed as follows:

One case was found not guilty.

33 cases resulted in successful criminal prosecutions.

19 cases resulted in disciplinary sanctions.

Six cases resulted in a civil recovery.

The total figure is greater than 43, as criminal, civil and disciplinary sanctions were applied jointly in cases where that was appropriate.

Cross-border Tracking

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cross-border tracking of (a) adults and (b) children with (i) mental health and (ii) general health problems takes place between health authorities in England and Wales. [220266]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 March 2005]: In general terms, the primary care trust or local health board in whose area a patient is registered with a general practitioner (GP) practice will have responsibility for commissioning his or her care, regardless of what particular health problems he or she might have. When a patient moves across the border between England and Wales, we would expect that person to register with a GP practice at their earliest convenience, which then determines the authority responsible for their care. Their records will then be transferred to the new practice.

Some adults who have been in contact with mental health services will be subject to the multi-agency public protection panel arrangements. The arrangements for the tracking of individuals considered a risk to the public are detailed in paragraphs 76 and 77 of Probation Circular 54/2004, "The MAPPA Guidance". This places the responsibility firmly on the responsible authorities (the relevant police and probation services) initiating the transfer to ensure that the receiving authorities have both the information and the time to put suitable arrangements into place. The arrangements for moves between Wales and England are the same as those between English regions. Health bodies have a duty to cooperate with police and probation services in making these arrangements function effectively.

Dementia

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether free prescriptions are available for people who suffer from dementia; and if he will make a statement. [221365]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have no plans to extend the existing list of medical conditions that give exemption from prescription charges. The list has been reviewed on a number of occasions but no clear cut case for extending it has emerged. There is no consensus on what additional conditions might be included in any revised list of medical exemptions, or how distinctions could be drawn between one condition and another. Those dementia sufferers who are aged 60 or over are currently entitled to free prescriptions on the ground of age.

Dentistry

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the Answer to the hon. Member for Westbury of 1 February 2005, Official Report, column 887W, on NHS Business Services Directory, what assessment he has made of the effects of the delay in implementation of the NHS dental contract on the merger of the Dental Practice Board into the proposed NHS Business Services Authority; and what the aims of establishing the new arm's length body are; [218880]

(2) whether any of the £368 million additional funding promised for dentistry will be used to pay for the merger of the Dental Practice Board into the proposed NHS Business Services Authority. [219074]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answers 28 February and 1 March 2005]: The £368 million additional investment, which we announced on 16 July 2004, is for the development of national health service dentistry. The funding of the Department's arms length bodies, including the dental practice board (DPB), is from a separate source. The Department is working closely with the DPB to assess the impact of the rescheduled timetable for implementation of the new contractual arrangements for dentists on its operations. Plans are in place for the DPB to transfer the staff to the new Business Services Authority who will be required to deal with the expected workload. The NHS Pensions Agency, the Prescription Pricing Authority and the DPB will merge to create a new payment and transactions processing entity. The new body will be able to develop general business skills, drawing on the best practice of each of the constituent bodies.

Departmental Policies (Birmingham)

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Birmingham, Northfield constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on Birmingham Northfield constituency. [221240]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have put in place a programme of national health service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the Birmingham Northfield constituency.

For example:

At the end of December 2004, the number of people waiting more than nine months for In-patient treatment within the South Birmingham Primary Care Trust (PCT) has fallen to zero, from 165 in June 2002.

At the end of December 2004, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for Out-patient treatment within South Birmingham PCT has fallen to two, from 620 in June 2002.

In June 2003, at University Hospitals Birmingham NHS Foundation Trust, 90.4 per Cent., of patients spent less than four hours in accident and emergency from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. Figures for September 2004 show an improvement to 96.7 per cent.

Between September 1997 and June 2004, the number of consultants at University Hospitals Birmingham NHS Foundation Trust has increased from 204 to 290. Between September 1997 and September 2003, the number of nurses has increased from 1,635 to 2,199.

Between September 2001 and June 2004, the number of general medical practitioners within South Birmingham PCT has increased from 262 to 293.

Figures for December 2004 show that all patients within South Birmingham PCT are able to be offered an appointment with a general practitioner within two working days and a primary care professional within one working day.

South Birmingham PCT is a "Spearhead" PCT. The "Spearhead" group of local authorities and PCTs will be used to assess the achievement of the Government targets to address geographical inequalities in life expectancy, cancer, heart disease, stroke and related diseases in 2010.

Four linear accelerators are due be delivered to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in March 2005.

Diamorphine

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 27 January 2005, Official Report, column 549W, on diamorphine, how many general practitioners are licensed to prescribe diamorphine for the treatment of drug addiction; and how many were licensed to do so in 1997. [214925]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 27 January 2005, Official Report, column 549W. The policy operated by the Home Office, which issues the licences and my Department is generally to restrict the issue of licenses to consultant psychiatrists in charge of national health service addiction treatment clinics. From time to time, it has been deemed appropriate to extend licensing to general practitioners with demonstrable special skills in the field when they are acting under the supervision of a consultant.

I understand the information requested on precise numbers of such general practitioners licensed to prescribe diamorphine for the treatment of drug addiction is not readily available and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

East Elmbridge and Mid Surrey PCT

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the East Elmbridge and Mid Surrey primary care trust spent on mental health services in each of the past three years. [219404]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Expenditure on the commissioning of mental illness services by the East Elmbridge and Mid Surrey primary care trust (PCT) is shown in the following table. The PCT was established on 1 April 2002; therefore figures are only available for two years.

£000

	Amount
2002–03	38,142
2003–04	25,126

Notes:

1. The mental illness expenditure reported is the expenditure of the PCTs on the commissioning of secondary mental illness services from national health service bodies. This does not include all the relevant expenditure which cannot be separately identified centrally.
2. The figures do not include commissioning of mental illness services from independent providers. This expenditure is included within the commissioning of social care and cannot be separately analysed between mental illness, learning disability and similar services. Over the two years, there has been a £28.5 million increase in independent sector commissioning.
3. The figures are not comparable between PCTs and between years. There are a number of factors which may distort the figures, including PCTs commissioning on behalf of others, the devolution of mental illness budgets by health authorities and the increase in provision by the independent sector.

Eating Disorders

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what treatment is available on the NHS for people with eating disorders. [221150]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the location and type of service provided for people with eating disorders is not collected nationally. General services for people with eating disorders are normally available locally in primary and/or secondary care as a component of mental health service provision. Primary care trusts (PCTs), working in partnership, may also commission tertiary specialised services for those with the most severe conditions where planning is needed for a population considerably larger than that of a single PCT.

Clinical guidelines, published in 2004 by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence, are available on the range of effective treatments for people with eating disorders and the national specialised services definition set contains information on commissioning tertiary services. A group led by the national director for mental health is currently reviewing the national specialised services definition set with a view to publishing updated guidance later this year.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were receiving treatment for eating disorders on the latest date for which figures are available, broken down by sex. [221151]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the requested format. It is only available concerning those patients with eating disorders treated by a consultant medical practitioner. It is not available for those seen by other professionals.

In 2003–04, there were 1,690 finished consultant episodes in national health service hospitals in England for people with a primary diagnosis of eating disorders, of which eight per cent, were male[1]. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 diagnostic fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) data set and illustrates the main reason for the admission.

Finished consultant episodes are a count of the number of HES records submitted on behalf of English NHS hospital providers that relate to episodes of in-patient care which ended during the HES year. These figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Note:

[1] Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data is ungrossed).

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of people in England who have eating disorders but who are not registered as receiving treatment. [221152]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not centrally available. However, we are aware that a considerable volume of independent research exists relating to the epidemiology of eating disorders, their prevalence, severity and the most effective treatments. We commissioned the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) to develop a guideline on the management of eating disorders and their guidance, published in 2004, which contains useful information on all aspects of these important conditions. This guidance is available on the NICE website at www.nice.org.uk.

Fluoridation

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the Government's response to the consultation on water fluoridation. [218692]

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to table statutory instruments which will permit strategic health authorities to hold a local ballot on fluoridation. [220888]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 1 March 2005]: On 23 February, I laid before Parliament draft regulations on the consultations, which strategic health authorities would be required to undertake if they proposed to enter into, vary, maintain or terminate arrangements with a water undertaker to increase the fluoride content of the water supplied by the undertaker. The draft took account of the consultations the Department undertook in 2004.

Frenchay Hospital

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there are covenants relating to land owned by the national health service on the Frenchay Hospital site which restrict the use of that land; and if he will make a statement. [221404]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This is a matter for North Bristol national health service trust. I am informed by the Trust that although there are a number of planning restrictions, such as listed buildings, there are no restrictive covenants on the registered title.

Healthcare Commission Inspections

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether independent providers of care paid for by the NHS will be inspected by the Healthcare Commission under the same regime as (a) NHS providers and (b) other private providers. [219689]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 4 March 2005]: national health service healthcare delivered by the NHS or on its behalf by independent providers is subject to the provisions of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003, including inspection by the Healthcare Commission.

Organisations providing independent healthcare continue to be subject to the provisions of the Care Standards Act 2000, which include registration and inspection by the Healthcare Commission, taking account of the National Minimum Standards for independent healthcare.

Healthy Eating

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the Advertising Standards Agency on implementing in food advertising the recommendations of the Health Select Committee Report on Obesity. [220797]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Secretary of State has not had any such discussions with the Advertising Standards Authority.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with fast food companies on the promotion of healthy eating. [220798]

Miss Melanie Johnson: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health, met with representatives of the British Hospitality Association, jointly with my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport and representatives of the National Farmers Union, the British Retail Consortium, the Food and Drink Federation and the Advertising Association in early autumn 2004 to discuss their proposal to work with Government in developing healthy eating education campaigns.

Information for Patients

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether under his proposals for patient choice information will be available for patients on (a) cleanliness, (b) infection rates, (c) success of specific treatments, (d) individual consultants' performance and (e) patient satisfaction rates at (i) NHS hospitals and (ii) independent hospitals or treatment centres providing care paid for by the NHS. [219742]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 4 March 2005]: The Department is enhancing the website www.nhs.uk to provide both patients and general practitioners with easily accessible, comparative information about providers on waiting times, accessibility and quality and performance. This information will be drawn from the Healthcare Commission's star ratings on clinical quality and patient experience. In addition, the British Medical "Journal's Best Treatments" series of elective surgery guides are available free of charge through NHS Direct Online.

Consultation with patients and clinicians has suggested that a wider range of data, and data relating to clinical effectiveness and outcomes may be helpful to inform choice. The Department is taking forward work in developing additional information sets in consultation with key stakeholders.

Information on Methicillin-resistant "Staphylococcus Aureus"(MRSA) bloodstream infections is currently available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Publications/PublicationsStatistics/PublicationsStatisticsArticle/fs/en?CONTENTJD=4085951&chk=HBt2QD.

Mandatory national surveillance has been in place since April 2001 and information for the last three years is available for all acute trusts in England.

Comparable information on these indicators will be available for independent sector providers and is likely to draw on the existing arrangements for contract monitoring.

Kent Autistic Trust

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional financial support he plans to give to the Kent Autistic Trust from April. [221124]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no plans to provide financial support to the Kent Autistic Trust from April.

The Department is only able to provide financial support to voluntary organisations through the Section 64: General Scheme of Grants to Voluntary Organisations. No Section 64 application was received from the Kent Autistic Trust for the 2005–06 round.

Leicester Royal Infirmary (A and E Admissions)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admissions to the Leicester Royal Infirmary Accident and Emergency Department were found to be related to alcohol consumption in each year since 1997. [221205]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 28 February 2005, Official Report, column 977W.

Meat Hygiene

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what statistics are collected by the Meat Hygiene Service to monitor the number of carcasses presented for inspection with visible faecal contamination which require subsequent removal by trimming; [219006]

(2) what procedures are in place to ensure that the Meat Hygiene Service accurately records the number of carcasses presented for inspection at UK meat plants which are visibly faecally contaminated and subsequently need to be trimmed to remove that contamination; [219007]

(3) how many carcasses, in each year between 1995 and 2004 were (a) rejected in their entirety as unfit for human consumption at inspection by the Meat Hygiene Service and (b) rejected at inspection by the Meat Hygiene Service as requiring trimming to remove faecal contamination before being passed fit for human consumption. [219008]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised that the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS)—which only operates in Great Britain: separate arrangements apply in Northern Ireland—does not collate statistics relating to visible faecal contamination of meat. It does, however, require its staff, through instructions contained in the MHS operations manual, to record incidences whereby visible contamination of meat—which includes faecal contamination but also other substances such as rust, grease and hair—has led to its rejection. The records for 2001 to 2004 are shown in table 1. Statistics relating to previous years are not readily available.

[1] These figures do not include bovines processed under the over thirty months scheme, as these are not processed for human consumption.

Figures for the total number of carcases rejected in their entirety as being unfit for human consumption at inspection by the MHS in Great Britain in 2001 to 2004 are shown in table 2. Statistics relating to previous years are not available.

Mental Health

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis funding for mental health services is calculated; and what assessment is made of local needs when making that calculation. [221172]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department allocates revenue funding to primary care trusts on the basis of the relative needs of their populations.

It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use these funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for trusts regarding mental health provision. [221173]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national service framework (NSF) for mental health, published in 1999, sets out the national standards for mental health, what they aim to achieve, how they should be developed and delivered and how to measure performance in every part of the country. Following this, the NHS plan, published in 2000, set plans and targets for investment and reforms in the national health service in England. In addition, the priorities and planning framework, published in 2002, sets out detailed targets for the next three years—2003–06. Both these documents include targets for mental health service provision.

Copies of these publications are available in the Library and on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/fs/en.

Ministerial Stationery

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on official ministerial (a) business cards, (b) headed paper and (c) compliment slips in each year since 1997. [214944]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's accounting system does not provide the level of detail requested.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the impact upon multiple sclerosis therapy centres of the Health and Safety Commission's recent decision to raise the cost of annual inspections. [218246]

Dr. Ladyman: The Written Ministerial Statement that was made to the House on Tuesday 8 February, Official Report, columns 76–78WS, outlined the increases in registration and inspections fees that will be levied by the Healthcare Commission, from 1 April 2005, as regulator of the independent healthcare sector. It is firm Government policy that we should move to a position where the recurrent costs of providing regulation are fully recovered from all service providers, so that the future care needs of the country can be met. The fee increases for 2005–06 are part of this process.

Nevertheless, the Government are committed to tackling the issue of overall regulation costs, which will ultimately limit what service providers will pay in the future. We are also working with the Commission to ensure that its inspection services are provided as cost-effectively as possible.

NHS Estate

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish annual figures on the numbers of (a) primary care centres completed and (b) general practitioner premises modernised. [217581]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table. It shows the cumulative number of one-stop centres built and general practitioner premises replaced and modernised as at 31 December in each year since 2000–01.

The information was not collected centrally prior to that date.

	One-stop centres completed or under construction	GP premises refurbishments/ replacements completed or under construction

North Bristol NHS Trust

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent staff are employed by North Bristol NHS Trust; and how many members of staff are employed in each role within the Trust. [221405]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Nurse Retention

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of nurses who trained in England continued to work in the national health service for five years in the last period for which figures are available. [220486]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally for England.

Information for the other United Kingdom countries are matters for the devolved Administrations.

Obesity

Mr. Paul Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many surgical procedures to treat obesity were carried out on the NHS in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997. [216383]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many finished consultant episodes there were for (a) paediatric and (b) adolescent obesity treatment in (i) England and (ii) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997. [216391]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Paddington Basin Health Campus

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his officials last met to discuss developments in the Paddington Health Campus project; and who was present at the meeting. [221516]

Mr. Hutton: Senior officers from the Department met with officials from St Mary's National Health Service Trust, Royal Brompton and Harefield NHS Trust and North West London strategic health authority on 2 March. The attendees were:

Peter Coates—Deputy Director of finance—investment,

John Bacon—Group Director of health and social care services delivery and the Department's management board member,

Dr. Gareth Goodier—Chief Executive, North West London strategic health authority,

Julian Nettel—Chief Executive, St Mary's NHS Trust, and

Anthony Newman-Taylor—Acting Chief Executive Royal Brompton Harefield NHS Trust.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investment in improved cardiothoracic facilities at Harefield Hospital he proposes to cover the unavailability of the planned new heart hospital at the Paddington Basin Health Campus. [221731]

Mr. Hutton: The outline business case for the Paddington Health Campus (PHC) submitted to the Department in December 2004 explains that the Royal Brompton and Harefield national health service trust does not support the continuation of specialist services at Harefield Hospital under any future development plans should the PHC project not proceed. In such circumstances, detailed consideration would need to be given to the re-provision of Harefield's cardiothoracic services elsewhere.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money in total (a) his Department and (b) relevant NHS trusts will be devoting to the Paddington Health Campus in each financial year from 2005–06 to 2007–08. [221733]

Mr. Hutton: Expenditure on the Paddington Health Campus in future years will be dependent upon approval of the outline business case (OBC) submitted in December 2004. An addendum to the OBC is currently being prepared by the Royal Brompton and Harefield and St. Mary's national health service trusts and will be submitted following agreement on a land deal. On the basis of the OBC being approved, annual project development costs for 2005–06 to 2007–08 are estimated to be in the region of £4-£5 million. In addition, there is likely to be significant expenditure associated with land acquisitions, disposals and town planning. Details of these costs will be included within the addendum to the OBC.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he deems that sufficient land is available to the NHS for the completion of the Paddington Basin Health Campus in its entirety. [221756]

Mr. Hutton: The land needed for the Paddington Health Campus is agreed and identified. Terms for its purchase, acceptable to the national health service have not yet been agreed.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the projects being undertaken by his Department in respect of which information cannot be given in answer to parliamentary questions as a result of commercial confidentiality. [216526]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A decision not to release information relating to any project as a result of commercial confidentiality is made on the basis of the specific request made in each parliamentary question.

An assessment of commercial confidentiality may apply to specific elements within a project as well as to an entire project. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Public Health (Control of Disease) Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984. [220577]

Miss Melanie Johnson: "Getting Ahead of the Curve", the infectious disease strategy published by the Chief Medical Officer in January 2002, made clear the intention of reviewing infectious disease law. No specific timetable for the review has been set as yet: we have always intended that it should be carried out at the point when it can make the most effective contribution to improving the control and prevention of infectious disease.

Our top priority, in terms of improving health protection, has been the legislation to establish the Health Protection Agency (HPA). It has existed since April 2003 as a special health authority in England and Wales and will be established from 1 April 2005 as a United Kingdom-wide public body under the Health Protection Agency Act 2004. As a result of the creation of the HPA, consultants in communicable disease control (who generally discharge the "local authority proper officer" function under the 1984 Act) are in England all now employed by the HPA. This is an improvement on the previous position; when such consultants were in effect single-handed practitioners, each based in a local national health service body, which could offer them relatively little specialist support.

In preparation for the planned review of the law, we asked the HPA last year to consider first how public health practitioners might make more effective use of the powers currently provided by the 1984 Act; and second, what difficulties practitioners find with the current powers and what changes might be desirable. We expect to receive the results of this work from the HPA in the first half of this year.

We are contributing to the development of new International Health Regulations (IHR) by the World Health Organisation (WHO). The WHO aims to adopt the new IHR at the World Health Assembly in May 2005. Many of the requirements of the current IHR are reflected in regulations made under infectious disease law in the UK, which will need to be revised once the new IHR are in place. In the meantime, the Civil Contingencies Act 2004 has provided new emergency powers which complement those provided through public health legislation.

We will take decisions on the timetable for the review of public health law in the light of the work being carried out by the HPA and of progress with agreeing and implementing the new IHR.

Regional Directors of Public Health

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the position of Regional Director of Public Health for each English region was established; what the total budget for their activities is; how many staff each office has; what their remit is; and if he will make a statement. [219075]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 1 March 2005]: The position of Regional Directors of Public Health (RDsPH) was established in April 2002.

The remit of RDsPH is to improve the health of the population within their regions, through reducing inequalities in health, protecting the health of the public and improving the standards and quality of services affecting determinants of health.

Their responsibilities include work with other Government Departments, agencies, voluntary and business communities, nationally and regionally, to tackle the wider determinants of health. They ensure that health considerations are reflected in plans and programmes in areas such as housing, crime, education, transport and environmental planning and underpin economic and urban regeneration.

Staff in post and budgets for each region for 2004–05 is shown in the following table.

Regional public health group	Staff in post	Budget (£ million)
East of England	13	1.950
London	14	6.135
South East	16	4.076
North East	16	2.092
North West	17	5.273
West Midlands	16	4.333
East Midlands	16	3.380
Yorks and Humber	17	2.321
South West	16	4.414
Total	141	33.980

Regional Offices

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) Executive agencies within the remit of his Department have regional offices based on the Government offices for the regions regional structure; and when the regional offices were established in each case. [219886]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following two bodies for which the Department is responsible have regional offices covering the regional Government office areas:

The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health, the offices of which were established in 2003.

The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), the offices of which were established on 1 April 2004. In addition to the eight regional offices covering the regional Government office areas, the CSCI has an additional office for the south-east region.

Renal Services

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department is publishing for primary care trusts on the implementation of the renal national service framework. [212332]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts commissioning renal services to set priorities for local action based on the standards, quality requirements and markers of good practice set out in the national service framework for renal services. We are supporting local delivery through various programmes and national health service pilots, including redesigning the work force, re-engineering elective vascular access surgery, patient transport, care planning, end-of-life care and redesigning the built environment. We will share the results with the NHS as these programmes and pilots complete.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether kidney patients awaiting vascular access surgery will be able to exercise patient choice; and if he will make a statement. [212335]

Mr. Hutton: The national service framework for renal services makes clear we are determined that kidney patients should have timely and appropriate surgery for permanent vascular access. Latest data for 2003–04 show the average time waited for vascular access surgery was 41 days. However, where, exceptionally, patients wait longer than six months on the waiting list, primary care trusts are responsible for offering choice of an alternative provider in line with the Department's "Choice of Hospital" guidance.

By the end of 2005, all patients will be able to choose from at least four or five different providers at the point of general practitioner referral.

Social Services Staff

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made for (a) issuing advice and (b) monitoring practice in joint health social service care teams in connection with a common approach to human resource issues, with particular reference to (i) pay and conditions, (ii) pension entitlements and (iii) and access to training. [219712]

Mr. Hutton: There are no central arrangements. It is the responsibility of the employers concerned to ensure that effective human resource management policies and practices are in place. Pay and conditions are negotiated locally for social services. The national training strategy grant and human resource development grant, paid by the Department to local authorities, is for use, at local discretion, to support human resource and training initiatives, with encouragement given to ensure that partners in the private and voluntary sector benefit.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 when special advisers attended meetings with external representatives at which ministers were not present. [210541]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All meetings held by special advisers and all speeches given by special advisers are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the "Code of Conduct for Special Advisers".

Speech Therapy

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many speech therapists have been working in the NHS in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [221153]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the following table.

National health service hospital and community health services: qualified speech and language therapists employed in the NHS as at 30 September 1999 to 2003

Number

	Headcount	Whole-time equivalents
1999	5,185	3,939
2000	5,430	4,066
2001	5,685	4,207
2002	5,960	4,365
2003	6,243	4,707

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the most recent average waiting time for first referral for a patient to see a speech therapist is; and what changes have occurred to waiting times over the past five years. [221154]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Student Health Care

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will estimate the cost of administering the processing of HC1 forms for students; [220821]

(2) if he will estimate the combined cost in a year of exempting all students from charges for prescription, dental care and eye tests. [220830]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2003–04, the administrative cost of processing national health service low income scheme HC1 application forms received from students is estimated to have been about £714,000.

It is estimated that it would cost about £85 million to exempt part-time and full-time students in higher education aged 19 and over from charges for prescriptions, dental care and eye tests. This total figure includes the £4.2 million estimated value of exemptions to those students who are currently exempt.

Students aged under 19 in full-time education are already entitled to free prescriptions, dental care, sight tests and optical vouchers.

Sudan 1

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information the Government are providing to owners of smaller corner shops to help them identify the products that should be withdrawn from the shelves as a result of the Sudan I dye recall; [218355]

(2) what the reasons were for the delay between the notification to the Food Standards Agency of a potential problem with the Sudan 1 dye and the agency making a public announcement; [218356]

(3) what the total cost of the Sudan 1 dye recall is estimated to be. [218357]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Full information has been made available on the Food Standards Agency's website of foods known to be contaminated with Sudan 1, and this was provided to a number of stakeholder organisations, including the Association of Convenience Stores, to distribute to their members. In addition, the FSA has asked all local authorities to contact food businesses in their area to ensure the recall has been effective.

The FSA made a public announcement less than 24 hours after it received accurate and reliable information from the food industry on products contaminated with Sudan 1 dye.

The FSA has not undertaken an assessment of the cost of the Sudan 1 recall.

Surplus Assets Sales

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department sold any surplus stock on the eBay auction website, in each year since 2000–01. [220940]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not disposed of any surplus stocks on the eBay auction website.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of whether the Public Service Agreement target to reduce the under-18 conception rate by 50 per cent. by 2010 will be met. [219238]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Children, Young People and Families (Margaret Hodge) on Tuesday 8 March, Official Report, column 1785W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the Public Service Agreement target to improve value for money in the NHS and personal social services by at least 2 per cent. per annum was met in 2004; [219243]

(2) whether the Public Service Agreement target to improve both cost efficiency and service effectiveness in the NHS and personal social services by 1 per cent. per annum was met in 2004. [219244]

Mr. Hutton: Progress against value for money targets will be reported in the Department's annual report.

Trust Mergers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list mergers of (a) NHS acute trusts and (b) primary care trusts which have (i) been proposed and (ii) taken place; [221168]

(2) what safeguards are in place to maintain the objectivity of merged acute trusts and primary care trusts when commissioning care from other acute trusts; [221169]

(3) what assessment he has made of the benefits of merging acute and primary care trusts. [221170]

Mr. Hutton: No acute trusts and primary care trusts have merged and the Department is unaware of any formal proposals to merge. Given this situation, the Department has not introduced safeguards to maintain objectivity and there has also been no formal assessment made of the benefits of merging acute and primary care trusts.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to merge (a) acute hospital trusts and (b) primary care trusts in Hampshire. [221171]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is not aware of any plans to merge acute trusts or primary care trusts in Hampshire.

Variant CJD

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1697W, on variant CJD, what monitoring is being undertaken by the Medical Research Council of the effectiveness of pentosan polysulphate in the treatment of variant CJD; and for what reasons pentosan polysulphate has not been included in the Prian-1 trial. [218014]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In September 2001, the Department asked the Medical Research Council (MRC) to design a clinical trial to evaluate the effectiveness of quinacrine as a potential treatment for variant Creutzfeld Jacob disease (vCJD). Pentosan polysulphate was not included in the trial protocol because expert advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines and the CJD therapy advisory group in 2002 and again in 2003, did not support its use as a possible treatment for CJD on grounds of safety and efficacy. Both these expert committees will continue to review new data on pentosan polysulphate.

At the request of the Department in December 2003, the MRC agreed to offer patients receiving pentosan polysulphate treatment the opportunity to participate in standardised clinical monitoring. It is for the MRC to decide, in consultation with the families concerned and their clinicians, what would be the most appropriate information to collect, and how it should be collected.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Affordable Housing

Martin Linton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many affordable homes have been built in (a) London, (b) Wandsworth and (c) Battersea through the (i) Housing Corporation and (ii) Government-funded schemes since 2000. [218527]

Keith Hill: The total annual number of affordable homes provided since 2000–01 through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme

(ADP) and Local Authority Social Housing Grant (LASHG) for London and Wandsworth are shown in the following table.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received in relation to changes in council tax banding. [219857]

Mr. Raynsford: Records held by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister do not differentiate representations which relate to council tax banding from those which relate to other council tax matters. A precise figure could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the forecast for council tax receipts in each London borough are for 2004–05. [220175]

Mr. Raynsford: The available information is tabled as follows. These are the amounts of council tax budgeted to be received by London boroughs (including the City) for 2004–05, including amounts collected on behalf of the Greater London Authority, and amounts funded from council tax benefit.

These figures do not include forecasts for the amounts to be received during 2004–05 relating to years before 2004–05, nor for prepayments of 2005–06 council taxes.

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will remove or reduce the requirement on residential boat owners to pay the full amount of council tax. [221560]

Mr. Raynsford: No. A mooring occupied by a boat which is somebody's sole or main residence is deemed to be a "dwelling" for council tax purposes and will therefore attract a council tax liability in the same way as other domestic types of property. The amount of council tax payable in respect of a mooring occupied by a boat will depend primarily on the valuation band to which the dwelling is assigned. The normal exemptions and discounts, for example for single occupancy, apply and council tax benefit is available for people on low incomes.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has held with the Scottish Executive on council tax revaluation in Scotland. [220908]

Mr. Raynsford: Discussions about council tax revaluation between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Scottish Executive have taken place from time-to-time as part of our liaison about local government finance issues of mutual interest.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has had with the National Assembly for Wales Government on council tax revaluation in Wales. [220909]

Mr. Raynsford: Discussions about council tax revaluation between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Welsh Assembly Government have taken place from time-to-time as part of our liaison about local government finance issues of mutual interest.

Departmental Policies

Geraint Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Croydon Central, the effects of the Department's policies and actions on Croydon Central constituency since 1997. [220382]

Yvette Cooper: Along with other Government Departments, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is committed to improving the lives of people across the whole of the UK. For example, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is determined that everyone should have the opportunity to have a decent home, and since 1997 we have reduced the number of non-decent homes nationally by 1 million.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister provides grant funding that benefits the Croydon Central constituency through a number of programmes.

For example over the period 2001–06 Croydon has been allocated £2.5 million Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF) resources to help the local authority, in collaboration with the Local Strategic Partnership, improve services in the most deprived neighbourhoods in the area.

More broadly, since 1997 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has been able to increase the total amount of Government grant given to local authorities by £22.6 billion. This is a 33 per cent. increase in real terms. Croydon has received an average annual increase in formula grant since 1997 of 4.4 per cent.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neihbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./

Jon Trickett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Hemsworth constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on Hemsworth constituency. [220858]

Yvette Cooper: Along with other Government Departments, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is committed to improving the lives of people across the whole of the UK. For example, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is determined that everyone should have the opportunity to have a decent home, and since 1997 we have reduced the number of non-decent homes nationally by one million.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister provides grant funding that benefits the Hemsworth constituency through a number of programmes.

For example, over the period 2001–06 Wakefield has been allocated £18.9 million Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF) resources to help the local authority, in collaboration with the Local Strategic Partnership, improve services in the most deprived neighbourhoods in the area.

More broadly, since 1997 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has been able to increase the total amount of government grant given to local authorities by £22.6 billion. This is a 33 per cent. increase in real terms. Wakefield metropolitan district council has received an average annual increase in formula grant since 1997 of 5.1 per cent.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk/

Disabled Facilities Grants

Mr. Meale: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if his Department will bring forward proposals to improve the effectiveness, efficiency and transparency of disabled facilities grant application systems; [220709]

(2) how many applications were made for disabled facilities grants in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by region; and how many of those applications were successful, broken down by region; [220710]

(3) whether mortgage payments are taken into account when assessment is made of disabled facilities grant applications; [220711]

(4) what plans the Government has to increase the maximum level of disabled facilities grant; [220712]

(5) what the average time taken was for consideration of applications made for disabled facilities grants in each region in the last period for which figures are available; [220713]

(6) what assessment his Department has made of the abolition of the means testing of disabled facilities grant applications in Northern Ireland. [220714]

Yvette Cooper: The Government announced a review of the operation of the Disabled Facilities Grant (DFG) programme on 5 January 2004. This review is now under way. Its terms of reference are to review the operation and outcomes of the Disabled Facilities Grant Programme and to make proposals to improve its efficiency and fairness. A number of financial and policy issues affecting the programme, including the operation of the means test and the maximum grant limit will be evaluated. Officials are due to report back to Ministers in May this year and any proposals for change will then be published for consultation.

The DFG means test takes account of an applicant's income and capital over £6,000, but not of any financial outgoings such as mortgage payments. Instead total income is compared with a range of expenditure allowances and premiums which are up-rated periodically to keep them in line with increases in the cost of living. This is standard practice for many state benefits where a means test is applied.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect information on how many disabled people have applied for DFG, or the number of people waiting for DFG. We have not undertaken a formal assessment of the abolition of the DFG means test for families with a disabled child in Northern Ireland, but the effects of this change will be considered as part of the DFG Review.

Engagements

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the official visits made to Merseyside by Ministers in his Department between 1 January 2004 and 28 February, broken down by (a) date, (b) location and (c) the Ministers concerned. [221194]

Yvette Cooper: The information is as follows:

English Partnerships

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what reports his Department has received of English Partnerships acquiring land that might otherwise have been available for schemes that include a proportion of social rented housing. [220995]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is not aware of any acquisitions of land by English Partnerships which have prevented an already identified proportion of social rented housing being built on the site in question.

A core part of English Partnerships work is to help deliver an increased level of affordable housing, and it will often work in partnership with the Housing Corporation, Registered Social Landlords, local authorities and private sector developers to increase the overall percentages of affordable housing on sites that English Partnerships has acquired under its programmes.

FOI Requests

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is in respect of the publication (a) on the departmental website and (b) by placing copies in the Library of (i) all or (ii) a selection of the information disclosed in response to Freedom of Information requests since January. [215222]

Yvette Cooper: Guidance on Publication Schemes, issued by the Department for Constitutional Affairs in July 2002, recommended that where information is disclosed to an individual in response to a request under the Freedom of Information (FOI) Act, Departments and NDPBs should consider whether the information disclosed is of general interest and include released information in the Publication Scheme where appropriate

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister aims to publish all responses to FOI requests where we judge there is a general public interest, as opposed to esoteric matters, or matters of interest only to the requester. Preparations are in hand to ensure that new information selected for publication will be identified in the FOI section of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website, and this will be listed by date of release.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no specific intention to publish material by placing copies in the library of the House, over and above material that we would normally publish in this way or, where appropriate, in answer to parliamentary questions.

Gypsies/Travellers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 3 February 2005, Official Report, column 1083W, on Gypsies/Travellers, what the outturn expenditure by central Government on (a) authorised Traveller sites and (b) illegal Traveller encampments by the (i) Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions and (ii) Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions was in each year. [220186]

Yvette Cooper: The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 repealed the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's power to pay grant to local authorities to establish gypsy caravan sites, together with their duty to provide such sites. The then government committed to pay Grant funding for all valid applications received by November 1994. Under this regime the following payments were made:

Financial year	Grant paid (£ million)
1997–98	3.8
1999–2000	0.6

Since the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in May 2002 it has provided the following funding to local authorities to enable them to renew and refurbish the existing network of local authority Gypsy and Traveller sites through its Gypsy Sites Refurbishment Grant:

Financial year	Grant paid (£)
2002–03	2,843,847
2003–04	6,084,059
2004–05	[1]7,739,726

£8 million is available for the 2005–06 financial year.

There was no outturn expenditure on illegal traveller encampments for this period. The costs associated with unauthorised camping are borne by individual local authorities or private landowners, rather than by central Government.

A lack of sites Gypsies and Travellers has contributed to the problem of unauthorised developments and encampments. The Government are committed to increasing site provision in appropriate locations.

High Hedges

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the reasons are for the change in time scale for implementing the provisions of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 on high hedges; and if he will make a statement. [220773]

Phil Hope: Last summer's public consultation on implementing the high hedges provisions in the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 identified a number of issues which have necessitated further work. These issues were the whole question of fees which a complainant must pay to the local authority for investigating their case and a streamlined appeals process which will place less of a burden on local authorities and the Planning Inspectorate. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently revising the Regulations and guidance for local authorities in the light of the consultation responses, with a view to laying Regulations before Parliament shortly.

Homelessness

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many families have claimed to be homeless in (a) London and (b) England in each year since 1997; [212372]

(2) how many people were homeless in (a) London and (b) England in each year since 1997. [212373]

Yvette Cooper: Information about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly and is in respect of households, rather than people. The number of decisions on applications for housing from households eligible under homelessness legislation for authorities in England and London, since 1997, is in the following tabled. Also shown is the number of these households who were accepted as unintentionally homeless and in priority need and how many of these households contained children/pregnant women.

Housing

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 336W, if he will list each location of the surplus public sector land that has been identified for affordable housing, broken down by (a) brownfield and (b) greenfield sites. [219905]

Keith Hill: Following the publication of the Sustainable Communities Plan (February 2003) effective arrangements have been established to identify land that becomes surplus to the public sector and to consider whether it has a continuing use within the public sector.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister through English Partnerships has set up the Register of surplus public sector land. The Register lists landholdings held by central Government and its agencies that are surplus to requirements. Any Department wishing to dispose of surplus land is required to place that land on the Register for a period of 40 working days before the land is marketed. The Register currently consists of over 800 parcels of land totalling almost 4000 hectares. The majority of the sites are brownfield and include previously developed land and buildings that are vacant or derelict and have the potential for redevelopment. The Register is currently being developed to allow on-line access by early April 2005 to central Government users. Brownfield and greenfield land will be easily identifiable. English Partnerships will publish a quarterly return of surplus sites on the Register.

English Partnerships has also established an agreement with Defence Estates to work closely together on the future use of surplus defence land. This will allow Defence Estates to deliver its disposal programme and for English Partnerships to help deliver the objectives set out in the Government's Sustainable Communities Plan. English Partnerships acquired the former RAF staff college site from Defence Estates in February 2004. Housing proposals for this site are currently being taken forward.

In April 2004 my right hon. the Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for Health announced that a portfolio of about 100 surplus NHS sites would be transferred to help deliver the objectives of the communities plan. We expect the first sites in this portfolio to be transferred to English Partnerships shortly. English Partnerships has also acquired a portfolio of surplus brownfield sites across London to provide 2000 affordable homes for sale out of a total development of about 4000 units. Development will start in 2005–06 and the homes will be delivered over the next five years.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and English Partnerships have now also published information on individual sites reported by local authorities for the National Land Use Database(NLUD) of Previously-Developed Land. The information is on the NLUD website www.nlud.org.uk.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister anticipates that a significant number of vacant surplus sites will be used for housing development to tackle the problem of housing shortages and the demand for affordable homes. This will be determined through local planning policies and strategies in the normal way.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate the cost to public funds of restoring Right-to-Buy (a) discounts and (b) eligibility requirements to 1997 levels. [219875]

Keith Hill: I regret that it is not possible to provide such an estimate, which would depend on assumptions about the number of tenants who would have exercised their Right to Buy if the changes to maximum Right to Buy discounts in February 1999 and March 2003 had not been made. This means that the overall effect of the changes on tenants' perceptions and behaviour, and hence on the overall level of sales, the amount of discount for which they would have qualified, and the amount of capital receipts that would have generated cannot be assessed with any accuracy.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the papers and representations that have been submitted to the Lyons Review into the balance of funding. [219859]

Mr. Raynsford: The Lyons Inquiry into local government funding is independent of the Government. I understand that Sir Michael Lyons intends to make available the evidence that underpins his conclusions and recommendations once the report is published.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much financial assistance his Department has provided to the City of Liverpool in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [221192]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established following the Machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002. The following table sets out the amounts of formula grant and other grants and payments made to the City of Liverpool by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister since 2002–03. For earlier years, the table shows the amounts paid by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's predecessor Departments from programmes which are now administered by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

All figures (£ million)

	Formula grant[1]	Other grants and payments
1997–98	366.189	48.432
1998–99	391.248	52.146

Opinion Polling

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what contracts his Department has agreed with organisations for opinion polling and related research since June 2001. [219958]

Yvette Cooper: Full details of our research, since the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in May 2002, is available on the Research Management Database on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: http://www.rmd.odpm.gov.uk/programmes.asp

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not carry out 'Opinion Polling' in the sense of asking people about their political opinion.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) for what purposes NOP research was continued during the North East referendum campaign period; and whether the research findings accumulated before the official campaign period were made available to (a) the Yes campaign and (b) to Ministers; [220294]

(2) what advice he received from the Cabinet Office on spending public money on NOP World research in connection with the Your Say information campaign between June 2003 and September 2004; [220295]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 344W, on regional referendums, what the total cost to his Department was of the research conducted by NOP World; and what other expenditure was incurred by his Department on other research conducted by NOP during this period; [220298]

(4) whether the Electoral Commission was informed that the Government was using NOP World to conduct monthly tracking research in connection with the Your Say information campaign in the period up to and during the campaign on the North East referendum. [220287]

Mr. Raynsford: As was made clear in the answer given to the hon. Member on 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 344W, the NOP World research was designed to measure the effect of the information campaign in raising awareness of the referendums. The research lasted the duration of the information campaign, which ended on 10 September 2004—28 days before the earliest date that postal ballot papers could be dispatched.

The research was conducted in accordance with the requirements of guidance on the work of the Government Communication Network, produced by the Cabinet Office. No other advice was sought from, or given by, the Cabinet Office.

As part of their role in the information campaign, Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister were aware of the results of the NOP World research. The results of the NOP World research were not made available by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to any campaign organisation, but were made available in the Library of the House on 21 February 2005.

The Electoral Commission were aware that research was undertaken on the effect of the information campaign in raising awareness of the referendums.

The cost of the research undertaken by NOP World research totalled £76,100

Other research conducted by NOP Research Group Ltd. for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister since June 2003 is:

1. "Key public sector workers: exploring recruitment and retention issues and their housing preferences" (for the Analytical Services Research Programme).

2. "Survey of Small Businesses and Rate Relief" (for the ODPM Local and Regional Government Research Programme).

Park Ownership

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to promote non-council ownership of parks. [219492]

Phil Hope: Government are committed to improving all parks and green spaces regardless of ownership by promoting greater involvement at the local level in their long term management and maintenance. We are doing this through our Cleaner, Safer, Greener Communities programme and Local Government Strategy. As part of the latter, we have recently published a discussion document entitled 'Citizen Engagement and Public Services: Why Neighbourhoods Matter', which discusses a range of ideas for neighbourhood engagement, including possible community management and ownership of local assets, such as local parks.

Parliamentary Boundaries

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2005, Official Report, column 582W, whether it is the Government's intention to implement changes to parliamentary boundaries before the end of March. [220190]

Mr. Raynsford: Any changes to parliamentary boundaries in Wales arising from the Boundary Commission's Report presented to my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 31 January, would come into effect at the first proclamation summoning a new parliament issued after the Order implementing the changes comes into force.

Planning

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how draft Planning Policy Statement 10 amends the planning process in relation to development on greenfield or green belt sites. [219860]

Keith Hill: The consultation draft of Planning Policy Statement 10 (PPS10) "Planning for Sustainable Waste Management" sets out a search sequence to be adopted by waste planning authorities in preparing development plan documents that gives priority to the re-use of previously-developed land before greenfield sites.

There is no change to green belt policy which is set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 2 "Green Belts". This advises that the carrying out of operations and the making of material changes of use which do not maintain the openness of the Green Belt and conflict with the purposes of including land in the Green Belt would not be appropriate development. In such cases applicants would have to demonstrate that there were very special circumstances that clearly outweighed the harm that the development would cause to the Green Belt. Draft PPS10 expects regional planning bodies and planning authorities to prepare and deliver planning strategies that protect green belts but recognise the particular locational needs of some types of waste management and that the wider environmental and economic benefits of sustainable waste management are material considerations that should be given significant weight in determining whether proposals should be given planning permission.

Planning Zones

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many areas have operated simplified planning zones since their inception; and what the dates are of the operation of each such zone; [219855]

(2) if he will list each simplified planning zone in operation in England; and if he will make a statement. [219946]

Keith Hill: The Town and Country Planning Act 1990 (sections 82–87), amended by the Planning and Compensation Act 1991 (section 28), provides for the creation of simplified planning zones (SPZs). Since the powers were taken, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware of six SPZs that have been created, two of which remain in existence today. They are tabled as follows:

SPZ	Local authority	Dates of operation
Sir Francis Ley Industrial Park	Derby city council	From August 1988 to August 1998
Willowbrook	Corby borough council	From September 1988 to September 1998
Victoria Park	Gedling borough council	From November 1991 to November 2001
Slough Trading Estate	Slough borough council	From January 1995 to January 2005. On 12 November 2004 Slough borough council agreed to a new up-dated version of the SPZ to run for a further 10 years
Kings Norton	Birmingham city council	From November 1998 to November 2008
Knowsley Industrial Park	Knowsley metropolitan borough	Information not available

The Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 (section 45) amends the 1990 Act to provide for the creation by local planning authorities of SPZs, where need has been identified in a regional spatial strategy.

Public Bodies

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what regional (a) bodies, (b) institutions, (c) taskforces, (d) panels, (e) offices and (f) organisations the Government have are the responsibility of his Department. [220193]

Yvette Cooper: The following regional bodies, institutions, taskforces, panels, offices or organisations are the responsibility of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Regional Housing Boards

Nine Government Offices in the regions

Eight Regional Assemblies outside London are answerable to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for specific functions that they undertake on its behalf.

Rateable Values (Yorkshire)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) the average percentage change in rateable value is from the 2000 rating lists in Selby and York and (b) the average percentage change in liability will be as a result of revaluation before reliefs are applied in Selby and York following the revaluation of business rates from April 2005. [221505]

Mr. Raynsford: The information is as follows:

Selby—29.07 per cent. decrease in gross rateable value

York—22.2 per cent. increase in gross rateable value

Full data on the impact of revaluation on rateable values by billing authority are available on the Valuation Office Agency's website. These also show a breakdown by category within the billing authority.

See http://www.voa.gov.uk/business_rates/DraftListStats/baindex.html

The percentage change in liability is more difficult to estimate:

Selby—34.3 per cent. reduction in average liability

York—14.7 per cent. increase in average liability

These figures represent the average change before reliefs and are strongly influenced by the changes in value of some high value hereditaments. These need to be seen in that context.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish (a) the written communications to the Prime Minister concerning (i) the decision to hold three referendums in the North of England on elected regional assemblies, (ii) the decision to hold these referendums by all-postal ballot and (iii) the decision to postpone two of the three referendums, (b) the responses to those communications and (c) the minutes of meetings of (A) Ministers and (B) officials pursuant to those communications. [220556]

Mr. Raynsford: No. The Government's decisions on these matters, and the reasons for them, were announced or debated in Parliament on the following dates:

(i) 16 June 2003, Official Report, columns 22–23,

(ii) 22 October 2003, Official Report, column 629 and 8 (laying of SI in Parliament), 19 and 21 July 2004 (debating of the orders),

(iii) 22 July 2004, Official Report, columns 501–04 and Official Report, the Other Place, columns 344–51 and 13 September 2004, Official Report, columns 987–89.

Regional Offices

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) executive agencies within the remit of his Department have regional offices based on the Government Offices for the Regions' regional structure; and when the regional offices were established in each case. [219876]

Yvette Cooper: The Housing Corporation, a non-departmental public body within the remit of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, reorganised its structure to be congruent with the structure of the Government Offices in the regions in October 2004.

Solar Photovoltaics

Ian Lucas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will amend building regulations to encourage use of photovoltaic cells. [221594]

Phil Hope: The Building Regulations requirements are functional rather than prescriptive to enable compliance in practical and cost-effective ways and to leave open the possibilities for innovation. It would therefore be inconsistent to prescribe particular technologies such as solar electricity. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is reviewing the energy efficiency requirements however and amendment proposals were published for consultation last July. The proposals include setting minimum overall building performance standards at levels much higher than at present and providing new technical guidance on low and zero carbon systems to further encourage take-up of these systems.

Sports Facilities

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister under what circumstances sports facilities may be included in section 106 agreements. [221352]

Keith Hill: The provision of sport or recreation facilities is a legitimate use of planning obligations (s106 agreements), where they meet the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's policy tests (set out in DoE circular 1/97 and the revised draft circular published in November 2004) of being necessary; relevant to planning; directly related to the proposed development; fairly and reasonably related in scale and kind to the proposed development; and reasonable in all other respects. Planning Policy Guidance note 17 also gives further guidance on the appropriate use of planning obligations to secure sport or recreation facilities alongside new developments.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Gill: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many mobile phone masts have been erected (a) within school grounds and (b) within 100 m of school grounds in Leicester in each year since 1997. [221204]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold the information requested centrally, and could provide it only at disproportionate cost.

Travellers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many full-time equivalent staff in his Department deal with issues relating to Travellers. [219861]

Yvette Cooper: The equivalent of five and a half full-time staff deal with housing and planning policy as it relates to Gypsies and Travellers, along with the equivalent of two full-time staff in the area of planning casework. Part of one member of staffs time in the Social Exclusion Unit is spent dealing with Gypsy and Traveller issues as part of the Unit's project on improving service delivery for disadvantaged people who move frequently. These officials are part of the housing and planning directorates in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister which employ 155 and 227 staff respectively.

A Gypsy and Traveller Unit is being established by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to take policy forward, and to provide support and guidance to local authorities. This Unit will bring together existing resources as well as providing additional resources. The exact staffing of the Unit has not yet been determined.

Your Say Information Campaign

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish the advice or guidance his Department received from the Cabinet Secretary or from his office concerning the proposed content of the Your Say information campaign (a) before and (b) after the final content was agreed by the Cabinet Secretary. [220596]

Mr. Raynsford: Information relating to internal discussion and advice is not for publication. However, I can confirm that the advice received by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister from the Cabinet Secretary was acted on and incorporated into the Your Say information campaign material.

TRANSPORT

Crossrail

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the building work on the Crossrail scheme to start. [221657]

Mr. Darling: Main construction of Crossrail could not start until the necessary powers are in place.

London Underground (Assaults)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers on the London Underground have been assaulted in the last 12 months. [221454]

Mr. McNulty: The total number of assaults recorded by the British Transport Police for their London Underground Area for the period from 1 March 2004 to 28 February 2005 was 2,022. A breakdown of the offence categories is provided in the table:

Offence	Number
Grievous bodily harm	12
Wounding	5
Actual bodily harm	782
Racially aggravated malicious wounding or grievous bodily harm	3
Racially aggravated actual bodily harm	45
Racially aggravated common assault	87
Common assault	1,088
Total	2,022

Operation Stack

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance the Department has issued on Operation Stack in Kent. [221589]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency, on behalf of the Department, provides information and advice to motorists about Operation Stack, using road signs, leaflets and on their website.

Kent Police has the sole authority for implementing Operation Stack but work closely with the Highways Agency to ensure that disruption is kept to a minimum.

Regional Offices

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regional (a) bodies, (b) institutions, (c) taskforces, (d) panels, (e) offices and (f) organisations the Government have established since May 1997 which his Department is responsible for. [220261]

Charlotte Atkins: Information on taskforces attached to central Government Departments and in existence between May 1997 and October 2000 was made available in three reports published in January, July and December 2000 on "Task Forces, Ad Hoc Advisory Groups and Reviews". For the years 2001–02 and 2003–03, this information has been included in the publications "Public Bodies 2002" and "Public Bodies 2003" respectively. Copies of these reports are available in the Library of the House. For 2003–04, this information can be found on the Cabinet Office's Public Bodies database.

The GLA Act 1999 established Transport for London (TfL) under the direction of the Mayor of London to implement policies that promote and encourage safe, integrated, efficient, and economic transport facilities and services to, from and within London. TfL was established on 3 July 2000. The British Transport Police Authority was established on 1 June 2004 and is modelled on Home Office local police authorities.

Snow Ploughs

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) snow ploughs and (b) gritting vehicles were deployed on the (i) M1, (b) M18 and (c) M62 on 21 February. [221722]

Mr. Jamieson: On 21 February, the Highways Agency deployed in the Yorkshire and Humberside Region:

Six gritters, all fitted with snow ploughs, on the M1;

Five gritters, all fitted with snow ploughs, on the M18; and Nine gritters, all fitted with snow ploughs, on the M62

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent assessment he has made of whether the Public Service Agreement target to secure improvements to the accessibility, punctuality and reliability for local public transport will be met by 2010; [219089]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of whether the Public Service Agreement target to increase the use of local public transport by 12 per cent. from 2000 levels will be met by 2010. [219090]

Charlotte Atkins: Increases in bus patronage in England since 2000–01 have been consistent with achieving the PSA target to increase the use of local public transport (bus and light rail) by 12 per cent. from 2000 levels by 2010. Bus and light rail patronage in England increased by 6.3 per cent. between the baseline year of 2000–01 and 2003–04, the latest period for which data are available, covering the first three years of the 10-year target period.

The version of the target specified for SR2002 also included the requirement to secure improvements to the accessibility, punctuality and reliability of local public transport.

The percentage of the GB local bus fleet that is wheelchair accessible has increased from 22 per cent. in 2000–01 to 39 per cent. in 2003–04.

There is no national target for improvements in accessibility. However, local authorities will need to include at least one local accessibility target in their second round Local Transport Plans and the Department will monitor progress against these targets. The Department has developed a range of core indicators, which will be used to build up a national picture of accessibility. Local targets may be based on these core indicators, or on other factors relevant in the local area.

The reliability of bus services in England (percentage of scheduled mileage run, excluding loses outside operators' control) has increased from 98.2 per cent. in 2000–01 to 98.5 per cent. in 2003–04.

A pilot national survey of bus punctuality in England was carried out in March 2004. The first main survey is planned for March/April 2005. We are not yet in a position to assess whether punctuality is improving. Local authorities will need to include a bus punctuality indicator in their second round Local Transport Plans and monitor progress in their areas. Local authorities and bus operators are encouraged to work together in Punctuality Improvement Partnerships to overcome problems which lead to poor punctuality.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Public Service Agreement target to achieve annual efficiency savings across the Department of 2.5 per cent. was met in 2004. [219097]

Charlotte Atkins: As outlined in the Department's 2004 Autumn Performance Report, the Department achieved efficiencies of £11.1 million in 2003–04 against a target of £8.9 million.

Transport (Women Workers)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of how many women work in the UK transport sector. [221288]

Charlotte Atkins: Estimates are available, based on Office for National Statistics surveys of employers, about the number of employee jobs in the transport sector in Great Britain.

The table shows the number of employee jobs in the transport sector in Great Britain that are held by women. The statistics are for March 2004, the latest available period, and are classified according to the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) 1992.

Number of employee jobs[1] in transport sector held by women; Great Britain, March 2004

SIC92 code[2]	Industry sector	Thousand
60.1	Transport via railways	9
60.2 and 60.3	Other land transport; transport via pipelines	88
61	Water transport	3
62	Air transport	46
63	Supporting and auxiliary transport activities; activities of travel agencies	146
60–63	Total transport industries	292

[1] Estimates exclude the self-employed
[2] Estimates are classified according to the Standard Industrial Classification 1992

Employment surveys, Office for National Statistics (ONS)

In March 2004, 29 per cent. of employee jobs in the transport sector were occupied by women, compared with 17 per cent. in March 1995.

Road Safety

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what educational material is provided by his Department to local education authorities to teach children about road safety. [221453]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department for Transport provides a range of educational materials for local education authorities and schools to teach children of all ages about road safety.

Web-based resources include:

On the safe side—local responsibility on road safety education in schools: good practice and teaching ideas for primary schools, secondary schools and local authorities. http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/divisionhomepage/032504.hcsp

Road safety lesson plans in a range of curriculum subjects for pupils from key stage 1 to AS/A2 level. http://www.databases.dft.gov.uk/lessonplans/

A database of road safety educational resources, launched in March 2005 http://www.databases.dft.gov.uk/roadsafety

Hard-copy teaching materials available from DfTs Free Literature Service include:

Making Choices—moving on to secondary school: teacher's manual, parent's booklet and child's magazine

Out of school care activity pack—for after school clubs

A rural road safety teaching resource for Key Stage 1 and 2 pupils, prepared with RoSPA, will be launched this spring.

The Driving Standards Agency runs the Arrive Alive education programme, aimed at pre-drivers and newly-qualified drivers aged 16–19. The presentation is delivered free of charge to a range of organisations including schools and colleges, armed forces, youth football teams and Young Offenders' Units.

Road safety education and training is often delivered through local authority road safety officers. They can also deliver training schemes such as DfT's Kerbcraft roadside child pedestrian training scheme, the Crossroads pc-based pedestrian training scheme and cycle training.

Trunk Roads

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the criteria by which trunk roads are designated as routes of strategic national importance. [222004]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency announced on 1 December 2004 that the strategic road network would in future be considered as consisting of two categories—roads which are key trade routes of predominantly national and international importance and routes of predominantly regional rather than national importance.

The document 'Devolved Decision Making: a consultation on regional funding allocations' issued by

HM Treasury on 2 December 2004 proposed that the criteria for determining routes of national importance should be as follows:

- To have average daily traffic flows, along the length of the route, of more than 60,000 vehicles
- To link at least two of the top 20 English cities by population; or link one of the top 20 cities with an airport/seaport or Wales/Scotland
- To carry heavy goods vehicle traffic equal to or in excess of 15 per cent. as a percentage of all traffic, as an average along the length of the route
- To be represented on the European Union's trans-European transport network.

A route would have to satisfy all of these criteria.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the Answer of 25 February 2005, Official Report, column 839W, on trunk roads (Bristol), which of the major trunk roads listed are core trunk roads of strategic national importance. [222051]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government's consultation paper—"Devolving Decision Making: A Consultation on Regional Funding Allocations"—set out proposals to establish regional transport funding allocations.

The consultation paper explained that the proposed regional transport funding allocations would initially bring together capital funding projected for major schemes (generally costing over £5 million each) under the Local Transport Plan (LTP) system and for major Highways Agency schemes, except for those on routes of strategic national significance where decisions will continue to be taken nationally.

The M4, and the M5 north of Bristol, are categorised as routes of strategic national importance in the consultation paper.

The consultation paper proposes that the other roads listed in the previous Answer should be regarded as routes of regional significance, for the purposes of future regional decision-making. The proposals for regional funding allocations will give regions a far stronger base on which to plan, and will enable them to contribute to decisions that better reflect regional priorities.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

1 Parliament Street

34. Paul Flynn: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many times in the last year fire alarms have operated in 1 Parliament street; on how many of those occasions the fire brigade attended; and what percentage involved fires causing serious damage. [221540]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: In the year since 1 April 2004, the fire alarm has sounded 22 times in 1 Parliament street. The fire brigade attended 11 of these incidents. None of the 22 incidents involved fires causing serious damage, thanks to the timely intervention of staff. Every effort is being made to reduce the number and frequency of false alarms, which is above what is regarded as an acceptable level.

Parliamentary Cleaners

35. David Taylor: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what role the Commission has in setting the pay and conditions of people employed to clean the parliamentary estate. [221541]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The House of Commons Commission is responsible for the pay and conditions of the 58 cleaning staff who are directly employed by the Refreshment Department, the Department of the Serjeant at Arms and the Library. They are not directly responsible for the pay and conditions of a further 121 cleaners who are employed by contractors.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Citizenship Syllabus

36. Ms Coffey: To ask the Leader of the House what representations he has made to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on giving more emphasis to Parliament in the school citizenship syllabus. [221542]

Mr. Woolas: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 8 February 2005, Official Report, column 1369W.

Programming of Bills

37. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Leader of the House if he will propose to the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons that it examines the arrangements for programming of legislation. [221543]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Westminster Hall

38. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Leader of the House if he will propose to the Select Committee on Modernisation of the House of Commons that it examine the merits of a cross-cutting question time in Westminster Hall on an EU theme. [221544]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend's memorandum to the Modernisation Committee last year suggested that an option would be to use the facility for cross-cutting questions sessions in Westminster Hall for questions on European matters, perhaps on a regular and established basis. I understand that the Committee hopes to report its conclusions shortly.

Prevention of Terrorism Bill

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Leader of the House how many times he has met (a) the Law Lords and (b) Lord Lloyd of Berwick, as former Chairman of the Security Commission, to discuss the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Bill. [221357]

Mr. Hain: I have not met with (a) the Law Lords or (b) Lord Lloyd of Berwick to discuss the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Bill.

SCOTLAND

Small Businesses

6. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet representatives of small business organisations in Scotland to discuss central Government support schemes in Scotland. [221056]

Mrs. McGuire: I frequently meet representatives from small business organisations in Scotland and I am next scheduled to do so on 12 April.

Infantry Regiments

7. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Secretary of State for Defence to discuss the future of Scotland's infantry regiments. [221057]

8. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Secretary of State for Defence to discuss the future of Scotland's infantry regiments. [221058]

Mr. Darling: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and I have had recent discussions on a range of issues.

14. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Secretary of State for Defence to discuss the future of Scotland's infantry regiments. [221065]

Mr. Darling: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for South-West Bedfordshire (Andrew Selous).

Abdelbaset al-Megrahi

11. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive on the transfer of Abdelbaset al-Megrahi from Barlinnie to Greenock prison. [221061]

Mr. Darling: I have not had any discussions with the Scottish Executive on the transfer of Mr Al Megrahi and have nothing to add to the reply on this matter which my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, gave on 9 March 2005, Official Report, column 1885W.

Unemployment

12. Mr. MacDonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the unemployment rate in the highlands and islands since 1997. [221062]

Mrs. McGuire: The claimant count unemployment rate for the Highlands and Islands fell from 6.2 per cent. in 1997 to 2.9 per cent. in 2004, below the Scottish average of 3.5 per cent., and there are around 6,400 fewer people in the area claiming unemployment-related benefits compared to 1997. This demonstrates the success of the Government's strategy of making work pay in every region through initiatives such as new deal, the national minimum wage and working tax credits.

Economic Competitiveness

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive on measures to boost Scottish economic competitiveness. [221059]

Mr. Darling: I have regular discussions with the Scottish Executive on a range of issues. The current strength of the Scottish economy has been made possible by the macroeconomic stability delivered by this Government and our commitment to work with the Executive to develop economic competitiveness by promoting productivity and building a more enterprising, innovative and highly skilled economy.

Means Testing

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Department for Work and Pensions on the impact of means testing on pensioners in Scotland. [221063]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friend has had discussions on a range of issues with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, but not on this topic. Our aim is to ensure security and independence in retirement for everyone while targeting greatest resources on those most in need.

Minimum Wage

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the impact on the economy in Scotland of the announced increase in the level of the national minimum wage; and if he will make a statement. [221060]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friends, the Secretary of State and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced the forthcoming increases in the national minimum wage in Scotland on 25 February.

The adult rate of the minimum wage will increase from £4.85 to £5.05 in October, benefiting 140,000 workers in Scotland. A further 6 per cent. increase to £5.35 is planned for October 2006.

Anyone who thinks they are not being paid the minimum wage should call the helpline on 0845 6000 678 or in Scotland 0845 600 1768, or use the interactive website http://www.tiger.gov.uk.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Freedom of Information

25. Mr. Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs who is responsible for deciding whether information requested from local government under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 qualifies for an exemption under the Act. [221529]

Mr. Leslie: Each individual public authority—and each local authority—is responsible for ensuring that they fulfil their obligations under the Freedom of Information Act. Local councils will make their own arrangements for deciding whether exemptions apply to information requested.

External Consultants

27. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much his Department spent on external consultants in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [221531]

Mr. Lammy: My Department's expenditure with consultants in the years requested was as follows:

2003–04	9,016,488

The level of expenditure with external consultants reflects the wide-ranging and fast paced programme of change within my Department. This programme has contributed significantly to modernised and more efficient public services. Delivering such a programme has necessitated the use of external expertise to supplement internal resources.

Human Rights Act

28. John Robertson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the Human Rights Act 1998 on UK law. [221533]

Mr. Lammy: The impact has been very much as predicted by the Government when the Act was debated here and in another place during its legislative stages. New laws are compliant, old laws are tested and everyone's rights are protected.

Legal Aid

29. Bob Spink: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost of providing legal aid for immigration and asylum cases was in the latest year for which figures are available. [221534]

Mr. Lammy: Actual expenditure in 2003–04 was £203 million. Estimated expenditure for 2004–05 is £170 million and £117 million for 2005–06 in cash terms. A number of important measures were introduced in April 2004 and we expect these measures to reduce expenditure. Funding is being concentrated only on those cases which need it, improving cost control and driving up the quality of services provided by the Legal Services Commission's asylum and immigration suppliers.

30. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of the population had access to civil legal aid in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [221536]

Mr. Lammy: Although we do not have precise data, the results of a number of different surveys indicate that the proportion eligible has remained at approximately 50 per cent. since 1997.

Law Centres

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what support his Department has provided for the maintenance of the network of law centres in England in 2004–05. [221535]

Mr. Lammy: In 2004–05, the DCA has provided funding and contracts to 52 Law Centres in England to a value of £9,0959,968.

This was done through the Legal Services Commission's Community Legal Services Budget.

Lord Chancellor

Mr. Swire: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions he has had with the Lord Chancellor about changing his title. [221524]

Mr. Leslie: Throughout the consideration of the Constitutional Reform Bill in Parliament, I have, of course, had numerous conversations with my noble and learned Friend Lord Falconer about the formal title of Lord Chancellor. The Government decided to preserve the title Lord Chancellor while proceeding with all other substantive reforms to the Office, which we intend will become Ministerial in nature given the proposal to end the judicial functions of that post.

Prevention of Terrorism Bill

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many times the Lord Chancellor met (a) the Law Lords and (b) Lord Lloyd of Berwick as former Chairman of the Security Commission to discuss the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Bill. [221356]

Mr. Leslie: The Lord Chancellor has meetings and discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals. As with previous Administrations it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings which would inhibit the free and frank exchange of views.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Homes Standards (Barnet)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress Barnet council is making on the decent homes standards initiative. [221265]

Keith Hill: In July 2003 Barnet council was awarded a place on the Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO) programme. In December 2004 the council's ALMO, Barnet Homes, secured a 2-star (good) rating from the housing inspectorate, qualifying for access to £19.1 million of ALMO funding for 2004–05 and 2005–06 to improve council homes that currently fail the decent homes standard. Subject to decisions on funding for future years, the council forecasts that all its social housing stock will meet this standard by 2010.

Housing

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his latest estimate is of the number of (a) council,

(b) housing association and (c) private development dwellings that will be completed in each London borough in (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06. [221422]

Keith Hill: Local authorities, in their Housing Strategy Statistical Appendices returns to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, estimate there will be the following additional local authority dwellings in six authorities in 2004–05 and 2005–06. These estimates do not distinguish between new build dwellings and acquisitions.

These estimates are only for dwellings where subsidy is being provided through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme. The information for 2005–06 will not be available until the start of the financial year.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect estimates of completions for new private sector dwellings.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the cost of the infrastructure required to support the level of housing development for south Hampshire set out in the South East England Regional Assembly's document, the South East Plan. [221752]

Mr. Raynsford: It is the responsibility of the South East England Regional Assembly to prepare the draft of the new South East Plan, before submitting it to Government for testing and final approval. Work is under way and includes consideration of the infrastructure in the region. For example, the Assembly commissioned a series of sub regional studies, including one for south Hampshire, which also looked at strategic infrastructure requirements for different growth options, and the delivery mechanisms needed to make sure new housing is provided in the most sustainable way possible. The results of these studies were fed in to the first draft of the South East Plan that is currently available for public consultation. We expect the Regional Assembly to submit their draft plan to Government later this year.

Plug-in Air Fresheners

Mr. Randall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research his Department has undertaken in relation to the fire safety risks of plug-in air fresheners. [221969]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has undertaken no research in relation to the fire safety risks of air fresheners.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 28 February; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [219501]

Margaret Beckett: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council in Brussels on 28 February 2005.

The Council reached political agreement to send decommissioned EU fishing vessels to areas affected by the tsunami. Once possible vessels had been identified, an assessment of their suitability for the relevant communities would be made. Exports would only take place in accordance with requests from the third countries concerned.

The Council adopted by qualified majority a proposal concerning wood used in packaging material entering the Union. I supported this proposal, which will delay until March 2006 a requirement under new EU plant health rules that such wood should have been de-barked, while the scientific evidence for this requirement is reviewed in consultation with third countries.

The Council discussed the Rural Development proposal, focusing on its contribution to Lisbon agenda goals for growth and development, the scope of the competitiveness objective, possible simplification and support for Natura 2000 sites. I stressed that rural development measures should deliver public benefits. On competitiveness, I argued that support should be targeted on those businesses that found it difficult to raise capital through the normal channels. On simplification, I suggested that it would be appropriate to reduce the number of measures and adopt a more flexible approach to cross cutting projects. And I supported the Commission's work on biodiversity and Natura 2000 while suggesting that there could be a focus on water and climate change issues. No specific conclusions were drawn but the presidency indicated that it would be producing a revised draft of the proposal in the course of the week.

The Council discussed the CAP financing proposal. We stressed the importance of securing equitable treatment of those member states outside the euro zone, supported the case for effective application of the budgetary discipline provisions and reiterated the need for further modulation, whether voluntary or compulsory, to meet land management commitments.

A number of points were raised under any other business. The Commission reported on: the case of a French goat in which BSE had been diagnosed; and on continuing contacts with the Russian authorities over their veterinary and plant health import requirements. The presidency accepted a Dutch request to discuss at a future Council the threat posed by Avian Influenza. Germany urged the Council to seek involvement in action on food and health, sought an update on the WTO Dispute Panel considering the EU approval system for GM crops and products, and suggested a greater use of country of origin requirements in food labelling. The Commission rejected a Spanish proposal that the sugar trade concession offered to certain developing countries under the Everything But Arms commitment should be amended. The Commission also undertook to examine a Spanish request as to whether a regionalised approach to decoupling of tobacco aid could be permitted under the CAP reforms agreed last April. Olive oil producing countries pressed for the EU to resume its contributions to international promotional campaigns. Italy requested a change in the method for calculating part of the aid granted to nut producers. Several landlocked countries pressed for action to help dispose of the exceptionally heavy cereals harvest of 2004.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many meetings (a) she, (b) her Ministers and (c) her officials have had in the past 12 months with representatives of (i) the International Fund for Animal Welfare, (i) the League Against Cruel Sports and (iii) the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. [201352]

Margaret Beckett: Ministers and officials meet representatives of these bodies from time to time in the normal course of business.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that she has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209220]

Margaret Beckett: None.

Ministerial Stationery

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on official ministerial (a) business cards, (b) headed paper and (c) compliment slips in each year since 1997. [214942]

Margaret Beckett: Defra was established in 2001, and a breakdown of expenditure on ministerial business cards, headed paper and compliment slips for each financial year since then is as follows:

£ (plus VAT)

	Ministerial letterheads	Ministerial compliment slips	Ministerial business cards
2001–02	5,090	0	0
2002–03	7,800.70	0	0
2003–04	0	100	135
2004–to date	0	0	0

School Meals

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will meet the Secretary of State for Education and Skills to discuss ways of using more locally grown produce for school meals. [221691]

Alun Michael: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) is already involved with Defra in implementing the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative (PSFPI) that includes, as a key objective, a requirement to increase the opportunities for small local farmers and growers to compete to supply public bodies with food.

A representative from DfES sits on the cross-public sector Food Procurement Implementation Group tasked with promoting the PSFPI within schools and other public bodies. DfES' Director of School Resources was also a panel member in a plenary discussion at the National Food Suppliers Conference on 7 March 2005, which attracted some 200 farmers, growers and suppliers from across England to learn about the PSFPI and the opportunities for supplying the public sector.

More information about the conference and the PSFPI is given on Defra's website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/sustain/procurement/awareness.htm.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether departmental special advisers have attended meetings with external (a) bodies and (b) individuals, in their official capacity and without Ministers, since May 1997. [203444]

Margaret Beckett: Special advisers hold meetings with a wide range of external representatives in their official capacity. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role is fulfilled by the third special adviser in her Department. [210487]

Margaret Beckett: Special advisers in this department are appointed under the terms and conditions set out in Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 when special advisers attended meetings with external representatives at which Ministers were not present. [210535]

Margaret Beckett: Special advisers hold meetings with a wide range of external representatives in their official capacity. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the speeches her special advisers made in an official capacity between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004, broken down by date. [210556]

Margaret Beckett: All speeches given by special advisers are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Working Time Regulations

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many officials working in ministerial private offices in the Department have worked more than a 48 hour week at any time in the last 12 months for which figures are available; how many of those had signed a waiver under working time regulations; and what percentage these figures represented of the total in each case. [204144]

Margaret Beckett: Most members of Defra ministerial private offices have worked more than a 48 hour week at some time over the past 12 months.

The working time regulations provide workers with the protection of a limit of an average of 48 hours a week working time. This is not an absolute cap of 48 hours in any one week. This average is normally calculated over a 17 week reference period, although this can be longer in certain situations (26 weeks) and can be extended by agreement (up to 52 weeks). Workers may choose to work more than 48 hours per week over this reference period by signing an opt-out agreement, but employers cannot force a worker to sign an op-out, and workers cannot be subjected to detriment for refusing to sign an opt-out.

No members of private offices have signed an 'opt-'out' agreement.

TREASURY

Bribes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many requests for guidance on the Income and Corporation Tax Act 1988 section 577A, concerning tax deductibility on bribes and special commissions, have been received by (a) the Inland Revenue and (b) the Inland Revenue's Head Office since April 2004. [221698]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue does not keep central records of requests for general or specific guidance on section 577A of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988. However the Head Office team most likely to receive requests for guidance have since April 2004 received some dozen requests from Inland Revenue officers and others.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many reports of (a) evidence of overseas bribery and (b) suspicions of overseas bribery have been passed to the Inland Revenue's Special Compliance Office since April 2004; [221702]

(2) how many reports of suspected bribery have been passed by the Inland Revenue to law enforcement agencies under the gateway provided by section 19 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [221703]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Business Rates

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the change to business tax receipts in 2005–06 arising from the business rates revaluation in England. [221864]

Dawn Primarolo: Initial estimates were announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local and Regional Government in the written ministerial statement on the distributable amount of national non-domestic rates for 2005–06 on 2 December 2004, Official Report, column 47WS. The net rate yield from local lists after reliefs was forecast to increase by 9.6 per cent., from £15,853 million for 2004–05 to £17,368 million for 2005–06.

Company Taxation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much tax the Inland Revenue's Oil Taxation Office has collected on (a) signature bonuses, (b) consultancy fees and (c) special commissions on overseas business by UK companies since April 2004; [221699]

(2) how much tax the Inland Revenue's Large Business Office has collected on (a) consultancy fees, (b) special commissions and (c) entertainment expenses for overseas business by UK companies since April 2004. [221700]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many penalties the Inland Revenue has issued for claims on expenditure that are disallowed under section 577A of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 since April 2004; and what the total value of these penalties is. [221701]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General will reply to the letter dated 1 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Carl Walker. [221910]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Dividend Tax Credit System

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on pension funds of the abolition of the dividend tax credit system; [221510]

(2) whether he plans to review the effect on pension funds of the abolition of the dividend tax credit system. [221511]

Mr. Timms: The Government's 1997 package of corporation tax reforms included measures to boost corporate investment by removing tax distortions. The withdrawal of payable tax credits on dividends was just one part of these measures. Pension funds and others will share in the long-term benefits from these changes to corporation tax.

The overall effects of these changes on pension funds will depend on a variety of factors including the type of scheme paying the pension, the take-up of private pensions, the level of future pension contributions, pension schemes' asset allocation and investment policies and investment returns generally.

It is not possible to isolate the effect of the July 1997 Budget measures generally from the effect of other factors.

Income Tax (Scotland)

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue impact for Scotland of (a) raising and (b) lowering the basic rate of income tax by one pence. [221372]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to table 1.6 'Direct effect of illustrative tax changes' on the Inland Revenue website:

www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax_expenditures/table1-6.pdf.

London Marathon

Sarah Teather: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to impose VAT on sponsorship payments from those entering runners in the London Marathon; and if he will make a statement. [222119]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no plans to change the VAT rules on sponsorship payments and no charity need find themselves paying VAT on the funds raised by sponsored runners. Charities can also claim an extra 28p for every £1 of sponsorship raised under the Gift Aid scheme.

Nursing Bursaries

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will exempt the student bursary for nurses and midwives from tax; and if he will make a statement; [222139]

(2) if he will estimate the cost of exempting the student bursary for nurses and midwives from tax. [222141]

Dawn Primarolo: Students nurses and midwives who receive support through the NHS Bursary Scheme are exempt from tax and from national insurance deductions on the bursary, which is treated as a student grant and not classed as salary or wage.

Private Equity Industry

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of (a) the size of the private equity industry and (b) its contribution to the UK economy; [222088]

(2) what estimate he has made of (a) the number of employees and (b) the proportion of the private sector workforce employed in (i) the private equity industry and (ii) companies financed by the private equity industry. [222089]

John Healey: Alongside the 2003 pre-Budget report the Government published 'Bridging the Finance Gap: next steps in improving access to growth capital for small businesses'. This set out the Government's assessment of the importance of private equity to the economy, the Government's desire to see a deep and liquid venture capital market in the UK, and the reforms that the Government are bringing forward to improve access to finance for smaller businesses affected by the equity gap.

Stamp Duty

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue raised (a) in total and (b) within each stamp duty band in (i) Scotland and (ii) the UK. [221395]

Mr. Timms: Estimates of stamp duty revenues raised in the UK in each stamp duty band are given at:

http://www.inlandrevenne.gov.uk/stats/stamp_duty/table15_3_october04.pdf

Estimates of revenue raised from transactions in Scotland are only available for 2003–04 and are given in the following table:

Estimated revenue from stamp duty land tax in Scotland in 2003–04

Stamp duty band	(£ million)
£250,000 or less	100
£250,001–£500,000	50

Tax Revenues

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total revenue impact has been of changes in (a) duty on whisky, (b) duty on road fuels, (c) national insurance contributions and (d) the rates and bands for income tax since May 1997. [221373]

Dawn Primarolo: Duty receipts are published once a month in the HM Customs and Excise Tobacco Bulletin', which can be found on the UK trade info website at: www.uktradeinfo.com

VAT (Hospices)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Prime Minister in relation to making hospices exempt from the payment of VAT. [221633]

John Healey: The Chancellor and the Prime Minister meet regularly to discuss a wide range of issues. It has been the practice of successive Administrations for many years not to make public confidential communications between Ministers. Doing so would harm the candour and frankness of internal discussions.

WALES

European Constitution

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs concerning publication of the Welsh translation of the Constitutional Treaty for the European Union. [220342]

Mr. Touhig: I am pleased to say that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will be producing a Welsh translation of the Constitutional Treaty. This will be published on the FCO and the Wales Office websites.

Estelle Morris: Under the terms of its Royal Charter the BBC currently has a Regional Advisory Council for each of its 11 English regions. These regions do not coincide with the Government's regional office structure.

The Government's Charter Review Green Paper discusses possible ways of improving the BBC's responsiveness to licence fee payers, including building on the Corporation's existing regional and national Councils.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter dated 3 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Colin Brierley. [221911]

[222057]

Estelle Morris: Youth Music, a national charity set up in 1999 with £10 million per year of National Lottery money provided through Arts Council England, has granted over 1,500 awards nationally and reached over 880,000 participants. All projects funded through Youth Music are evaluated.

Youth Music has also funded seven Wider Opportunities pilots, in which schools have developed programmes to explore ways of delivering instrumental tuition to groups of young people. 'Creating Chances for Making Music', an evaluation of these pilots (and of a further six funded by DfES), has been sent to every primary school and LEA in England.

Ofsted produced an evaluation report of 12 Wider Opportunities pilot areas. Findings were sent to all schools and LEAs in the form of a report and DVD entitled 'Tuning In'.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the cost of running the Television Licensing Authority was in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement; [221592]

(2) whether the running costs of the Television Licensing Authority are deducted from the total revenue derived from the television licence; and if she will make a statement. [221593]

Estelle Morris: The BBC is the television licensing authority. The Corporation contracts out the collection work to a number of agents and meets these costs directly. The collection costs for each of the last three years, as published in the BBC's annual reports and accounts, were:

	Amount (£ million)
2001–02	95.4

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what programmes the Government are considering planning to assist in Bangladesh; and if he will make a statement. [218496]

Hilary Benn: DFID's programme aid to Bangladesh in 2005–06 will be £125 million.

Our programme priorities will be: Primary Education, Healthcare, Water and Sanitation, Livelihoods of the Poorest, Private Sector Development and Economic Infrastructure, Governance, and Disaster Preparedness and Climate Change.

Examples of funding under our programme include:

£50 million for an eight-year livelihoods programme to benefit 6.5 million poorest and most vulnerable people living on chars (sand islands) in the river areas in northern Bangladesh.

£54 million over five years for the Government's State-owned Enterprise Reform Programme jointly funded by the World Bank to help reduce the Government's fiscal deficit and help free up resources for poverty reduction programmes.

£36 million to support road maintenance to allow better access for the poor to markets.

£25 million together with Royal Netherlands embassy for financial management reform in the Ministry of Finance.

$13 million (£8 million) together with the United Nations Development Programme to the Government of Bangladesh programme to improve the performance and professionalism of the police force.

Iraq

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total cost of aid to Iraq has been since March 2003, broken down by main area of expenditure. [221423]

Hilary Benn: Since March 2003, DFID has disbursed £254 million for humanitarian and reconstruction assistance to Iraq. This is broken down as follows:

	£ million
UN Agencies in response to their 2003 Emergency Appeals	84
Red Cross and Red Crescent movement	18
Reconstruction in Southern Iraq	35
Government, Justice, Media and Civil Society	9
DFID secondments and consultants to the Coalition Provisional Authority	24
International Reconstruction Fund Facility for Iraq (IRFFI)	70
Other multilateral contributions	9
Support for NGO projects	5

A further £86 million has been committed to projects which are in the process of implementation.

DFID also provides 19 per cent. of European Community (EC) funding for Iraq (this is currently £38 million for 2003 and 2004).

Reconstruction support to Iraq has also been provided by other Government Departments: The FCO—£38 million for secondments to the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA); MOD—£20 million for Quick Impact Projects (QIPs); and the joint DFID/FCO/MOD Global Conflict Prevention Pool—£19 million.

Malaria

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding was allocated by his Department and its agencies for the control of malaria in each year between 1999–2000 and 2004–05, broken down by (a) country, (b) global region and (c) recipient organisation; and what such funding has been allocated for each financial year to 2009–10. [220663]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: UK support to malaria control is provided through funding to: bilateral programmes at country level; global partnerships and programmes; multilateral agencies; and research agencies.

Funding at country and regional level

At country-level DFID supports malaria control through bilateral programmes. Some of these are malaria specific, but increasingly DFID funds the broader health sector plans of developing country governments through sector wide programming and poverty reduction budget support. Such sectoral programmes will build capacity in health systems to improve the way health services diagnose and treat all main causes of illness. It is therefore not always possible to identify the proportion spent on malaria. From 1998–99 to date UK support at country level to specific malaria programmes was about £58 million. In addition we have provided approximately £49 million for projects targeted on malaria and other diseases or which may have an impact on malaria control. This funding is part of over £1.5 billion committed by the UK to strengthening developing country health systems since 1997.

Funding to organisations at international level

DFID has contributed about £153 million from 1998–99 to date to international programmes which target malaria and other diseases. In addition we also provide funding to multilateral organisations such as the World Bank and the European Commission which also support malaria control and health services.

DFID has committed funding to a number of global health partnerships, multilaterals, research agencies, and public-private partnerships. These current and future commitments are set out in table A as follows. These figures are not broken down by year.

Table A

Relief Initiatives (HIPC)

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage greater gender equality in heavily indebted poor countries. [221007]

Hilary Benn: In order to qualify for debt relief under the heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) initiative, all HIPCs are required to develop a poverty reduction strategy paper. DFID works to ensure that gender issues are included in the analysis of poverty and that women are fully involved in stakeholder consultations on poverty reduction strategies. DFID has recently renewed its commitment to assisting partner governments to strengthen their capacity to analyse gender issues in policy formulation, implementation and monitoring.

Rwanda

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid the UK provided to Rwanda (a) bilaterally and (b) multilaterally in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [221434]

Hilary Benn: The United Kingdom (UK) has provided bilateral aid to Rwanda since the UK financial year 1996–97 as follows:

	Total (£000)
1996–97	9,704
1997–98	61,98
1998–99	[1]19,242

Asian Tsunami

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how much public funds the Government have pledged to tsunami relief and reconstruction; and if he will make a statement; [221226]

(2) what the Government's policy is on the proportion of Government support to the level of public donations to the tsunami appeal. [221227]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The public has responded with remarkable generosity to this disaster and I commend the individuals, groups, organisations and communities who have contributed to this overwhelming response. We estimate that the Government will be contributing approximately £50 million through tax relief on public donations made through the Gift Aid Scheme.

The Department for International Development (DFID) has committed £75 million for the immediate relief and recovery needs following the tsunami (over £61 million of which has already been programmed).

We have also agreed debt relief for Sri Lanka through the Multilateral Debt relief initiative, which will amount to approximately £45 million. Together with other G7 donors we have also agreed to defer debt payments during 2005 for tsunami affected countries which request it.

We expect to contribute more money over time for longer-term reconstruction. However, our response will be guided by the findings of needs assessments of the affected countries currently being finalised, and the level of resources which are already available to the affected countries, rather than by linking the Government's contribution to that of the British public. We are continuing to work hard with partner governments and the international community to ensure that support reaches those most affected by the disaster.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Childcare Vouchers

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what requirement there is on public sector organisations to offer childcare vouchers to their staff; and if she will make a statement. [218190]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

There is no obligation on any employer to offer childcare vouchers. That includes employers in the public sector. However, the Government actively encourages all employers to support employees with their childcare needs, particularly through the introduction from April 2005 of tax and National Insurance Contributions (NICs) exemptions for up to £50 of childcare costs per week.

Children in Care

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were taken into care as a result of a parent being sent to prison in the last year for which figures are available. [221198]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The information is not collected centrally.

Cross-border Tracking

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what cross-border tracking of children on the at risk register takes place between the relevant authorities in England and Wales. [220325]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 4 March 2005]: A central child protection register is maintained for each area covered by a social services department in England and Wales. The register lists all the children in the area (including those who have been placed there by another local authority or agency) who are considered to be at continuing risk of significant harm.

When a child on the register moves to another local authority area the authority where the child has been living must notify the receiving local authority of the child's move. The receiving local authority should convene a child protection conference within 15 working days of being notified of the move.

The Information Sharing Indexes currently under development aim to help children moving area by enabling better communication between professionals in different areas so that services in their new area can identify which services the children were receiving in their old area. We are working with the Welsh Assembly to establish data standards to support information transfer between English and Welsh Authorities.

Departmental Policies

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on access by hon. Members to the chief executives of public bodies for which her Department is responsible to discuss the effects in individual constituencies of policy decisions made on a national basis; and if she will make a statement. [222104]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Hon. Members can approach the chief executives of public bodies as they wish, about any issues that are of concern to them and that are relevant to the public body.

Disability Discrimination Bill

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans the Government have to monitor the compliance of schools with the duty to promote equal opportunities under the Disability Discrimination Bill. [217657]

Margaret Hodge: Our plans for monitoring how schools promote equality of opportunity for disabled people will be implemented in the following ways: our current arrangements for monitoring the quality of provision generally will include inspecting against the duty to promote equality of opportunity for disabled people. Second we will ensure inspections carried out by Office for Standards in Education will inspect this aspect. Third the rights of disabled people will be reflected in the arrangements we are developing as part of the New Relationship with Schools, including school self-evaluation, and finally our powers to support and challenge schools will enable us to monitor complains with the new duty.

Education Funding (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total expenditure on the Sure Start scheme has been in Tamworth in each year since the scheme has been in operation. [221938]

Margaret Hodge: Sure Start Tamworth is a round 4 Sure Start local programme which received approval in November 2001. It has a capital allocation of £1 million. Its revenue allocations were: £115,000 in 2001–02, £404,000 in 2002–03, £599,000 in 2003–04 and £613,975 in 2004–05. We have just written to the programme announcing its future revenue allocations of £629,324 in 2005–06 and the same amount in 2006–07.

The programme has 619 children aged 4 and under in its catchment area, which covers the wards of Glascote and Belgrave. This area represents the highest level of multiple deprivation within Tamworth. Glascote ward falls wholly within the 20 per cent. band of deprived wards in England and ranks as the fifth most deprived ward in Staffordshire according to the 2000 index of local deprivation.

The programme has used its capital for two builds, the Exley Centre based in Belgrave which has focused on the refurbishment of a Community Centre providing a much needed central point for families in that area. This centre has recently received Ofsted approval to deliver 16 full day-care places. The Glascote Centre based in Glascote Heath is a new build currently registered for 24 full day-care places and providing a base for family support, training, health provision and Jobcentre plus links.

The programme has made strong links with health and employs a midwife and a public health promotion co-ordinator within the programme. This had led to some unique service developments—the programme run a very successful food co-operative and provide families with 'healthy meal bags' which can be purchased for minimal costs but provide a family with all of the ingredients for a healthy, nutritious meal. The success of this project has led to the development of the 'Glascote Soup Kitchen' involving families in the preparation and consumption of nutritious meals, also providing an opportunity for parents to drop in and access not only healthy eating advice, but discuss wider issues with Family Support Workers and Health Advisors.

The Programme has also developed a very successful training and volunteer programme—with parents currently engaged at all levels—from basic first aid through to a familiarisation course with Staffordshire University. There are also clear links with Jobcentre plus, with on-going training for Sure Start staff on in-work benefit calculations and back to work support and guided visits (supported by the Child Care Partnership Manager) to the local Jobcentre plus office for parents wishing to return to work.

National Children's Bureau

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding her Department provided to the National Children's Bureau in 2004–05. [221222]

Margaret Hodge: The Department has allocated a total of £978,000 in funding to the National Children's Bureau in 2004–05.

Section 52 Budget Statements

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the expenditure from section 52 budget statements of each local education authority in each of the last three years, broken down by (a) total education revenue expenditure, (b) total schools budget and (c) individual schools budget; and what percentage of the expenditure under section 52 budget statements this represented in each case. [221220]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is contained within a table which has been placed in the Library.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how funding of special educational needs provision is made available through the Learning and Skills Council. [221214]

Margaret Hodge: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) allocates funds to local education authorities (LEAs) in England to help support them meet their duty to arrange suitable provision for young people aged 16–19 with statements of special educational needs (SEN). The LSC notify LEAs of their post-16 SEN allocations in December for the following financial year.

Vetting

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the countries referred to in her Department's recent letter (reference 881/6026) to schools where (a) it is not possible to carry out a meaningful Criminal Records Bureau check on foreign nationals and (b) a certificate of good conduct may be obtained for applicants applying for posts working with children. [221442]

Margaret Hodge: My Department's letter of 9 February 2005 advised independent schools of the need to carry out checks on foreign nationals in line with the guidance given in DfES publication 0278/2002.

This guidance about pre-appointment checks on teachers and other workers in schools was issued to all employers in the education service in May 2002 and advises that, if a person who they intend to appoint to work in a school has never lived in the UK, no purpose will be served by asking them to apply for a Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) Disclosure when they come to this country.

The Bureau's Overseas Information Service provides advice to employers on the availability of criminal record information from overseas. The service currently covers 16 countries (Denmark, France, Germany, Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, Poland, Canada, Jamaica, South Africa, Malaysia, Philippines, Australia, New Zealand, Italy (excluding Vatican City) and Finland). The CRB is in discussions with the 10 accession countries to the European Union and aims to provide information through the Overseas Information Service about the criminal record information available from these countries within the near future.

Where criminal record information is not available, we recommend that employers take extra care in taking up references and carrying out other checks on a person's background.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects the Green Paper on Young People to be published; whether there are issues which are expected to cause further delays in publication; and if she will make a statement on the reasons for the delays that have occurred so far. [220869]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The Youth Green Paper will set out a comprehensive offer for young people covering three main areas: things to do and places to go; targeted support for young people at risk; and universal information and support for young people and their parents. It will be published shortly.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 22 February 2005, Official Report, columns 598–99W, on clothing contracts, what the terms of the contract are which prevent him from specifically commenting on sub-contractor details. [221024]

Mr. Ingram: It is assumed my hon. Friend refers specifically to the cut and sew contract awarded by the Ministry of Defence.

Defence Contract Condition (DefCon) 531, which is applied to the cut and sew contract, states that information cannot be disclosed without the consent of the Prime Contractor. There is also a Condition, regarding publicity, which allows for external communication by mutual consent only. Staff Sergeant May continues to serve in the Army.

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of current work on the Harrier GR7 to GR9 conversion and majors is being undertaken at (a) RAF Cottesmore and (b) BAE Warton; and at what cost. [220841]

Mr. Ingram: No scheduling was planned before the decision to roll-forward the Harrier air depth maintenance support to RAF Cottesmore was made in March 2004.

Jaguar Aircraft

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to extend the in-service life of the Jaguar. [220840]

Two Batch 3 Type 42 destroyers, HMS York and HMS Edinburgh were recently fitted with the Mark 8 Mod 1 gun as part of their scheduled upkeep work. There are no plans to retrofit the gun to any other Batch 2 or Batch 3 Type 42s.

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 125W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Govan (Mr. Sarwar).

Royal Regiment of Fusiliers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply to the letter about the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers which was sent to him by the hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham on 8 December 2004. [221880]

Mr. Ingram: I replied to the hon. Member on 11 March 2005.

Scottish Infantry Training

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the training centre for the Scottish infantry soldiers is to be located. [221612]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 14 March 2005]: All Infantry training is conducted at the Infantry Training Centre (ITC) at Catterick. There are no plans for Scottish Infantry recruits to be trained anywhere else in the UK apart from at ITC Catterick.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of the military operation in Sierra Leone in 2001 was; and how many UK troops were involved. [221386]

Mr. Ingram: The cost to the Ministry of Defence of military operations in Sierra Leone during 2000–01 was £16.9 million.

At its peak in May 2000 there were 4,500 personnel deployed in Sierra Leone on Operation Palliser.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 when special advisers attended meetings with external representatives at which Ministers were not present; [210539]

(2) if he will list the speeches his special advisers made in an official capacity between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004, broken down by date. [210566]

Mr. Caplin: Ministry of Defence special advisers have many regular meetings with a wide variety of external bodies as a routine part of their duties. All meetings held by departmental special advisers are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

All speeches given by special advisers are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Trident

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answers to the hon. Members for North Tayside (Pete Wishart) and for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond), of 2 March 2005, Official Report, column 1234W, on Trident, whether he has made an estimate of potential casualties in the west of Scotland arising from a catastrophic malfunction of a Trident nuclear warhead at the base on the Clyde that leads to a nuclear yield; and whether he has made an estimate of potential casualties in the west of Scotland arising from a malfunction of a Trident nuclear warhead at the base on the Clyde that resulted in a radioactive release short of a nuclear yield into (a) the atmosphere and (b) the Firth of Clyde. [221028]

Mr. Hoon: There is no requirement under Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations 2001 to assess the number of potential casualties arising from a malfunction of a Trident nuclear warhead at the base on the Clyde and no estimates have therefore been made. However, it is highly unlikely that any catastrophic malfunction of a Trident warhead, resulting in a radioactive release into the atmosphere or the Firth of Clyde, would occur.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what times in each of the last four years emergency services have been called to handle (a) fire, (b) smoke and (c) electrical malfunction at the Explosives Handling Jetty at the Royal Naval Armament Depot at Coulport on Loch Long; and on which of these occasions nuclear material was within (i) 50 yards, (ii) 100 yards and (iii) 500 yards of the incident. [221034]

Mr. Ingram: Since March 2001, there have been eight occasions when smoke or electrical malfunction has led to the Defence Fire Service (DFS) being called to the Explosives Handling Jetty (EHJ) at the Royal Naval Armament Depot at Coulport on Loch Long. There have been no fires. All incidents were addressed promptly and none posed a threat to personnel, submarines, the facility or nuclear material.

Date	Incident	Nuclear material
April 2001	Smell of burning. False alarm.	None
May 2001	Electrical malfunction. Smoke.	Submarine within 50 yards
October 2002	Electrical malfunction. Smoke.	None
October 2002	Smoke from vehicle engine.	None
March 2003	Electrical Malfunction. Smoke.	None
April 2003	Smell of burning. Overheating battery.	None
August 2004	Electrical Malfunction. Smoke.	Submarine within 50 yards
September 2004	Smell of burning. False alarm.	Submarine within 100 yards

The EHJ is fitted with a comprehensive and sensitive fire detection system which reflects the value of the facility and the activities undertaken there. Flammable material is strictly controlled and constitutes only a small percentage of the EHJ construction. A vigorous precautionary approach is taken to all alarm triggers and all are attended by the on-site Defence Fire Service (DFS).

Nuclear material is strictly controlled throughout the Depot and is not stored on the EHJ. While nuclear material onboard a submarine is likely to be within 100 yards of the EHJ, any fire on the jetty would present negligible hazard to the onboard nuclear material because submarine design limits the risk from external hazards.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the operational costs of (a) the UK nuclear warhead programme, (b) the Trident submarine programme and (c) the warhead delivery system were in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [221371]

Mr. Hoon: The combined capital and running costs of the United Kingdom nuclear warhead programme, the Trident submarine programme and the warhead delivery system was around 3 per cent. of the annual defence budget for financial year 2003–04. The total cost for the current financial year is not yet available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences he has issued in each of the last five years to Wickham Research Laboratories for the purposes of experiments on live animals; what the aims of the experiments were; what species of animals were involved; how many animals were involved; what the level of severity of the experiments was; and if he will make a statement. [218718]

Caroline Flint: It is an offence under section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 for anyone with functions under the Act to disclose information given to them in confidence. I am therefore only prepared to provide information of the type requested with the agreement of the establishment concerned.

On that basis I am able to confirm no more than that the named establishment currently holds three project licences granted under the 1986 Act, that it undertakes safety and quality assurance testing of medicines and other healthcare products, and that the species it uses are rats, rabbits, mice and guinea pigs.

Asylum Seekers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appeals against initial decision have been filed by asylum seekers in each year since 1992. [217748]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is published in the annual and quarterly asylum statistics, available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of asylum seekers have appealed against their initial decision in each year since 1992. [217749]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is published in the annual asylum statistics bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom", available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of asylum cases, including final appeal, were decided within six months in 2004. [219127]

Mr. Browne: Information on the proportion of new substantive asylum applications in 2004, that were decided, including final appeal, within six months, is not yet available. Information relating to applications made in 2004 will be available in August 2005.

Information on the timeliness of asylum cases is published in the quarterly asylum statistics on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of failed asylum seekers were removed in 2004. [219129]

Mr. Browne: It is not possible to know what exactly proportion of applications made in 2004 will prove to be unfounded, or will eventually result in removal. Some applications made in 2004 are still awaiting the outcome of initial decisions or of appeals. Other cases are in the process of removal, can, in certain cases, create a number of barriers, for example the length of time it takes to obtain documentation to allow individuals to be accepted back by their countries of origin. Many failed applicants may either leave the UK voluntarily without advising the Home Office, or seek to evade the Home Office in order to try to avoid removal, or come from countries where removal is very difficult due to the situation in the country (e.g. Iraq).

The level of asylum applications has continued to fall. There were 33,930 applications for asylum, excluding dependants, in the UK in 2004, a third fewer than in 2003.

Information on the numbers of asylum applications and removals of failed asylum seekers is published in the quarterly asylum statistics on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications have been made by his Department to the Iranian Government for passports or other travel documentation to facilitate the repatriation of failed asylum seekers in each of the last six months; and what the average time between the application and the delivery of such documentation has been over that period. [220872]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 8 March 2005]: Applications for travel documents to facilitate return are made by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). Internal statistics show that, over the last six months, IND has applied for a total of 24 Iranian travel documents.

Of the 24 applications for travel documents made by IND, none have as yet been issued by the Iranian authorities.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers have been compulsorily returned to Iran in each of the last six months. [220873]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The latest available information on the number of failed asylum seekers who have been returned to Iran shows that in the six months from July to December 2004, 30 persons were removed. A breakdown by month is shown in the table.

Persons removed from the United Kingdom to Iran in each of the last six months of 2004 [1,2]

These figures are based on management information and are not National Statistics; the data are also provisional and are rounded to the nearest five and may not sum due to rounding.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to focus the asylum system on those genuinely fleeing persecution by taking speedy, high quality decisions and reducing significantly unfounded asylum claims; [219124]

(2) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to ensure the fast turnaround of manifestly unfounded asylum cases; [219125]

(3) whether the public service agreement target to ensure that 75 per cent. of substantive asylum applications are decided within two months by 2004 was met; [219126]

(4) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to enforce the immigration laws more effectively by removing a greater proportion of failed asylum seekers; [219128]

(5) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce unfounded asylum claims; [219135]

(6) what recent progress has been made towards the Public Service Agreement target to tackle abuse of the immigration laws and promote controlled legal migration. [219136]

Mr. Browne: Performance against my Department's targets is published in the Annual Report and the Autumn Performance Report available in the House Library and on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk).

Begging (Children)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions under the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 there have been of individuals for procuring a child to beg in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [220667]

Paul Goggins: The available information contained in the table gives the number of offenders found guilty at all courts for

"causing a child or young person to be in any street, etc., for purpose of begging" under the Children and Young Persons Act 1933, Section 4, England and Wales 1990 to 2003.

Statistics on court proceedings for 2004 will be published in the autumn.

Control Orders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the effect the operation of Control Orders will have on the families of those subject to the orders. [216836]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The implications for the family of someone subject to a Control Order will vary depending on the particular conditions imposed on the individual.

Correspondence

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Northavon dated 11 January (Home Office ref: B1020/5) regarding a constituent, Mr. Peter Tippett. [219748]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 4 March 2005]: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to the hon. Member on 2 March 2005.

Fixed Penalty Notices

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed penalty notice offences have been issued for each basic command unit in England and Wales for (a) selling alcohol to a person under 18, (b) the purchase of alcohol for a person under 18 on licensed premises, (c) the consumption of alcohol by a person under 18 and (d) allowing delivery of alcohol to a person under 18. [209239]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The total number of penalty notices issued for these offences for the period January to November 2004 is 61. The table details the available information for each police force area in England and Wales broken down by offence. Purchase of alcohol for a person under 18 on licensed premises has been broken down into the offence committed in a bar and that in licensed premises as the latter was only added to the scheme from 1 November to target off licence offences. Data are collected centrally at police force level only.

Penalty notice disposal provides the police with a quick and effective way of dealing with this type of minor offence without the need to prosecute. As four of these offences only became liable to disposal by penalty notice from 1 November, the number of offenders dealt with in this way will rise significantly.

The Christmas Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign ran from 17 December 2004 to 3 January 2005 involving 188 Borough Command Units. Data from the campaign show that 72 penalty notices were issued for offences connected with selling alcohol to persons under 18, 32 in connection with on-licences and 40 in connection with off-licences.

Immigration (Illegal Working)

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employers (a) were investigated between 27 January and 10 February 2003 and (b) have been investigated since 10 February 2003 for offences related to alleged intended or actual employment of illegal workers or facilitation of illegal immigration or other immigration-related offences (i) under the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996, (ii) under the Nationality, Asylum and Immigration Act 2002 and (iii) under other legislation; how many were prosecuted; how many were convicted; and what the (A) minimum, (B) average and (C) maximum sentences imposed were, broken down by offence. [220877]

Mr. Browne: Internal management information shows that in the financial year 2002–03 301 illegal working operations were reported as having taken place; as a result of these, 1,099 offenders were detected. In the year 2003–04, 697 operations were reported and 2,304 offenders were detected. It is not possible to break down this information into the periods requested.

The latest available information on the number of persons proceeded against for offences under Immigration Acts 1971 to 2002 in England and Wales in the periods requested, together with the penalties imposed, is shown in the table.

Official statistics on the number of people proceeded against during 2004 will be published in autumn 2005 in the Home Office Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 2004". This will be available from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Tuberculosis (UK Entrants)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action is taken if an individual is tested on entry to the UK and found to have tuberculosis. [217744]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Cases of tuberculosis (TB), which are identified at the ports are currently followed up within the United Kingdom by the national health service. This is because refusal of entry and summary removal on grounds of public health would put the person concerned and other passengers at risk.

Under the new approach announced in our recent asylum and immigration strategy, we will apply TB checks overseas, rather than at the port of entry, thus ensuring that TB is treated before the person concerned travels to the UK.

Laptop Computers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which suppliers service his Department's laptop computers; what the (a) length and (b) total value of each contract is; how many laptop computers are covered by each contract; what the annual or monthly charge per laptop for servicing them is; what the tariff for services not covered by the general servicing agreement is; which such additional services have been purchased; and in what quantities. [216314]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Sirius (Fujitsu Alcedo Ltd.) is responsible for providing the remote access laptops service for the Core Home Office. The length of the contract remaining is five years 359 days. The total value of the contract based on current usage is £3,368,617. The contract is based on variable demand with an upper limit of 9,999. We currently have 1,127 users.

The monthly charge per laptop for A4 size is £162.93 and for A5 size is £158.19. This includes the supply of laptop, network infrastructure, ongoing support including break fix and technology refresh of infrastructure and laptop.

Enhancements to the base remote access service are:

Standard docking service. This service enables the laptop to be plugged in and used as standard workstation in the office. The service charge is £22.73 per month per workstation for first 472 and £61.62 per month per workstation for more than 473. The current demand is 87.

ISDN Adaptor. The charge is £5.37 per adaptor per month. The current demand is 177.

Additional multi-user. This allows the sharing of one laptop with up to 10 users at a charge of £16.44 per month additional user with password access to a particular laptop. The current number of users sharing is 445.

Leave to Remain Applications

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received from the English language school industry in the UK on his proposals to increase the cost of Leave to Remain applications from international students; and if he will make a statement. [221387]

Mr. Browne: Since 1 September 2004 I have received 12 letters from MPs on behalf of the English language school industry. The following organisations responded to the Home Office Consultation "Charges for Immigration Applications", which closed on 8 December 2004: English UK, Association of English Language Teaching Centres, British Council Accredited English Language Schools for Adults, the London School of English, and the Wimbledon School of English.

An assessment of the impact of the charges on the English language sector was published in a regulatory impact assessment on 7 February 2005 and is available on the Home Office website: www.ind.homeoffice.gsi.gov.uk.

Metropolitan Police Authority

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings he has had with Sir Ian Blair to discuss proposed efficiency savings in the Metropolitan Police Authority. [215697]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is the duty of police authorities to maintain an effective and efficient police force for their area. I meet the Commissioner and representatives of the Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) from time to time to discuss a range of matters including efficiency.

The Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) has a good record of exceeding the annual target for 2 per cent. efficiency gains that has been in place since 1999–2000. Like all other police authorities in England and Wales, the MPA has been asked to make cumulative efficiency gains of 3 per cent. per year from 2005–06 to 2007–08.

I welcome the service review of the Metropolitan Police announced by the Commissioner supported by the MPA and led by an Assistant Commissioner to carry out and then to implement the review.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Metropolitan Police Authority spent on counter-terrorism in each year since 1997, broken down by borough. [215698]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is not available in the form requested. Dedicated Counter Terrorism funding for the Metropolitan Police Service has increased from £47 million in 2002–03 to £61 million in 2004–05.

Ministerial Residence

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate has been made of the market value of his official residence. [209868]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The last valuation was carried out on 31 March 2001 when the property was valued at £1.8 million.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to move into his official residence. [209871]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Prime Minister has agreed that the right hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) can continue to have use of the Home Office official residence while his and the current Home Secretary's security arrangements are reviewed. Appropriate measures will be put in place once this is completed.

Motorway Accidents (HGVs)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what percentage of accidents resulting in the closure of a motorway in England and Wales and in which a heavy goods vehicle was involved proceedings were subsequently brought against the owner or driver in each of the last five years for which figures are available, excluding ongoing cases. [219898]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The information is not collected centrally by the Home Office. Motoring offence statistics do not identify the circumstances in which an offence takes place nor the nature of the vehicle involved.

People Smuggling

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many boats have patrolled UK shores to prevent people smuggling in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) the number and (b) type of boats; how many individuals were employed in this capacity in each year; and what the (i) total and (ii) average time spent on patrol was in each year. [221164]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The UK Immigration Service mounts joint operations with other agencies on an intelligence led basis, notably HM Customs and Excise.

HM Customs and Excise have advised that the deployment of their Cutters varies, but that they routinely patrol UK waters. Their Cutters are deployed in a proactive and reactive way, gathering intelligence and enforcing our sea borders.

Population Growth

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding his Department has earmarked for growth areas to ensure that they have the resources required to meet the demands of a growing population. [218330]

Fiona Mactaggart: Several Home Office funding streams will benefit the locations that have been designated as growth areas, as they will other areas of the UK.

Crime Reduction

From April 2005, the main funding streams for crime reduction in communities will come under the Safer Stronger Communities Fund. This is a joint fund from the Office for the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and the Home Office, merging a number of current funding streams, including the Building Safer Communities Fund and the Antisocial Behaviour CDRP Allocation. In 2004–05, the authorities that cover the growth areas received £11,278,810 from the Building Safer Communities Fund. Funding for local areas in 2005–06 will be finalised shortly.

Policing

The eight police authorities that cover the growth areas will receive a total of £2,824.3 million in general police grants in 2005–06. Formula grant, which takes into account the relative needs of authorities, consists of:

Revenue Support Grant;

Redistributed Business Rates; and Police Grant.

Grant increases for these authorities next year range from the minimum increase of 3.75 per cent. up to almost 6.1 per cent.

In addition, these authorities will also receive, in 2005–06, a total of around £295.5 million in specific grant funding for a range of schemes.

Allocation of these resources is a matter for each chief constable and police authority, who will make decisions according to local plans and operational priorities.

Antisocial Behaviour

In February 2005 the Home Office announced that intensive family support will be introduced in 50 TOGETHER antisocial behaviour action areas through a £1.25 million cash boost. The £1.25 million will be split equally between the 50 action areas with each area getting £25,000. The growth areas which will be covered by the scheme are: Harlow, Peterborough, Southend on Sea, Northampton and Hackney.

Additionally, in 2005–06 some growth areas will receive funding from ASBU to tackle local issues. Commitments are already in place for the following areas:

Hackney will receive £106,000 for the Hackney Crackdown project.

Harlow will receive action area funding of £25,000.

Peterborough will receive action area funding of £27,800.

Southend on Sea and Northampton are still to be agreed.

In 2005–06, the growth areas named will receive at least £283,800 between them for antisocial behaviour action.

Tackling Drug Misuse

Tackling Drug Misuse is a priority of this Government and their policy is set out in the 10-year National Drug Strategy launched in 1998 and updated in December 2002. (A copy of the Updated Drug Strategy 2002 is held in the House Library.) Under this, the Government have invested substantially in measures to reduce the harms caused by illegal drugs, focusing on the four strands of:

reducing the supply of illegal drugs;

preventing young people from becoming problematic drug users;

providing effective treatment to all who need it; and reducing drug-related crime.

Direct annual funding nationally to tackle drug misuse across all four strands—not only those delivered by the Home Office—amounted to £1,244 million in 2003–04, rising to £1,344 million in 2004–05.

The growth areas have seen a significant increase in direct funding for tackling drugs, in particular for drug treatment services and the throughcare and aftercare elements of the Drugs Intervention Programme. In 2003–04 the allocation for Drug Action Teams in the growth areas totalled £65.97 million, rising to £85.58 million in 2004–05. Allocations for Drug Action Teams for 2005–06 have not yet been agreed, but it is expected that figures will be finalised in early April.

Details of action taken to tackle drugs in the growth areas can be obtained from the Drugs Action Teams, for contact details see http://www.drugs.gov.uk/Links/DrugActionTeams.

Prisons

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were doubling up in cells designed for single occupancy at the most recent date for which figures are available. [214068]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 4 February 2005]: At the end of December 2004,15,786 prisoners were doubled up in cells certified to hold one person.

[217750]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information is contained in the table and gives the number of offenders found guilty and the average custodial sentence length at all courts for the requested offences, England and Wales 1997 to 2003.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to assess the effectiveness of the Serious Organised Crime Agency. [218363]

Caroline Flint: The Serious Organised Crime Agency and Police Bill provides that the Secretary of State may determine strategic priorities for the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) and, where he has done so, he may direct SOCA to establish levels of performance ("performance targets") to be aimed at.

Special Constables

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the average age of serving special constables was, broken down by police force area in 1997; [216312]

(2) what the average tenure of serving special constables was, broken down by (a) year of entry and (b) police force area in 1997. [216313]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is not available.

Staff Identity Passes

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of producing a staff identity pass was in the Department on the latest date for which figures are available; and how many staff identity passes have been reported lost or stolen in each year since 1997. [215088]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The cost of producing a staff pass in February 2005 was £4.25 per pass (including the cost of the pass and administrative costs).

The number of Home Office passes reported lost or stolen on the central London and Croydon estates annually is as follows:

	Number
1998	95
1999	34
2000	89
2001	64
2002	138
2003	291

Note:
Figures for 1997 are not available.

Tetra

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources were given to Sussex Constabulary to roll out the commission for Tetra police communication networks in Sussex. [220483]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The Home Office has provided funding to Police Authorities for the implementation of the Airwave service. Sussex Police Authority received £4.575 million from the Home Office in 2002–03 to support installation costs within the force.

A further £441,000 has been provided during the current financial year and a one-off payment £1.067 million will be paid in 2005–06 to meet our commitment to provide all forces with sufficient funding to meet their initial costs from when ready for service status has been achieved.

Proceeds of Crime

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action is to be taken by (a) his Department and (b) other appropriate authorities to seek to confiscate the money that has been earned by women forced into prostitution in the UK by foreign nationals who have recently been found guilty of the trafficking of women in court cases; and if he will make a statement. [220383]

Caroline Flint: The Government have introduced new legislation to enable appropriate authorities to confiscate the proceeds of crime. The Government encourage the police and other agencies to make use of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA) at every appropriate opportunity. Under the Act anyone convicted of a criminal offence is liable to confiscation proceedings to recover any proceeds of their criminality. In the absence of a conviction it is open to law enforcement agencies to refer the case to the Assets Recovery Agency to consider civil recovery or taxation proceedings instead. POCA also contains provisions for enabling the seizure of cash where it can be demonstrated that it is from, or intended for use in, crime.

The Home Office funds Reflex, the multi-agency enforcement taskforce established to tackle organised immigration crime, including human trafficking. Many of the recent court cases have resulted from Reflex supported operations. Confiscating the proceeds of crime is an important part of the reflex strategy and a new dedicated Reflex Financial Investigation Unit has recently been established within the National Crime Squad.

In addition the Home Office funds five multi agency Regional Asset Recovery Teams to increase the confiscation of the proceeds of crime and tackle money laundering.

Under-age Drinking (London)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have taken place for under-age drinking in each London borough in each year since 1990. [216846]

Paul Goggins: There is no specific offence of under-age drinking.

However, the available information from the Home Office Court Proceedings database, gives the number of defendants aged 10–17 years who were proceeded against in each London borough, for offences of being drunk, drunk at a designated sports event and drunk and disorderly together with defendants proceeded against for the offence of:

"Selling etc., intoxicating liquor to persons under 18 for consumption on the premises".

Figures for 1990 to 2003 are given in the following table. Statistics for 2004 will be available in the autumn.

In addition, the penalty notice for disorder scheme provides for persons who commit specified penalty offences to be issued with a fixed penalty notice instead of being prosecuted or cautioned. The scheme was extended to 16 and 17-year-olds from 20 January 2004. The second table details the number of penalty notices issued for the listed offences which involve under age drinking. These include offences committed by 16 and 17-year-olds and alcohol offences involving the purchase for, sale or delivery to persons aged under 18 years.

The penalty notice for disorder scheme has been extended to allow penalty notices to be issued to 10 to 15-year-olds and pilots of these powers are now under way in seven police force areas including the borough of Kingston in the Metropolitan police force area. A further under age drinking offence, purchase of alcohol on licensed premises by a person under 18, is to be added to the scheme as set out in a draft Order laid before Parliament on 17 March.

Persons aged 10 and under 18 proceeded against at magistrates courts for certain alcohol related offences, by London borough 1990 to 2003[1]

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Aegis Defence Services

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what information his Department has (a) supplied to and (b) received from the United States Administration regarding that government's award of the Iraq Reconstruction Security Support Services contract to Aegis Defence Services; [220988]

(2) what discussions there have been between the British and American governments regarding the award of the US Administration's Iraq Reconstruction Security Support Services' contract to Aegis Defence Services. [220989]

Mr. Rammell: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement made on 12 July 2004, Official Report, columns 53–54WS, by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary in which he stated that > "the contract in question was awarded by the United States Government. Her Majesty's Government is not a party to the contract, nor was it involved in any way in its negotiation."

Attorney-General (Iraq Advice)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2005, Official Report, column 1575W, on the Attorney-General (Iraq Advice), whether he had a role other than in its framing, drafting and drawing up in the parliamentary answer given by the Attorney-General on 17 March 2003 on Iraq. [221611]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 14 March 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Attorney-General, Lord Goldsmith, to Baroness Hanham on 28 February 2005, Official Report, House of Lords, column WA1, which clearly describes those involved in the parliamentary answer given by him on 17 March 2003 on Iraq and confirms that my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had no role.

Bangladesh

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information his Department received from the Government of Bangladesh concerning the perpetrators of the attempted assassination of the British high commissioner in Sylhet in 2004. [221647]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The investigation into the attack on the British high commissioner in Sylhet in 2004 is ongoing and we remain in contact with the Bangladeshi authorities on this. I emphasized to the Prime Minister in Dhaka in December the importance which we attach to the investigation reaching a swift conclusion.

China

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last had discussions with Chinese officials concerning the Chief Executive and Legislative Council of Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement. [221042]

Mr. Rammell: Ministers and officials regularly discuss Hong Kong matters with Chinese officials. My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary discussed Hong Kong's constitutional reform and progress towards universal suffrage with Premier Wen Jiabao and Foreign Minister, Li Zhaoxing in China in January. I also raised these issues when I visited China in July last year. During my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister's talks with the Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao on 10 May 2004, both Governments reaffirmed their commitment to the implementation of the Joint Declaration and agreed to continue their exchanges of view on these issues.

Her Majesty's Government support democracy throughout the world as the best means for creating stable, accountable and transparent government, of protecting rights and freedoms, and of upholding the rule of law. The Basic Law of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (SAR) contains provisions regarding the methods of selecting the Chief Executive of the SAR and the formation of the Legislative Council. The ultimate aim of the Basic Law is a Chief Executive and Legislative Council elected by universal suffrage. The Government favour early progress to this end. We hope that the Hong Kong SAR Government will take full account of the wishes of the people of Hong Kong.

We continue to follow developments in Hong Kong closely, in line with our responsibilities as a co-signatory to the 1984 Sino-British Joint Declaration on Hong Kong.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's policy is on China's occupation of Tibet. [221043]

Mr. Rammell: Successive British Governments have regarded Tibet as autonomous while recognising the special position of the Chinese authorities there.

We monitor Tibet-related developments closely. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised the case of a Tibetan prisoner during his visit in January 2005. I personally raised the issue of Tibet with Assistant Foreign Minister Li Hui during my visit to China in October 2004. We also discuss Tibet at our biannual UK/China Human Rights Dialogue, the last round of which was held in Beijing on 22 November 2004.

We have welcomed visits to China by representatives of the Dalai Lama. We have made clear to the Chinese authorities our view that a long-term, peaceful solution to the Tibet issue can be found only through substantial dialogue without pre-conditions.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the relationship between Taiwan and China. [221044]

Mr. Rammell: In recent months there have been a few signs suggesting an improvement in the political relationship between China and Taiwan. For example, over the Chinese new year there were direct flights across the Strait for Taiwanese businessmen, the first time for over 50 years that mainland commercial aircraft have landed in Taiwan. Moreover, cross-Strait trade increased by a third last year.

We welcome these developments and believe that such practical measures build confidence and promote dialogue. We believe that through such pragmatism, real progress can be made. We continue to oppose the use of force and to take the view that the Taiwan question should be settled peacefully through negotiation between the people on both sides of the Taiwan Strait.

We are paying close attention to the development of China's proposed anti-secession legislation, the background to which I discussed recently with the Vice Minister of China's Taiwan Affairs Office. We continue to urge both sides to avoid unilateral measures that might raise tension.

Departmental Structure

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what definition of the terms (a) directorate, (b) section, (c) unit and (d) team he uses in relation to his Department's internal structures. [221235]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not have specific definitions for the terms directorate, section, unit and team. However, guidance issued to staff on 6 August 2004 in the context of continuing organisational change is that the long-term aim should be consistency across the Office, while accepting in the short-term this may not be possible.

The guidance explained that:

Directorates will remain as they are now.

The terms Group or Department will describe the next level down

Team or Section will be the next level below that.

With the exception of the Strategy Units the term Unit will only be used to describe a temporary operation.

Changes can be phased in over time.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the sections, teams and units within his Department's Europe Directorate. [221237]

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221110]

Mr. Straw: No.

eBay

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department sold any surplus stock on the eBay auction website, in each year since 2000–01. [220954]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 9 March 2005]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) only holds centrally the values realised for the disposal of assets, not the methodology employed for the disposal of those assets. The global nature of the FCO's operations means that this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

European Constitution

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1251W, on the European Constitution, what his Department's policy on the title of the Treaty Establishing a Constitution for Europe is; and whether the UK Government proposed an amendment to this title during the negotiation of the Treaty. [221234]

Mr. MacShane: The title of the Treaty is "the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe". The Government did not propose any amendments to it during the negotiations.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 1381W, on the European Constitution, what definition he uses of partnership marketing; and whether the costs of the agencies for partnership marketing and online information were met from the EU Constitution Team programme budget of £613,000 for 2004–05. [221238]

Mr. MacShane: The aim of partnership marketing is to work with organisations in the private, public and voluntary sector to deliver information and extend the reach of communication activities. Partners are defined as organisations or companies that provide free or value-added opportunities (as distinct from paid for sponsorship opportunities). The costs of the agencies for partnership marketing and online information are being met from the EU Constitution Team programme budget.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1381W, on the European Constitution, what the total staff costs are of the EU Constitution Team in 2004–05; and whether these are met from the overall programme budget of £613,000 for financial year 2004–05. [221239]

Mr. MacShane: Based on average grade costs, staff costs for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's EU Constitution Team amount to £542,819 for 2004–05. These costs are not met from the Team's programme budget of £613,000.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to decide whether the Government will distribute the EU Constitution to all households in the United Kingdom prior to the referendum; and what factors will inform his decision. [221259]

Mr. MacShane: There are no current plans for such a distribution. Factors informing a decision on this issue include the overall cost and public demand. The text of the EU Constitutional Treaty and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Commentary upon it are available free at www.europe.gov.uk. The full text and Commentary have also been made available to central libraries, and are available to members of the public on request from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information the Government intend to distribute to every household regarding the EU Constitution (a) prior to the relevant period, (b) during the relevant period and (c) during the referendum period, as defined by the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000. [221260]

Mr. MacShane: No decisions have yet been made on this issue.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answers of 19 January 2005, Official Report, column 1020W, to the hon. Member for Hornchurch (John Cryer), on the European Constitution, what activities of the Institutions of the EU have been agreed with the Government to date; when he intends to announce the date of the referendum on the European Constitution; and what factors will inform his decision on the date. [221261]

Mr. MacShane: The Institutions of the EU undertake a basic level of factual information provision about the European Union for the European public. They are in regular contact with Ministers and officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office regarding these activities in the UK.

Clause 6 (1) of the European Union Bill provides for the date of the referendum to be set by order, after the Bill has been approved by Parliament. No decision has yet been taken on the date. All member states have agreed to pursue ratification of the Treaty by November 2006.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answers of 19 January 2005, Official Report, column 1020W, to the hon. Member for Hornchurch (John Cryer), on the European Constitution, if he will ensure that the referendum on the European Constitution will not take place on the same date as the nationwide elections to local authorities in May 2006. [221262]

Mr. MacShane: No decision has yet been taken on the date of the referendum.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 19 January 2005, Official Report, column 1020W, on the European Constitution, how he intends to balance the requirement that information issued by his Department is objective with the requirement that it supports Government policy; and who is responsible for ensuring that information issued by his Department is objective. [221263]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (John Cryer) on 19 January 2005, Official Report, column 1020W.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will decide on the service provider for delivering referendum addresses during the referendum on the EU Constitution; and on what criteria he will base his decision. [221379]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

Paragraph 1 of Schedule 12 to the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 provides that the service provider for delivery of referendum addresses is to be the universal service provider. Royal Mail is currently the United Kingdom's only postal operator licensed to provide the universal service.

Expatriates

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate how many UK expatriates are living abroad; and if he will make a statement. [220668]

Mr. Mullin: The estimated number of British nationals living abroad for the period financial year 2003–04 is 13,155,540. This compares to 12,764,134 and 12,927,040 in financial year 2002–03 and financial year 2001–02 respectively.

Hajj Delegation

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost to public funds of the UK Hajj delegation was in 2003–04; and what proposals he has to increase it. [220096]

Mr. Mullin: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) contributed approximately £30,000 to the costs of the British Delegation to the Hajj in February 2004. The Department of Health contributed a further £20,000. Final figures are not yet available, but we estimate that the FCO contributed about £60,000 to the British Delegation for the most recent Hajj in January 2005. This represents an increase of about £30,000 in the FCO's annual contribution.

It is not possible to predict at this stage what level of funding will be provided for the Delegation for future Hajjs. Funds are drawn down according to need as planning for each Hajj progresses. Officials will be meeting with other members of the Hajj Advisory Group, including leading representatives of the British Muslim community, to discuss all aspects of planning for the next Hajj in January 2006, including funding.

Hiroshima/Nagasaki (Commemoration)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether commemorations are planned in August to mark the 60th anniversary of nuclear explosions at Hiroshima and Nagasaki. [221646]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The UK has no plans at present to hold separate commemorative events. We do however fully sympathise with the people of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The UK is committed to working towards a world free of nuclear weapons, in order to prevent the possibility of a repetition of the terrible events of August 1945.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Iraqi administration that it makes it a condition sine qua non that there be a determination by the UN about the legality of the use of force against Iraq before any person is accused of having committed crimes in Iraq. [220811]

Mr. Rammell: As the Solicitor-General made clear in his written answer of 17 March 2003, Official Report, column 515W, authority to use force against Iraq derived from the combined effect of UNSCRs 678, 687 and 1441; and all of these resolutions were adopted under Chapter VII of the UN Charter, which allows the use of force for the express purpose of restoring international peace and security. We would therefore have no reason to make representations to the Iraqi Government about the legality of the use of force in Iraq.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Iraqi administration on establishing the impartiality of judges operating in Iraq where the identity of the judge is not revealed. [220812]

Mr. Rammell: We have provided capacity building assistance to the Iraqi Criminal Justice sector, which includes training for the judges of the Iraq Special Tribunal (IST) on the requirements for conducting fair trials according to international standards of due process. The IST comprises senior Iraqi judges and is part of the Iraqi Criminal Justice system. For security reasons the identities of these judges are not made public but this is not expected to have any effect on the impartiality of their judgments.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Tariq Aziz has been allowed to see the evidence against him since his arrest. [220815]

Mr. Rammell: Assuming an indictment is formally issued against Tariq Aziz, Iraqi law provides that the full disclosure of all evidence does not occur until his case is referred to a trial panel. This has yet to occur.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what access Saddam Hussein has had to the alleged evidence against him. [220816]

Mr. Rammell: Saddam Hussein was arraigned before an Iraqi investigative judge on 1 July 2004 in relation to the following crimes:

The 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

The suppression of the 1991 uprisings.

The ethnic cleansing campaign against Kurds from 1987 to 1988.

The gassing of Kurdish villagers in Halabjah in 1988.

The killing of political activists over a 30-year period.

The killing of religious figures in 1974.

The killing of thousands of the Kurdish Barzani clan in 1983.

This procedure, which informs the accused of his rights, is the start of the investigative process under Iraqi law. Assuming an indictment is formally issued against Saddam Hussein, Iraqi law provides that the full disclosure of all evidence does not occur until his case is referred to a trial panel. This has yet to occur.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has had from ISNAD, the body formed to co-ordinate the efforts aimed at ensuring respect for the law in Iraq, about the (a) legitimacy and (b) legality of the Iraqi Special Tribunal. [220817]

Mr. Rammell: No representations have been received from ISNAD.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the oral answer of 1 March 2005, Official Report, column 805, which parts of the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty (a) recognise the United Kingdom as a nuclear state and (b) legally allow the United Kingdom to hold nuclear weapons. [221887]

Mr. MacShane: The United Kingdom, along with China, France, Russia and the United States, are recognised as nuclear weapon states under Article IX.3 of the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty. It states that:

"a nuclear-weapon State is one which has manufactured and exploded a nuclear weapon or other nuclear explosive device prior to January 1, 1967."

All other states parties are therefore recognised as non-nuclear weapon states. All states parties must comply with their treaty obligations set out under the treaty articles. These include the obligation under Article VI to "pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to the cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament, and on a treaty on general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control".

Project Coast

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 28W, on Project Coast, if he will place the information referred to in the Library. [219418]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The transcripts of the South African Truth and Reconciliation Commission are available on the internet at www.doj.gov.za/trc/special/index.htm#cbw. Reports on the trial are available on the Disarmament Diplomacy website at http://www.acronym.org.uk/textonly/dd/dd64/64nr13.htm and http://www.acronym.org.uk/textonly/dd/dd52/index.htm.

Uganda

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the (a) strength, (b) leadership and (c) political objectives of the Ugandan People's Redemption Army; how long it has been active; what assessment he has made of whether it has caused damage to Uganda's infrastructure; and if he will make a statement. [221281]

Mr. Mullin: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 9 March 2005, Official Report, column 1896W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Starts

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses started up on average each week in the London region in 2004; what the weekly average of such start-ups has been since May 1997; and if she will make a statement on the (a) sustainability and (b) employment-creating and prosperity-generating features of such businesses. [208768]

Nigel Griffiths: Barclays Bank's latest survey of business creation, which includes non-VAT registered firms, shows there were 84,000 business start-ups in the London region in 2003 and this approximates to about 1,600 per week. A further 57,000 businesses started up in the first six months of 2004. Since Barclays revised their methodology for calculating the number of start-ups they have not published revised figures for the London region before 2003.

To give an indication of business start-up rates for 1997 to 2003, DTI figures based solely on VAT registrations for the London region are shown as follows.

VAT registrations in London

	Number per year	Average per week
1997	36,935	708
1998	38,850	745
1999	37,165	713
2000	37,075	709
2001	33,380	640
2002	33,340	639
2003	36,590	702
1997 to 2003	253,335	694

Source:
Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994–2003, Small Business Service, available from:
http://www.sbs.gov.uk/analytical/statistics/vatstats.php

VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold, which has risen in each year since 1997 and is currently £58,000. Across the UK, only 1.8 million out of 4 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2003.

The percentages of VAT registered businesses in the London region still registered after one year are given in the following table:

One year survival rates for VAT registered businesses

Year of registration	Percentage still trading—London
1997	88.7
1998	88.8
1999	88.0
2000	89.6
2001	91.2

Business Survival Rates, Small Business Service, available from:
http://www.sbs.gov.uk/analytical/statistics/statisticssurvivalrates.php

Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) make a significant contribution to the prosperity of the London region. For example latest statistics show that SMEs in the London region had a combined turnover of £270 billion at the start of 2003, which represents an average turnover of £420,000 per business. In total, SMEs in the London region provided 1.8 million jobs, representing an average of 2.8 employees per SME.

Chile

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list military equipment contracts with the Government of Chile since 1990, broken down by value of goods. [207695]

Ms Hewitt: Information on the number of Government to Government transfers of major equipment are published, by destination, in the Government's Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls, available from the Libraries of the House.

Commercial Power Diallers (Silent Telephone Calls)

Anne Picking: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies have been carried out on the (a) extent, (b) nature and (c) sources of unsolicited silent telephone calls by commercial power diallers. [207766]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Communications Act 2003 confers powers on the Office of Communications (Ofcom) to regulate forms of behaviour, which fall within the Act's definition of persistent misuse of an electronic communications network or service. Unsolicited silent calls are an example of behaviour, which might represent persistent misuse.

Ofcom is not aware of any studies that have been carried out in relation to unsolicited silent calls. The most common form of an unsolicited silent call is not intentional, but arises from the use of automated calling systems, also referred to as power diallers or automated calling equipment located within call centres. Calls are automatically generated but in the absence of an available operator to speak to the called party, the call is abruptly terminated.

Anne Picking: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans her Department has to combat silent telephone calls by commercial power diallers. [207767]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Communications Act 2003 confers powers on the Office of Communications (Ofcom) to regulate forms of behaviour, which fall within the Act's definition of persistent misuse of an electronic communications network or service. Unsolicited silent calls are an example of behaviour which might represent persistent misuse. The department is in close contact with Ofcom which is in contact with relevant trade bodies.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Minister of State at the Department of Trade and Industry will reply to the letter dated 26 January from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding her constituent, Mr. E. Martin of Fraserburgh. [221623]

Nigel Griffiths: I answered the letter yesterday.

Cyprus

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value of exports (a) from Northern Cyprus to the United Kingdom and (b) from the UK to Northern Cyprus was in each of the last three years. [221549]

Mr. Alexander: Information on UK trade in goods is classified by HM Customs and Excise according to the Geonomenclature of the European Communities. The nomenclature does not distinguish between Northern Cyprus and the rest of Cyprus and, as a result, the information requested is not available.

Export Control Organisation

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library material she has (a) requested and (b) received relating to the operation of the Export Control Organisation and private sector involvement in delivering the Organisation's services. [221711]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 14 March 2005]: No. To do so would inhibit the internal discussion on the matter.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library material she has (a) requested and (b) received from the Export Control Organisation relating to efficiency savings. [221712]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The Export Control Organisation (ECO) is part of the DTI and as such is subject to the same headcount constraints as other Directorates.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) services and (b) operational areas of the Export Control Organisation have been assessed for potential outsourcing to the private sector; and if she will make a statement. [221713]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The DTI is considering, as part of its overall Efficiency Programme, how best it can continue to deliver high quality export licensing services to industry and Ministers, and as part of that review the Export Control Organisation (ECO) is looking to see whether private sector partner involvement in delivering some of its services would help maintain or improve them within expected resource constraints. No decisions have been taken yet on whether to seek partners and if so, for which functions.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) discussions and (b) meetings (i) she, (ii) other Ministers in the Department, (iii) officials in the Department and (iv) staff of the Export Control Organisation have held with industry or representatives from industry relating to the future of the Export Control Organisation and private sector involvement in delivering some of that Organisation's services. [221734]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 14 March 2005]: There has been no such discussion at this stage except that Export Control Organisation (ECO) officials have briefed the Export Control Advisory Committee that the DTI is considering the matter.

EU Internal Market

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the draft directive establishing a general legal framework for services in the internal market. [220507]

Mr. Alexander: In March 2004 the Department launched a wide-ranging public consultation into the EU Directive on Services in the Internal Market. An initial launch event attended by over 200 people was followed up by a series of regional events that took in each of the devolved Administrations. The public consultation attracted 116 written responses all of which were analysed before the Government published their response to the consultation in November 2004.

Simultaneous to the public consultation the Department consulted across Whitehall to ensure the views of all Government Departments fed into the agreed 'UK negotiating line' that was published along with the responses to the public consultation.

I believe the liberalising aims of this directive could deliver significant benefits for businesses, consumers and employees here in the UK and across Europe.

The Department will continue to consult widely on the directive as negotiations develop.

Post Office

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices have closed in Ribble Valley since 1997. [221983]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Decisions on post office closures are operational matters for Post Office Ltd. (POL). My officials have asked POL to arrange a direct reply to the hon. Member.

Renewable Energy

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will extend permitted development status to the installation of small scale renewables by householders, subject to adequate controls to ensure no or minimal visual intrusion; if she will include this measure in the draft microgeneration strategy due to be published pursuant to section 82 of the Energy Act; and if she will make a statement. [221568]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In January, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister launched a review of the legislation that governs minor development by householders. Meanwhile, it is already the case that, as a general rule, those in dwelling houses can install solar panels and photovoltaic cells without needing to make a planning application, provided the panels do not project significantly above the plane of the roof.

The strategy for the promotion of microgeneration in the UK will look at a wide variety of measures and there will be a formal public consultation giving all interested parties the opportunity to contribute to the development of the strategy.

Sellafield

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inspections of the MOX facility at Sellafield have been carried out by Euratom since 1 May 1997; on what dates; and on which occasions Euratom expressed concerns about the operation of this facility. [221566]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Euratom safeguards measures are to detect the diversion of nuclear material from its declared uses. The frequency of Euratom safeguards inspections at the Sellafield MOX Plant (SMP) has been a function of the type and form of nuclear material and the processing activities involved. Such inspections were performed at intervals ranging from two weeks to a month in the run-up to plutonium commissioning of SMP in 2002, with the frequency increasing thereafter—and currently running at an inspection every two weeks. Our information shows that the plant has been subject to approximately 240 safeguards inspections during the period in question.

Materials accountancy and safeguards issues that arise in the course of particular safeguards inspections are addressed during the inspection and by means of follow-up correspondence from the European Commission. Such correspondence is classified by the Commission, and this classification must be respected by the UK Government. The Commission does however publish an annual report of its safeguards activities and their findings. Reports are available for the years 1999 to 2003 (references COM (2001) 436, COM (2002) 566, COM (2003) 764 and COM (2004) 861 respectively) and include information on Euratom safeguards activities at SMP.

Small Firms

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the small firms productivity growth referred to in Public Service Agreement Target 6 of her Department's Business Plan 2005–8 is measured; and what small firms productivity growth was in each year between 1984 and 2004 on the basis of this measurement. [220697]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Productivity growth in small firms is collected through a special analysis of the Office for National Statistics' Annual Business Inquiry. The ABI is an annual survey of around 70,000 businesses. Productivity is measured as Gross Value Added per employee, with small firms defined for this purpose as registered enterprises with 0 to 249 employees.

Data on small firms productivity growth between 1999 and 2002 are set out in the following table. They show that small firms productivity has grown by at least 3.5 per cent. each year over the last three years.

Data in this series are not available for periods before 1999. Data for 2003 will be available later this year.

Productivity growth in small firms

	Percentage
1999–2000	3.5
2000–01	4.3
2001–02	3.5

Small Firms Loan Guarantee

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government intends to implement the findings of the Graham Review relating to the future of the Small Firms Loan Guarantee. [221316]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 14 March 2005]: In his pre-Budget report in December 2004 my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer committed the Government to implementing the 38 recommendations of the Graham Review by the end of 2005.

Surplus Assets Sales

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department sold any surplus stock on the eBay auction website, in each year since 2000–01. [220949]

Ms Hewitt: The Department has not sold surplus stock on eBay to date. Most of our IT hardware is owned by Fujitsu Services Ltd., our PFI services provider.

Taxation

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the likely effects of additional tax rises on businesses in the UK in the period 2005–07 on national (a) private sector employment growth, (b) productivity growth and (c) competitiveness. [214199]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Changes to taxation will be set out by the Chancellor in the budget tomorrow. Prospects for employment, productivity, and competitiveness will be contained in the corresponding Economic Fiscal and Strategy Report.

Tidal Power

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of reports on tidal lagoon electricity generation made available to her Department by WS Atkins and AEA Technology. [221790]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department has carried out an assessment of both reports in order to inform its thinking on these matters. We have already provided feedback on the AEA Technology report to the company behind the project and are willing to provide similar feedback on our assessment of the WS Atkins Study.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representation she has received on the proposal for tidal lagoon electricity generation in Swansea Bay. [221791]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department has received a number of representations regarding a tidal lagoon project in Swansea Bay and these discussions are ongoing.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) for what reasons tidal lagoon projects were not included for support under the proposed Marine Renewables Development Fund; [221792]

(2) what financial support is being given by the Government to companies that have demonstrated an interest in tidal lagoon electricity generation as a contribution to the Government's renewables objectives. [221793]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Marine Renewables Deployment Fund implements a main recommendation of the Renewables Innovation Review. That is to assist emerging technologies, which show significant potential for cost reduction, to bridge the funding gap between research and development and commercialisation.

Tidal lagoons are technically feasible being the application of available and well understood technology and are eligible for support through the Renewables Obligation.

If claims about the favourable economics of these schemes are correct and the projects are sound they should have no difficulty in attracting commercial funds to develop projects.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the potential generating capacity of tidal lagoons in UK offshore waters. [221794]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Tidal lagoons as with other forms of large-scale barrage have the potential to contribute to the UK's renewable energy targets.

There have been a number of published studies that considered the potential for tidal barrages. These have provided a good understanding of the potential to exploit variations in the tidal range in a range of locations.

In assessing particular sites, developers will need to consider both the economics and potential environmental impacts of any scheme.

Vehicle Imports

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many vehicles were imported into the UK in each year since 1997. [221452]

Jacqui Smith: According to figures published by HM Customs and Excise, the numbers of motor vehicles imported into the UK were as follows:

Number of motor vehicles imported into the UK 1997 to 2004

	Million
1997	1.7
1998	2.2
1999	1.8
2000	1.9
2001	2.3
2002	2.5
2003	2.7
2004	2.4

Note:
Motor vehicles are defined as codes 781, 782 and 783 of the Standard International Trade Classification, Revision 3, (SITC Rev 3).

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effect of implementing a system of collective responsibility for all future waste electronic and electrical products on (a) the incentives for electronic and electrical producers to implement eco-design policies and (b) the ability of producers to avoid contributing to recycling costs by going out of business or other methods. [207759]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government have consulted on draft Regulations to implement the EU Directive on Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE), which proposed provisions to allow producers to discharge their producer responsibility obligations in relation to household WEEE from their own products, within a system of collective responsibility.

The Government will be taking final decisions shortly on the shape of the final implementing regulations. The Government are considering how best to reflect the Directive's objectives in relation to individual producer responsibility for new household WEEE, bearing in mind the encouragement this provides towards sustainable design.

The Government are considering carefully the consultation responses, which have shown varying producer views on collective and individual producer responsibility. It appears from discussions with producers that individual producer responsibility is, in many instances, not yet practical, but it may become so in the future. The Government are concerned in UK implementation both to deliver the objectives of the WEEE Directive and to establish a workable UK system for separate collection, treatment and recovery of WEEE.

Wind Energy Conference

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her Department's co-sponsorship of the European Wind Energy Conference and Exhibition. [207841]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The DTI co-sponsored the European Wind Energy Conference event in 2004. All previous events have been part sponsored by the host nation's Government Department.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State delivered the keynote address and I also spoke.

The event had over 1,500 participants and 260 companies exhibiting, including many UK companies and it provided an opportunity to showcase British business in the renewables supply chain to European and International businesses.

[221502]

Mr. Pearson: The Public Processions (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2005 is part of a package of measures I announced by written ministerial statement on 22 February 2005, Official Report, column 14WS. The package responded to Sir George Quigley's review of the Parades Commission and the Public Processions (Northern Ireland) Act 1998, the consultation on that report on parading was published in January this year. The Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission contributed to the consultation on the Quigley report in October 2003 and gave evidence to NIAC.

I wrote to the Human Rights Commission on 22 February indicating that I had laid, on that day, the draft Public Processions (Amendment) Northern Ireland Order 2005. The Human Rights Commission has not responded to this letter to date.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the response from the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission to the draft Public Processions (Amendment) Northern Ireland Order 2005. [221503]

Mr. Pearson: I wrote to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission on the 22 February 2005 with regard to the Public Processions (Amendment) Northern Ireland Order 2005. The NIHRC has not yet responded to that letter.

Shellfish and Whitefish

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been provided to the fish processing sector of the Northern Ireland fishing industry in relation to the tie-up scheme which was in operation in 2004. [221337]

Mr. Pearson: The 2004 Transitional Aid Scheme was designed to compensate those most affected by the closure namely the whitefish fleet. The Fish Processing sector did not qualify for this particular scheme.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Disabled Access

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost of his Department's advertising campaign to inform small businesses of the adjustments required for disabled access under the Disabilities Discrimination Act 1995 was. [221558]

Maria Eagle: The total budget for the 2004–05 communications campaign to inform small businesses of their duties under the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) 1995 is £4.4 million. The first phase of the campaign ran from April to September last year at a cost of £2.4 million, and aimed to alert small employers and service providers to the introduction of the October 2004 duties of the DDA. The second phase of the campaign, which started in January this year and ends this month, has a budget of £2 million; this is aimed at reminding service providers of new duties placed on them by the changes to the access provisions introduced from October 2004.

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the first payments will be made to the former workers at the Allied Steel and Wire Works in Cardiff under the Government's Financial Assistance Scheme. [221506]

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated cost is of implementing the Financial Assistance Scheme for all former Cardiff Allied Steel and Wire workers who were 57 years or older on 14 May 2004. [221507]

Malcolm Wicks: Estimates cannot be made of the cost of assistance for members of individual schemes until we have received more detailed information; including information on what the scheme pension age is for individual members, their distance from scheme pension age as at 14 May 2004, and their individual losses in the schemes.

Information (Post Offices)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information published by his Department (a) may be obtained by the public in post offices and (b) could previously be obtained by the public in post offices but may not now be so obtained; and how much was spent making each of these categories of information available in the most recent period for which figures are available. [209720]

Maria Eagle: The following leaflets are currently available for post offices to stock.

This was known as the POPOS (post office point of sale) display. Post Office Ltd. terminated this contract with effect from 2 June 2004.

The last direct cost for displaying leaflets in post offices was £332,000, which covered the final quarter of the POPOS contract (April 2004–June 2004).

The leaflets currently available from post offices are issued as part of the wider Order Book Encashment Contract. It is not possible to separately identify the costs for this service from the fixed costs within the contract.

Myasthenia Gravis

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the benefit entitlements are for people under pensionable age who are diagnosed as suffering from myasthenia gravis. [222140]

Mr. Miliband: A decision not to release information relating to any project as a result of commercial confidentiality is made on the basis of the specific request made in each parliamentary question.

An assessment of commercial confidentiality may apply to a specific element within a project as well as to an entire project. It is, therefore, not possible to provide the information requested.

David Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many people employed by the civil service state their religion as Sikh. [221666] research he has commissioned on the impact of an ageing population on (a) social services and (b) the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [219490]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department commissioned the personal social services research unit (PSSRU) at the London School of Economics to conduct a study of the demand for and cost of long-term care for older people. The research team reported in August 2003. The findings of this research have been published, and are available on the PSSRU's website at www.pssru.ac.uk.

The European Union Economic Policy Committee (EPC) has also made projections of public expenditure on health and long-term social care. The results of its research can be found on the EPC's website at http://europa.eu.int/index en.htm. The EPC projections will be updated later in 2005.

In his report, "Securing our Future Health: Taking a Long Term View", published in April 2002, Sir Derek Wanless indicated that the cost impact of increased life expectancy is likely to be small compared with other cost drivers.

Allergy Services

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress his Department has made in the review of the available data and research on the epidemiology of allergic conditions that the Government undertook to carry out in their response to the Health Select Committee's Report on the Provision of Allergy Services; [221473]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government's response (Cm 6433) to the Health Committee's report on the provision of allergy services stated that the first step towards any programme of improvements in allergy services should be a review of the available data and research on the epidemiology of allergic conditions and the effectiveness of relevant interventions. Officials are currently working to identify the resources needed to take forward this work.

We hope to complete the review by summer 2006 and we will consider what further action to take in light of this review.

Alzheimer's Disease

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) donepezil, (b) rivastigmine and (c) galantamine in treating Alzheimer's sufferers; and if he will make a statement. [220459]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The National Institute of Clinical Effectiveness (NICE) issued guidelines in 2001 on the clinical and cost effectiveness of donepezil, rivastigmine and galantamine in the treatment of mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease. It is currently reviewing this guidance and on 1 March issued draft guidance for consultation. Further details are available on NICE'S website at www.nice.org.uk.

NICE is a special health authority, which was set up in April 1999 to give advice to the national health service on best clinical practice, including the clinical and cost effectiveness of drugs and other treatments, to help reduce variation in prescribing practice.

NICE is an independent body, which develops its guidance after careful consideration of the available evidence, and in close consultation with patient groups, professional organisations and the pharmaceutical industry.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects a decision from the National Institute for Clinical Excellence on the use of the drug Ebiza for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease. [221022]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the timescales for the production of all National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) guidance is available on its website at www.nice.org.uk.

Department of Health form KH03

Care Homes

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average length of stay of an elderly person in a care home was in the last period for which figures are available. [220803]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected routinely. However, a study by the personal social services research unit has shown that the estimated average length of stay of older supported residents is around 30 months.

Child Poverty

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to achieve the Government's targets of ending child poverty by 2020, and halving it by 2010; and if he will make a statement. [220883]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 9 March 2005]: The Government sets out the steps that departments across Government are taking to achieve the targets of ending child poverty by 2020 and halving it by 2010 in the Child Poverty Review, published alongside the 2004 Spending Review and available at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/spending_review/spend_sr04/associated_documents/spending_sr04_childpoverty.cfm.

There is a strong link between poverty and ill health. The Government have set targets to reduce health inequalities and have set out an extensive programme in "Tackling Health Inequalities: A Programme for Action" (2003) and the "Choosing Health" (2004) White Paper.

Cross-border Tracking

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cross-border tracking of adults on the at risk register takes place between the relevant authorities in England and Wales. [220326]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 4 March 2005]: There is no at risk register for adults. Councils with social services responsibilities who are placing people in services between the relevant authorities in England and Wales, must ensure that all appropriate information about the person, including information relating to risk, is made known to the new authority.

The protection of vulnerable adults scheme lists people who have been banned from working in regulated social care sector. The scheme, which was introduced in July 2004, applies in both England and Wales.

"No Secrets", the guidance to councils on developing and implementing procedures to protect vulnerable adults from abuse, encourages councils to adopt adult protection committees to lead on preventing and tackling abuse. We expect councils to have regard to the guidance particularly where vulnerable adults are transferred across boundaries.

Dentistry

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental practices in Lancashire are accepting (a) children, (b) pensioners and (c) adult NHS patients, broken down by primary care trust. [222102]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows the number of dental practices in Lancashire which are accepting of new patients.

Primary care trust (PCT)	Total practices in PCT	Registering children aged 0–18 years for NHS treatment	Registering charge exempt adults for NHS treatment	Registering charge paying adults for NHS treatment

Dentists

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the adequacy of provision of NHS dental care in England; and if he will make a statement. [217228]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are aware that, in some parts of the country, people have difficulty in accessing a national health service dentist. We are undertaking a programme of reforms to make NHS dentistry more attractive to dentists and increase the number of dental training places. As an interim measure, we are committed to recruiting the equivalent of 1,000 dentists by October 2005. Recruitment from countries with a surplus of dentists is already proving helpful. For example, 28 Polish dentists began work in England in January, with a further 41 starting work during March and early April.

Departmental Policies (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Tamworth constituency, the effects on the constituency of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [221936]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have put in place a programme of National Health Service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the Tamworth constituency.

For example:

At the end of December 2004, the number of people waiting more than nine months for in-patient treatment within the Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust (PCT) has fallen to zero, from 261 in June 2002.

At the end of December 2004, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for out-patient treatment within Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth PCT has fallen to 198, from 300 in June 2002.

In June 2003, at Mid Staffordshire General Hospitals NHS Trust, 89.3 per cent. of patients spent less than four hours in accident and emergency from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. Figures for December 2004 show an improvement to 99.5 per cent.

Between September 1997 and June 2004, the number of consultants at Mid Staffordshire General Hospitals NHS Trust has increased from 63 to 80. Between September 1997 and September 2003, the number of nurses has increased from 687 to 836.

Between September 2001 and June 2004, the number of general medical practitioners within Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth PCT has increased from 85 to 96.

Figures for December 2004 show that all patients within Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth PCT are able to be offered an appointment with a GP within two working days and a primary care professional within one working day.

100 per cent. of urgent GP referrals to Mid Staffordshire General Hospitals NHS Trust, with suspected cancer, are seen by a specialist within two weeks of the referral.

An additional new cardiac catheter laboratory, which includes x-ray equipment for diagnosis and treatment of cardiac disease, will be delivered to the Staffordshire General Hospital during spring 2005.

Drug Treatment (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have received treatment for drug abuse in Tamworth in the last 12 months. [221937]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is not available at constituency level.

1,240 individuals were in contact with structured drug treatment services in Staffordshire during 2003–04.

Private Finance Initiative Contracts

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the private finance initiative contracts which (a) his Department and (b) NHS Estates advertised in 2004, indicating in each case whether the output specification included (a) clauses specifically relating to energy consumption and energy efficiency, (b) a requirement for relevant equipment being purchased to be on the Government's Energy Technology List, (c) a requirement to use whole life costing to assess energy costs for new buildings or major refurbishments and (d) a requirement that new buildings or major refurbishments would be constructed to a specific energy standard; and what standard was specified in each case. [221885]

Mr. Hutton: It is for national health service trusts to advertise their private finance initiative contracts. Neither the Department nor NHS Estates placed any adverts for private finance initiative contracts in 2004.

Local Authorities (Caring Responsibilities)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which local authorities have sought determination from him in relation to which local authority is responsible for people for which more than one local authority has a caring responsibility in each year since 2000; and on what particular matters they sought determination in each case. [219734]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 3 March 2005]: The local authorities that have sought determinations from the Secretary of State are shown in the following table. In each case, the determination sought was of the ordinary residence of an individual under Section 32 (3) of the National Assistance Act 1948.

	Local authority
2001	Barnet and Westminster
	Camden and West Sussex
	Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire
	Lambeth and West Sussex
	Cheshire and Surrey
2002	Hounslow and Slough
	Wolverhampton and Powys and Worcestershire
2003	Oldham and Liverpool
	Tower Hamlets and Thurrock
	Bexley and Lambeth
	Waltham Forest and Hackney
	Telford and Wrekin and Cheshire
2004	Milton Keynes and Derbyshire
	Warrington and Wirral
	Bracknell and Woking
	Greenwich and Bexley
	North Somerset and Warwickshire

Mount Vernon Hospital

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of the burns and plastic surgery unit at Mount Vernon hospital, Northwood. [222008]

Dr. Ladyman: The burns services at Mount Vernon are currently housed in temporary buildings erected in 1943 and it is felt by Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire strategic health authority (SHA) that they are not suitable for delivery of 21st century care. Therefore, it is proposed through their 'Investing in your health' programme that the burns and plastics unit be re-sited to Watford general hospital. There is a programme board considering the viability of this move, with representation from Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire SHA and the North West London SHA, Hillingdon primary care trust and the community voice (an umbrella action group of local organisations interested in the service). The outcome of the review will be subject to consultation.

Paddington Health Campus

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what hospital facilities are to be combined on the Paddington Health Campus site; and what the change is in the number of beds to be available at the site in comparison to the number offered at the locations which the new hospital is to replace. [221715]

Dr. Ladyman: The outline business case for the Paddington Health Campus, submitted in December 2004, provides full details about the combined facilities to be provided for the Royal Brompton, Harefield and St Mary's national health service trusts, which include laboratory medicine, therapies, pharmacy, education and training, facilities management and corporate support services. The key facilities to be provided within the campus are shown in the following table.

	Number
Operating theatres	22
Delivery suites	8
Scoping rooms	6
Cardiac catheter laboratories	7
Angiography	2
Computed tomography/magnetic resonance imaging	13

The number of in-patient beds proposed for the Paddington Health Campus is 923, compared to the total of 1,017 beds currently provided at the St. Mary's, Royal Brompton and Harefield hospitals. The reduction in bed numbers reflects a transfer of local cardiology services to local hospitals and a redistribution of clinical care into community settings, following a major review involving local primary care trusts.

Respite Care

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he gives to London boroughs on the provision of respite care in each borough. [221448]

Dr. Ladyman: Research shows the best way to enable carers to continue to care is by enabling them to take a break from caring. The Government are increasing the amount of money put aside specifically to support carers in England through the carers grant. The grant is worth £125 million in 2004–05 and rises to £185 million in 2005–06. The grant will then continue at this level until at least 2007–08.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many days of respite care were available in each London borough in each year from 1997 to 2004. [221643]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally.

Social Care Costs

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people contribute to (a) some or (b) all of their social care costs for (i) home care and (ii) all residential care following a means-test, in the area which most closely corresponds to Mid Worcestershire constituency. [220071]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally.

Surrey and Sussex Healthcare NHS Trust

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the likely total debt of Surrey and Sussex Healthcare NHS Trust at the end of this financial year; and if he will make a statement. [222003]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Audited information on the financial position of national health service trusts will be published in their individual annual accounts. These data will be available centrally in the autumn. We have no plans to publish un-audited information.

TRANSPORT

Crossrail

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to announce the final funding arrangements for Crossrail. [221656]

Mr. Darling: A hybrid Bill to take powers for the construction of Crossrail was introduced into the House of Commons on 22 February 2005. We intend to bring forward proposals on the funding arrangements for Crossrail during the passage of the Bill.

Cycling Accidents

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) fatal, (b) serious and (c) slight casualties suffered by cyclists on (i) urban roads and (ii) rural roads in each year since 2000 resulted from collisions involving (A) at least one motor vehicle, (B) no motor vehicles and (C) powered two-wheel vehicles. [218490]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Pedal cycle casualties by severity, vehicle involved and urban/rural roads

[1] Includes accidents involving pedal cycles, ridden horse and other non-motor vehicles.
[2] Included in the figure for "at least one motor vehicle".

Disabled Access

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding has been made available to improve disabled access transport services in Tamworth. [221927]

Charlotte Atkins: Regulations introduced under Part 5 of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) require that all new public service vehicles used on local and scheduled service with a carrying capacity of more than 22 passengers, and all new rail vehicles, have to be accessible to disabled people. In addition, duties under Part 3 of the DDA require service providers to take reasonable steps to provide access to transport infrastructure such as bus station and railway stations.

On funding, the Government provide funding to improve access to public transport through the Local Transport Plan (LTP) process. Local transport authorities in England outside London produce five-year LTPs, and report on progress against these plans in Annual Progress Reports (APRs). The first five-year plans were submitted in 2000. The following table details the relevant funding categories allocated to the Staffordshire Local Transport Plan area, which includes Tamworth.

Decisions on how to target funding towards specific projects and initiatives such as those to improve public transport accessibility are made at local level.

On access to the rail network, the SRA intends to consult on its Disability Strategy at the end of March. This will include priorities for improving accessibility at stations.

Tamworth (Staffordshire) local authority

Nature of funding	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Capital maintenance	4.55	8.68	9.32	11.64	12.80
Integrated block (small schemes)	2.6	5.7	5.70	6.73	6.64

Total	8.08	15.64	16.44	19.75	20.68

[1] Includes rural bus subsidy grant and both rural and urban bus challenge funding.

Light Railways

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications for companies operating light railways of (a) the new safety regime for light railways proposed by the Health and Safety Executive and (b) the European Urban Rail Directive; and what estimate he has made of the cost to light rail operating companies of meeting each of these safety provisions. [221710]

Charlotte Atkins: The Health and Safety Commission (HSC) has consulted publicly on new railway safety regulations and on a supporting regulatory impact assessment (RIA). Comments were invited from all interested parties, including the light rail industry. The Department expects to receive the HSC's final proposals and RIA shortly. The Department is currently considering its response to the European Urban Rail Directive consultation.

Motorcycle Accidents

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of (a) fatal, (b) serious and (c) slight casualties suffered by riders of powered two-wheel vehicles in (i) urban areas and (ii) rural areas occurred (A) at signal-controlled junctions, (B) at other junctions and (C) while overtaking in the last period for which figures are available. [218431]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Proportions of two-wheeled motor vehicle rider casualties: GB 2003

Percentage

	Accident location
Severity	Auto traffic signal	Other junctions[1]	While overtaking
Fatal
Urban	8.9	54.7	16.7
Rural	0.4	34.8	14.3
Serious
Urban	9.4	65.6	15.9
Rural	1.4	43.2	14.1
Slight
Urban	11.7	66.5	16.9
Rural	2.5	50.2	12.9

[1] Includes junctions controlled by an authorised person, stop sign, give way sign or markings and uncontrolled junctions

It should be noted that a two-wheeled motor vehicle rider may have been injured either at a 'signal-controlled junction' while overtaking or at an 'other junction' while overtaking, since these are not mutually exclusive.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the projects being undertaken by his Department in respect of which information cannot be given in answer to parliamentary questions as a result of commercial confidentiality. [216627]

Charlotte Atkins: A decision not to release information relating to any project as a result of commercial confidentiality is made on the basis of the specific request made in each parliamentary question.

An assessment of commercial confidentiality may apply to specific elements within a project as well as to an entire project. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Pedestrian Casualties

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pedestrian casualties occurring on a footway in each year since 2000 resulted from a collision with a (a) motor vehicle and (b) pedal cycle. [218488]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Pedestrians injured on the footway or verge: GB 2000–03

Casualties

	Motor vehicles	Pedal cycles
2000	3,445	77
2001	3,504	78
2002	3,432	65
2003	3,453	72

Road Casualties (Children)

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of road casualties suffered by child (a) pedestrians and (b) cyclists in each year since 2000 occurred within 200 m of a school. [218489]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not available.

Transport (Hampshire)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of providing the transport infrastructure to support the proposed level of housing development for South Hampshire set out in the South East England Regional Assembly's document, The South East Plan. [221751]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The consultation draft of the plan that the South East England Regional Assembly published in January 2005 does not at this stage specify the transport projects in South Hampshire that will be required to implement the plan's objectives.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what grants were made to (a) Hampshire county council, (b) Portsmouth city council and (c) Southampton city council for (i) new transport schemes and (ii) road maintenance in each of the last five years. [221753]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The total allocations over the five years, from 2000–01 to 2004–05, follow. Hampshire has been allocated a total of approximately £139.6 million—of which £53.3 million has been provided for capital road maintenance, £77.2 million for new transport schemes and £9.1 million specific grants for bus services.

Portsmouth has been allocated a total of approximately £21.4 million—of which £5.7 million has been provided for capital road maintenance and £15.7 million for new transport schemes. Southampton has been allocated a total of approximately £19.4 million—of which £6.8 million has been provided for capital road maintenance, £11.9 million for new transport schemes and £0.7 million specific grants for bus services.

The funding provided directly to the three authorities, including a breakdown by year, is shown in the following table. It has been for Hampshire county, Southampton city and Portsmouth city councils to determine exactly how the allocation should be spent, in line with their local transport plans and their priorities. The funding has been provided through a mixture of direct grants and borrowing approvals supported through revenue support grants.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Biofuels

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many plants there are in the UK producing biodiesel or bioethanol using UK farmed and produced raw materials as their feedstock; what the production capacity of each is; and what new plants plan to commence production of biofuels in the UK in the next five years. [221341]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 March 2005]: We are aware of a number of companies that are either currently producing biofuels from UK farm-sourced raw materials or have plans to do so. The details are set out in the table provided.

Other companies are known to be interested in establishing production facilities in the UK but are awaiting the results of the feasibility study on the Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation and the decision on the UK's 2010 target for the use of biofuels under the Biofuels Directive.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 2 March 2005, Official Report, column 1169W, on foot and mouth, how any animals vaccinated following a future outbreak would be treated subsequently. [220707]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Emergency Vaccination Protocol sets down how vaccinated animals and any meat or milk produced from them would be subject to specific restrictions. This document is on the Defra website http://www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/pdf/vacprotocol.pdf, and I am also arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the difference in total payments of compensation paid for (a) sheep and (b) cattle in the foot and mouth epidemic would have been if the amount paid per animal had remained the same as the amount paid per animal in February 2001. [221408]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The difference in total payments of compensation paid for sheep would have been £254,005,966, and for cattle £367,455,967 if the amount paid per animal had remained the same as in February 2001.

Growth Areas (Funding)

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding her

Department has earmarked for growth areas to ensure that they have the resources required to meet the demands of a growing population. [218329]

Alun Michael: Defra's aim is sustainable development, ensuring that environmental, social and economic considerations are balanced and integrated. As a result most of the Department's activities benefit the locations which fall within the growth areas, either directly or indirectly. As well as Defra's own actions we can achieve a great deal by working with a variety of partners and through exerting influence on Government Departments and others.

The key Defra policy areas which have a direct impact on growth areas include waste and recycling initiatives, flood defence works, our wide-ranging rural development programmes and regulation of the water supply industry. Funding associated with these activities has not been exclusively earmarked for growth areas, and will be part of mainstream business delivery, not specifically as a result of growth area status.

Delivery is carried out on Defra's behalf by a number of delivery agents, including the Environment Agency, the Countryside Agency, Government Offices, local authorities, and the Rural Development Service, all of whom have a strong regional focus. We also provide support to regional development agencies, rural community councils, parish and town councils and the voluntary and community sector.

Turning to specific policy areas, the priority for flood defence is to optimise the protection of people and the reduction in flood risk as measured by net damages from flooding in relation to the funding available. Total Government spend has risen from £312 million in 1997–98 to £478 million in the current year and £570 million for 2005–06 and the following two years. Where growth areas might have a risk of flooding, in many cases they will already have benefited from investment to protect them to a high standard, e.g. in the Thames Gateway. These defences will be subject to a renewal programme. Where further investment is needed, the development partnerships will consider provision in consultation with the Environment Agency, taking account of Planning Policy Guidance Note 25.

The main source of funding for local authority waste management is the Environmental Protection and Cultural Services block of the central Government revenue support grant, which is allocated through the Local Government Finance Settlement using a population-based formula. Defra's waste performance and efficiency grant, which totals £255 million over the three years from 2005–06, is also allocated to all authorities using a population-based formula. Defra is currently considering mechanisms other than direct funding to assist authorities in growth areas in addressing the additional challenge they face in meeting their landfill directive obligations as a result of population growth.

The Environment Agency is the statutory body with a duty to secure the proper use of water resources in England and Wales. The Environment Agency's Water Resources Strategy looks some 25 years ahead and considers the needs of public water supply, agriculture, commerce and industry, as well as the environment, examining the uncertainties about future water demand and availability including the potential effects of climate change and different societal values. It takes account of the Sustainable Communities Plan where the numbers and locations of housing have been defined and recognises the impact that the growth areas will have on the water supply infrastructure. It concludes with a series of actions that will provide the right amount of water for people, agriculture, commerce and industry and an improved water-related environment.

Marine Environment

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for protecting the marine environment. [221923]

Mr. Morley: We have announced in the Defra five-year strategy that we will bring forward a Marine Bill some time in the next Parliament to deliver our vision of clean, healthy, safe, productive and biologically diverse oceans and seas. A Marine Bill will provide the framework within which those who regulate marine activities can ensure the sustainable use and protection of our marine resources.

We are introducing regulations later this year to extend the conservation requirements of the EU Habitats and Bird's Directives offshore, and will identify further special areas of conservation and special protection areas as part of that process.

We are committed to having a representative and ecologically coherent network of marine protected areas in the OSPAR region by 2010.

New Rural Agency

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice she has received from English Nature about the creation of the new agency for rural delivery; and if she will place in the Library a copy of the advice received. [211148]

Margaret Beckett: I have received, and given due weight to, advice and representations from a number of organisations and individuals about the creation of the 'Integrated Agency' from English Nature, much of the work of the Rural Development Service and the landscape, access and recreation responsibilities of the Countryside Agency. Ministers have received advice from English Nature in the form of letters from the chair and deputy chair of English Nature. As English Nature gave oral evidence to the inquiry into the Rural Strategy 2004 by the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Select Committee of the House, their position on the creation of the Integrated Agency is already in the public domain. Most recently, they have welcomed the draft Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill published on Thursday 10 February 2005, to which they made a significant input. I am not minded to disclose the specific advice I have received as I consider to do so would be harmful to future free and frank discussions, and thus inhibit the development of good policy.

Rendering

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether animal by-product rendering is considered to be a waste process; and if she will make a statement. [221334]

Mr. Morley: A statement was made on 9 December 2004, Official Report, column 106WS, that the Government had published for consultation the draft Waste Management (England and Wales) Regulations 2005. The consultation paper is available in the Library of the House and on the Department's website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/agwaste-regs/index.htm. The application of the waste framework directive (WFD) to waste animal by-products is discussed in paragraphs 8, 3.24–3.28 and 4.7–4.21 of the consultation paper.

In summary, it is the Department's view that a range of animal by-products are consigned to rendering plant as waste within the meaning of the WFD and that the processing of this waste in rendering plant is a waste management operation subject to control under Articles 9 or 10 of the directive. The animal by-products which the Department has identified as waste include those which Articles 4(2), 5(2) and 6(2) of the EU Animal By-Products Regulation require to be processed in rendering plant and disposed of by incineration, co-incineration or landfilling; or recovered in biogas or composting plants.

Waste and Resources Action Programme

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the recent developments in waste product marketing by the Waste and Resources Action Programme. [221508]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 March 2005]: Defra monitors the performance of the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) on the basis of delivery of or progress towards targets which are agreed with Government, and which are published in its business plan. The targets cover its work on market development.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the development of recycled wood products by the Waste and Resources Action Programme. [221509]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) has a target to deliver an additional 150,000 tonnes recycling capacity for waste wood into added-value end markets by March 2006. WRAP will do this through: supporting further diversification of waste wood recycling, focusing on higher-value applications; increasing the consumption of waste wood by the panel board manufacturing industry; incentivising demand for recycled wood products by raising awareness and encouraging action among potential buyers in targeted sectors; exploiting the commercial opportunities identified by research on treated timber recycling; and, promoting the increased segregation of wood waste for recycling at household waste recycling centres, in the furniture recycling industry and during construction and demolition activities.

Defra is monitoring WRAP's progress towards achievement of this target and will assess whether it has been met in the course of 2006.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Civil Society Challenge Fund

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many not-for-profit organisations in the UK benefit from his Department's Civil Society Challenge Fund. [221760]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In the current financial year, 2004–05, DFID is supporting 231 projects with 84 UK-based, not-for-profit organisations through our Civil Society Challenge Fund.

Since its introduction in 2000, we have supported 339 projects with 114 UK-based, not-for-profit organisations through the fund.

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221113]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member for Banbury to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W.

HIV/AIDS

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 55W, on HIV/AIDS, (1) how the spending of funds for HIV and AIDS orphans and vulnerable children through his Department's African country programmes will be monitored; [221648]

(2) what proportion of the money for HIV and AIDS orphans and vulnerable children spent through his Department's African country programmes will take the form of budget support to Governments; and how it will be monitored. [221639]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The spending target to meet the needs of orphans and other children made vulnerable by HIV and AIDS covers the next three financial years: 2005–06, 2006–07, 2007–08. At this stage, in advance of money being spent, we cannot predict with certainty what proportion of the money going through this Department's African country programmes will take the form of budget support to Governments, and what proportion will be spent directly on programmes. Early estimates indicate that spend through budget support will account for a relatively small proportion of the £85 million that will be spent through African Country Programmes out of the £150 million we have committed for OVCs worldwide.

Monitoring of spend against programme, sector and budget support will be through a combination of annual Country Assistance Plan (CAP) reviews and central tracking of expenditure against Policy Information Markers relevant to HIV and AIDS and orphans and vulnerable children.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) pursuant to the answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1639W, on HIV/AIDS (Children) which sub-Saharan African countries have drawn up national orphans and vulnerable children action plans; [221655]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 13 January 2005, Official Report, column 623W, which sub-Saharan African countries have developed national action plans for orphans and vulnerable children. [221658]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Last year, UNICEF, the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) worked together on an initiative to focus on accelerating responses to the situation of orphans and vulnerable children. They undertook a Rapid Assessment, Analysis and Action Planning (RAAAP) exercise in 17 countries in sub-Saharan African countries with high HIV prevalence rates and orphan populations. These countries were: Botswana, Central African Republic, Cote d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Republic of South Africa, Rwanda, Swaziland, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

The RAAAP exercise consisted of three basic elements: situation analysis, response analysis, and preparation of two-year costed action plans for scaling up responses. Sixteen countries (all except Botswana) presented country profiles and plans to a UNICEF meeting in Cape Town, South Africa, last September. Uganda and Zimbabwe already had long-term plans of action. Botswana's focus was and remains the evaluation of their Short Term Plan of Action in order to develop a longer term plan in the future.

Independently of the above, Ghana has also produced "National policy guidelines on orphans and other children made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS". We expect to see other plans for orphans and vulnerable children developed—whether under a second wave of the RAAAP process or independently.

Palestine

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will commission research on the impact of the separation barrier in Palestine on availability of (a) water and (b) arable land to Palestinians. [221823]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID does not plan to commission research on the impact of the separation barrier. Other donors are already active. A preliminary analysis of the barrier's revised route published by the UN's Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) in March 2005 identified that some 142,640 acres (10 per cent.) of West Bank land will lie between the completed barrier and the Green Line. This is some of the most fertile land in the West Bank and currently home to 49,400 Palestinians. Thousands more Palestinians living to the east of the barrier will be separated from their land on the west. The OCHA plans to publish a more extensive technical analysis towards the end of this month. Other bodies researching this issue include the DFID-funded Palestinian Negotiations Support Unit (NSU). The NSU's work indicates that the barrier will deny Palestinian access to 25 per cent. of the 20 million cu m of groundwater currently abstracted annually from the Western Aquifer Basin, and that in the Eastern Aquifer Basin estimated losses will be in the order of 3 to 5 million cu m per year.

Vietnam

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what part his Department's aid programmes have played in the effort to reduce poverty in Vietnam. [221761]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Government of Vietnam have made rapid progress in reducing poverty in recent years and in maintaining a high rate of economic growth. The number of people living in poverty halved from 58 per cent. in 1993 to 29 per cent. in 2002 and economic growth has averaged approximately 7 per cent. per annum over the last 10 years.

This progress is a result of the Government of Vietnam's programme of economic reform and sustained commitment to development and poverty reduction. Recognising that Vietnam is an environment in which aid works, DFID has rapidly increased its programme in Vietnam from £6 million in 2000–01 to an expected spend of £55 million in 2005–06. The DFID programme supports the Government of Vietnam's own poverty reduction and growth strategy. We work very closely with the Government and other donors to support the reform process and ensure that we achieve the maximum impact from the use of our resources. We co-finance the poverty reduction support credit with eight other donors. Key outcomes of our assistance include helping to define methods to target and reach the poor more effectively, and the development of policies in Vietnam that lead to broad-based growth and poverty reduction.

Despite these notable successes, approximately 23 million people still live below the poverty line and an estimated 8.8 million live in hunger. DFID supports rural development programmes in the poorest regions of Vietnam such as the Northern Mountains and Central Highlands. We also support Government targeted poverty reduction programmes that include investments in roads, irrigation, village classrooms, commune health centres and clean water schemes in the poorest communes. In transport, DFID has co-financed a programme that will have built over 2,000 roads linking communes to markets in rural Vietnam by the end of 2005. Evaluations of these road programmes show positive results such as stimulating economic growth and increasing school attendance. In education, we are collaborating with Government and other donors to support the achievement of education for all objectives: 100 per cent. attendance at primary school, and 100 per cent. adult literacy.

DFID also supports poverty reduction in Vietnam through its contributions to the European Commission development budget (currently approximately 18 per cent. of the total budget). The EC spent €28.1 million in Vietnam in 2003 (UK contribution: €5.06 million), and is committed to spend €112 million between 2004 and 2006 (UK contribution: €21.6 million).

DEFENCE

Infantry

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of whether the correct protocol was followed for Infantry regiments which have a non-British colonel in chief being downgraded to battalions. [221484]

Mr. Ingram: I am satisfied that all issues surrounding the Future Army Structure were handled correctly.

Iraq

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medically trained staff are serving in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [215074]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 10 February 2005]: There are some 335 UK medically trained staff in Iraq. We have defined these as personnel that have medical, nursing or paramedical training and whose primary role when deployed is the co-ordination or delivery of medical care.

Nuclear Proliferation Treaty Review

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his priorities are for the forthcoming Nuclear Proliferation Treaty Review Conference in May. [221640]

Mr. Hoon: The United Kingdom's goals for the Review Conference are to make the case for stronger and more effective counter-proliferation measures and to emphasise the importance of compliance with the Treaty. We will do this in the context of emphasising the UK's good record on nuclear disarmament. The UK will produce for the Review Conference the concluding part of three reports of the studies that MOD and AWE have conducted on the verification of nuclear disarmament since the 2000 Review Conference and those involved in the studies will make a presentation on them.

Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vehicles are available exclusively to transport nuclear materials related to the United Kingdom nuclear weapons programme. [222053]

Mr. Hoon: Ten vehicles are available to transport nuclear materials related to the United Kingdom nuclear weapons programme. This fleet comprises of two types of vehicle: the Truck Cargo Heavy Duty Mk 2, which is used to transport nuclear weapons, and the High Security Vehicle, which is used to transport Special Nuclear Materials.

Oath of Allegiance

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the wording is of the oath of allegiance which military personnel swear. [221483]

Mr. Caplin: The wording of the oath of allegiance is as follows:

"I [name] swear by almighty God that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the second, her heirs and successors and that I will, as in duty bound, honestly and faithfully defend Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in person, crown and dignity against all enemies, and will observe and obey all orders of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors and of the generals/air officers [depending on Service] and other officers set over me."

Those who do not believe in God,

"solemnly, sincerely and truly declare and affirm . . ."

Overseas Military Training

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list countries whose armed forces received military training and advice in the United Kingdom during the period 2001 to 2004. [221193]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 14 March 2005]: During the period 2001 to 2004, armed forces of 133 countries received military training and advice from the Ministry of Defence. A complete list of countries is as follow:

PFI Contracts

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the private finance initiative contracts which his Department advertised in 2004, indicating in each case whether the output specification included (a) clauses specifically relating to energy consumption and energy efficiency, (b) a requirement for relevant equipment being purchased to be on the Government's Energy Technology List, (c) a requirement to use whole life costing to assess the energy costs for new buildings or major refurbishments and (d) a requirement that new buildings or major refurbishments should be constructed to a specific energy standard; and what standard was specified in each case. [221883]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 March 2005]: No private finance contracts were advertised in 2004.

Queen's Flight

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions his Department's Ministers used the Queen's Flight in each of the past five years. [213705]

Mr. Caplin: The number of occasions Defence Ministers have used the aircraft of 32 (The Royal) Squadron in each of the past five financial years is as follows:

Financial year	Number of occasions
1999–2000	90
2000–01	56
2001–02	66
2002–03	66
2003–04	58

Travel by Ministers makes it clear that special flights may be authorised when a scheduled service is not available, or when it is essential to travel by air, but the requirements of official or parliamentary business or security considerations or urgency preclude the journey being made by a scheduled service. In respect of overseas travel by Ministers, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The list published in 1999 covers the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 1999. Where RAF/Private Charter aircraft are used this is shown in the list. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. Information for 2004–05 will be published in due course. All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

South African Nationals

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether South African nationals who are serving officers in the British Army are eligible to remain in the British Army while applying for a British passport; [205466]

(2) whether South African nationals who are serving officers in the British Army and are married to British citizens are eligible to remain in the British Army while applying for a British passport. [205467]

Mr. Ingram: Regulations allow for citizens of any Commonwealth country to apply to join the British Army. Once serving it would be for the individual to decide whether he or she wished to apply to the Home Office for naturalisation as a British citizen.

On making an application for naturalisation, an officer may continue to serve in the Army for so long as their commission allows. If an officer's commission comes to an end during the process of making an application, this will not influence any decision to extend their service. A commission will only be extended when it is in the Army's interests to do so. Marital status has no bearing on such matters.

Spearhead Regiment

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the spearhead regiment is fully equipped (a) at present and (b) for the next regiment to take over. [221485]

Mr. Ingram: I have assumed that the hon. Lady is referring to the Spearhead Land Element (SLE), a Very High Readiness (VHR) Battalion Group (based on a light infantry battalion) whose role is to deploy at short notice to conduct a wide range of demanding, non-warfighting tasks. I can confirm that the current and future nominated SLE battalions are both fully equipped to undertake the task as SLE.

Strensham Heliport

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1342W, on near air misses, if he will instruct the Royal Air Force to cease flying over Strensham Heliport until he has had the opportunity to assess the findings of his investigations into the near air misses on 14 December 2004 and 9 February 2005. [221678]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 14 March 2005]: There are at present no grounds on which we feel it appropriate to create an exclusion zone at the Strensham helicopter landing site. The site has, however, been marked as a warning on low flying charts. The position will be reviewed when the results of the UK Airprox Board investigations are known.

Surface Combatants

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Medium Versatile Surface Combatant and its relationship to the Future Surface Combatant programme. [220568]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 March 2005]: The Future Surface Combatant project is still in its concept phase. Studies continue to develop ideas for the platform solution and no decisions have been taken. Our current assumption for planning purposes is that the Future Surface Combatant requirement will be delivered by a two-class solution. The principal element, now known as the Versatile Surface Combatant, is expected to enter service around 2023, and a 'Military Off The Shelf' variant known as the Medium Sized Vessel Derivative is expected to enter service between 2016–19.

Treaty on the Non-proliferation of Nuclear Weapons

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken by the Government to comply with the Treaty on the Non-proliferation of Nuclear Weapons. [221694]

Mr. Hoon: The United Kingdom is fully committed to and in full compliance with its obligations under the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty (NPT), including under Article VI, and has a good record on disarmament. We have reduced the total explosive power of our nuclear forces by over 70 per cent. since the end of the Cold War and in the 1998 Strategic Defence Review we announced that only one Trident submarine would be on deterrent patrol at any one time. That submarine would normally be on several days' notice to fire with its missiles de-targeted. We have conducted studies on the verification of nuclear disarmament since the Review Conference in 2000 and will report the concluding part of our findings to the NPT Review Conference this May. The UK has ratified and continues to support the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, and the negotiation of a Fissile Material Cut-Off Treaty without further delay and without preconditions.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Attorney-General

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General whether the document from the Attorney-General considered by the Cabinet on 17 March 2003 relating to the legality of the war in Iraq is a paper under the Ministerial Code of Conduct. [221892]

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General attended Cabinet on 17 March 2003 and reported that he had answered a parliamentary question on the authority for the use of force in Iraq. He produced the text of that answer for Cabinet, made an oral presentation and was present throughout to answer questions. Paragraph 23 of the Ministerial Code is not relevant in circumstances where the Law Officer provides his advice in person.

HEALTH

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from (a) healthcare professionals and (b) other interested parties on the optimal levels of bed occupancy. [218120]

Mr. Hutton: No recent representations have been received from healthcare professionals on the optimum levels of bed occupancy.

I have received written representation from my hon. Friend the Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe), following the Public Expenditure 2004 Health Committee on 8 December 2004. In addition, right hon. and hon. Members have tabled parliamentary questions on a range of bed occupancy issues.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled in (a) 1979, (b) 1997 and (c) the latest year for which figures are available. [218173]

Mr. Hutton: Data for 1979 is not available. Data from 1996–97 to the third quarter of 2004–05 is available on the Department's website at www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

Cleaning and Hygiene

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on the "Cleanyourhands" programme. [219411]

Miss Melanie Johnson: After the success of the pilot "Cleanyourhands" programme, the Department is providing the National Patient Safety Agency with £490,000 to roll out the programme across the national health service; less than £3,000 per acute NHS trust.

Dentistry

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent NHS dentists there have been per head of population in each year since 1997; and how many were offering NHS treatment in (a) England, (b) each NHS region and (c) each strategic health authority in each year. [217204]

Notes:

1. This is a file containing the numbers of dentists as at 31 December from 1997 to 2004.
2. The figures are based on the numbers of dentists with open general dental service (GDS) or personal dental service (PDS) contracts.
3. The dentists include principals, assistants and trainees.
4. Prison contracts have not been included in this analysis.
5. The areas have been defined using practice postcodes within the specified area.
6. The figures provide a snapshot of the number of individual dentists with an open contract at 31 December.
7. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with the PCT.
8. The Dental Practice Board has no information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual dentists.
9. The figures provide an accurate figure taking into account any notifications received up to 31 January 2005.
10. As data is not available by whole time equivalent, headcount has been used to determine the number of national health service dentists per head of population in the table.
11. Areas have been defined using the Office of National Statistics All Fields Postcode Directory—November 2004.

Derriford Hospital

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will permit the Vanguard Project at Derriford hospital to proceed with a single bidder with appropriate financial safeguards; and if he will make a statement. [221825]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The Plymouth hospitals national health service trust is currently considering the options for the Vanguard project. The Department's private finance unit is providing support and working with the trust to discuss the next steps.

Diagnostic and Treatment Centres

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the NHS per patient is for each contract placed by the NHS with private sector diagnostic and treatment centres; and against what NHS comparator each was assessed. [220339]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Wave 1 independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) providers are paid according to the contracted payment mechanism based on a price per procedure. In 2003–04, it is estimated that procedures purchased under the ISTC programme cost on average 9 per cent. more than the national health service equivalent cost, using NHS tariff as the base for the equivalent cost calculation. We are engaged in independent sector procurement to provide choice, contestability and additional capacity to reduce waiting times.

Great North Air Ambulance Service

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with the Northumbria Ambulance Trust about the withdrawal of the Great North Air Ambulance Service based at Blyth. [221285]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The Department has not had any discussion with the Northumbria Ambulance Trust about the withdrawal of the Great North Air Ambulance Service.

Hepatitis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what arrangements are being made to treat the individuals in English prisons who are infected with hepatitis C; [220482]

(2) what measures are in place to identify the number of individuals in English prisons who are infected with hepatitis C. [220484]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The Hepatitis C Action Plan for England (June 2004) envisages that prisoners, who are one of the priority groups identified within it, should have equal access to the full range of testing, diagnostic, assessment and treatment services that it specifies.

Information about the number of prisoners with hepatitis C is not collected centrally. Prisons and their national health service partners draw up, and regularly review, prison health delivery plans within which prisoners' health care needs are assessed, prioritised resources allocated and delivery monitored.

Hospital-acquired Infections

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many London acute trusts undertake post-discharge surveillance for hospital acquired infections; [221018]

(2) which London acute trusts have separate budgets for infection control; and what those budgets are, broken down by acute trust; [221019]

(3) what the infection control nurses to bed ratio was in acute trusts in London on the latest date for which figures are available. [221021]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of hospital-acquired MRSA have been reported at (a) Berwick Infirmary, (b) Alnwick Infirmary, (c) Rothbury Community Hospital and (d) Wansbeck General Hospital in the most recent period for which figures are available. [220373]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The information is not available in the format requested. The number of reported methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections for Northumbria Healthcare National Health Service Trust from April to September 2004 was 27.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of MRSA were found in (a) the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS trust and (b) in all hospitals in each year since 1996. [220615]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 March 2005]: Data for methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) bacteraemias in national health service acute trusts has only been collected on a mandatory basis since 2001. It is published in six-monthly periods (April to September and October to March). The number reported from the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS trust and for all acute trusts in England is shown in the table.

	University Hospitals Leicester	England
April to September 2001	80	3,598
October 2001 to March 2002	83	3,651
April to September 2002	62	3,574
October 2002 to March 2003	82	3,799
April to September 2003	69	3,744
October 2003 to March 2004	63	3,940
April to September 2004	59	3,519

The figures for England for April to September 2004 show a 6.3 per cent. reduction compared with the same period for 2003.

IT Projects

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much Atos Origin has been paid to date for the development and provision of the full choose and book system; and what monthly payment is currently being made to the company. [220863]

Mr. Hutton: Total payments to date to Atos Origin relating to the development, delivery and maintenance of the core choose and book service total £15,699,795.

A fixed monthly payment of £715,075 is made to the company for ongoing maintenance and management services.

Meat Hygiene

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meat plants with a Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point plan have been prosecuted for breaching UK Hygiene Regulations in each year between 2000 and 2004. [219009]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The relevant legislation requires all licensed fresh meat and poultry meat plants in Great Britain and Northern Ireland to have hazard analysis critical control point (HACCP) plans in place. This requirement had to be implemented in large plants by 7 June 2002 in Eng'and, Scotland and Wales and by 15 July 2002 in Northern Ireland: and across all small plants by 7 June 2003.

The total number of licensed fresh and poultry meat plants prosecuted under United Kingdom meat hygiene legislation with a HACCP plan in place at the time the offence occurred since this statutory requirement came into force is shown in the table.

Notes:

1. Figures for 2002–03 are not available.

2. Figures for 2003–04 are currently being validated.

3. NHS regions no longer existed from 2001–02. Figures quoted are based on nominal strategic health authority area, even though SHAs did not come into being until the following year.

4. Total expenditure is taken from audited health authority accounts and primary care trust summarisation schedules, which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in the year. The expenditure is the total expenditure by the relevant health authorities, and the commissioner costs of the primary care trusts.

5. Total NHS expenditure cannot be identified by regional or health authority area because the majority of general dental services expenditure is not included in the individual health authority accounts or primary care trust summarisation schedules and is separately accounted for by the Dental Practice Board. The majority of pharmaceutical services expenditure is accounted for by the Prescription Pricing Authority and not by health authorities or primary care trusts.

6. All figures are based on returns submitted by individual NHS organisations. These returns are signed off by the directors of finance of the NHS organisations and audited by auditors appointed by the Audit Commission.

NHS Finances

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what unplanned financial support is made available to NHS (a) trusts and (b) primary care trusts which are forecasting a year-end deficit. [219391]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's policy is that in-year deficits occurring in national health service bodies because of poor financial performance should not receive unplanned financial support, except in exceptional circumstances.

Exceptionally, the Department has agreed to provide Mid Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust with unplanned financial support of £30 million in the 2004–05 financial year.

NHS Staff (Burnley)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses on average were employed in (i) 1997 and (ii) the last period for which figures are available in (A) East Lancashire Acute Trust and (B) Burnley General Hospital; and if he will make a statement. [219496]

Obesity

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have become obese in the Chelmsford primary care trust area in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [219769]

Paddington Basin Health Campus

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the outcome has been of negotiations between Multiplex Ltd. and his Department concerning the Paddington Basin Health Campus. [221732]

Multiplex Ltd. has a shareholding in Paddington Development Corporate Ltd. (PDCL), a privately owned consortium, which among other things, owns land in Paddington. PDCL is currently negotiating with Westminster city council and the Paddington Health Campus team for land required for the proposed PHC. Westminster city council has agreed to broker the land deal.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role he expects that the Paddington Development Corporation will play in the NHS Paddington Basin Health Campus project. [221755]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The Royal Brompton and Harefield and St. Mary's national health service trusts are continuing discussions with Westminster city council with regard to the acquisition of land for Paddington Health Campus (PHC). Paddington Development Corporation Ltd. (PDCL) also own land required by PHC.

Westminster city council has agreed to negotiate with PDCL with the aim of trying to acquire their land. This will mean that the PHC team will only have to deal with one party for the acquisition of all the land needed.

It will only be possible to define the PDCL role when, and if, those aforementioned discussions are concluded satisfactorily.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) from whom his Department is purchasing land for the construction of (a) homes for (i) key workers and (ii) relatives of inpatients and (b) hospital facilities at the Paddington Basin Health Campus; and what acreage of land his Department is to acquire in each instance; [222005]

(2) what his estimate is of the cost to his Department of the acquisition of land at Paddington Basin for housing of (a) key workers and (b) relatives of inpatients at the hospital facilities on the Paddington Basin Health Campus. [222009]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The land needed for the Paddington Health Campus has been identified. Terms for its purchase, including costs and ownership, acceptable to the national health service have not yet been agreed.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the cost to his Department up to 2014 of providing key worker housing for those employed at the Paddington Basin Health Campus. [222007]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The Royal Brompton and Harefield and St. Mary's national health service trusts will require significant accommodation for staff within the locality of the Paddington Health Campus (PHC), which is planned to open in 2013. The trusts propose to locate over 200 units for key workers on the PHC's site and are in discussions with Westminster city council and registered social landlords about the provision of additional accommodation. It is too early in the process for definitive costs to be available.

Parliamentary Questions

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he will reply to question reference 218474 from the hon. Member for St. Ives; [222111]

(2) when he will reply to question reference 218756 from the hon. Member for St. Ives; [222112]

(3) when he will reply to question reference 218757 from the hon. Member for St. Ives; [222113]

(4) when he will reply to question reference 218753 from the hon. Member for St. Ives; [222114]

(5) when he will reply to question reference 218327 from the hon. Member for St. Ives; [222115]

(6) when he will reply to question reference 218457 from the hon. Member for St. Ives. [222116]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I replied to the hon. Member on 10 March.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of bills of each NHS acute trust in England were paid within 30 days in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what the value was in each case. [218114]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

The most recent period for which figures are available is as reported in the individual final accounts of national health service trusts for 2003–04.

Practice Closures

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner practices closed in (a) England and (b) each primary care trust in each year since 1996. [218163]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally.

The Government have embarked on one of the most sustained programmes of primary care modernisation in the history of the national health service and that work is ongoing to ensure a primary care infrastructure that is fit for purpose and suitable for the 21st century. Surgery closures are normally due to replacement premises providing higher quality facilities for one or more general practitioner practices, or the modernisation of existing surgeries.

Between 2000 and 2004, 2,848 GP premises have been replaced or refurbished or are under construction.

Primary Care Trusts (Mergers)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from (a) NHS organisations and (b) other interested bodies on the merits of merging primary care trusts. [216147]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is in ongoing discussions with the national health service on primary care trust development and system reform.

Professor Roy Meadow

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what speaking engagements have been undertaken by Professor Roy Meadow to NHS employees since December 2003. [210220]

Mr. Hutton: The Department keeps no records of the speaking engagements of doctors or other health professionals or whether these are attended by national health service staff.

Radiographers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implementation by (a) NHS trusts and (b) NHS foundation trusts of the terms and conditions of Agenda for Change with respect to radiographers. [220466]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The implementation of Agenda for Change in individual national health service trusts, including NHS foundation trusts, is a matter for the employer in partnership with staff locally.

However, we have asked NHS employers to monitor average hourly rates of pay for radiographers and others currently working standard hours of less than 37½ per week and to alert the NHS Staff Council in good time if at any point it appears that, when the hours are finally standardised at 37½ per week, they might fall below pre-Agenda for Change rates.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that all radiographers receive protection of working hours under the Agenda for Change proposals. [220578]

Mr. Hutton: Under the Agenda for Change terms and conditions of service, existing radiographers will migrate gradually over a period of seven years to the new standard working hours of 37.5 per week. These protection arrangements will continue to apply where staff move to a post with the same hours under the old pay system during the protection period. Newly appointed or promoted staff should be appointed or promoted on the new terms, except where they are recruited after 1 October 2004 on pre-Agenda for Change terms and conditions pending assimilation of their posts to the new pay system.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding NHS trusts and NHS foundation trusts failing to honour the terms and conditions of Agenda for Change with respect to radiographers. [220608]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The Society of Radiographers has written to me on this subject.

Vitamin D

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many and what proportion of eligible mothers and babies obtained free vitamins containing vitamin D on the NHS in the last year for which figures are available; [217270]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to promote the use of NHS-recommended vitamins containing vitamin D to mothers; and how much the Department spent on such promotion in each of the last 10 years. [217272]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is not available in the form requested.

Vitamin supplements are available free under the welfare food scheme for pregnant women and children under the age of five in families in receipt of income support, job seekers allowance and child tax credit (below a certain level).

Government advice on vitamins is set out in booklets "Pregnancy" and "Birth to Five", which are given to all mothers during pregnancy and soon after birth. Information on spending specifically on promotion of national health service-recommended vitamins containing vitamin D in the last 10 years is not available.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of mothers bought NHS-recommended vitamins containing vitamin D in the last year for which figures are available. [217271]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is not collected centrally.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Gypsy Encampments

9. Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Prime Minister about illegal Gypsy encampments. [221856]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I meet with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister regularly to discuss a range of issues.

This has included discussions on matters concerning Gypsy encampments.

Small Businesses

10. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to introduce rate relief for small businesses. [221857]

Mr. Raynsford: From 1 April 2005 over 400,000 small businesses will be eligible to receive small business rate relief. This will be a significant benefit to many small businesses for whom business rates can represent a disproportionate burden. Under the new relief scheme, those businesses occupying single main premises with a rateable value below £10,000 are likely to qualify for some reduction in their rates bill, rising to a 50 per cent. rebate for those with rateable values below £5,000. All those small businesses which believe they may qualify should be encouraged to apply for this relief and we have made provision for this by informing all rate payers of the relief in their rates bill.

Social Housing

11. Mr. Soley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on increasing mobility in the social rented sector. [221858]

Keith Hill: The Government are committed to increasing the mobility of people in the social rented sector. As part of this commitment let a contract (in February 2004), to develop a service that will bring together, for the first time, social housing and employment opportunities across the UK. This service was unveiled in the Deputy Prime Minister's five-year plan 'Sustainable Communities—Homes for All' and is known as 'moveUK'. We expect the service to commence later this year.

Land

12. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the use of article 4 directives with respect to the sub-division and sale of agricultural land and woodland. [221859]

Keith Hill: The Government recognise that directions made under article 4 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 could play a greater role in bringing under full planning control much unsightly minor development associated with the sale of subdivided rural land. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects in the next few months to put forward for consultation two amendments to the order. These measures would make it easier for local planning authorities to serve article 4 directions promptly on farm or forest plots where owners cannot readily be traced, and without the need to obtain in advance the approval of the First Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister.

Regeneration

13. Jim Dobbin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the role of his Department is in furthering economic regeneration. [221860]

Yvette Cooper: In 2005–06 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will spend £3.2 billion on regeneration programmes, including about £1.5 billion directed through the regional development agencies. In addition, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister works with other Departments and stakeholders to further regeneration through its work to deliver PSA 1 (Neighbourhood Renewal), PSA 2 (Regional Economic Performance and PSA 5 (Sustainable Communities).

14. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what methods he uses to assess the impact of Government policies on regeneration. [221861]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister publishes guidance on appraising regeneration projects in "Assessing the Impacts of Spatial Interventions—Regeneration, Renewal and Regional Development—'The 3Rs guidance'". This follows the principles set out in the Treasury Green Book on investment appraisal.

Councillors' Conduct (Highway Regulations)

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he has issued to local authorities on the propriety of councillors commenting on proposals for changes in highway regulations in advance of decisions being taken. [221520]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has issued no guidance of this kind. Standards of conduct for councillors are contained in the model code of conduct issued in November 2001. The Standards Board for England is currently reviewing this code.

Fire Service

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average response time of the fire and rescue service to 999 calls was in (a) Hartlepool and (b) England and Wales in each year since 1997. [221990]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hartlepool (Iain Wright) on 2 March 2005, Official Report, column 1247W.

Housing

Ms Buck: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to issue his proposals for a revised measurement of overcrowding. [221632]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister hopes to take a decision shortly on the timing of consultation on the statutory overcrowding standards.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total spending by the Housing Corporation in the London borough of Islington was in each year since 1997–98; and what proportion of this was spent on (a) capital repairs and (b) new build. [221420]

Keith Hill: The following table sets out the total expenditure through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme (ADP) from 1997–98 to 2003–04, where Islington is the sponsoring authority, and the proportion of this that was spent on new build and miscellaneous works.

Approved development programme

	Total investment (£000)	Percentage of total New build	Miscellaneous works[1]
1997–98	9,130	37	1
1998–99	14,318	70	8
1999–2000	5,800	50	12
2000–01	9,815	83	4
2001–02	10,313	63	0
2002–03	24,906	48	1
2003–04	46,716	43	2

[1] Miscellaneous works are mainly items of major repair but also include other works such as adaptations for people with disabilities and insulation/energy conservation works.

Housing Corporation (extract from RCM)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total central Government Housing Investment programme allocation to the London borough of Islington was in each year since 1997–98; and what proportion of this was used for (a) capital repairs and (b) new build. [221421]

Keith Hill: Details of the housing capital allocations (£ million) made to Islington since 1997–98 are tabled as follows. The Major Repairs Allowance and Arms Length Management Organisation funding are both wholly for use on council housing. The bulk of the housing investment programme funding supports the authority's overall housing capital programme; decisions on what these funds are used for are a matter for the authority. The following table shows the composition of Islington's overall programme.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what expenditure has been allocated to Implementing Electronic Government capital grants to local authorities in each year since their inception; and what the estimated allocation is for 2005–06. [219856]

Mr. Raynsford: Local authorities in England were allocated £200,000 each in capital grant for Implementing Electronic Government (IEG) in 2002–03, an additional £200,000 each in 2003–04 and £350,000 each in 2004–05. The allocation for every local authority in 2005–06 is £150,000. The grant is intended to support the proposals set out in receiving authorities IEG statements and is only payable to authorities that have submitted a satisfactory IEG statement.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the projects being undertaken by his Department in respect of which information cannot be given in answer to parliamentary questions as a result of commercial confidentiality. [216620]

Yvette Cooper: A decision not to release information relating to any project as a result of commercial confidentiality is considered on the basis of the specific request made in each parliamentary question.

An assessment of commercial confidentiality may apply to a specific element within a project as well as to an entire project. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Planning (Country Houses)

Alan Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether it is his intention in Planning Policy Statement 7 not to preclude approval of applications to build new country houses in any particular architectural style or idiom but to encourage all styles and types provided that the proposals in question are of high quality in terms of design, construction and sustainability; and if he will make a statement. [222648]

Keith Hill: Planning Policy Statement 7 (PPS7) "Sustainable Development in Rural Areas", says (paragraph 10) that isolated new houses in the countryside will require special justification for planning permission to be granted. It goes on to say (paragraph 11) that:

> "Very occasionally the exceptional quality and innovative nature of the design of a proposed, isolated new house may provide this special justification for granting planning permission. Such a design should be truly outstanding and ground-breaking, for example, in its use of materials, methods of construction or its contribution to protecting and enhancing the environment, so helping to raise standards of design more generally in rural areas. The value of such a building will be found in its reflection of the highest standards in contemporary architecture, the significant enhancement of its immediate setting and its sensitivity to the defining characteristics of the local area."

The Government's intention is not to discourage particular styles and/or types of contemporary architecture which also meet the wider objectives of policy set out in PPS7. The fact that a particular design reflects the evolution of architecture from its historical roots is not of itself a reason to reject a proposal for an isolated new house in the countryside. Indeed, as Planning Policy Statement 1 (PPS1) "Delivering Sustainable Development" makes clear (paragraph 38), Government policy is that local planning authorities (when deciding planning applications) should not attempt to impose architectural styles or particular tastes, or stifle innovation.

Postal Voting

Mr. Laws: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people had applied to vote by post (a) in June 2001, (b) in December 2004 and (c) on the latest date for which information is available, broken down by (i) local authority area and (ii) parliamentary constituency; and if he will make a statement. [221726]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Electoral Commission's report on the 2001 general election shows 1,738,055 issued for that election.

Southend

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Minister for Local and Regional Government has to visit Southend on official business. [222259]

Mr. Raynsford: The Minister of State for Local and Regional Government currently has no plans to visit Southend on official business.

CABINET OFFICE

Sikh Employees

David Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the Office's policy is on the wearing of the Kirpan by Sikh employees. [221665]

Mr. Miliband: Cabinet Office policy is that there is no reason that Sikh civil servants or members of the public should not wear the Kirpan in Cabinet Office buildings, except in places where security policy might dictate otherwise and where items such as pen knives or letter openers might be banned. In such cases, the Kirpan would be stored in a secure place at the work location during working hours.

Cabinet Office does not discriminate unfairly on any grounds, including religion and belief. This commitment is set out clearly in our equal opportunities policy, including in our dignity at work statement. In support of this, the Department provides guidance and advice to staff and managers about the use of prayer rooms and on making and handling requests for time away from the office for religious observance. There is one designated prayer room on the Cabinet Office estate and other rooms can be made available for staff to use on request.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the future of regional development agencies. [221853]

Jacqui Smith: England's Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) will continue to play a lead role in delivering sustainable improvements in the economic performance of all English regions, acting as strategic leaders in their regions to develop a region-specific economic development and regeneration agenda. In line with our current policy, where it is appropriate to do so, we will look to increase the flexibilities and freedoms available to RDAs to enable them to fulfil this role effectively.

Sellafield

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on advice given by Euratom inspectors to BNFL in respect of the weighing of cans of plutonium nitrate at Sellafield. [221677]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am assured that plutonium nitrate is not stored in cans at Sellafield and so the weighing by BNFL of such cans has not been the subject of advice from European Commission safeguards inspectors.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Bottled Water

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of

25 January 2005, Official Report, column 247W, on bottled water, what the names and addresses are of suppliers of bottled water to the Refreshment Department; and what estimate has been made of the number of (a) lorry journeys and (b) lorry miles generated by these companies in order to meet orders placed by the Refreshment Department in each year. [222154]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Bottled water is supplied to the House of Commons by Hildon Ltd. at Broughton, Hampshire. The Refreshment Department keeps no record of the number of lorry journeys or lorry miles generated by Hildon Ltd. in supplying bottled water to the House of Commons, but is aware that the vehicle dispatched will make deliveries to several other customers on the same journey.

Catering Food Waste

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 25 January 2005, Official Report, columns 247–48W, on catering food waste, if he will estimate the (a) weight and (b) percentage of food purchased which is (i) disposed of by the Refreshment Department in the general refuse and (ii) re-used for human consumption on an average working day. [222155]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The information is as follows:

(a) The Refreshment Department does not keep any record of the weight of catering food waste.

(b) In the 11 months to the end of February 2005, the Refreshment Department estimates that approximately 2 per cent. of food purchases by value have been written off as wastage. No records are kept of the amount of left-over food re-used at a later time or date within the catering operations of the Refreshment Department.

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 25 January 2005, Official Report, columns 247–48W, on catering food waste, what discussions have been held with charitable organisations on the possibility of donating food to such organisations since 1997; and what progress has been made since 25 January in reaching an agreement with such organisations to donate food which otherwise would be disposed of by the Refreshment Department. [222156]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The Refreshment Department last made inquiries about the possibility of donating waste food from the House of Commons catering operations to charitable organisations in April 2002. At that time, only three of 20 charities contacted in central London confirmed that they accepted food donations from catering establishments. None of these three organisations were prepared to accept unpackaged food prepared from fresh ingredients in our own kitchens and the Refreshment Department has minimal levels of wastage of packaged foods. All charities contacted in 2002 concluded that the nature, frequency and unpredictable quantity of food waste from the House of Commons Refreshment Department was unsuitable for their needs, but that they would contact us if their policy changed. No further discussions have been held since then.

Cycling

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many cycle parking places are provided for the use of hon. Members and staff of the House of Commons estate; and what plans there are to increase the number of cycle parking places available. [222093]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: There are at present some 100 cycle parking spaces on the parliamentary estate. There are plans to re-organise the parking arrangements in Star Chamber Court which will create some 15 additional cycle parking spaces.

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission for what reasons members of the public are prevented from parking their bicycles on the parliamentary estate; and if he will provide secure parking places on the parliamentary estate for such a purpose. [222094]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: It is undesirable for visitors to bring bicycles on to the estate for security reasons; there are therefore no plans to provide spaces for the public. Cycle parking is available nearby outside 7 Millbank.

Repairs (Vehicle Emissions)

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will estimate the total financial cost of repairing damage caused to House buildings by emissions from motor vehicles on the parliamentary estate in each of the last five years. [222074]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: No such estimate can be made.

Transport

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many hon. Members use (a) rail, (b) bus, (c) bicycle, (d) car, (e) aeroplane and (f) foot as their predominant means of transport to the parliamentary estate. [222091]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The Commission has no responsibility for how hon. Members choose to come to Parliament.

TREASURY

Cancer Deaths

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have died due to cancer in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [222144]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Stephen Hepburn, dated 16 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many people have died due to cancer in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. (222144)

The latest year for which data are available is 2003. Figures for Jarrow constituency, which is made up of parts of Gateshead and South Tyneside local authorities, are not available. For this reason, the figures for 1997 to 2003, provided in the attached table, are for Gateshead and South Tyneside, the North East Government Office Region and the United Kingdom.

Deaths from cancer[1] in South Tyneside and Gateshead local authorities, North East Government Office Region[2] and the United Kingdom[3]—1997 to 2003[4]

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003
Gateshead	654	638	630	619	635	624	625
South Tyneside	532	545	528	530	536	508	526
North East	7,816	7,883	7,572	7,486	7,756	7,688	7,618
United Kingdom	154,125	154,729	152,476	151,185	154,731	155,480	154,828

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) for England and Wales, and Northern Ireland, from 1997 to 2000, and for deaths in Scotland from 1997 to 1999. The International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) was used to define deaths in England and Wales, and Northern Ireland from 2001 to 2003, and in Scotland from 2000 to 2003. The codes used are listed below:
Cancer (Malignant neoplasms)—ICD-9 140–208; ICD-10 C00-C97.
[2] Usual residents of these areas.
[3] UK figures include non-residents.
[4] The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death means that data for cancer are not completely comparable with data coded using ICD-9. The data should therefore be interpreted with caution. The effect of the change in classification in 2001 on cancer deaths in England and Wales is described in a report published in May 2002.*

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times during the (a) Italian, (b) Irish and (c) Dutch presidency of the EU the Committee for the Implementation of the Regulation establishing an Instrument for Structural Policies for Pre-accession met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if he will make a statement. [217895]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: I have been asked to reply.

The Committee for the implementation of the Regulation establishing an Instrument for Structural Policies for Pre-accession (ISPA) met once under the Italian presidency of the EU, on 12 and 13 November 2003. The Committee did not meet under the Irish presidency but met once under the Dutch presidency, on 28 October 2004. The meetings took place in Brussels and were attended by an official from the Department for International Development.

The ISPA Committee is convened and chaired by the Commission and is constituted for member states to assist the Commission with implementation of Council Regulation No. 1267/1999 of 21 June 1999.

The ISPA programme consists of support to the environmental and transport infrastructure priorities of the applicant countries of Central and Eastern Europe.

Council Decision 1999/468/EC sets out to "simplify the requirements for the exercise of implementing powers conferred on the Commission". Identity Cards

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what traffic light status was awarded to the identity cards scheme by the Office of Government Commerce at the Gateway Review 1 stage. [217772]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 25 February 2005]: The ID Cards programme has not yet undergone a Gate 1 Review. It has, however, undergone two OGC Gate 0 Reviews, in June 2003 and January 2004 respectively. The traffic light status awarded by these reviews is exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 as disclosure would be likely to prejudice both the ability of OGC to examine the effectiveness, efficiency and economy with which other Government Departments exercise their functions and also the formulation and development of Government policy. I believe the public interest in disclosure of such information is outweighed by the public interest in non-disclosure.

Job Creation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new jobs have been created in (a) Aberdeenshire Unitary Authority Area, (b) Gordon constituency and (c) Banff and Buchan constituency in each year since 1999. [222061]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 16 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about jobs created in Aberdeenshire Unitary Authority, and Banff and Buchan and Gordon Parliamentary Constituencies. (222061)

While statistics of new jobs created are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes, in numbers of jobs, from year to year.

The attached table shows the information requested, relating to jobs in these areas, from 1999 to 2003 for Aberdeenshire, and from 1999 to 2002 for Parliamentary Constituencies. These are the latest period for which information is available.

Perinatal/Infant Mortality

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) perinatal and (b) infant mortality rates were in each of the last 10 years. [222060]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Redundancy Payments

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to raise the threshold at which tax is paid on redundancy payments. [221414]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keep the £30,000 tax exemption for redundancy payments under review along with all other aspects of the tax system.

Women with Disabilities

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many women with disabilities were in employment in the UK on the latest date for which figures are available. [221604]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 16 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about women with disabilities in employment in the UK. (221604)

It is estimated that, for the three-month period ending in November 2004, there were 1,625,000 women with disabilities in employment in the United Kingdom.

The definition of 'disabled' includes those who have a current disability covered by the Disability Discrimination Act, or a work-limiting disability, or both.

This estimate from the Labour Force Survey is, as with any statistical sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of youth unemployment in Tamworth was in 2004. [221930]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated 16 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about youth unemployment in Tamworth. (221930)

It is estimated that, for the twelve-month period ending in February 2004, the latest period for which information is available, there were 2,000 unemployed people aged 16–24 resident in the Tamworth Parliamentary Constituency. This estimate from the Labour Force Survey is, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for local areas. In the year 2004, there were, on average, 290 young people aged 18 to 24 years claiming Jobseeker's Allowance who were resident in the Tamworth Parliamentary Constituency.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Vale of York, of 7 February 2005, Official Report, column 1346W, on Child Support Agency, what the (a) median and (b) mean time taken to process a case of (i) maintenance calculation and (ii) first payment was in the last period for which figures are available; and what proportion of new cases over (A) six months and (B) a year old have (1) yet to receive a maintenance calculation and (2) made a first payment. [220598]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 16 March 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the Answer to the honourable Member for Vale of York of 7th February Official Report column 1346W on Child Support Agency what the (a) median and (b) mean time taken to process a case of (i) maintenance calculation and (ii) first payment was in the last period for which figures are available; and what proportion of new cases over (A) six months and (B) a year old have (1) yet to receive a maintenance calculation and (2) made a first payment.

The information you seek is not currently available with any level of accuracy. The Agency is currently progressively improving its management information systems. This will lead to a position, during the early summer, where it will be possible to extract this information from our systems. I have therefore noted your request and will provide the information to you when it is available.

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for the Child Support Agency to impose a penalty on absent parents who fail to disclose their income and employee details. [220845]

Mr. Pond: A non-resident parent is required to provide the Child Support Agency with a range of information including their income and employment details in order for a maintenance calculation to be made.

Since January 2001 it has been a criminal offence if a person fails to provide information to the Child Support Agency when required to do so, or knowingly provides false information. This offence carries a fine of up to £1,000 on conviction by a court.

We have no plans to introduce further penalties in such circumstances.

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will give the Child Support Agency (CSA) powers to make it mandatory for absent parents to instruct the CSA of their new employee details when they change employment. [220860]

Mr. Pond: We have no plans to make it mandatory for non resident parents to notify the Child Support Agency when they change their employment.

Employment Rates

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the earliest date is by which the Government expect to have achieved an employment rate equivalent to 80 per cent. of the working age population in work. [215557]

Jane Kennedy: An employment rate equivalent to 80 per cent. of the working age population in work is a long-term aspiration.

This long-term aspiration is very challenging. It will require continued macroeconomic stability and further radical welfare reform to build on the success of achieving the highest employment rate of all the G8 major industrialised countries and one of the highest employment rates in our history.

Our five-year strategy, 'Opportunity and Security throughout life' outlines how we aim to meet this challenge. With unemployment at low levels helping inactive people into work is crucial to achieving our aspiration. We must:

support children and families—including helping lone parents into work by making work possible and making work pay help people on incapacity benefits to get the support they need to fulfil their ambitions to return to work break down the barriers that prevent disabled people meeting their desire to move back into work.

It will take time to achieve this. Key elements to the strategy will be the reform of incapacity benefit and the equalisation of state pension age from 2010. The principle behind the strategy is to help people to move back into work while still delivering financial security for those who need it.

Pension Service (Cold Calling)

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on cold-calling by Pension Service staff of pensioners; how many such calls the Pension Service has made in each of the last 24 months, broken down by region; whether the calls are made by Pension Service employees; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the script used by callers. [220993]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department does not "cold call" pensioners. Telephone calls are in certain circumstances made to pensioners who may be eligible for pension credit to ask if they wish to apply. In all such cases the recipient would already have received at least one letter about pension credit, including one informing them that such a call might be made. The Department has also sent letters to customers to inform them of the change to Direct Payment, a safer and more secure method of paying benefits and pensions. These letters advise customers that we will try to call them if we do not hear from them.

Pensioners

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average weekly income of single (a) female and (b) male pensioners was in the latest period for which figures are available. [221603]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is in the table.

The average incomes of single female and single male pensioners in 2002–03

£ per week [1]

	Single female pensioners	Single male pensioners
Gross income	197	221
Net income BHC	172	190
Net income AHC	147	165

[1] 2002–03 prices.

Notes:

1. Incomes are presented as pounds per week. Figures for incomes are given in 2002–03 prices and rounded to the nearest pound.
2. BHC stands for "before housing costs" and AHC for "after housing costs".
3. Gross income is income from all sources received by the pensioner including income from social security benefits (including housing benefit), earnings from employment or self-employment, any private pension income, and tax credits. Net income before housing costs deducts direct taxes including council tax, net income after housing costs also deducts housing costs which include rent, water rates and mortgage payments.

The Pensioners' Incomes Series 2002–03 (which is based on data from the Family Resources Survey).

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in (a) Plymouth, Sutton, (b) Plymouth, Devonport and (c) South West Devon received pension credit in the latest month for which figures are available. [221608]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on numbers of households and individuals in receipt of pension credit in each constituency at 31 December 2004 is contained in the most recent quarterly pension credit progress report, which was published on 3 February. A copy of the report is in the Library.

Pensions

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department keeps a record of the number of lost application forms for pension credit. [221894]

Mr. Pond: The Department does not keep a central record of the number of lost application forms. However, between April 2004 and February 2005 the pension credit application line was contacted in 714 cases by customers who had not received their forms. Appropriate action is taken as soon as possible when the application line is informed that a customer has not received his or her form.

Statistics

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the publication dates of statistics to be released by his Department and its agencies during the next year. [219747]

Mr. Pond: The majority of the Department's statistics are released quarterly on the internet and summarised in the DWP Statistical Summary. They are scheduled to be issued on the following dates in the coming year:

16 March 2005
15 June 2005
21 September 2005
21 December 2005

The Department's statisticians have recently completed a consultation about improvements to the data sources and coverage of benefit statistics. The outcome of the consultation has been placed in the Library and is available on the Department's website at http//www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd1/stats_consultation/DWP_Response_to_External_Consultation.pdf. Further details, including the effect on the publication schedule, will be released in the summer.

Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Tamworth have received (a) full and (b) partial grants from the Access to Work programme in each year since its introduction. [221934]

Maria Eagle: Access to Work grants are not broken down into full or partial grants. The Access to Work programme assesses the needs of individuals and, within Access to Work guidelines, offers a grant required by the applicant to help them overcome the particular barriers they face in their workplace.

Information is not available broken down by constituency. The available information for the West Midlands Jobcentre Plus region is in the table.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Q9. Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister whether he plans to visit Colchester on official business before 5 May. [221840]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so.

Entertainment

Norman Lamb: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list guests entertained at public expense at (a) Chequers and (b) 10 Downing street in the period from 1 January to 25 February. [221026]

The Prime Minister: The list of guests entertained at Chequers is currently being considered as part of a request under the Freedom of Information Act. Copies of the reply will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

It is a matter of public record that both my officials and I entertain guests at 10 Downing street. A list of guests is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his Answers of 9 March to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, Official Report, column 514, and to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd), Official Report, column 516, what account he took, in his presentation to the Cabinet of the reasons for going to war with Iraq, of the requirements under the Ministerial Code when a summary of advice is given to Cabinet. [221891]

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister whether he intends to make available to a succeeding administration the complete text of the advice of the Attorney-General reported orally to the Cabinet on 17 March 2003 under the Ministerial Code of Conduct. [221893]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Members to the letter from the Attorney-General (Lord Goldsmith) to my right hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Clare Short), copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Black Male Pupils

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Government plan to teach black male pupils in separate classes in an effort to improve their GCSE results. [221598]

Derek Twigg: Segregating pupils solely on the grounds of ethnicity is contrary to the Department's approach to inclusion and we have no plans to promote the segregation and teaching of black male pupils in separate classes.

The strategies we have put in place to tackle underachievement by minority ethnic pupils, including targeted work to support black pupils, are delivering year-on-year improvements in GCSE results for all ethnic groups. Black Caribbean boys' achievement has risen this year by almost twice the national average and black African boys' has risen even faster. These improvements are important; however, we are not complacent and recognise that there remains a great deal more to do.

Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what policies her Department has in place for supporting employees with cancer. [218589]

Derek Twigg: My Department takes the health and welfare of all its employees very seriously. Managers are responsible for day to day sickness absence management and work closely with personnel staff on individual cases to identify how best to offer help and support including keeping in touch arrangements for those on long-term sickness absence.

For employees with cancer, a range of support is available including: changed working patterns; approved discretionary special leave or paid time off for treatment; and, if appropriate, we will support applications for medical retirement.

In addition, we encourage the use of Department's Employee Assistance Programme for counselling and information. Staff and their managers can use of departmental occupational health advisers to provide advice on all areas where health may affect attendance and performance. Staff can also have membership of the Civil Service Benevolent Fund, one of the largest benevolent funds in the UK, who can provide help and assistance, including financial assistance and putting cancer sufferers in touch with specialist agencies.

Care Proceedings

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many care proceedings have been terminated after court proceedings have been initiated with the child in question remaining with the birth parent in each of the last 10 years. [222036]

Margaret Hodge: It is not possible to say in how many care proceedings the child in question remained with their birth parents, as information about the parties involved is not collected centrally. The following table shows the number of care proceedings which have been disposed of without a care order being made over the last 10 years:

	Applications withdrawn	Orders refused	Orders of no order
2003	433	26	257
2002	304	27	185
2001	355	15	164

Child Care Statistics

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the statistics relating to (a) child care and (b) looked after children and children in care, which, since 1997 (i) are no longer collected by her Department and (ii) have had the way in which the figures are compiled changed. [221796]

Margaret Hodge: My Department's Children's Day Care Facilities Survey collected data on numbers of child care providers and places classified according to type of provider: day nurseries, playgroups and pre-schools, childminders, out of school clubs, and holiday schemes, for each local authority, from local authority Social Service Departments on an annual basis until March 2001, when the survey was discontinued.

With the introduction of the National Day Care Standards and the transfer of responsibilities for registration and inspection of child care providers from Local Authority Social Service Departments to Ofsted in September 2001, data on child care providers and numbers of places were collected as part of the process of registration and inspection and child care providers and places were classified according to type of day care provided: full day care, sessional day care, childminder, out of school day care, and crèche day care.

My Department published figures on numbers of child care providers and places on an annual basis until March 2001 and Ofsted has published figures on numbers of child care providers and places on a quarterly basis since March 2003. There are no figures for March 2002. The two sets of figures are not entirely comparable because one set derives from local authority data classified according to type of provider and the other from provider data classified according to type of child care provided.

The following table summarises the changes made to the children looked after returns since 1997.

Year ending 31 March:	Change	Description
1997	Children's homes statistical publication changed from annual to triennial publication	Children's homes publication contains details on numbers of children's homes
1998	CLA100 return introduced	To collect aggregate figures for children looked after by local authority. Introduced following a review in 1997 of the statistics on personal social services collected by DH to enable a fast turnaround of data providing more up-to-date summary figures than is possible from the detailed SSDA903 return.
1998	SSDA903 return moves from covering all children looked after to a one-third sample survey	To reduce the burden on local authorities following introduction of the CLA100 return. (The SSDA903 return is a child level return collecting detailed information on episodes of care). Aggregate figures were produced using the CLA100 totals (at 31 March, starters and ceased).
2000	Last year of Children's Homes publications	Responsibility for children's homes passed to CSCI
2001	'Number of children starting to be looked after in year' discontinued from the CLA100 return	To calculate an aggregate number of starters in the year the 31 March total was used in combination with the SSDA903 return. 'Number of children who ceased to be looked after in the year' was discontinued in the year ending 31 March 2002. It was decided to also use the 31 March total in combination with the SSDA903 return to calculate the aggregate number of ceased.
2001	SSDA903 codes revised[1]. Ethnic origin and 'Children in Need' code collected for the first time. 'Reason for being looked after' code discontinued. Most of the 'reason episode ceased' codes[2] were discontinued.	Most of the pre-2001 codes can be mapped uniquely to the 2001 codes. However, at a detailed level some codes can not be uniquely matched. 'Children in Need' code replaced the 'Reason for being looked after' code.
2001	CLA100 return codes revised	To match SSDA903 codes
2004	SSDA903 return moves to a census	Move to web-based data collection facilitates move to census.
2004	CLA100 discontinued	The result of the SSDA903 return move to census.

[1] In the year ending 2001 the codes used on the SSDA903 form, which had previously been numerical, were changed to alphanumeric pairs, in each case a letter followed by a number (except 'reason for new episode' which is a field of one digit in length. Further details on the changes can be found in a document titled 'Information only—new SSDA9Q3 codes introduced on 1 April 2000' which can be downloaded from http://www.dfes.gov.uk/datastats1/guidelines/children/returns.shtml

[2] Discontinued 'reason episode ceased' codes were emigration and reaching the maximum age appropriate to the legal status and placement. The detailed codes indicating that the child continued to be looked after following a placement or legal status change (or both) were summarised into one category, 'episode ceased and new episode begins on the same day, for any reason'.

Children Act Databases

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her latest estimate is of the cost of (a) establishing and (b) maintaining the databases of children established by the Children Act 2004. [222033]

Margaret Hodge: The detailed costings for a national system of databases or Indexes' are not yet available. We know that the 15 authorities involved in our 10 Trailblazers have been able to make good progress towards introducing both indexes and the vital training and culture change required, within overall budgets of around £1 million per Trailblazer. We will take decisions on the funding of a national infrastructure in the light of further work on the technical feasibility and an analysis of costs and benefits. We will not move to this phase until we are clear that the processes and systems are deliverable, and that we have secured sufficient funding.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the role of the new Children's Commissioner for England will be in (a) setting up and (b) monitoring the children's databases established by the Children Act 2004. [222034]

Margaret Hodge: The Children's Commissioner will be able to apply his general powers in relation to the databases or indexes to be established under the Children Act, as for other policy initiatives.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what data she intends to include on the databases of children established by the Children's Act 2004. [222045]

Margaret Hodge: The databases or 'indexes' would contain the following information:

basic details to identify a child and whether they are receiving universal services. These are name, address, date of birth, gender, a unique identifying number, name and contact details of a person with parental responsibility or care of the child, name and contact details for school or other educational setting, and names and contact details of GP practice;

name and contact details for other practitioners involved with a child, so professionals can see who to contact if they wish to discuss a child's additional needs; and an indicator of whether a practitioner has a cause for concern about a child, so professionals can see who to contact as a matter of priority to discuss a child's additional needs.

The indexes will not hold any case information.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many responses she has received to her consultation on the databases provision of the Children's Act 2004; and if she will publish them. [222046]

Margaret Hodge: We received 317 responses. We are now considering these and will publish a summary of the responses and the Government's decisions on the way forward. We will include in the summary a list of respondents, and will make available copies of individual responses, where the respondent has given permission for this to be done, on request.

Children in Care

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many looked-after children committed suicide while in care in each year since 1997; what estimate she has made of the number of previously looked-after children who committed suicide after leaving care in each year; and what estimate she has made of the number of looked-after children who had or developed some form of mental illness while in care in each year. [221201]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 March 2005]: Data on children looked after is collected from the SSDA903 return, a statistical return completed by all local authorities with social services responsibilities in England. This return collects information relating to the care a looked after child receives and gives information on children who have died while in care but does not collect data on suicides or the number of looked after children who developed some form of mental illness while in care.

However, information on the cause of deaths of looked after children has been obtained for the first time in 2004 by matching child records from the SSDA903 episode data for 2002–03 and 2003–04 to death registration records held by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to obtain cause of death. This work is still in progress. The outcome will be published in the Statistical Volume "Children Looked After by Local Authorities, Year Ending 31 March 2004", scheduled to be published on 31 March 2005.

Education Funding (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding has been made available for computers for schools in Tamworth since 1997. [221940]

Derek Twigg: The Department does not hold information on funding for ICT in schools at constituency level. However, Tamworth is in Staffordshire LEA and allocations for this authority since 1998 are detailed in "Funding for ICT in Schools in England" which is available in the House Library.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Tamworth have broadband internet access. [221942]

Derek Twigg: My Department does not hold data on broadband connections at constituency level. As at December 2004, 60 per cent. of schools in Staffordshire LEA had a broadband connection. This includes 99 per cent. of secondary schools and 54 per cent. of primary schools.

The national broadband connectivity rate, as at end December 2004, is 72 per cent., including 99 per cent. of secondary schools and 69 per cent. of primary schools.

Educational Psychologists

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many educational psychologists qualified in each of the last 10 years. [220434]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not held centrally. The Higher Education Statistics Agency produce annual summaries of newly qualified graduates by subject, but educational psychologists are not separately identified.

Inclusive Education Strategy

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what targets were set as part of the Government's strategy to make the education system more inclusive; and whether those targets have been achieved. [221599]

Derek Twigg: All our national targets including the post-16 and higher education targets are inclusive because they will enable more young people to succeed. The Department's school level floor targets are particularly important in promoting inclusion because they define an ambitious minimum standard of performance for every school.

The Department publishes progress against all its outstanding PSA targets in its Annual Departmental Report and Autumn Performance Report. Progress was reported most recently in the 2004 autumn report, published last November, together with commentary where appropriate.

A copy of the Department's 2004 Autumn Performance Report has been placed in the Library.

Out-of-school Clubs (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many out-of-school clubs there are in York; and how many there were in 1997. [222357]

Derek Twigg: The information requested is not available. Along with all local authorities, the City of York receives funding from my Department to provide study support (out of school hours learning) activities as part of the School Development Grant. The majority of this funding is devolved directly to schools. Individual schools and local authorities have the freedom to decide which activities best meet local needs. Study support can range from breakfast, homework and study clubs to special-interest activities including sport, the creative arts, and ICT. Activities can take place before or after school, during the school holidays and at weekends. In addition, the Department will be awarding the City of York £442,575 in 2005–06 to develop their extended schools services, including study support provision.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the projects being undertaken by her Department in respect of which information cannot be given in answer to parliamentary questions as a result of commercial confidentiality. [216628]

Derek Twigg: A decision not to release information relating to any project as a result of commercial confidentiality is made on the basis of the specific request made in each parliamentary question.

An assessment of commercial confidentiality may apply to specific element within a project as well as to an entire project. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Post-16 Education (Leicester)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils continued in post-16 education in Leicester in each year since 1997. [221207]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Participation estimates as at end 2001 (2001/02 academic year) for 16-year-olds in Leicester LEA in full-time education, and in education and Learning and Skills Council (LSC) funded work based learning (WBL), are 68 and 79 per cent., respectively.

The information is taken from the Department's Statistical Bulletin entitled, 'Participation in Education and Training by 16 and 17 Year Olds in Each Local Area in England, End 2001'. A consistent historical time series is currently unavailable due to issues with post-census local population estimates for individual ages for earlier years. Local participation estimates for end 2002 and end 2003 (provisional) are due to be published on 31 March 2005 alongside a consistent historic participation time series.

Special Educational Needs

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils with special needs receive two hours of high-quality physical education and school sport each week. [221436]

Margaret Hodge: The Department does not collect national data on this. Unless they have been specifically disapplied from this aspect of the national curriculum, we would expect pupils with special educational needs to receive the same amount of physical education and sport as other pupils.

In 2003–04 the Department commissioned a survey of schools in relation to the PSA target of two hours of quality physical education or school sport each week (The School Sports Partnership Programme Evaluation 2004/05). Schools with higher proportions of pupils with statements of SEN were found to be more likely to be fulfilling the PSA than those with lower proportions of SEN.

Teachers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of qualified primary school teachers at present unable to secure a job in teaching in (a) Lancashire, (b) the North West and (c) England. [221415]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Secretary of State has made no such estimate.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers in England will reach the age of 60 years in each of the next five academic years. [221895]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The following table shows the number of teachers aged between 55 and 59 in service in maintained sector schools in March 2003, the latest information available. No estimate of the number of teachers in these age groups who will enter or leave service prior to age 60 has been included.

Number of full and part-time teachers in service in the maintained sector in England by age

Age	Full-time	Part-time	Total
55	11,190	2,240	13,430
56	9,020	2,120	11,140
57	5,390	1,390	6,780
58	4,450	1,390	5,840
59	3,200	1,150	4,350
Total	33,240	8,300	41,540

Source:
Database of Teacher Records

It is estimated that between 10 and 20 per cent. of part-time teachers may not be included in the data.

Universities (Funding)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what ways public funds contribute to the funding of universities; and what the total contribution was in 2004. [221663]

Dr. Howells: Some 60 per cent. of the total funding universities receive comes from public sources. In 2002/03, the latest year for which data are available, public funding was £7.6 billion, out of a total £12.7 billion.

For 2004–05, the Department's planned funding for the Higher Education Funding Council for England is £6.9 billion. Higher education institutions will also receive public funding from other Government Departments, and the Research Councils, with further income from private sources such as charities, overseas students' fees, other research bodies, and student residences.

Public funding is used by the universities for teaching; research; salaries and other staff related costs; for maintaining and updating their buildings, facilities, and equipment; for making links with local schools in order to actively encourage widening participation; and to develop closer links with local businesses; and for other activities which relate to higher education.

Victims of Abuse

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what her policy is regarding compensation for victims of abuse in residential schools and homes in the Irish Republic who are now British citizens; [220436]

(2) if she will make a statement on how the operation of the Irish Residential Institutions Redress Board will apply to British citizens. [220437]

Margaret Hodge: UK citizens who suffered abuse in residential institutions and childrens homes in the Irish Republic and satisfy the criteria set out in the Irish legislation can claim compensation from the Residential Institutions Redress Board in the Republic in the same way as Irish citizens.

HOME DEPARTMENT

2006 World Cup

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of ticketing arrangements for UK football fans to attend the 2006 World Cup; and if he will make a statement; [221349]

(2) what representations he has received from (a) the German Football Association, (b) the Football Association, (c) the European Commission and (d) FIFA on the ticketing arrangements for UK football fans for the 2006 World Cup in Germany. [221350]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The Home Office is co-ordinating extensive UK preparations for the 2006 World Cup and is working closely with other Government Departments, police, football authorities and supporter groups. There is very close liaison with the German authorities. All aspects of the preparations, including the potential impact of the ticketing arrangements, are subject to detailed consideration.

Animal Experimentation

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of the regulated procedures conducted in Scotland in 2003 under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 were performed in (a) public health laboratories, (b) universities and medical schools, (c) national health service hospitals, (d) Government Departments, (e) other public bodies, (f) non-profit making organisations and (g) commercial organisations; [218764]

(2) what proportion of the regulated procedures conducted in Scotland in 2003 under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 were carried out for (a) toxicological purposes and (b) non-toxicological purposes; [218765]

(3) how many of the regulated procedures conducted in Scotland in 2003 under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 involved (a) cats, (b) dogs, (c) rabbits, (d) horses and other equids, (e) New World primates and (f) Old World primates; and how many involved (i) genetically modified animals and (ii) animals with a harmful genetic defect; [218777]

(4) what proportion of the project licences granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 that were in force in Scotland at the end of 2003 were in (a) mild, (b) moderate, (c) substantial and (d) unclassified severity bandings. [218837]

Caroline Flint: The latest statistical information of this kind is in the publication Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals Great Britain 2003 (Command 6291, available in the House Library). Separate figures are produced for Northern Ireland.

However as the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 is administered by the Home Office for England, Wales and Scotland, the comprehensive data produced in Command 6291 relate to Great Britain as a whole, and are not broken down into the constituent geographical areas. The provision of information just relating to Scotland has therefore required a special exercise.

The figures are our best estimate and may be subject to a margin of error because our systems are not normally set up to provide a breakdown on the lines asked for.

In 2003, the percentage of scientific procedures using animals in Scotland, broken down by various types of establishment, are given in the table.

Type of establishment	Percentage
Public health laboratories	0.0
Universities and medical schools	37.0
NHS hospitals	0.0
Government Departments	1.5
Other public bodies	37.1
Non-profit making organisations	0.0
Commercial concerns	24.4

In 2003 the procedures carried out in Scotland for toxicological purposes amounted to 16 per cent., and for non-toxicological purposes 84 per cent.

In 2003, the numbers of procedures carried out in Scotland on certain species, or animals with a certain genetic status are shown in the table.

Species of animal, or genetic status	Number
Cat	38
Dog	1,269
Rabbit	6,973
Horses and other equids	2,821
New world primate	282
Old world primate	879
Animals with harmful genetic defect	125,527
Genetically modified animals	14,901

In 2003, the numbers of project licences in force in Scotland at the end of the year, in each severity band, were as follows:

	Number
Mild	158
Moderate	239
Substantial	9
Unclassified	15

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in Greater London in each year since 1 April 1999, broken down by borough. [221137]

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to police authorities on the type of behaviour which merits the placing of an antisocial behaviour order (ASBO); and what steps he takes to ensure consistency across different police authorities in their attitude towards ASBOs. [220364]

Ms Blears [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Section 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 defines antisocial behaviour in relation to antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) as behaviour that > "caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household".

ASBOs were introduced in April 1999. In 2000 the Home Office issued guidance to relevant agencies (including the police) on setting up local ASBO protocols.

This guidance was superseded by more detailed guidance issued in November 2002 on ASBOs. That guidance offered some advice on the behaviour that might trigger an application for an ASBO. It advised that the most common behaviour tackled by ASBOs is general loutish and unruly conduct such as verbal abuse, harassment, assault, graffiti and excessive noise. The wide range of antisocial behaviour that can be tackled by ASBOs and the ability to tailor the terms of the order to each specific case illustrates their flexibility.

However, ASBOs are just one tool available to tackle antisocial behaviour. Police, local authorities and other agencies need to assess the antisocial behaviour that is occurring and apply the most relevant tool available to them.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers in Milton Keynes were supported by Government funding in each of the last 10 years. [221872]

Mr. Browne: The information is not available in the precise format requested. The Home Office took responsibility for the budget for adult and family asylum seekers on 1 April 1999. Information for previous years is therefore not available.

The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) was established on 3 April 2000 and is now responsible for supporting the majority of asylum seekers. Local authorities retain responsibility for supporting some asylum seekers who made their claim for asylum before NASS administered support was effective in their area.

Statistics on the location of asylum seekers in the UK are linked to the available information on the support that the asylum seeker receives.

The following table shows the number of people supported by NASS in Milton Keynes.

[1] Disbenefited refers to cases previously supported under mainstream benefits system who have been transferred to support by NASS.

Avon and Somerset Constabulary

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent (a) officers and (b) civilian personnel were controlled by the central resource of the Avon and Somerset Constabulary in the last year for which figures are available; and how many of each are based at Portishead. [214422]

Ms Blears [holding answer 7 February 2005]: The latest information on police strength was published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 13/04, "Police Service Strength England and Wales, 31 March 2004". A supplementary table giving police officer strength by Basic Command Unit was published online at the same time. This can be found on the website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html.

On 31 March 2004, the number of full-time equivalent police officers working in Avon and Somerset Central Services was 1,212 and the number of police staff was 1,546. Information on the numbers based at Portishead is not available centrally.

Biometric Data

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1310W, on Biometric Data, if he will list the identifiers that will be held digitally on the chip in the ePassport. [221370]

Mr. Browne: In compliance with ICAO requirements, the chip will hold a facial image of the passport holder. This facial image will be derived from the applicant's photo submitted at time of application and will be stored in accordance with ICAO and ISO standards.

Additional information will include that which is currently shown on the personal details page of the passport, namely name, nationality, date of birth, sex, place of birth, date of issue/expiry and passport number.

The chip will also contain a digital security signature to authenticate the encoded data and that the passport was issued by UK Passport Service.

Civil Servants

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether an estimate has been made of the potential efficiency savings of merging the Prison and Probation Services headquarters functions. [220393]

Paul Goggins: The new National Offender Management Service headquarters is being redesigned alongside the Prison Service and Probation Service headquarters. As part of this process, all directors are being asked to identify efficiency savings of around 20 per cent. of headcount by March 2007.

Correspondence

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters from the right hon. Member for North-East Hampshire of 7 September, 11 November and 9 December 2004 regarding Mr. Roger Huxtable, ref M17775/4. [217497]

Ms Blears: A written reply has been issued to the right hon. Member for North-East Hampshire on 24 February.

Crime

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the recent statement by West Midlands police on the force's ability to detect crime. [218376]

Ms Blears: The sanction detections rate for West Midlands police was 25.0 per cent. in March 2004, which compares with a rate of 25.8 per cent. in March 2003. Despite this small decline in the sanction detections rate,, the West Midlands force continues to perform well when compared with their peer group of similar constabularies. The average sanction detections rate of the forces against whom the West Midlands force is compared was 20.5 per cent. in both March 2003 and March 2004.

The Government acknowledges the need to raise sanction detections performance across all police forces. For that reason, a major drive has been under way since last summer with the aim of achieving a significant increase in sanction detection rates. Provisional data for 2004–05 shows that this concerted effort has already resulted in performance improvements and we are hopeful that all forces, including the West Midlands, will benefit from this.

Criminal Justice

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which recommendations of the O'Dowd report remain unimplemented because of a need for (a) legislation, (b) developments in IT and (c) wide-ranging changes in the criminal justice system; and what steps are being taken to adopt these recommendations. [199634]

Ms Blears: The outstanding recommendations that require legislation are as follows:

To remove the bureaucracy concerned with producing documents at a police station.

To pass to local authorities responsibility for dealing with stray dogs and other animals.

To pass to local authorities responsibility for dealing with gaming and betting regulation.

To pass to local authorities responsibility for dealing with abandoned non-stolen vehicles.

The outstanding recommendations that require developments in information technology are as follows:

To rollout NSPIS Custody and Case applications.

To make best use of remote access to information.

To implement biometric facial technology.

The outstanding recommendations that require wide-ranging changes in the criminal justice system are as follows:

To improve the court listing process.

To address blockages in the criminal justice system.

Good progress has already been made and we are working closely with the police and key stakeholders to deliver each of these recommendations as soon as practicable.

Cycling Offences

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for cycling on the pavement there have been in (a) the London borough of Enfield, (b) Greater London and (c) England and Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [220829]

Ms Blears: The number of convictions for cycling on the footpath (pavement) in the London borough of Enfield, Greater London and England and Wales, 1999–2003 is provided in the table.

Statistics on convictions for 2004 will be published in the autumn.

Dispersal Orders

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dispersal orders have been made in the Metropolitan police area; and what assessment he has made of their effects on reducing (a) antisocial behaviour and (b) criminal offences in each zone. [218518]

Ms Blears: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police tells me that, between January and December 2004, the Metropolitan police authorised 61 dispersal areas under section 30 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003. In these areas 3,312 people were dispersed and 149 young people under the age of 16 were taken home.

It is too early to draw firm conclusions but the Metropolitan police believe them to be an effective tool to tackle instances of antisocial behaviour. The Metropolitan police and local authorities are conducting their own evaluations of the use of the power in their areas and will be reviewing their findings on a case-by-case basis in order to identify good practice.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2005, Official Report, columns 113–14W, on fixed penalty notices, how many of each of the categories of fixed penalty notices have been collected. [220585]

Ms Blears: The table gives the number of notices issued, by offence, by Essex police in 2004, to the end of November, with the proportion of notices notified to the Home Office as being paid.

If penalties are unpaid and a court hearing not requested within 21 days then a fine will be registered against the recipient of the penalty notice. The fine will then be enforced by the courts in the same way as any other fine. The Department for Constitutional Affairs has been taking action to significantly improve the collection of fines. The fine payment rate for the last quarter of 2004 was 80 per cent.

Paul Goggins: The available information contained in the table gives the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for offences where a bladed article is mentioned in the offence description, at: York petty sessional area, North Yorkshire police force area and England 1995 to 2003.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many knife-related assaults were recorded in 2004 in (a) the UK, (b) the North East and (c) Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency. [220655]

Ms Blears: The information is not collected centrally. The number of assaults involving the use of a knife cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime statistics.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department is making with the proposed introduction of the National Offender Management Service. [221250]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) became operational on 1 June 2004 with Martin Narey as Chief Executive. Since then a National Offender Manager and 10 Regional Offender Managers have been appointed. Together they are taking forward the development of offender management in their areas, drawing on emerging good practice and what we have already learnt from the offender management pilots in the north-west. A re-design of NOMS headquarters, to reflect these changes, will be in place by 1 April 2005. Further work is also being taken forward to develop contestability and to determine what organisational design might best suit the service's future needs.

Offences

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) arrested, (b) charged and (c) convicted of offences in the United Kingdom between 11 September 2001 and 31 December 2004. [219457]

Ms Blears: Within England and Wales information on arrests collected centrally is based on persons arrested for 'notifiable' offences. Data are collected for quarterly periods only and the figures in the table are therefore from October 2001.

Statistics on defendants charged in England and Wales are not collected centrally. The available information from the Home Office Court Proceedings database gives the number of defendants proceeded against at the magistrates and convicted at all courts. The figures given in the table are for notifiable offences from October 2001 onwards, for comparability with the arrest figures. Figures for 2004 will be available in autumn 2005.

Information for Scotland and Northern Ireland are a matter for, respectively, the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those eligible for parole were (a) granted parole and (b) broke the conditions of parole in each year since 1997. [221468]

Paul Goggins: The number of determinate cases considered by the Parole Board and recommended for parole in each year since 1997 has been published in table 10.4 of the publication "Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2003". The number of persons recalled from parole from determinate sentences has been published in table 10.8 of the same volume. A copy of the publication is available in the Library.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) Essex and (b) England and Wales were eligible for parole in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [221469]

The Government are committed to reducing disproportionality and increasing the confidence that the black and minority ethnic community has in the way the police use stop and search. In order to benefit as much as possible from the input of communities an independent Community Panel chaired by Lord Victor Adebowale was established in December 2004. The Community Panel provides advice to SSAT and the Delivery Board on the race and community impact of their work programme, and also acts as a scrutiny for their work.

Police (Child Abuse)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Government will enforce the Association of Chief Police Officers' guidance on anonymity for individuals accused of child abuse by the media. [219315]

Ms Blears: The Association of Chief Police Officers has issued revised guidance to all police forces making it absolutely clear that anyone under investigation but not charged should not be named, and no details should be provided to the press that might lead to their identification before they are charged. This applies to all offences, not just sexual abuse. It would be a serious disciplinary matter if any police officers were to transgress that guidance.

The Press Complaints Commission also has safeguards in place against the publication of inaccurate or misleading information. The Press Complaints Commission guidance is enforced through complaints to the Commission about press reporting that breaches the Code. The Interdepartmental Ministerial Group on Sexual Offending will examine the impact of the revised guidance after May 2005, when the Sexual Offences Act 2003 will have been in operation for 12 months.

Police Community Consultative Group

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost in (a) Essex and (b) Southend is of police (i) attendance and (ii) administration of police/community forums in each year since 1997. [220557]

Ms Blears: The Chief Constable of Essex police informs me that the cost of running Police Community Consultative Group (PCCG) meetings in Essex since 1997 is as set out in the table.

Administration costs of Police Consultative Community Groups in Essex

1997–98	18,100
1998–99	18,600
1999–2000	18,800
2000–01	19,900
2001–02	21,000
2002–03	21,100
2003–04	22,200
2004–05	21,700

These figures relate to expenditure for room hire and salaries for relevant administrative staff. Records are not kept of the costs of operational officers and staff attending PCCG meetings as part of their normal duties.

Costs are not available at Basic Command Unit level.

Police (Kent)

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) police community support officers were employed in the North Kent Division of Kent Police in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [221099]

Ms Blears: Information on strength at Basic Command Unit (BCU) level is collected annually and reflects the position at the end of March for each year. Information on BCU strength is only available from 2002 and is set out in the table. The deployment of officers to BCUs is a matter for the Chief Constable (Mr. Michael Fuller) and within the North Kent Division deployment of officers is a matter for the Divisional Commander.

Information on the number of community support officers (CSOs) has been provided by the chief constable. The first CSOs were deployed to North Kent in 2002–03. The information provided for CSOs is also set out in the following table.

North Kent division

As at 31 March	Number of police officers[1]	Number of community support officers

2003	363	2
2004	399	8
2005	Not available	17

[1] Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate for 2003 onwards. March 2002 data was collected by HM Inspectorate of Constabulary.

The number of police officers deployed to the North Kent division has increased by 57 officers, or by nearly 17 per cent., since March 2002. The increase in the number of police officers for North Kent has significantly exceeded the overall increase in police officer numbers for the Kent police of 7 per cent. for the same period (March 2002 to March 2004).

Police Finance

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total amount held for each police authority in England in reserves or balances for

(a) capital and (b) revenue was in (i) 2001–02, (ii) 2002–03 and (iii) 2003–04; and what the figures were as a percentage of annual expenditure. [211450]

Ms Blears [holding answer 27 January 2005]: Available information on revenue reserves, which include balances, has been placed in the Library. Details of capital reserves could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure the accuracy of data used in the calculation of grant entitlements for Derbyshire Police Authority for the financial year 2005–06. [213230]

Ms Blears: The data used in the calculation of grant entitlements come from a variety of different sources and the validation of data varies accordingly.

In many cases, data providers, such as the Office for National Statistics, will undertake validation. The Office for the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) checks data used in the calculation of grant entitlement as part of the wider local government finance settlement calculations by comparing supplied data year on year. Where appropriate, ODPM then queries any anomalies with the Department or body responsible for supplying the data.

All data used is provided as part of the local government finance consultation.

Police Funding

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the level of police funding per head of population has been for (a) Greater Manchester and (b) Dorset in each year from 1998–99. [205408]

Ms Blears: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave on 28 February 2005, Official Report, column 1008W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman).

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in England and Wales are receiving funding (a) above the formula funding level, (b) at the formula funding level and (c) below the formula funding level; and what action he is taking to ensure that all forces receive funding in line with the formula. [220396]

Ms Blears [holding answer 7 March 2005]: Government funding for police authorities is chiefly allocated using a funding formula that distributes resources on the basis of relative need and resources. A damping mechanism subsequently applied to protect all authorities against financial instability ensures all authorities receive an increase in grant at least equal to the "floor" level on a like-for-like basis year-on-year. Grant floors are an integral part of the finance system.

In 2005–06, every police authority will receive the amount of grant to which it is entitled under "The Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2005/06", "The Local Government Finance Report (England) 2005/06", and "The Local Government Finance Report No 2 2005/06" for Wales.

In 2004–05, all police authorities received a grant increase around 3.25 per cent. For 2005–06 it has been possible to reintroduce recognition of relative need, and grant increases range from the floor of 3.75 per cent. to 6.81 per cent. Grant provisions before and after damping are given in the following table.

We are currently reviewing the funding formulae and will be consulting local authorities during the summer of 2005 on the formulae for the 2006–07 settlement.

[1] Rounded to the nearest £100,000. Calculated using the Police Funding Formula 2005–06.

[2] Rounded to the nearest £100,000. Calculated under the Police Grant Report (England and Wales), the Local Government Finance Report (England) and The Local Government Finance Report No 2 for Wales. Figures include the effects of floor damping.

[3] Because the Welsh Assembly does not use the grant damping mechanism ('funding floor and ceiling'), the Secretary has for several years provided additional funding to ensure Welsh police authorities receive at least a minimum increase in grant in line with English authorities. A total of £13.9 million will be allocated to Welsh police authorities in 2005–06 to bring their allocations in line with the grant floor level.

[4] Figures for the City of London Police are excluded because these are allocated to the Common Council of the City of London as a whole in respect of all its functions. The City is grouped with Education Authorities for grant damping purposes.

Police Officers' Families (Crime Investigations)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines are given to police authorities on conducting investigations into crimes when a member of a police officer's family is being questioned concerning the incident. [219433]

Ms Blears: There are no specific guidelines given to police authorities regarding investigations into crimes involving members of a police officer's family. Police authorities are responsible for ensuring an effective and efficient police service in the UK and any investigation into a criminal offence would be dealt with by the force in question as an operational matter. Each police force is required to act within statute and any deviation from this could result in disciplinary proceedings. If however the member of the police officer's family, who is being questioned, is an officer themselves then there are internal police regulations which would be followed.

Prisons

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are estimated to suffer from mental health problems in prisons in England and Wales. [208839]

Paul Goggins: The Office for National Statistics (ONS) undertook a survey of mental ill health in the prison population of England and Wales in 1997. A copy of the survey is available on the ONS website at www.statistics.gov.uk.

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend Prison Service Order 1170 in the light of the decision in Regina (on behalf of the Howard League for Penal Reform) v. Secretary of State for the Home Department. [218215]

Paul Goggins: I have confirmed that this question relates to Prison Service Order 1700 which deals with the segregation of prisoners for reasons of good order or discipline or at the prisoner's own request, and that the court case is that of 'SP', a female juvenile trainee.

Following the judgment delivered on 23 June 2004 in the case by Mr. Justice Jack, and pending the appeal to the Court of Appeal, the Prison Service issued guidance on 23 September 2004 to Governors requiring them to comply with the Court's decision, that, where circumstances allow, juveniles should be given the opportunity to make representations against segregation before being segregated.

(The Court of Appeal upheld Mr. Justice Jack's judgment. The Prison Service will amend Prison Service Order 1700 to reflect the interim guidance already issued).

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the In Use Certified National Accommodation was changed in January 2005 at (a) HMP Edmunds Hill, (b) HMP Bullwood Hall, (c) HMP Dovegate, (d) HMP Dover, (e) HMP Foston Hall, (f) HMP Highdown, (g) HMP Hindley, (h) HMP Holloway, (i) HMP Liverpool, (j) HMP Northallerton, (k) HMP Onley, (l) HMP Pentonville and (m) HMP Wetherby; and if he will make a statement. [220487]

Paul Goggins: Changes to prison capacity occur on a regular basis as, for example, prison wings are taken out of use for maintenance or refurbishment and later brought back into service. In January 2005, action was taken to reduce overcrowding in particular establishments, and we reduced the overall operational capacity of the estate by taking some accommodation due for refurbishment out of use slightly earlier than planned. The changes to In Use certified normal accommodation (CNA[1]) recorded in January at each of the prisons listed were:

[1] In Use CNA is the uncrowded capacity of the estate after adjusting for accommodation that is out of use.

Prison	Change to In Use CNA and reason for change
Edmunds Hill	Reduced by 148 places when the function of the prison was changed from female to male. Three of the accommodation units are out of use, but can be brought into use when required.
Bullwood Hall	Reduced by 13 places while E-wing is temporarily used to house the education department.
Dovegate	Reduced by 58 places to correct an error on the cell certificate.
Dover[1]	Reduced by 55 places while the Romney Unit is refurbished.
Foston Hall	Reduced by 44 places as a surplus of capacity in the female estate enabled D-wing to be temporarily taken out of use as an economy measure.
Highdown	Reduced by 16 places for electrical rewiring programme.
Hindley	Reduced by 82 while A-wing is refurbished.
Holloway	Reduced by 20 while the DO unit is refurbished.
Liverpool	Reduced by 18 while general refurbishment takes place.
Northallerton	Reduced by 75 while accommodation is repaired following storm damage.
Onley	Reduced by 60 while B-wing is refurbished as part of a rolling programme.
Pentonville	Reduced by 21 while R-wing is refurbished.
Wetherby	Reduced by 10 for a small rolling refurbishment programme.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial saving will be made by moving control of privately run prisons from Her Majesty's Prison Service to the Correctional Services Unit in the Home Office. [221147]

Paul Goggins: The cost of establishing the Office for Contracted Prisons, part of the Home Office, to oversee the operation of private prisons, was broadly cost neutral. Better contract and operational management have resulted in improved service delivery.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason control of privately run prisons moved from Her Majesty's Prison Service to the Corrections Services Unit within the Home Office. [221148]

Paul Goggins: Responsibility for the control of private prisons transferred to the Office for Contracted Prisons in May 2003 as part of the move to create a single correctional service. By doing so it created increased consistency and transparency of custodial services provided by the public and private sectors.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the cost of moving control of privately run prisons from Her Majesty's Prison Service to the Correction Services Unit within the Home Office. [221149]

Paul Goggins: The transfer of control of private prisons to the Office for Contracted Prisons in May 2003 was broadly cost neutral. Controller costs were transferred without change. Operating costs of OCP HQ were offset by compensatory savings in the public sector Prison Service.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes were made to (a) the baseline Certified National Accommodation (CNA), (b) in use CNA and (c) operational capacity at (i) HMP Wolds, (ii) HMP Altcourse, (iii) HMP Forest Bank and (iv) HMP Lowdham Grange in January; and if he will make a statement. [221156]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 March 2005]: Changes to prison capacity occur on a regular basis as, for example, prison wings are taken out of use for maintenance or refurbishment and later brought back into service. In January 2005, action was taken to reduce overcrowding in particular establishments, and we reduced the overall operational capacity of the estate by taking some accommodation due for refurbishment out of use slightly earlier than planned. Details of the reasons for changes in operational capacity, baseline CNA, and In-use CNA are given in the table.

Establishment	Reasons for changes in Baseline Certified Normal Accommodation (CNA), In-use CNA, and Operational Capacity
Wolds	Operational capacity reduced by 10 places due to a temporary reduction in overcrowding levels. An increase of 20 in both baseline and in use CNA G wing coming into use.
Altcourse	Operational capacity reduced by 121 places due to temporary reduction in overcrowding levels. No change in baseline or in use CNA.
Forest Bank	Operational capacity reduced by 24 places due to temporary reduction in overcrowding levels. No change in baseline or in use CNA.
Lowdham Grange	Operation capacity reduced by 24 places due to a temporary reduction in overcrowding levels. No change in baseline or in use CNA.

Note:
Operational capacity is the total number of prisoners that an establishment can hold without serious risk to good order, security and the proper running of the planned regime. Baseline CNA is the sum total of all certified accommodation in an establishment except, cells in punishment or segregation units, healthcare cells or rooms in training prisons and YOIs that are not routinely used to accommodate long stay patients. In-use CNA is baseline CNA less those places not available for immediate use, for example: damaged cells, cells affected by building works, and cells taken out of use due to staff shortages

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the operational capacity was changed in January at (a) HMP Edmunds Hill, (b) HMP Northallerton, (c) HMP Altcourse, (d) HMP Hindley, (e) HMP Rye Hill, (f) HMP Onley, (g) HMP Dovegate, (h) HMP Dover, (i) HMP Mount, (j) HMP Foston Hall, (k) HMP Liverpool, (l) HMP Forest Bank, (m) HMP Lowdham Grange, (n) HMP Holloway, (o) HMP Pentonville, (p) HMP Bullwood Hall, (q) HMP Highdown, (r) HMP Wetherby and (s) HMP Wolds; and if he will make a statement. Probation Service

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff in the National Probation Service are absent from work through stress or stress-related illness; and from what grades. [221255]

Paul Goggins: Stress-related absence is not currently recorded separately across the 42 employing Boards, but a requirement to record stress-related absence will be introduced in the near future.

The National Probation Directorate, through its National Health and Safety Forum that comprises employers, trade unions and subject experts, has just issued a national policy in reduction of stress that conforms to the Health and Safety Executive standards.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether work being undertaken on the Probation Workload Management Tool in the National Probation Service will be incorporated into the requirements for the National Offender Management Information Systems (NOMIS) programme. [221256]

Paul Goggins: An independent OGC consultant is currently reviewing the business case for the Workload Measurement Tool Project. His conclusions will inform decisions about the future of the project, including if and how the work can be incorporated into the National Offender Management Information System programme.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation officers were dismissed in (a) Southend, (b) Essex and (c) England and Wales in each year since 1997. [221467]

Paul Goggins: Information on reasons for leaving, including dismissals, is not currently recorded separately across the 42 employing Boards. The content of and process for collecting workforce information centrally is currently under review and will be amended in the near future.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether performance by the National Probation Service against its performance measure on compliance with orders improved (a) during 2003–04 and (b) between April and September 2004. [203408]

Paul Goggins: The level of compliance with orders was 56 per cent. in April 2003, rising to 58 per cent. in June 2003. Cumulatively for 2003–04 a figure of 56 per cent. was achieved. Compliance improved in the period April to September 2004, reaching 61 per cent. in July 2004 alone and 59 per cent. cumulatively for the six-month period.

The monthly and cumulative figures for the two periods are set out in tables 1 and 2.

Securities Industry Authority

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for accreditation under the Securities Industry Act have

(a) been received and (b) processed by the Securities Industry Authority; what estimates have been made of the number of accredited door staff which are required by the leisure industry; and what assessment has been made of whether it will be necessary to extend the final implementation date of the scheme. [219053]

Ms Blears: The total number of applications for Security Industry Authority (SIA) door supervisor licenses to date is 22,729. Of these, 18,893 have been accepted by the SIA and have been or are being processed.

It is difficult to obtain a totally reliable estimate of the number of door supervisors required by the leisure industry; current SIA estimates, based on information supplied by the police and local authorities place the figure at 46,000.

There are currently no plans to extend the final implementation date.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place to audit the performance of the Security Industry Authority; and if he will make a statement. [218717]

Ms Blears: The Comptroller and Auditor General was appointed as the external auditor to the Security Industry Authority by virtue of the Private Security Industry Act 2001, schedule 1 16(4).

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers the Security Industry Authority has available to ensure that the 20 March 2006 deadline for the licensing of security personnel is met; what powers it has to assist the police in ensuring that the deadline is met; and what plans he has to grant additional powers to the authority in this respect. [218729]

Ms Blears [holding answer 28 February 2005]: The licensing of individuals who work as manned guards in the private security industry is due to commence shortly. Regional Security Industry Authority (SIA) investigators will work collaboratively with police and local authorities, managing and sharing intelligence information to ensure that maximum compliance is met by the 20 March 2006 deadline.

From that date anyone operating as a manned guard in the private security industry in England and Wales without a licence could face a range of penalties from a formal warning to prosecution.

No additional powers will be granted to the SIA in this respect at this time.

Security Expenditure (Islington)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of expenditure on (a) policing, (b) crime prevention and (c) local security measures per capita in the borough of Islington for each year since 1996–97; and what contribution was made by the London borough of Islington. [206335]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 December 2004]: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the policing budget per capita in Islington borough Operational Command Unit (BOCU) was as follows.

	Budget per capita in Islington BOCU[1] (£)
1999–2000[2]	127
2000–01	129
2001–02	134
2002–03	146
2003–04	176
2004–05	188

[1] 2001 Census population estimate of 175,797 people in the London borough of Islington.
[2] No earlier information is available due to a change in the force's financial system.

The figures reflect direct operational costs. In addition, BOCUs are able to call upon all-London units (such as dog sections, Territorial Support Group, Traffic and Air Support Units) when operational priorities dictate.

I understand that expenditure on crime prevention and local security measures per capita and details of the contribution made by London borough of Islington are not available.

Special Constables

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables there were in each London borough on 1 January in each of the last six years. [212376]

Ms Blears: The data requested has been collected centrally only since March 2003. The information is shown in the following table.

Stolen Vehicles

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing the recommendation of the Association of Chief Police Officers that all forces introduce a Managed Vehicle Recovery and Storage Scheme to aid the recovery of stolen vehicles. [218241]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 February 2005]: Since 1992 most police forces have developed contract schemes on the lines suggested by a review undertaken by the Association of Chief Police Officers Traffic Committee Working Group in that year. These externally managed police vehicle recovery schemes appear to have been working effectively.

Surrey Police

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people are employed in the corporate development and human resources department of Surrey police; [208784]

(2) how much was spent on salaries for the corporate development and human resources department of Surrey police in financial year 2003–04. [208785]

Ms Blears: This is a matter for the chief constable of the Surrey police and I have notified him of hon. Members questions.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent assessment he has made of whether the public service agreement target to reduce domestic burglary by 25 per cent. from 1998–99 levels by 2005 will be met; [219102]

(2) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to increase significantly the proportion of time spent by police forces on frontline duties; [219106]

(3) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to improve the delivery of justice in all Criminal Justice System areas, with a greater increase in the worst performing areas. [219109]

Ms Blears: Performance against the Home Department's targets is published in the annual report and the autumn performance report available at the House Library and on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to improve the performance of all police forces. [219104]

Ms Blears: Performance against the Department's targets is published in the annual report and the autumn performance report available in the Library and on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to increase the level of confidence in the criminal justice system within ethnic communities; [219112]

(2) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to increase the satisfaction of victims and witnesses with the criminal justice system; [219113]

(3) whether the public service agreement target to maintain the current low rate of prisoner escapes, including category A escapes has been met; [219117]

(4) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce re-offending by young offenders by 5 per cent; [219114]

(5) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce re-offending by adults sentenced to imprisonment by 5 per cent.; [219115]

(6) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce re-offending by adults sentenced to community sentences by 5 per cent. [219116]

Paul Goggins: Performance against the Home Department's targets is published in the annual report and the autumn performance report available in the Library and on the Home Office website www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce the harm caused by drugs; [219118]

(3) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce the frequent use of any illicit drug among all young people under the age of 25 years; [219120]

(4) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce the use of illicit drugs by vulnerable young people; [219121]

(5) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce drug-related crime. [219122]

Caroline Flint: Performance against my Department's targets is published in the annual report and the autumn performance report available at the House Library and on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk).

Text Message Intercepts

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the security services have the ability to read the content of text messages sent by mobile telecommunications devices belonging to private individuals. [221718]

Ms Blears: It is the long-standing policy of successive governments to neither confirm nor deny the activities of the intelligence and security agencies.

Transsexual Prisoners

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, columns 368–69W, on transsexual prisoners, when his Department will publish guidelines on the treatment of transsexual prisoners. [221975]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service hopes to publish these guidelines in late spring or early summer 2005.

Vehicle Checks

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances the police may stop vehicles for random checks. [220526]

Ms Blears: The police have a general power to stop motorists under section 163, Road Traffic Act 1988. This provides that a person driving a motor vehicle on a road must stop the vehicle on being instructed to do so by a police constable in uniform. The legislation does not require the officer to suspect an offence of any kind and the officer is not under a duty to give a reason for stopping the vehicle.

Once a vehicle has stopped, it is a matter for the police officer concerned to decide what checks are appropriate and, where a specific statutory authority is needed for a particular check, to decide whether he has that authority.

The police also have a power under section 4, Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to set up roadblocks for the purposes of detecting crime or finding witnesses to crime. Any inquiries/checks conducted at the roadblock must be carried out in accordance with PACE Code of Practice A.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of China over its treatment of the practitioners of Falun Gong, with particular reference to the treatment of (a) Mingli He and (b) Xingyan Wei; and if he will make a statement. [221283]

Mr. Rammell: We regularly raise our concerns about the mistreatment of Falun Gong adherents in detention. We put forward our concerns most recently at the last round of the UK/China Human Rights Dialogue, held in Beijing on 22 November 2004. We also included a number of Falun Gong prisoners on our list of individual cases of concern handed over as part of the dialogue.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials also raised concerns about the mistreatment of Falun Gong practitioners in detention with Wang Zuo'an, Deputy Director General of the State Administration for Religious Affairs during his visit to the UK in September 2004.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has made representations to China regarding the fate of the people detained in Tiananmen Square at the opening of China's National People's Council. [221318]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 15 March 2005]: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to him on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 88W.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his (a) Russian and (b) Australian counterparts concerning the proposed lifting of the EU arms embargo on China with respect to the effects on (i) Chinese military capabilities, (ii) the political situation with regard to the Taiwan Strait and (iii) observance of human rights by the Chinese Government. [221358]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 15 March 2005]: I have had no recent discussions with my Russian and Australian counterparts on the issue of the embargo.

We take every appropriate opportunity to convey to the Taiwanese authorities, through informal channels, and to the Chinese Government our strong opposition to the use of force or to any action that raises cross-Strait tensions.

We remain deeply concerned about human rights abuses in China and monitor the situation closely. We regularly raise our concerns with the Chinese Government.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Chinese Anti-secession Bill; what discussions he has had with his (a) Chinese, (b) Taiwanese, (c) European and (d) US counterparts regarding the Bill and its implications for the region; and if he will make a statement. [221973]

Mr. MacShane: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said today in response to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) (UIN 221355), Ministers have taken a close interest in the development of China's Anti-Secession legislation. We have discussed it at both ministerial and official level with the Chinese, the US and other EU member states and institutions. Officials have discussed the issue through informal channels with the Taiwanese authorities.

The legislation enacted on 14 March is largely a codification of China's long-held position regarding Taiwan. The impact of the legislation will depend on the reaction of others and how China seeks to apply it.

Although the legislation refers to China's desire to resolve the issue peacefully, we are concerned that it makes reference to the possibility of the use of "non-peaceful means". We remain strongly opposed to the use of force.

The EU issued a Statement on 14 March appealing to both sides to avoid unilateral measures which might heighten tensions.

Colombia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the government of Colombia regarding the death of Luis Eduardo Guerra and others at the San José de Apartadó Peace Community in Uraba. [221315]

Mr. Rammell: We are deeply shocked by the brutal killing of eight unarmed civilians. Our Embassy in Bogota has spoken to the judicial authorities and to Colombian Government representatives at the highest level to express our concerns regarding these killings. Luis Eduardo Guerra was a highly respected member of the Colombian NGO community and well known to our Embassy. I met him during my visit to Colombia in 2004. I welcome the Colombian Government's assurances that there will be an impartial, swift and effective investigation into these murders. Officials from the human rights unit in the Attorney-General's office, as well as forensic specialists and other officials, are in the area where the killings happened and are carrying out their investigation. This process includes interviews with members of the Peace Community, as well as all local army units, to try and establish the facts. We have also stressed to the Colombian authorities the need for proper protection to be given to witnesses of the crimes and of human rights defenders following the case. The Colombian authorities have assured us that such protection will be available to anyone who needs it. We continue to closely monitor the situation. Those responsible, whoever they may be, must be brought to justice.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to President Uribe of Colombia on (a) human rights issues and (b) the conduct of the Colombian Army. [221439]

Mr. Rammell: Human rights lie at the heart of our policy towards Colombia. We regularly raise with the Colombian Government specific human rights cases. Through our Embassy in Bogota, we monitor the human rights situation in Colombia, keeping in close contact with the Colombian authorities. I have highlighted the importance we attach to human rights with President Uribe and other senior Colombian officials during my visits to Colombia in 2003, 2004 and during my most recent visit last month. I reinforced this again when I met Defence Minister Uribe here in London on 11 February. We continue to urge the Colombian Government to implement all outstanding recommendations by the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights. We have also made it plain that the armed forces must act in accordance with human rights and international humanitarian law, and have provided funding for training in these areas. Where members of the armed forces are proven to have committed human rights abuses they must be punished in accordance with the law. Impunity must not be allowed, a message we have also reiterated to the Colombians.

Company Standards

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role the UN Norms on Business and Human Rights play in the setting of governance standards for UK and EU companies in domestic and global markets; and if he will make a statement on (a) the UK and (b) the EU position regarding the UN Norms. [221974]

Mr. MacShane: The recent report from the Office of the High Commissioner on Human Rights (OHCHR) on business and human rights notes that the UN Norms have the status of a "draft proposal". Therefore, the draft Norms have no formal or legal role in setting governance standards for business. However, through the Business Leaders' Initiative on Human Rights (BLIHR), a number of multinational companies have been "road-testing" the draft Norms, using the content to inform their codes of practice. This process will continue until December 2006. In addition, the FTSE4Good benchmark takes the draft Norms into account in its assessment of companies' performance. And some potential investors consider the draft Norms in their requirement for "human rights impact assessments".

The UK continues to play a constructive role in the debate on corporate responsibility and human rights. While we see merit in clarifying minimum standards for business in relation to human rights, we believe, as does the OHCHR, that future action on this agenda should take into account the many codes and initiatives which exist in this field, rather than focussing exclusively on the draft Norms. These include the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development Guidelines on Multinational Enterprises, the International Labour Organisation Tripartite Declaration of Principles concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy and the UN Global Compact.

The UK will be active at the forthcoming Commission on Human Rights in seeking to ensure proper follow-up to the OHCHR's report. We firmly believe that this exercise should listen to the views of all stakeholders.

Dependent Territories

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the status of each of the UK's overseas territories and Crown Dependencies will be under the EU Constitution. [221478]

Mr. MacShane: The status of the UK's overseas territories and Crown Dependencies would not change under the EU Constitutional Treaty.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provisions are made for British overseas territories in the European Union Constitution. [221480]

Mr. MacShane: A number of provisions are made for the overseas countries and territories (OCT) of the UK and other EU member states in the EU Constitutional Treaty. Articles III-286 to III-291 in Title IV Part III of the Constitutional Treaty set out the provisions relative to the association of certain overseas countries and territories with the European Union. These articles closely follow Articles 182 to 188 of the Treaty establishing the European Community (TEC). Annex II to the Constitutional Treaty contains the list of overseas countries and territories to which Title IV Part III of the Constitution applies. It is in substance the same as Annex II to the TEC.

The following UK Overseas Territories are listed in Annex II to the Constitutional Treaty: Anguilla, Bermuda, British Antarctic Territory, British Indian Ocean Territory, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Falklands Islands, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena and Dependencies, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands and Turks and Caicos Islands. Although listed as an OCT in the Annex, Bermuda has been excluded from successive Association instruments at its own request.

The geographical extent of the Union is set out in Article IV-440 of the Constitutional Treaty which corresponds to Article 299 of the TEC, with modifications to take account of successive accessions. Gibraltar is covered by paragraph 4 of Article IV-440, in substance the same as Article 299.4 TEC. Section 1, Title II of Protocol 8 to the Constitutional Treaty sets out the specific provisions relating to Gibraltar. These were originally incorporated in the UK's 1972 Act of Accession.

The Sovereign Base Areas are the subject of provisions set out in paragraph 6 (b) of Article IV-440 and Title III of Protocol 9 to the Constitutional Treaty. These provisions were originally set out in Article 299 6 (b) of the TEC and Protocol 3 to the 2003 Act of Accession of the Czech Republic, Estonia, Cyprus, Latvia, Lithuania, Hungary, Malta, Poland, Slovenia and the Slovak Republic.

European Constitution

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what events he plans to attend during the next three months relating to the EU Constitution; and what meetings are planned during the next three months at which departmental Ministers will speak on the EU Constitution. [221377]

Mr. MacShane: I and ministerial colleagues will be making the case for the EU Constitutional Treaty at various public events over the next few months. As part of my series of UK regional visits as Europe Minister to discuss European matters with local audiences, I will be answering questions on a range of European issues, including the EU Constitutional Treaty.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with the Electoral Commission on the date for the referendum on the European Constitution. [221380]

Mr. MacShane: None.

European Union Bill

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons it was decided that a regulatory impact assessment was not needed for the European Union Bill. [221378]

Mr. MacShane: Paragraph 71 of the Explanatory Notes [Bill 45-EN] incorrectly states that no Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) for the EU Bill was needed. In fact an RIA was undertaken, and placed in the Library of the House and on the internet at www.europe.gov.uk on 25 January when the Bill was introduced. The RIA concluded that—as the Notes state—there will be no direct or indirect regulatory burdens on business, charities or the voluntary sector.

Gibraltar

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions his Department has taken to maintain a strong economy in Gibraltar. [221479]

Mr. MacShane: Economic development is a defined domestic matter for which the Government of Gibraltar is responsible.

Middle East

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had at the recent London meeting to support the Palestinian Authority on the impact of the separation barrier on water supplies and arable land. [221382]

Mr. Rammell: The focus of the London Meeting was to help the Palestinian leadership strengthen the institutions of the Palestinian Authority. The meeting saw the Palestinian Authority put forward detailed plans for institutional renewal in the fields of security, governance and economic development. The participants agreed that achievement of the objectives set out in the London Meeting would constitute a major step towards the Palestinian Authority achieving its Roadmap commitments. Participants also urged and expected Israel to deliver on its Roadmap commitments.

While we understand that Israel has a legitimate right to defend itself against terrorist attacks, construction of the barrier on Palestinian land is unlawful, creates a physical obstacle to the two-state solution, and causes unacceptable humanitarian hardship for many Palestinians. My right hon. Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean raised our continuing concerns over the barrier's route with the Israeli Foreign Minister Silvan Shalom on 3 March during her visit to Israel.

Nepal

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to the Government of Nepal on democratic constitutional government; and if he will make a statement. [221431]

Mr. Alexander: Following the takeover of power by the King on 1 February I summoned the Nepalese ambassador to express our grave concern at developments. I also issued a public statement in which I set out our concern that the King's actions would increase the risk of instability in Nepal and undermine the institutions of democracy and constitutional monarchy in the country. In that statement I called for the immediate restitution of multi-party democracy. A copy of my statement is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website www.fco.gov.uk/policy/news/press-releases. Our ambassador in Kathmandu raised these issues directly with the King in an audience on 8 February.

The UK also issued a statement with EU partners highlighting our concerns about restrictions on liberty and calling for human rights to be respected. With other EU member states' ambassadors our ambassador in Kathmandu also raised them with the new Nepalese Foreign Minister on 7 February.

Such is the level of our concern that on 14 February my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary recalled our ambassador in Nepal to London for consultations, following which we decided to withdraw a proposal, laid before Parliament in a minute of 20 January 2005, to gift a further tranche of military assistance to Nepal.

Our ambassador has now returned to Nepal and will be seeking an early audience with the King to encourage him again to restore fundamental rights and release party leaders from detention as a first step towards restoring democracy and democratic process.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the members of the UK delegation to the Non-proliferation Treaty Review Conference in New York in May; and what statement of proposals the UK Government intend to table. [221430]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave him on 13 December 2004, Official Report, column 898W and 26 January 2005, Official Report, column 428W.

Nuclear Disarmament

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom stockpile which have been (a) withdrawn from service and (b) dismantled, (i) unilaterally and (ii) as a result of multilateral negotiations pursuant to United Kingdom obligations under Article six of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. [221447]

Mr. MacShane: The UK has unilaterally withdrawn and dismantled all its nuclear weapons except those currently in service. We are the only nuclear weapon state to have reduced our capacity to one nuclear weapon system, Trident, and retain a stockpile of less than 200 operationally available warheads. There have been no multilateral negotiations to withdraw and dismantle nuclear weapons as part of the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty (NPT) process. However, alongside the important unilateral steps already referred to, we have pursued the practical steps agreed by States Parties to the Treaty for the systematic and progressive efforts to implement Article VI of the NPT.

Post Conflict Reconstruction Unit

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what ways gender issues are being incorporated into the work of the tri-departmental Post-Conflict Reconstruction Unit. [221827]

Mr. Rammell: The Government recognise the positive and distinct contribution that women can make to post-conflict stabilisation. The new inter-departmental Post-Conflict Reconstruction Unit (PCRU) has been asked to develop a capacity to identify best practice in gender-related issues and to consider gender-sensitive approaches in its planning and deployment.

As part of its recent public consultation process, PCRU sought the advice of groups representing gender issues in conflict, including Widows for Peace and Democracy and Women Waging Peace. PCRU will now produce a report drawing together the results of the public consultation which will show how contributions, including those on gender, have shaped the establishment of the unit. The report is likely to propose that permanent consultation mechanisms are established to ensure that PCRU continue to receive external advice and opinions on issues such as gender.

The PCRU will continue to develop its capacity through close consultation with civil society groups and the Women's National Commission—the Government's non- departmental advisory body on women—to ensure that gender is mainstreamed in post-conflict strategies. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will assist by providing country-specific advice as PCRU plans for deployments and briefing on UK Government work on women and conflict in international fora, such as UN Security Council Resolution 1325 on women, peace and security.

Taiwan

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the level of tension in the Taiwan Strait following the recent anti-secessionist legislation introduced by China; and if he will make a statement. [221354]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 15 March 2005]: As the legislation was only passed on 14 March, its impact has scarcely been felt. Much will depend on the reaction of others and how China seeks to apply it.

However, there is a risk that its introduction will slow or reverse the recent signs of progress in the relationship between China and Taiwan. We have made these concerns known to the Chinese and continue to watch developments closely. We continue to call on both sides to avoid unilateral actions which might heighten tensions. Although China has stressed its desire for a peaceful resolution of the issue, we are concerned that the legislation makes reference to the possibility of the use of "non-peaceful means". We strongly oppose the use of force and believe that the Taiwan question should be settled peacefully through negotiation between the people on both sides of the Taiwan Strait.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his (a) European Union, (b) United States, (c) Russian, (d) Australian and (e) Japanese counterparts concerning the recent anti-secessionist legislation to be used by China against Taiwan; when these discussions took place; and what the outcome was. [221355]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 15 March 2005]: I and my Ministers have taken a close interest in the development of China's anti-secession legislation. Of those the right hon. Gentleman mentions, there have been discussions at both ministerial and official level with other EU member states and institutions and with the US this year. There have also been discussions with Japan and Australia between officials. These discussions resulted in a better understanding of the issues and closer positions.

As a direct result of some of these discussions, the EU issued a statement on 14 March urging both sides to avoid unilateral measures which might heighten tensions.

Uganda

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the percentage of Ugandan gross domestic product spent on (a) health, (b) education, (c) agriculture and (d) defence; and if he will make a statement. [221274]

Mr. Mullin: Figures from the 2003–04 approved budget are as follows:

	GDP (percentage)
Health	2.9
Education	4.5
Agriculture	0.8
Security (defence)	2.5

Uganda has a well-developed and consultative budgetary process. Donors are involved throughout, and have an opportunity to endorse the budget at the annual Public Expenditure Review. This level of consultation allows partners, including the UK, to ensure Government meets its commitment to prioritise poverty reduction. Budget execution is generally good and closely monitored by Government and donors, including the International Financial Institutions. Our Poverty Reduction Budget Support, and that of other partners such as the World Bank, is conditional on our endorsement of the budget and its subsequent execution.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the strength of the Ugandan Presidential Protection Brigade; whether the UK is offering it technical assistance; and if he will make a statement. [221275]

Mr. Mullin: In our discussions with the Uganda Government concerning implementation of their Defence Review, they have declined to identify separately the Presidential Guard Brigade. We have given it no technical assistance.

We apply strong controls in the management of our development assistance to Uganda to ensure it is used for the purposes for which it is intended. Security is required for sustainable development, but defence spending should be justified and affordable.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Ugandan Constitutional Amendment Bill 2005, with particular reference to the proposal to lift limits on presidential terms; and if he will make a statement. [221971]

Mr. Mullin: Given Uganda's past, it is important that any constitutional changes have the genuine confidence of the people and their representatives. The Constitutional Amendment Bill proposes significant revisions of a Constitution that is only 10 years old. We have urged that the Ugandan Parliament be allowed to vote on proposed amendments individually—including that relating to presidential terms—according to its established rules and in the spirit of provisions for change set out in Uganda's Constitution.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of reports that groups in Uganda are recruiting, training and deploying militia for political purposes; what discussions he has had with Ugandan counterparts about such groups; and if he will make a statement. [221972]

Mr. Mullin: There are reports of the reactivation of the Kalangala Action Plan, a pro-Government militia which was implicated in violence during the 2001 elections. We have raised our concerns with the Ugandan authorities. They have assured us that any illegal activity will bring immediate action by the police.

There are also concerns that ethnic militia recruited to fight against the Lord's Resistance Army in northern Uganda could be deployed in the 2006 elections. We have raised, and continue to raise, our concerns about this with the Government of Uganda and have urged them to bring all militias under the formal control of the army.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221117]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W, by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury

Disabled Access

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will increase the penalties against car drivers who park by dropped kerbs intended for use by people with disabilities. [222677]

Charlotte Atkins: We recognise that dropped kerbs are of great benefit to wheelchair users and ambulant disabled people.

The specific prohibition on parking at a dropped kerb currently applies only in London, under section 14 of the London local authorities and Transport for London Act 2003. The penalty charge levels for contravening the prohibition in London are decided by the Mayor for London.

However, section 86 of part 6 to the Traffic Management Act 2004, once commenced, will allow this prohibition to apply in areas of England and Wales where civil enforcement of parking contraventions is exercised by the local traffic authority and appropriate application for these specific provisions has been made to the relevant national authority. The Secretary of State will be responsible for setting the level of penalties in England. The penalty level will be set when section 86 comes into force, which is currently expected to be in 2006.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what targets he sets the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for responding to correspondence; whether the time taken is measured from the date when a letter is (a) received and (b) opened; and what steps he is taking to improve turn-around times. [222375]

Mr. Jamieson: We have not set the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) a correspondence response target. However, the Agency has been asked continuously to maintain or improve the levels of customer satisfaction. To achieve this DVLA has an internal target of answering 95 per cent. of written correspondence within eight working days from the date of opening.

Entry Ports (Security)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many security staff are employed at each of the 35 main ports of entry to the United Kingdom. [221092]

Mr. Jamieson: All ports handling international traffic must meet Government security standards. However, the number of staff that are employed by a port to carry out security is a decision for the ports themselves. We therefore do not hold this information centrally.

Hauliers

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 1334W, on hauliers (working time restrictions), whether the new working time rules will apply to mobile workers employed by non-UK hauliers operating in the UK. [221267]

Mr. Jamieson: The new Regulations will apply to mobile workers employed by any non-UK hauliers operating in Great Britain, provided those hauliers are established in a member state of the European Union. Separate regulations with similar effect will apply in Northern Ireland.

Mobile workers from non-EU member states will be bound by the terms of the Directive, provided they are deemed to be employed by a EU employer under the terms of our Regulations.

Heathrow

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the level of air traffic movements at Heathrow is; and when such movements are expected to reach the cap set for Heathrow of 480,000 movements; [221626]

(2) what action is planned by the Government when the capped level of 480,000 air traffic movements has been reached at Heathrow airport. [221654]

Charlotte Atkins: The number of Heathrow Air Transport Movements (ATMs) in the year ending 28 February 2005 was 469,544. The condition limiting air transport movements to 480,000 a year applies from the date that the core Terminal 5 building opens, which is expected to be 2008. The number of ATMs is forecast to reach the 480,000 limit by the end of 2007. I am advised by BAA that an administrative process for managing the cap has been discussed and agreed in principle with the local planning authority to ensure that the limit is not exceeded.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the final scheme for compensation for blight associated with any future development of Heathrow airport to be published. [221630]

Charlotte Atkins: BAA plc published a consultation paper on 21 September 2004 setting out its proposals for a non-statutory scheme to protect property values around the airport. At the request of local residents BAA extended the consultation by one month to January 2005. BAA is presently considering the responses to the consultation and has advised the local community that it expects to publish its final scheme by the late spring.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further work is to be undertaken to assess the economic impact of a third runway at Heathrow airport. [221631]

Charlotte Atkins: The economic impact of a third runway at Heathrow was assessed in the work preceding the Air Transport White Paper and is set out in the White Paper and supporting documentation. No further assessment is planned, beyond any that may be necessary to reflect changed circumstances.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements have been made to ensure the openness and transparency of the workings of Project Heathrow, with particular reference to the dissemination of information on this initiative to (a) residents of communities living near Heathrow and (b) their elected representatives. [221649]

Charlotte Atkins: We are keen to ensure that the Project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow (Project Heathrow) is taken forward in an open and transparent manner, and to communicate information about the project to local communities and their representatives. The Heathrow Airport Consultative Committee, whose membership includes locally elected representatives, receives regular updates from DfT officials and BAA. Local authorities are represented on Project Heathrow's air quality technical panels. Information about the project has been on the Department's website www.dft.gov.uk/aviation/projectheathrow since last summer and we endeavour to keep this up to date as the project progresses. In addition, Ministers and officials have meetings from time to time with a variety of interested parties. I am currently seeking to arrange a further such meeting with relevant Members of Parliament.

For their part, BAA Heathrow have been working to ensure that the local community is well informed about Project Heathrow. BAA's work has included updating the Heathrow Local Focus Forum on progress and meeting with local action groups to discuss issues connected with the project. BAA has also published the leaflet "One Year On—How BAA airports are delivering the Future of Air Transport White Paper" which is available from the company's website www.baa.com.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what impact the decision in the case of the judicial review of the Government's proposals for airport expansion has had on the proposals for a third runway at Heathrow. [221651]

Charlotte Atkins: None. The Court upheld the White Paper policy as regards Heathrow, although we are aware that this is the subject of a further appeal.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what process would need to be pursued (a) to amend and (b) to delete the environmental mitigation measures on airport operations at Heathrow under the Cranford Agreement. [221653]

Charlotte Atkins: Any proposals to amend or abandon the existing noise amelioration operations at Heathrow under the Cranford Agreement would need to be subject to a full environmental appraisal, public consultation and ministerial approval. Any agreed changes would then need to be reflected in operational instructions in the NATS Manual for Air Traffic Services.

New Estates

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many unadopted roads there are on estates built in the last 15 years; and how many unadopted residential streets there are in England. [222717]

Charlotte Atkins: Information is not held centrally on either question.

Private Car Parks

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is allowed to pass on details it holds on individuals to operators of privately-owned and operated car parks. [221968]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 15 March 2005]: Regulations provide for the release of vehicle keeper details from the register maintained by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to applicants who can demonstrate 'reasonable cause' for their request. Legal advice is that the enforcement of parking restrictions on private property meets the 'reasonable cause' criterion. If information were not released in these circumstances, landlords would have great difficulty in enforcing their rights to their property. The Information Commissioner is aware that personal data are used in this way and he has issued advice that is available on his website.

Rail Stations

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers have used (a) Bramley, (b) Burley Park and (c) Headingley rail stations in each year since 1987. [221965]

Mr. McNulty: Figures are only held from year 1990–91 and are shown in the following table.

Financial year	Bramley (W. Yorks)	Burley Park	Headingley
1990–91	39,472	106,966	42,970
1991–92	43,519	126,194	49,847
1992–93	56,202	151,673	54,667
1993–94	67,369	164,823	59,383
1994–95	65,357	159,624	54,596
1995–96	70,022	188,047	85,661
1996–97	74,007	206,578	96,307
1997–98	92,765	238,352	117,871
1998–99	112,378	248,143	123,848
1999–2000	116,725	274,135	120,013
2000–01	83,490	215,245	101,472
2001–02	67,505	178,604	95,709
2002–03	86,291	216,208	109,687
2003–04	111,500	250,310	126,021

Railways

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department will be assuming powers previously exercised by the Strategic Rail Authority in respect of (a) waiving penalty payments for train operators involved in industrial disputes, (b) providing compensation to train operating companies for loss of revenue arising from industrial disputes and (c) authorising pay and conditions agreements in the 12 months of a franchise. [222532]

Mr. McNulty: Penalty payments, train operators' revenue and approval of pay deals for train operators' staff are all aspects of franchising. Under the Railways Bill, responsibility for passenger rail franchising would pass to the Secretary of State for Transport and Scottish Ministers as appropriate. Whether and how these specific powers will be used in the future is an issue we will want to consider in due course.

Registered Car Owners (Essex)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many registered car owners there have been in (a) Southend and (b) Essex in each year since 1997. [222487]

Mr. Jamieson: DVLA is unable to provide information on numbers of car owners as our system cannot cater for multiple vehicles registered to a single owner. In addition DVLA registers vehicle keepers (the person responsible for the use of the vehicles on the road) and not legal owners. However, the numbers of licensed vehicles registered to addresses in the Southend and Essex areas are as follows:

Calendar year	Southend	Excluding Southend	Essex Including Southend
1997	60,675	569,930	630,605
1998	61,668	583,147	644,815
1999	63,297	601,598	664,895
2000	64,428	621,458	685,886
2001	66,510	641,046	707,556
2002	68,436	655,725	724,161
2003[1]	69,988	663,803	733,791

[1] 2003 is the last full year for which information is currently available

Road Accidents/Deaths

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to publish the number of road accidents in (a) Essex and (b) Southend in 2004. [222471]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department for Transport will report accident and casualty figures for Essex and the unitary authority Southend on Sea in "Road Casualties Great Britain: 2004", which is due for publication in September 2005.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the Government are taking in support of the policy of the European Union to halve the number of road deaths across the EU between 2002 and 2010. [222350]

Mr. Jamieson: We continue to develop and implement our wide-ranging road safety strategy. The provisional 2004 third quarter casualty figures show we are now over halfway towards our 2010 target of a 40 per cent. reduction in the number of people killed or seriously injured, and over three-quarters towards our 50 per cent. target for children.

The first review of the road safety strategy identified that, while we are making good progress toward meeting our overall casualty reduction targets, the number of fatal casualties has levelled off. This is a complex issue, affecting other European countries which like us have a good record on road safety, and it is receiving in-depth analysis and special focus as we develop the strategy further.

Seafarers

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to review the operation of race relations legislation in relation to seafarers. [222309]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 675W, given to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael).

Speed Cameras/Humps

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in descending order the 10 local authority areas in England which have the greatest number of fixed speed cameras. [221719]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 15 March 2005]: Details are in the tables of the safety camera partnerships' sites and casualties which my Department published and placed in the Library in June 2004.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many traffic calming schemes introduced in England since 1998 speed humps have been constructed and later withdrawn or modified, broken down by local authority. [222352]

Mr. Jamieson: Local authorities have the power to introduce or modify traffic calming schemes without approval from the Department, so there are no central records which contain this information.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of speed humps, with particular reference to (a) air pollution and (b) noise pollution; and if he will make a statement. [222353]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has commissioned a number of research projects in recent years to assess the environmental impact of road humps.

The research has indicated that emissions from individual vehicles may increase with the implementation of traffic calming measures, due to increased driver acceleration and deceleration. However, the reduction in the volume of traffic within traffic calming schemes usually means that the overall changes in air quality are roughly neutral.

After the installation of road humps and speed cushions, research has shown that the maximum noise levels from light vehicles (cars) are reduced, as is the overall traffic noise level when light vehicles form most of the traffic stream. However, the effect on noise from large vehicles is more complex. While there are some decreases in maximum vehicle noise levels from large commercial vehicles due to reductions in their speeds, this can be offset by increases in noise from the bodywork of such vehicles as they pass over the humps and cushions. The net effect of these measures on the overall traffic noise depends on the proportion of large commercial vehicles in the traffic stream, and on the type of road hump installed.

The environmental impact of road humps has to be considered against the need to improve road safety. Around 3,500 people are killed and a further 34,000 are seriously injured on our roads every year. Nearly 2,400 of these casualties are child pedestrians. Compliance with speed limits would reduce these unacceptable numbers, and experience shows that traffic calming measures such as road humps have significant safety benefits.

Stoke Hammond/Linslade Bypass

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons an appraisal summary table for a fully worked up lower cost alternative in relation to the Stoke Hammond and Linslade Western Bypass has not been provided since 1994. [222363]

Charlotte Atkins: The Stoke Hammond and Linslade Western Bypass was subject to the Department's appraisal requirements applicable at the time when relevant funding and approval decisions were taken. These requirements have changed over time. Alternative options and routes were considered, but not recommended, by the Public Inquiry into the Compulsory Purchase Orders held in 2003. Once a scheme has completed its statutory processes, the Department does not generally require an assessment of alternative options when the local authority submits a request for Full Approval and release of funding under the Local Transport Programme.

Television Equipment (Cars)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the policy of the Government is in relation to the legality of (a) fitting and (b) using television equipment in cars which operate while a vehicle is stationary at traffic lights. [222347]

Mr. Jamieson: It is legal to fit television equipment in a motor vehicle. However, if the screen of the television can be seen by the driver then it is only lawful to display information about the state of the vehicle, or about the location of the vehicle and the road which it is on, or information to assist the driver to see the road adjacent to the vehicle, or to assist the driver to reach his destination.

It is unlawful for the driver to watch screens for entertainment purposes (e.g. TV programmes or DVDs) at any time while driving, including when stopped at traffic lights.

Transport (Hampshire)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Highways Agency expenditure was in Hampshire in each of the last five years; and how much was spent on (a) new road schemes and (b) road maintenance. [221754]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 15 March 2005]: No major new road schemes have been carried out by the Highways Agency in Hampshire in the last five years.

Delivery of the Highways Agency's road maintenance programme and smaller improvement schemes is carried out through a number of area-based managing agents. The area that includes Hampshire also includes other counties and it is not possible to identify how much has been spent in Hampshire alone.

TREASURY

Correspondence

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government Actuary's Department will respond to the letter from the hon. Member for Yeovil of 20 December 2004 in relation to public sector redundancy packages; what the reasons are for the delay; and if he will make a statement. [221800]

Mr. Timms: In response to the hon. Member's letter of 20 December 2004 the Government Actuary's Department provided advice to the Ministry of Defence in January, on the basis of which Ministry officials, given the unusual nature of the case, were given specific Treasury approval for a redundancy payment to the hon. Member's constituent. Treasury approval was initially given on 18 February but the payment was re-calculated to add interest at a standard rate in order to take full account of delay before payment was actioned on 7 March. Officials have already apologised to the constituent for the excessive time taken to settle this case but I believe that it has now reached a satisfactory conclusion.

First Childbirths

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average age of women at first childbirth was in each of the last 10 years. [222059]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Tim Loughton, dated 17 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the average age of women at first childbirth in each of the last 10 years. (222059)

Figures for England and Wales from 1993 to 2003 are published in Table 1.7 of the annual births reference volume (Birth statistics 2003 FM1 no 32). Table 1.7a contains means calculated from number of births. Table 1.7b contains means calculated from fertility rates, thus controlling for the age distribution of the female population, so providing a better measure of trend. Copies of the publication are available from the House of Commons library and is also available at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=5768&Pos=1&ColRank=1&Rank=256

Income Tax

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the estimated effect upon revenue would be if the 10 per cent. band of income tax were increased by (a) £1,000, (b) £2,000 and (c) £3,000; [221727]

(2) what the estimated effect upon revenue would be if the lower threshold for income tax were increased by (a) £1,000, (b) £2,000 and (c) £3,000; and how many taxpayers would no longer pay income tax in each case. [221728]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 8 February 2005, Official Report, column 1405W.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated yield arising from levying income tax at a rate of 50 per cent. on all taxable incomes in excess of £50,000 per annum would be; and how many taxpayers would be affected. [221729]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 8 February 2005, Official Report, column 1405W and 1410W.

Migrant Labour

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of migrant labour admitted to the UK was employed (a) by outsourcing companies, (b) by employment agencies, (c) by gangmasters, (d) in agriculture, (e) in catering and (f) in the care system in the last year for which figures are available. [221521]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Dr. John Pugh, dated 17 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about percentages of employed migrant labour in the UK. (221521)

The attached table, using statistics from the ONS Labour Force Survey, gives estimates of numbers of people aged 16 and over who are resident and employed in the UK but whose nationality is other than UK. Estimates, for the three month period ending in November 2004 are given in total and for those employed by employment agencies, in agriculture, in catering and in the care system.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Non-UK nationals resident and in employment in the UK

Three months ending November 2004	Numbers in employment	Percentage[6]
Total non-UK nationals	1,532,000	100
Employment agencies[1]	44,000	2.9
Agriculture[2]	9,000	0.6
Catering[3]	17,000	1.1
The care system[4]	37,000	2.2
Of which those working for employment agencies[5]	3,000	0.2
Other non-UK nationals	1,428,000	93.2

[1] Refers to those respondents whose reason for not having a permanent job was because of agency temping.

[2] Refers to those involved in activities including, growing crops; market gardening; horticulture; farming of animals; growing crops combined with farming of animals (mixed farming); agricultural and animal husbandry service activities, except veterinary activities.

[3] Includes only those working in canteen and catering services.

[4] Refers to those respondents working as care assistants and home carers in the: health and social work, real estate renting and business activity, public administration and defence, other community social and personal and private households with employed persons.

[5] Of those employed in the care system 3,000 working for employment agencies are included also within the total shown in the table for employment agencies.

[6] A percentages of total non-UK nationals.

Note:

LFS estimates for small groups such as non-UK nationals are particularly subject to sampling variability because of the small size of the survey samples. They should therefore be treated with caution.

Paddington Hospital

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has received the outline business case for the Paddington Basin Health Campus from the North West London strategic health authority. [222669]

Mr. Boateng: No.

Perpetual Annuity/Pension Payments

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether (a) annuities and (b) pensions are still paid from public funds to the descendants of any individuals who through particular public service were granted exceptional perpetual annuity or pension payments. [221921]

Mr. Timms: No such payments are made by the Treasury.

Productivity

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what indicators his Department uses to assess the productivity performance of the United Kingdom. [221803]

John Healey: The Government uses two headline measures in its assessment of the UK's productivity performance: HM Treasury estimates of underlying productivity growth in the UK over the economic cycle; and ONS International Comparisons of Productivity estimates.

These headline measures are supported by a set of intermediate indicators to highlight how the UK is performing relative to its major competitors on key dimensions of the drivers of productivity.

Details can be found in the technical note accompanying the Treasury's PSA target on productivity; in "Productivity in the UK 5: Benchmarking UK productivity performance: A consultation on productivity indicators[1]" and "Benchmarking UK productivity performance: The Government's response to the consultation on productivity indicators[2]".

Tax Relief (Over-65s)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what powers he has to provide tax relief to the over-65s on savings and earnings for those earning between £18,900 and £23,070. [222364]

Mr. Timms: Those over 65 are entitled to more generous personal allowances than those aged below 65, while those over 75 have a greater entitlement still.

In 2004 the personal allowances for all those aged 65 and over were increased in line with earnings by a provision in the Finance Act. The Chancellor announced his intention at last December's PBR of introducing a similar increase to the personal allowance for all those aged 65 and over in this year's Finance Bill.

This overrides the automatic increase which is made in line with prices for all personal allowances. The higher allowances for those aged 65 and over are reduced where their income is above a certain level. This level, £18,900 for 2004–05, is also increased automatically in line with prices.

In common with everyone else, those over 65 can withdraw funds from any ISAs they have tax free. Consequently, this does not affect their entitlement to age-related personal allowances.

Unemployment (Aberdeenshire)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of unemployment was in Aberdeenshire unitary authority area in each year since 1999 broken down by age group. [222062]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 17 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment in Aberdeenshire Unitary Authority. (222062)

Table 1 gives estimates of the levels of unemployed people resident in the Aberdeenshire Unitary Authority analysed by age group and covering twelve-month periods ending February each year from 1999 to 2004.

These estimates from Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance. Table 2 gives, for each age group, the average number of people resident in the Aberdeenshire Unitary Authority who were claiming Jobseeker's Allowance benefits in each year from 1999 to 2004.

Table 1: Unemployed people resident in the Aberdeenshire unitary authority area by age

Note:
These estimates are based on very small sample sizes and are subject to a high degree of sampling variability. Changes from year to year, especially, should be treated with caution.

VAT (Electronic Publishing)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised through VAT on electronically published materials in each of the past 10 years. [222376]

Dawn Primarolo: VAT revenue figures are published by HM Customs and Excise in the VAT factsheet, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House and from Customs' website: http://www.uktradeinfo.com

HM Customs and Excise do not collect data on VAT from individual goods and services.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from (a) universities and (b) libraries with regard to the level of VAT levied on electronically published materials. [222377]

Dawn Primarolo: I am not aware that any Treasury Minister has received any representations from universities and libraries with regard to the level of VAT levied on electronically published materials in the last year.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Pet Fairs

18. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received regarding pet fairs; and if she will make a statement. [222457]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have received a considerable amount of correspondence both for and against the licensing of pet fairs under the proposed Animal Welfare Bill, and I am currently considering how best to take forward work on this issue.

Fallen Stock

19. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the collection of fallen stock. [222459]

Mr. Bradshaw: The National Fallen Stock Scheme has been operating for just over three months and already has 25,000 members. While acknowledging there have been teething problems with collection of fallen stock in some parts of the country, the National Fallen Stock Company reports that it is pleased with the response and that the scheme is generally working well.

Fisheries

22. Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to protect fish stocks in UK waters. [222462]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are a range of policies in European Union and UK legislation to protect fish stocks. The Government will shortly be publishing a response to the "Net Benefits" report which made a wide ranging series of recommendations to secure sustainable fisheries in the waters around the UK.

Commission for Africa

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the Commission for Africa's report for her Department's work. [222444]

Mr. Morley: Along with the rest of Government we are studying the Commission's conclusions carefully and will work up a full response across Government as soon as we can.

Common Agricultural Policy

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what quantity of fruit and vegetables was destroyed under EU arrangements in each of the last three years. [222458]

Alun Michael: Latest data from the European Commission indicate that total produce withdrawn from the market in the EU fell from over 1.1 million tonnes in 2000–01 to 596,000 tonnes in 2001–02, and to 315,000 tonnes in 2002–03.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for further reform of the Common Agricultural Policy. [222447]

Alun Michael: The key priority over the coming year is reform of the sugar regime. Looking further ahead, the review of dairy quotas in 2008 and the review of decoupling in 2009 may provide further opportunities for reform. We are also pushing for a radical outcome to the current WTO round to increase market access and eliminate export subsidies at the earliest opportunity.

Climate Change

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1639, to my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd) on climate change, what the results were of her discussions with newly developing countries, with particular reference to those with substantial and growing energy needs; and if she will make a statement. [222461]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, together with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, jointly hosted a Round Table for the energy and environment Ministers from 20 countries, including the emerging economies, on 15–16 March.

This was an innovative event which enabled us to explore common ground and begin to build a shared agenda to tackle issues of access to energy for development, energy security, and environmental protection.

A summary of proceedings will be placed on the Defra and DTI websites shortly.

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether Ministers in her Department have issued written instructions to override her Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221109]

Alun Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W by the Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms).

Fish Quotas

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of estimated biomass of the 10 most landed fish species under North Sea Total Allowable Catches were landed by vessels from each EU member state in the last period for which figures are available; and what proportion of each catch was made up of recognised market valuable species. [215234]

Mr. Bradshaw: The most recent available information for the most landed North Sea species (on the basis of Total Allowable Catches for 2005) is shown in table 1 as follows:

Table 1

Rank	Species	TAC 2005 in thousand tonnes	Proportion of biomass taken in 2003

Flooding

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of households in England which are at risk from flooding; and if she will make a statement. [222351]

Mr. Morley: The most recent estimate of households at risk of flooding is based on data from the Environment Agency's 2004 National Flood Risk Assessment which is also used in the FloodMap available from their website. This identified just under 1.9 million households within the Extreme Flood Outline in England (with more than 0.1 per cent. probability of flooding in any year).

More than half of these households are in the low probability band (less than 0.5 per cent. probability of flooding in any year) and the majority of the remainder are in the moderate band (less than 1.3 per cent. probability in any year).

Over-30-month Scheme

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the over-30-month scheme will end. [222652]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not expect any changes to the over-30-month scheme until September 2005 at the earliest.

Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the opportunities available to public sector food buyers and farmers under the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative; and if she will make a statement. [222453]

Alun Michael: Examples of developments which offer greater opportunities for local producers to compete for public sector business include: (a) to supply more fruit and vegetables under the expanding 5-A-Day scheme; (b) an increased demand for fresh and seasonal produce and (c) greater emphasis on quality.

Tobacco

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will urge the withdrawal of EU subsidies to farmers in EU member states to grow tobacco. [221644]

Alun Michael: The decision has already been made. In April 2004 the Agriculture Council decided that direct support for tobacco production in the European Community should cease after 2009.

Waste Management

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the work of the Waste and Resources Action Programme in the East Sussex region. [221517]

Mr. Morley: Defra does not assess the work of the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) on a geographic basis but in relation to its progress towards achieving the targets set out in its business plan.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the funding of the Waste and Resources Action Programme. [221513]

Mr. Morley: The Waste and Resources Action Programme is a not-for-profit company limited by guarantee and currently funded by Defra, DTI, the Scottish Executive, the Welsh Assembly Government and the Northern Ireland Executive.

The latest published set of accounts for WRAP (covering the financial year 2003–04) is available for inspection at Companies House.

Water Charges

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she proposes to introduce changes to the system of using rateable values as the basis for domestic water charges. [222460]

Mr. Morley: We have no present plans to require water companies to abandon rateable values as the basis of their unmeasured charges. Rateable values are outdated, and we are open to proposals for better systems, but any change would have to address the issue of winners and losers. We will update the existing analysis in the light of the Lyons inquiry and any consequential changes to council tax.

Water Savings Trust

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the outputs of the Water Savings Trust feasibility study; and what action she proposes to take following the Environment Agency's report to her Department on the outcome of this study. [222520]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency have been delayed in presenting the report on the feasibility of a Water Savings Trust to Defra. I now expect to receive the report from them in the first week of April.

On receipt of the report, I will consider what contribution a Water Savings Trust could make towards securing a sustainable water supply.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Billboards

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the maximum fine is which local authorities can impose on landowners allowing temporary wheeled billboards to be placed next to motorways. [222680]

Keith Hill: Local planning authorities can prosecute the owner or occupier of the land on which the advertisement is displayed. The maximum fine on conviction of an offence is £2,500 and for a continuing offence £250 for each day the unlawful advertisement continues to be displayed.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average fine imposed by local authorities on landowners allowing temporary wheeled billboards to be placed next to motorways was in the last year for which figures are available. [222683]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Business Rate (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the business rate for Chorley is forecast to be in 2005–06; and what the rate is in 2004–05. [222439]

Mr. Raynsford: The net business rate yield for Chorley for 2005–06 is forecast to be £18.187 million, compared with £16.840 million that was forecast for 2004–05.

Council Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the level of council tax receipts raised in England was in each year since 1997–98. [219909]

Mr. Raynsford: The figures requested are tabled as follows. Figures for 2004–05 are not yet available on the same basis.

Council tax receipts

	£ million
1997–98	9,570
1998–99	10,579
1999–2000	11,457
2000–01	12,242
2001–02	13,209
2002–03	14,510
2003–04	16,392

Note:
The amounts shown are total receipts, irrespective of the year to which they relate. They exclude amounts funded from council tax benefit.
Source:
QRC4 returns

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what exemptions from council tax apply for narrow boats away from their moorings; and when guidance was last issued on this matter to local authorities. [221897]

Mr. Raynsford: A mooring occupied by a boat which is somebody's sole or main residence is deemed to be a "dwelling" for council tax purposes and will therefore attract a council tax liability in the same way as other domestic types of property. Under Class R of The Council Tax (Exempt Dwellings) Order 1992 (as amended) a dwelling consisting of a mooring which is not occupied by a boat is exempt. This exemption came into force on 1 April 1994. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not issued any guidance on this matter.

Departmental Policies

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Witney constituency, the effects on Rochdale of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [217366]

Yvette Cooper: Along with other Government Departments, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is committed to improving the lives of people across the whole of the UK. For example, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is determined that everyone should have the opportunity to have a decent home, and since 1997 we have reduced the number of non-decent homes nationally by 1 million.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister provides grant funding that benefits the Rochdale constituency through a number of programmes.

For example, over the period 2001–06 Rochdale has been allocated £20.7 million of Neighbourhood Renewal Fund resources to help the local authority, in collaboration with the Local Strategic Partnership, improve services in the most deprived neighbourhoods in the area.

More broadly, since 1997 we have been able to increase the total amount of Government grant given to local authorities by £22.6 billion. This is a 33 per cent. increase in real terms. Rochdale council has received an average annual increase in formula grant since 1997 of 5.3 per cent.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk/.

Housing

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) private, (b) public sector key worker, (c) private sector key worker and (d) social housing homes are to be built on each of the redundant NHS sites now controlled by his Department. [222042]

Keith Hill: My right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for Health announced in April 2004 that a portfolio of around 100 surplus NHS sites would be transferred to help deliver the objectives of the sustainable communities plan. It is expected that the first of these sites will transfer to English Partnerships shortly. Many of the sites will be suitable for the provision of affordable homes for sale and will include an element of social housing.

The future use of each site and development proposals where appropriate will be determined in consultation with the relevant local planning authority as part of the normal planning process.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is continuing to develop a First Time Buyers Initiative as recently announced in our 'Five Year Plan—Sustainable Communities: Homes for All'. We plan to deliver 15,000 homes under the initiative by 2010, half of which will be for key public service workers and the other half for individuals and families recommended by Regional Housing Boards. Details about where these houses will be built have not yet been announced.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many affordable housing units were built or procured through the Housing Corporation Approved Development Programme and Challenge Fund in London in each year since 1997–98, broken down by (a) mixed funded social rented housing, (b) temporary social rented housing, (c) homebuy general market purchase, (d) homebuy general new build, (e) mixed funded general low cost ownership for sale, (f) miscellaneous works to registered social landlord (RSL) stock, (g) reimprovement to rented RSL stock, (h) works-only rehabilitation of rented RSL stock, (i) works-only rehabilitation of RSL stock for sale, (j) intermediate rented accommodation for key workers, (k) homebuy market purchase for key workers, (l) homebuy new build for key workers, (m) the London Challenge Teacher Market Purchase Homebuy, (n) mixed funded sale for key workers and (o) starter home initiative. [222371]

Keith Hill: The information requested on the number of dwellings built or procured in London through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme and Challenge Fund by the various categories listed in each year since 1997–98 is being collated. I will write to my hon. Friend and make a copy available in the Library of the House.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much Housing Corporation Approved Development Programme and Challenge Fund funding has been spent on (a) mixed funded social rented housing, (b) temporary social rented housing, (c) homebuy general market purchase, (d) homebuy general new build, (e) mixed funded low cost home ownership for sale, (f) miscellaneous works to registered social landlord (RSL) stock, (g) reimprovement to rented RSL stock, (h) works-only rehabilitation of rented RSL stock, (i) works-only rehabilitation of RSL stock for sale, (j) intermediate rented accommodation for key workers, (k) homebuy market purchase for key workers, (l) homebuy new build for key workers, (m) the London Challenge Teacher Market Purchase Homebuy, (n) mixed funded sale for key workers and (o) starter home initiative in London in each year since 1997–98. [222372]

Keith Hill: The information requested on funding in London through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme and Challenge Fund by the various categories listed in each year since 1997–98 is being collated. I will write to my hon. Friend and make a copy available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when Mrs. Lea Rowles of Wylie Court, Sittingbourne will receive her refund from Swale Housing Association. [222368]

Keith Hill: This is a private matter between Mrs. Lea Rowles of Wylie Court, Sittingbourne and Swale Housing Association. I understand that Swale Housing Association are currently investigating this matter and will be in contact with Mrs. Rowles shortly.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authority properties were sold under the right to buy in each London borough in each year since 1996–97; and what the average discount per dwelling was in each case. [221426]

Keith Hill: The annual number of right to buy sales of council dwellings reported by each London borough and the annual average right to buy discount per sale since 1996–97 have been made available in the Library of the House.

Local Authority Grants (Southend)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will use Department of Health patient registration figures as a measure of population for the purpose of calculating local authority grants for Southend-on-Sea Borough Council. [222346]

Mr. Raynsford: No. When calculating formula grant allocations, we use the best and most up-to-date data that are available on a consistent basis across all authorities. In the case of population, these are the 2003 mid-year estimates produced by the Office for National Statistics (ONS).

Data from GP lists are useful for estimating migration, but are not designed to measure population. They are subject to a number of potential flaws. For example, very few international emigrants de-register when leaving the country. GP lists are also prone to duplicate registrations and there can often be a delay in removing names following a death.

Local Government Finance (London)

Ms Buck: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the real terms (a) percentage and (b) cash changes in total external support to (i) Westminster city council and (ii) the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea were in each year between 1992–93 and 2005–06. [221614]

Mr. Raynsford: It is most appropriate to calculate year-on-year changes against the previous year's grant adjusted for changes in funding and function so as to give a like-for-like comparison. However adjusted grant data is available only from 1997–98 onwards. Please note therefore that the data for the period 1992–93 to 1997–98 is on an unadjusted basis while the data for the period 1998–99 onwards is on an adjusted basis.

Local Government Pension Scheme

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations and meetings he has had with Unison regarding the Local Government Pension Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [222135]

Phil Hope [holding answer 16 March 2005]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 23 February 2005, Official Report, columns 645–46W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle). Further meetings and discussion have taken place since, the last of which was on 10 March. These have been of a constructive nature, looking into the long-term issues relating to the Local Government Pension Scheme.

Regional Government

Mr. Flook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the budget of each Regional Assembly was in each of the last three years; what the administrative costs were in each year; and what the costs were of the other functions co-ordinated by the secretariat of each Assembly in each year. [221270]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Regional Assemblies are voluntary bodies that have been designated to undertake specific functions on behalf of Government. The total level of Government grant in support of these functions for the period 2002–05 is tabled as follows.

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
North East	600,000	1,408,000	1,708,000
North West	600,000	1,837,000	2,536,000
Yorkshire and the Humber	600,000	1,655,000	1,923,000
West Midlands	600,000	1,671,000	2,071,000
East Midlands	600,000	1,631,000	2,056,000
East	600,000	1,874,000	2,112,000
South East	600,000	2,186,000	3,280,000
South West	600,000	1,613,000	2,101,000
English Regions Network	200,000	200,000	200,000
	5,000,000	14,075,000	17,987,000

Regional Assemblies may also receive funding support from other organisations including local authorities. Details of 'administrative costs' and the cost of 'other functions co-ordinated by the Secretariat of each Assembly' are not kept centrally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost has been of financing the South East England Regional Assembly in each of the last five years. [222050]

Mr. Raynsford: The total grant made by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to the South East England Regional Assembly in each of the years since 2001–02, when it was first introduced was:

2001–02	500,000
2002–03	600,000
2003–04	2,186,000
2004–05	3,280,000

The increase in funding from 2003–04 was granted in recognition of the Assembly's role as Regional Planning Body for the South East of England within the new planning system. This role involved additional statutory responsibilities that were placed on them by the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004.

Social Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the statement of 3 March 2005, Official Report, column 358WH, if he will publish the evidence he has received from local authorities indicating that the separation of management and strategic function is delivering better services to tenants in social housing. [221629]

Keith Hill: The Government's response to the Select Committee report on Decent Homes set out that the separation of management and strategic functions delivers better services to tenants in social housing. This was based on the findings of the Audit Commission report 'Housing After Transfer: the Local Authority Role', which was published in December 2002.

In addition, the Government's response drew on the quarterly reviews undertaken by the National Federation of ALMOs (NFA) and HouseMark, which demonstrate the increasing levels of tenant satisfaction where homes are managed by an Arm's Length Management Organisation (ALMO).

Copies of the Government's response, and the Audit Commission report, are available in the Library of the House. The findings of the NFA/HouseMark reviews are available to subscribers to the HouseMark website.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Accidents

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many accidents occurred at her departmental premises in each of the last five years involving (a) members of her Department's staff and (b) members of the public. [222571]

Mr. Caborn: Accidents at work are reported by means of accident report books.

	Number of reported accidents
2000	3
2001	2
2002	2
2003	1
2004	3
2005 (To date)	1

No member of the public has been seen to have an accident or has reported an accident. None of the accidents to the Department's staff have required more than a sticking plaster or have led to an absence from work.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she publishes data for the number of accidents at work involving employees of her Department; and if she will make a statement. [222578]

Mr. Caborn: In 2004 there were three reported accidents, and to date in 2005 there has been one, none of which have required medical attention or resulted in absence from work.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements for monitoring accidents at work involving members of staff of her Department are in place; and if she will make a statement. [222617]

Mr. Caborn: In accordance with Health and Safety Executive guidance an Accident Report Book is provided in a central point on each floor. Completed pages are detached and forwarded to the Departmental Safety officer for collation and any action needed.

BBC

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department will be represented at the Factual TV Commissioning Conference being held as part of the BBC Charter Review in London on 18 March; and if she will make a statement. [221319]

Estelle Morris: DCMS will not be represented at the Factual TV Commissioning Conference being organised by Broadcast, which has no direct links to Charter review. However I am grateful for all the input we have received from members of the broadcasting industry to BBC Charter review.

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether Ministers in her Department have issued written instructions to override her Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221106]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the estimated (a) market value and (b) annual rental value is of each property owned by her Department; who the occupier is of each property; and if she will make a statement. [221010]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS does not own any property that is able to earn rental income.

Departmental Policies (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Tamworth constituency, the effects on the constituency of changes to her Department's policies since 1997. [221929]

Mr. Caborn: The Department's aim is to improve the quality of life for everyone through cultural and sporting activities, to support the pursuit of excellence and to champion the tourism, creative and leisure industries. The Department's policies and actions have had a significant impact on Tamworth since 2 May 1997.

In 2002 we launched the first ever comprehensive national physical education, school sport and club links strategy with an investment of £459 million. To achieve our challenging targets for increased participation in sport and physical activity, we have invested in thousands of new and refurbished public sports facilities. Sports facilities in Tamworth have benefited from two Sport England Lottery grants totalling £582,152.

We have increased our national funding to the arts in real terms by 60 per cent. from £199 million in 1998–99 to £367 million in 2004–05. Between 1998–99 and 2003–04 Arts Council England, west midlands grants increased from £5.6 million to £32.5 million. In 2005–06 the total Arts Council England investment in regularly funded organisations will be £35.4 million. Tamworth has benefited from grants to arts projects, organisations and individuals, including Black Country Touring and Arts Alive.

Schools in Tamworth also benefit from the Staffordshire Youth Music Action Zone, known as Make Some Noise. Since its establishment in 2001 Make Some Noise has received three grants totalling £804,800 enabling it to reach 6,000 young people through local music projects and events.

Culture Online was launched in 2002 to increase access to, and participation in, arts and culture. Many of its projects are aimed at children of school age and at audiences that might not otherwise participate in arts and culture, including those who do not easily have access to arts and culture, people from deprived communities and people with particular educational or physical needs. People in Tamworth will be among those who benefit from Culture Online. Between 2002 and 2004, £13 million was allocated to fund 20 Culture Online projects.

Renaissance in the regions has funded the appointment of a museums development officer to support museums in the west midlands regional hub. It has provided £90,000 in 2004–05 for additional museums development support through the museums development fund and the hub's regional development fund to the Marches Curators group, of which Staffordshire is a part. This will be increased to £155,000 in 2005–06. Training courses in leadership and conservation have been organised through the hub and a member of Tamworth council's staff has been seconded to Birmingham city council as part of a skills sharing initiative.

Through our commitment to public service broadcasting we have helped to foster an environment in which a creative, commercially successful broadcasting industry provides a wide range of UK-made, high quality original programmes catering for all viewers and listeners. We have ensured a secure funding base for the BBC and Channel 4, while giving them the freedom to develop commercial operations which complement and support their public service remit The Communications Act 2003 includes provisions to ensure that public service broadcasting will continue to have a key role to play in the digital future.

In November 2000 we introduced free television licences for people aged 75 or over. Information on the number of beneficiaries by constituency is not available. However, according to Department for Work and Pensions records, the number of households in Tamworth with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in 2003–04 was 3,865.

We have changed the licensing laws to allow people to hold and attend commercial dances on Sunday, to make it easier for restaurants to open an hour later, and to relax the alcohol licensing hours from 11 pm on new year's eve to 11 am on new year's day in all future years; and we have given the police greater powers to take action against under-age drinking and disorderly and noisy licensed premises. The Licensing Act 2003, when fully implemented, will introduce a streamlined, consistent and fair licensing regime for the provision of alcohol, public entertainment and late night refreshment. It will provide greater choice for consumers, bring regeneration and increased employment opportunities and protect local residents whose lives have been blighted by disturbance and anti-social behaviour.

The Gambling Bill will, when implemented, transfer responsibility for licensing gambling premises to local authorities. Local people and businesses will be able to make representations about applications for licenses and local authorities will be able to decide not to issue licenses for casino premises. These changes will give local communities, including those in Tamworth, a greater say in the regulation of gambling in their area.

Tourism in Tamworth has benefited from Government-funded marketing activity. In April 2003 we established VisitBritain with a new domestic marketing remit for England, and we gave strategic responsibility for tourism development to the regional development agencies, including Advantage West Midlands. These changes, together with VisitBritain's successful marketing activities in promoting Britain abroad as an attractive tourist destination, benefit all parts of the country, including Tamworth .

In common with all those in the United Kingdom, the public library branches in Tamworth are connected to the internet through the People's Network which was funded through a £120 million Lottery grant and which has put all the United Kingdom's public libraries on-line. In addition, the Department is funding the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council with £5 million over three years to implement the Framework for the future action plan and library improvement programme, which is designed to encourage improvement across the public libraries sector in England.

The Department has been an energetic advocate of the community value of public libraries. In 1998–1999 the DCMS/Wolfson public libraries challenge fund allocated funding to the community learning network partnership in Staffordshire. This award of £49,000 was granted in order to assist the provision of "Open for learning" centres in libraries across Staffordshire to support self-study and distance learning. Tamworth Library was one such Centre and received a proportion of the funding.

Information from the National Lottery distributors indicates that since 2 May 1997 Tamworth has benefited from 175 awards totalling just over £4.8 million. Of these, 23 awards worth over £800.000 were made by the new opportunities fund which was established by the Government in 1999. The new opportunities fund merged with the community fund in June 2004 to form the Big Lottery Fund.

Gambling Bill (Hospice Lotteries)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that the provisions contained in the Gambling Bill do not adversely affect weekly lotteries operated by the hospice movement. [221716]

Mr. Caborn: We have already brought forward amendments to the Bill, following representations by a number of hospice charities which now promote "ticketless lotteries", to ensure that they will not have to change current practice. The Bill approved by the Commons on 25 January incorporates these amendments.

ITV Regional News

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions have taken place between her Department, Ofcom and ITV on maintaining regional news and current affairs programmes in the north-west. [222150]

Estelle Morris: My Department has been briefed by Ofcom and ITV on the implications for regional news and current affairs of Ofcom's review of Public Service Broadcasting.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what penalties Ofcom can impose on ITV for failing to maintain Charter undertakings. [222151]

Estelle Morris: ITV is not established by a Royal Charter, but holds broadcasting licences for its channels, including certain of the regional Channel 3 licences which contain public service broadcasting obligations. Under the Communications Act 2003 there is a range of sanctions available to Ofcom for breaches of licence conditions which depend upon the nature of the breach, for example requirements to broadcast statements of findings, to impose more detailed regulation, fines or licence variation or termination.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions have taken place between her Department and Ofcom regarding ITV's performance. [222152]

Estelle Morris: No specific discussion has taken place, but my Department and Ofcom meet regularly to discuss a variety of broadcasting and other matters.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions have taken place between her Department and Ofcom on the (a) quantity and (b) quality of ITV news and current affairs programming in the North West. [222153]

Estelle Morris: These are matters principally for decision by Ofcom and ITV, who have briefed the Department on them in connection with Ofcom's review of public service broadcasting and as background to the debate on 2 March.

Licences (Sporting Events)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangements have been put in place for major sporting events to obtain a licence under the provisions of the Licensing Act 2003. [221353]

Mr. Caborn: No special arrangements have been put in place for those organising major sporting events where they wish to conduct licensable activities. They will be subject to the same provisions under the Licensing Act 2003 with regard to applying for permissions as other organisations or individuals. Of course, outdoor sporting events (with the exception of boxing and wrestling entertainment) are not in themselves licensable activities under the 2003 Act.

Museum Grants

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grants have been paid by her Department to each National Museum in the last eight years; and what grants are planned for 2005–06. [222043]

Estelle Morris: The grant-in-aid provided by DCMS to each of its sponsored museums and galleries since 1997–98, including that planned for 2005–06, is set out in the table.

Nightclubs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research her Department has commissioned regarding a possible link between the incidence of alcohol-related deaths and licensing hours of nightclubs. [221254]

Mr. Caborn: The Government intend to monitor the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 but have not commissioned, and do not intend to commission at this time, any specific research relating to a possible link between the incidence of alcohol-related deaths and the licensing hours of nightclubs. However, the evaluation which we will be conducting into the impact of licensing reform on crime and disorder will seek to establish whether levels of violence and disorder occurring in and around licensed premises have changed as a result of flexible opening hours.

Science Museum

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Director of the Science Museum on the proposed closure of its library. [222369]

Estelle Morris: Following discussions with DCMS, the Trustees of the Science Museum have informed DCMS that they have decided for the time being, to continue the Science Museum Library's presence in the Imperial College building, South Kensington. This will enable the Trustees to give further consideration to the options, taking into account the feedback received from a wide range of interested parties.

Switchco

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent progress has been made towards the establishment of Switchco. [221158]

Estelle Morris: Good progress has been made on the establishment of Switchco. Stakeholders are now working on the structure and remit of the switchover implementation body, and expect it to be in place in the second quarter of this year.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Tsunami

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of steps taken by the Indian Government to ensure tsunami relief aid reaches the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. [221816]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The geographical position of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, and related security considerations, meant that the initial Government of India (GoI) response to the relief and rehabilitation requirements of the area took longer than that for affected mainland areas. The GoI has allocated around £100 million pounds in financial assistance to the islands following the tsunami. Considerable support has also been committed in terms of military personnel and logistical support. The GoI has also allowed NGOs (including international NGOs) access to a number of the islands to undertake relief and rehabilitation work. UNICEF and the United Nations Development Programme have a presence in the islands, and DFID is providing £476,000 support to the Voluntary Health association of India (VHAI) to undertake relief work and livelihoods rehabilitation in Little Andaman.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how much aid has been contributed by the UK Government to relief and reconstruction work in the Maldives since the tsunami disaster; [222065]

(2) what (a) financial support and (b) transport facilities the UK Government have provided to ship relief supplies to the Maldives following the tsunami disaster; [222066]

(3) what funds the UK Government have paid to UK-based aid organisations for relief and reconstruction work in the Maldives since the tsunami disaster. [222692]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID channelled £2 million through the regional appeal of the International Federation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, which are present and meeting needs in the Maldives, though it is not possible at this stage to say how much of our regional support went to a specific country. Likewise, DFID has committed $40 million to the United Nations Flash Appeal for the region. Part of our Flash Appeal commitment does include support specifically earmarked for the Maldives. £3,305,057 channelled through the World Health Organisation included assistance to the Maldives, as did £4,000,000 channelled through the United Nations Children's Fund. £500,000 channelled through the United Nations Development Programme was entirely for activities in the Maldives, to help restore livelihoods, including assistance to households involved in agriculture, tourism, fishing, light manufacturing and other sectors.

In addition to support to United Nations programmes, DFID also financed a flight for International Health Partners carrying donated drugs from the pharmaceutical industry to the Maldives. This was at a cost of £5,221.

Other in-kind assistance to the Maldives included a flight chartered by DFID at a cost of £81,000, to deliver water donated by Scottish Water. DFID also airlifted two landing craft and plant machinery, along with training support, at a total cost of £550,000. In addition, DFID seconded a water and sanitation engineer to the United Nations Children Fund for three months to support its work in the Maldives, at a cost of £28,000.

Microbicide Development Programme

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support he is giving to the Microbicide Development Programme; what support he expects to give to the Programme after 2006; what steps he is taking to encourage other countries to offer similar levels of support; and if he will make a statement. [221813]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK Government are a strong supporter of microbicide development. From October 2001 to 31 September 2006, DFID is providing a grant of £16 million to the Microbicide Development Programme (MDP) co-ordinated by the Medical Research Councils Clinical Trials Unit and Imperial College. A proposal for a Phase III trial (where Microbicides are tested on women) to be undertaken by MDP is currently being considered.

Tackling HIV and AIDS will be a priority for the UK G8 and EU presidencies, particularly maintaining momentum on prevention through existing and new technologies.

We are currently engaged with the EC on the development of its new revised "Programme of Action to Confront HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria through External Action (PfA) 2007–11" which is its framework for tackling AIDS outside the EU. A key aspect of this will be to encourage the EU 's role in development of effective new technologies including Microbicides as part of comprehensive prevention strategies.

Small Grants Scheme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many organisations benefit from his Department's Small Grants Scheme; and in which countries. [221759]

Mr. Gareth Thomas [holding answer 16 March 2005]: The countries in which the Small Grants Scheme has operated over the past five-years are detailed as follows. We do not hold the information centrally on which organisations have benefited from the Small Grants Scheme and this information could be obtained only by incurring a disproportionate cost.

Uganda

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the effect of the Lord's Resistance Army operating in Sudan and Uganda on (a) the human rights of the Ugandan population and (b) the stability of Uganda's government; and if he will make a statement. [222023]

Hilary Benn: The Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) has seriously undermined the human rights of the people of northern Uganda. Its abuses include murder, mutilation, abduction, sexual violence and torture. Many of the victims are women, children and the elderly.

LRA activity has had minimal effect on the stability of Uganda's central Government but it has disrupted local government in the North and seriously hindered poverty reduction efforts and the delivery of basic services to the population.

HOME DEPARTMENT

2 Marsham Street

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the expected opening date of the new Home Office buildings in 2 Marsham street is. [205343]

Mr. Charles Clarke: A date for the official opening of 2 Marsham street has not yet been set. The Home Office took possession of the building on 26 January 2005. Staff began moving in on 7 February 2005. The occupation of the building will be phased over a period of three months.

Anti-terrorist Legislation

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his policy to allow information obtained under torture from British citizens held by another country in prosecutions carried out under anti-terrorist legislation. [205899]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government unreservedly condemns the use of torture and has made it an important part of its foreign policy to pursue its eradication worldwide.

The Government are not aware of any proceedings in a United Kingdom court in which any statement which is established to have been made as a result of torture has been invoked as evidence, except against a person accused of torture.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Department plans to undertake further research on the situation in the countries of origin of lesbian and gay people making asylum claims. [221804]

Mr. Browne: The country information material produced by the Home Office, for use by officials in the asylum determination process, is compiled from up to date information from a wide range of well recognised sources about the situation in the country of origin.

These sources include intergovernmental bodies (such as UN agencies), governmental sources (including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Department for International Development as well as other Governments) and human rights organisations (such as Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch and International Crisis Group). Country reports, which are produced biannually on the top 20 asylum intake countries, include a section on the treatment of homosexuals and lesbians, which usually draws upon material produced by organisations focusing on gay issues such as the International Lesbian and Gay Association.

In addition, case-specific research is undertaken as required where additional detailed information is needed to decide an individual asylum or human rights application.

There are no plans at present to undertake further specific research regarding the treatment of gays and lesbians.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is provided to officials dealing with asylum applications regarding the grounds for granting refugee status to applicants who have fled persecution because of their homosexuality. [221806]

Mr. Browne: Training is given to asylum caseworkers on making decisions based upon the criteria set out in the 1951 UN Convention relating to the Status of Refugees. Homosexuality is not specifically mentioned under the 1951 Convention, but in the training of asylum caseworkers it is advised that homosexuality in certain limited circumstances may constitute a significant factor in the recognition of a particular social group under the terms of the Convention

Under the terms of the Convention a refugee is a person who can demonstrate a well-founded fear of persecution in his country of origin for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances homosexual people from Jamaica applying for asylum in the UK would be returned to their country of origin. [221815]

Mr. Browne: Asylum and human rights claims by Jamaican homosexuals are, like those of all claimants, from all countries, considered on their individual merits in accordance with our obligations under the 1951 UN Refugee Convention and the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). If the claimant meets the definition of a refugee in the 1951 Refugee Convention, they are granted asylum. If they do not qualify for asylum, but there are other circumstances that make them particularly vulnerable and engage our obligations under the ECHR, they are granted humanitarian protection or discretionary leave. If an application is refused, and any appeal is unsuccessful, then we expect the individual concerned to leave the UK voluntarily. If they do not, we consider that it is entirely reasonable for us to enforce the return of that individual.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are applied in granting humanitarian protection to individuals refused asylum; and by what means applications for such grant may be made. [222349]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 16 March 2005]: Humanitarian Protection (HP) is granted to individuals who would, if removed, face in the country of return a serious risk to life or person arising from:

the death penalty

unlawful killing

torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Asylum claimants are automatically considered for HP if they fail to qualify for refugee status. They will be granted leave under the HP policy if they meet the criteria set out above and are not excluded on the basis that there are serious reasons for considering that they:

fall within Articles 1 F*(a)* or 1 F*(c)* of the Refugee Convention have committed a serious crime in the UK or overseas are a danger to national security.

Individuals may also be excluded from HP where this is considered appropriate in light of their character, conduct or associations.

There is further information on the HP policy and detailed guidance on its application in the Asylum Policy Instruction on Humanitarian Protection which is published on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 10 March 2005, Official Report, column 1959W, how (a) e-Borders and (b) identity cards will enable more precise monitoring of the whereabouts of failed Iranian asylum seekers in the future. [222360]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 16 March 2005]: The five-year Immigration Strategy that we announced on 7 February contained details of our plans through e-Borders to introduce an electronic system of counting in and out visitors to the UK. Automated electronic checks will record people's movements to provide a greatly enhanced passenger movement audit with significantly more reliable inbound and outbound data information than any of the border agencies have been able to obtain in the past.

The Immigration Service is taking forward a number of projects under the umbrella of the e-Borders programme. Advance passenger information combined with new technology will allow passenger information to be collected on departure from the UK. The departure information will provide vital management and intelligence information, which may then be reconciled against information held on failed asylum seekers (FAS). A number of other Government agencies, such as the Department of Health, Department of Work and Pensions and the Inland Revenue have also expressed an interest in the potential benefits of a comprehensive passenger movement record.

The benefits of introducing a system for reconciling a passenger's departure from the UK against his/her arrival works only with a fully integrated comprehensive system covering all passengers and routes (including air, sea and rail). Such a system is planned as part of the full e-Borders solution. It is not intended to issue identity cards to failed asylum seekers. However, by reducing the opportunity for failed asylum seekers to work illegally, ID cards will make it less practical to remain in the UK as a failed asylum seeker.

Burglary (Sentencing)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of burglars convicted for a third offence received a custodial sentence in the most recent year for which information is available; and what the average length of sentence for those sentenced to custody was. [216331]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 21 February 2005]: The table gives the numbers sentenced for their third burglary offence. The numbers are for a four week period in 2001, derived from the Offenders Index. The figures include attempted burglaries, as it is not possible to distinguish between an actual and attempted burglary on the Offenders Index.

Burglars convicted for their third offence (by type of burglary)

	Burglary in a dwelling[1]	Burglary not in a dwelling[2]
Number sentenced (for the third offence)	99	89
Number sentenced to custody	75	42
Proportion sentenced to custody (percentage)	76	47

[1] Includes only previous convictions for burglary in a dwelling. Please note that definition and coverage is different from s111 of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000.

[2] Includes only previous convictions for burglary not in a dwelling

Civil Service

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil service staff have failed security vetting procedures in each year since 1997. [204531]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Separate figures are not kept to differentiate between civil servants and non-civil servants who have been refused security vetting by the Home Office.

Community Sentences

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) community service and (b) restorative justice sentences were imposed in (i) Redbridge, (ii) Waltham Forest, (iii) London and (iv) England in each of the last three years; what proportion of all sentences in each area each represented in each year; what plans he has to encourage increased use of each type of sentence; and if he will make a statement. [221247]

Paul Goggins: Information on community sentences for the years 2000 to 2003 is contained in table A. Statistics for 2004 will be published in the latter part of this year.

Restorative justice can form part of referral orders and reparation orders, which are disposals for juveniles. The Youth Justice Board has set a key performance indicator (KPI) for Youth Offending Teams (YOTS) which seeks to ensure that at least 75 per cent. of victims of youth crime referred to YOTS are offered the opportunity to participate in restorative processes by 2005. Table B gives performance against this KPI.

The Government are keen to encourage the use of restorative justice throughout the adult criminal justice system. The Criminal Justice Act 2003 allows for restorative justice to be part of an offender's sentence, permitting sentencers to include it in activity requirements imposed as part of a Community Order. This will be piloted in due course. The Act also allows for the use of restorative justice in the new Conditional Caution. We are about to issue implementation guidance on restorative justice for Local Criminal Justice Boards and their constituent agencies.

As part of the reform of the sentencing structure in the Criminal Justice Act 2003, current community sentences for adults, including the community punishment order, will be replaced by a single generic community order with a range of possible requirements. Courts will then be able to choose different elements to make up a bespoke community order. Technological advances, such as electronic monitoring provide innovative ways to monitor compliance, reduce offending and ensure community sentences are not a soft option. The new community order will be available from 4 April 2005 and will apply only to offences committed on or after that date.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reconviction rates were for community-based sentences in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) type of sentence and (b) offence committed. [217732]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The probability that an offender will be reconvicted is strongly associated with a number of factors such as age and previous criminal history. It is not appropriate to compare reconviction rates over time as allowances need to be made for any change in the characteristics of offenders being given community-based sentences. For instance, if young offenders were proportionally more numerous in some years than they were in others, we would predict an increase in the actual rate as younger offenders are more likely to be reconvicted.

Home Office Online Report 59/04 controlled for such changes in characteristics, and also excluded the impact of more rigorous enforcement of breaches by the Probation Service. It found that, when compared to the reconviction rate that is predicted given their characteristics, there was a reduction of 2 per cent. in the reconviction rate between 1997 and 2001 for adult offenders given community sentences, although this reduction was not statistically significant

The tables give unadjusted reconviction rates for those receiving community based sentences in each year since 1997, broken down by type of sentence and offence committed. The figures given are for those aged 16 and over and show the percentage reconvicted within two years. Figures broken down by offence are not readily available for the years 1997 and 1998.

Reconviction rates within 2 years of commencing a community sentence under supervision of the Probation Service, since 1997, by type of order given

Notes:
1. Only reconvictions for standard list offences are counted as reconvictions.
2. The original offence is the principal offence at conviction. This is the conviction that incurs the most severe sentence at each court appearance.

Counter-terrorism

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the update provided at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 19 November by the EU Counter Terrorist Co-ordinator on the EU's role in the fight against terrorism; and what documents were referred to during that update. [207091]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Minister with responsibility for Europe (Caroline Flint) attended the lunch on 19 November at which the EU Counter Terrorist Co-ordinator Mr. Gijs De Vries gave a brief oral update on work under way. He underlined the importance implementing the agreed measures and legislation and in this context welcomed: the Revised EU Action Plan to Combat Terrorism; working to combat terrorist financing through the new EU strategy; an EU solidarity programme for management of the consequences of terrorist attacks; a strategy for integrating CT issues into EU external relations policy.

All of these papers were subsequently agreed at the JHA Council on 2 December and then at the European Council on 17 December.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many delegates registered for his Department's conference on 18 January on protection against chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear terrorist threats have indicated on the application questionnaire a background in each relevant discipline; what guidance has been given by the security services in the selection of delegates to the conference; and what the role of the conference is in respect of tenders for work on countering CBRN threats. [208240]

Mr. Charles Clarke: All applicants inquiring about the UK CBRN Science and Technology Bidders Conference were asked to give brief details of their main areas of expertise or interest. The responses given were varied and it was not possible to categorise applicants clearly by a particular discipline. The applications were checked by a small cross-government scientific panel that judged whether the areas of scientific or technological interest given on each application indicated an ability to contribute to Government requirements.

In general when deciding which applicants should be invited, the panel showed a greater bias towards applicants indicating experience or an obvious interest in chemical and biological issues, given the nature of the conference agenda.

It has been the established policy of successive Governments neither to confirm nor to deny questions concerning the activities of the intelligence and security agencies.

Delegates are being asked to submit outline technical proposals in the appropriate areas following the conference and the most promising of these will lead to invitations to work them up into formal, costed projects that we hope could begin during 2005–06.

Country Information and Policy Unit Reports

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what mechanisms organisations outside the Government may challenge the accuracy of information in his Department's Country Information and Policy Unit reports. [221805]

Mr. Browne: Any organisations or individuals wishing to challenge or comment on the country information material produced by the Home Office may contact the independent Advisory Panel on Country Information. The Advisory Panel was established under the Nationality Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 to provide expert external scrutiny of the Home Office's country information material and advice to help ensure that this is as accurate and balanced as possible.

The Advisory Panel welcomes feedback from all sources. Information about the work of the Panel and contact details are provided on its website at www.apci.co.uk

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to ensure the quality and accuracy of information in the Country Information and Policy Unit's report on Algeria. [221807]

Mr. Browne: Standard instructions are given to the Country Information and Policy Unit (CIPU) staff about ensuring that the Reports are as accurate, balanced, impartial and up to date as possible. All Country Reports by CIPU go through a quality assurance procedure that includes internal scrutiny, and consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, before issue. In addition the independent Advisory Panel on Country Information provides rigorous external scrutiny of country information material produced by the Home Office and makes recommendations to help ensure that it is of the highest quality. The Advisory Panel rightly considered it essential that the Home Office's country information material should not only be objective in fact, but should also be perceived as being objective and have the confidence of all its users. That is why I announced on 8 September 2004 that in future, the production of country information material used by the Home Office will be undertaken by a country information unit dedicated solely to that function.

The Home Office Country Report on Algeria was last updated in April 2004. No further update was issued in October 2004 because Algeria does not currently come within the criteria we use when determining for which countries we produce regular reports.

Home Detention Curfew

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been released on the home detention curfew scheme since January 1999; what the categories of offences were for which they had been sentenced; how many such prisoners were released in each category; and what the average sentence received was in relation to each category. [218989]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system for the period 28 January 1999 to 31 January 2005, is provided in the table.

Investigations suggest that offence codes are recorded incorrectly for around 5 per cent. of all home detention curfew (HDC) discharges. This is due to the way the Prison Service IT system deals with a prisoner's record if he/she is returned to custody for committing further offences prior to the licence expiry date of the original sentence. The new offence code overrides the original offence code under which the prisoner was released on HDC.

The table includes releases relating to sexual offenders. These were eligible to be considered for release under HDC until March 2001. Since then, prisoners subject to the registration requirements of part 1 of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 (now replaced by part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003) are statutorily excluded from the scheme and all other prisoners convicted of a sexual offence are presumed unsuitable for release on HDC. In addition, since 14 July 2003 prisoners convicted of certain serious offences, including offences involving the death of the victim, attempted murder, threats to kill and racially aggravated offences, are presumed unsuitable for release unless there are exceptional circumstances.

HDC discharges by offence type[1]—28 January 1999 to 31 January 2005

	Number	Average sentence (months)
Total	106,356	14.5
Violence against the person	19,077	14.8
Sexual offences	78	12.0
Burglary	9,731	19.7
Robbery	5,133	27.9
Theft and handling	14,212	11.0
Fraud and forgery	7,409	13.4
Drugs offences	15,139	22.6
Motoring offences	17,148	5.5
Other[2]	18,409	12.8

1 Offence recorded on Prison Service IT system.
Investigations suggest that around 5 per cent. of offence types recorded on this system do not relate to the offence prisoners were released on HDC for, but relate to offences committed after release from prison and before their licence expiry date.
2 Includes the offence of bigamy.

Immigration

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the 35 main ports of entry to the United Kingdom, as defined by the Immigration Act 1971. [221091]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Statutory Instrument 1987/177 designated 35 ports of entry for the purposes of the Immigration Act 1971. These are as follows:

Seaports and Hoverports

Dover, Felixstowe, Folkestone, Harwich, Hull, London, Newhaven, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Ramsgate, Sheerness, Southampton and Tyne.

Airports

Aberdeen, Belfast, Birmingham, Bournemouth (Hurn), Bristol, Cardiff (Wales), East Midlands, Edinburgh, Gatwick London, Glasgow, Heathrow London, Leeds/Bradford, Liverpool, Luton, Manchester, Newcastle, Norwich, Prestwick, Southampton, Southend, Stansted London and Teesside.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the 35 main ports of entry to the United Kingdom are staffed 24 hours a day. [221093]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Of the 35 ports of entry designated in Statutory Instrument (SI)1987/177 (which designated ports of entry for the purposes of the 1971 Act), 11 are currently staffed 24 hours a day.

These are:

Airports

Birmingham, East Midlands, Gatwick, Glasgow, Heathrow, Liverpool, Luton, Manchester and Stansted.

Seaports

Harwich and Portsmouth.

Other ports are staffed to provide coverage in line with passenger services requiring immigration control.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants were found at each of the 35 main ports of entry to the United Kingdom in each year since 1997; and how many were found in total in each year. [221094]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Data are not available for 1997. Locally collated management information for 1998 to 2004 is provided in Table 1. These data may be subject to change and do not represent National Statistics. These figures relate predominately to clandestine entrants but may also include other categories of illegal entry.

Table 2 shows published data on the total number of persons against whom illegal entry action was initiated since 1997. Illegal entry action is initiated against those people who are detected having entered or attempted to enter the country clandestinely or by means of deception, either verbal or documentary. These figures include those illegal entrants detected both at ports of entry and inland.

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 5.
[2] Data were not of sufficient quality for publication in 2003, however it is estimated that 22,950 persons had illegal entry action initiated against them in this year. Due to poor data quality this is not an official statistic.
[3] Data for 2004 are not yet available. These will be published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Control of Immigration Statistics: United Kingdom, 2004" in summer 2005.

Official statistics on immigration matters are available from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants were picked up each year by patrol boats in UK waters in each year since 1997. [221163]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Although the UK Immigration Service mounts joint operations with other agencies on an intelligence led basis they do not routinely patrol UK waters.

The local port deals with any illegal immigrants detected in UK waters but statistics on these detections are not collated separately.

IND Training

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is provided to senior caseworkers in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to help them provide support and advice to junior officials. [221781]

Mr. Browne: Senior caseworkers will normally have had significant experience as asylum caseworkers and will have received the same training as caseworkers earlier in their careers.

In addition, all senior caseworkers have direct access to policy experts in the Asylum Policy Unit, country information specialists in the Country Information Policy Unit and, in appropriate cases, to legal advice from the Home Office Legal Advisers Branch.

Senior Caseworkers also have the opportunity to meet regularly with a wide range of external stakeholders to further augment their understanding of asylum policy and process.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the nature is of the training in the assessment of asylum claims which is provided to asylum caseworkers. [221782]

Mr. Browne: Asylum caseworkers are trained to make asylum decisions without discrimination and on their individual merits in accordance with the criteria set out in the 1951 UN convention relating to the status of refugees.

Training focuses on the skills, knowledge and ability required to make effective decisions based on the law. Caseworkers are instructed on how to identify an asylum claim and to then apply the salient facts to the legislation.

Infectious Diseases (UK Entrants)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been deported for carrying tuberculosis in each year since 1997. [217743]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures for the number of people removed or deported from the United Kingdom are published regularly and are available from the Home Office website www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

However, it is not possible to identify from the data how many are refused entry or deported because of health reasons.

John Lennon Airport

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many individuals entering the country with questionable identification have been detained at John Lennon airport but have subsequently absconded from the airport in the last 12 months; [207335]

(2) what the minimum number of Custom and Immigration officers on duty at John Lennon airport was in the last period for which figures are available; [207318]

(3) what representations have been made to his Department on detention arrangements for passengers believed to be trying to enter the country illegally at John Lennon airport; [207319]

(4) what discussions have taken place with (a) Peel Holdings and (b) operators of no frills airlines with regard to improving security at John Lennon airport. [207321]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration Service provides a 24-hour service at John Lennon airport. Two immigration officers are scheduled for duty throughout the period, except from 07.30 to 10.00 hours when there is one. This shift coverage takes into account the schedule of incoming flights.

There are no customs officers permanently based at Liverpool John Lennon airport. Customs attendance is determined on the basis of risk. Customs officers deploy to the airport in accordance with flight or passenger profiles or more specific intelligence. Mobile staff are deployed from the local area, or from the regional or national strike forces on a flexible basis in order to be able to respond to any identified risk. They attend selected arrivals for class 'A' drugs, revenue goods and other prohibited or restricted items, and selected departures for work in connection with the Proceeds of Crime Act. Therefore, there will be no customs staff on duty for some arrivals/departures, but a much larger number of mobile staff for others, where a risk has been identified.

The Immigration Service is working to identify and implement cost-effective improvements to ensure appropriate access to detention and escort facilities when required.

Peel Holdings, as the airport operator, has overall responsibility for the security of John Lennon airport. A representative from the Immigration Service attends regular meetings with Peel Holdings, the police, HM Customs and Excise and other control authority partners, to discuss new airline routes and airport development. The Immigration Service also attend a monthly multi-agency threat and risk assessment meeting with other security stakeholders to make accurate assessments of any threats to John Lennon airport.

Between April 2004 and January 2005 there have been three occasions where passengers whose identity was in doubt have absconded from the immigration control at John Lennon airport. To reduce the risk of this happening again, the Immigration Service are in negotiations to improve security at the immigration control there. Records of such absconders prior to April 2004 are not available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the parliamentary question reference 205820 tabled by the hon. Member for North Cornwall on 20 December 2004. [215856]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 10 February 2005]: I replied to the hon. Member on 20 January 2005, Official Report, column 368W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the question from the hon. Member for Portsmouth South, reference 200027. [216514]

Caroline Flint: I replied to the hon. Member on 16 March 2005, Official Report, column 65W.

Police (Convictions)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serving police officers were convicted of an offence in (a) England and Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Essex in each year since 1997, broken down by type of offence; and what the average sentence was in each case. [221249]

Ms Blears: It is not possible to identify the occupation of defendants on the Home Office Court Proceedings database, as the individual circumstances of the offence are not collected.

Police Funding

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the funding per head of population for each police authority in England and Wales is in 2004–05. [204799]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 28 February 2005, Official Report, column 1008W.

Police Surveillance

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the time taken to receive authorisation to enable police officers to undertake (a) covert and (b) directed surveillance of (i) named and (ii) as yet unidentified criminal associates of individuals under Part II of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. [221128]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The time taken by a police officer to make a written application for authorisation for covert directed surveillance and by an authorising officer to consider that application and, if appropriate to do so, grant the authorisation will depend on the circumstances of the specific investigation or operation. No estimate or assessment has been made by the Home Office of the average time involved.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his policy to require a police officer to obtain a new authorisation to undertake (a) covert and (b) directed surveillance of (i) named and (ii) as yet unidentified criminal associates of individuals if they were not originally named in authorisation of surveillance, under Part II of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. [221129]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Guidance on authorisation procedures is contained in the statutory code of practice on the use of covert surveillance, adopted by Parliament pursuant to section 71 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. Paragraph 2.8 provides guidance on circumstances when an investigation or operation unexpectedly interferes with the privacy of individuals not covered by the authorisation. The Code states

> "When the original authorisation may not be sufficient, consideration should be given to whether the authorisation needs to be amended and reauthorised or a new authorisation is required."

When the identities of previously unknown subjects or their associates become known they should be identified in a renewal authorisation, so long as it is consistent with the original authorisation. If the scope of the investigation or operation is to be broadened a new authorisation will be required.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what process of authorisation he requires a police officer to complete to undertake (a) covert and (b) directed surveillance of (i) named and (ii) as yet unidentified criminal associates, of individuals, under Part II of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. [221131]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Guidance on the use of covert direct surveillance by public authorities, and the authorisation procedures involved, is contained in the code of practice on covert surveillance adopted by Parliament pursuant to section 71 of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. The code of practice is available from TSO (The Stationery Office) (ISBN 0113412843) or on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/crimpol/crimreduc/regulation/codeofpractice/surveillance/index.html

Prison Programmes

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budgets for (a) offending behaviour programmes, (b) drug treatment and (c) basic skills education in prisons were in 2003–04; and what the budgets are for (i) 2004–05, (ii) 2005–06 and (iii) 2006–07. [201847]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We are unable to give a full answer as not all of the budgets for 2005–06, and 2006–07, have yet been fully delegated.

The Offending Behaviour Programmes include Sex Offender Programmes. We expect the final expenditure for 2003–04 to be in the region of £25 million, including private prisons. The budget for 2004–05 is £20.5 million.

Expenditure on Drug Treatment in 2003–04 was £38.250 million. The budget for 2004–05 is £51.436 million. The budget for 2005–06 is £61.216 million. These figures are for public prisons only. We do not have the figures for private prisons.

The expected final expenditure for Basic Skills Education in Prisons is £70 million in 2003–04 (or £82 million including Work Skills). The budget for 2004–05 is £85.3 million including Work Skills. These figures are for public prisons only. We do not have the figures for private prisons.

Queenborough Fisheries Trust

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the Charity Commission last examined the membership of the Queenborough Fisheries Trust; [221123]

(2) when the Charity Commission last examined the criteria for appointments to the board of trustees of the Queenborough Fisheries Trust. [221187]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Charity Commission has not had grounds for examining the membership or the criteria for trustee appointments of the Queenborough Fishery Trust. The Commission does not, and cannot routinely, involve itself in the internal administration of a charity unless a significant regulatory issue arises; internal administration is the responsibility of the charity trustees. The hon. Member is invited to contact the Chief Executive of the Charity Commission if he has any specific concerns regarding this charity or for further information.

Race Relations (Sikhs)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with Sikh representatives to discuss the problems of racist attacks; when he next intends to meet Sikh representatives; and if he will make a statement. [205946]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Although I have had no meetings with the Sikh community to discuss the issue of racist attacks specifically, it has been raised in various discussions I have had with the community.

Although I have no plans to meet Sikh representatives at present, a meeting is being arranged between the Faith Communities Unit and the British Sikh Consultative Forum. I have further indicated my willingness to meet delegates representing the wide range of interests and opinions of the Sikh community.

The Government acknowledges and values the important contribution which the Sikh community makes to the economic and cultural life of this country. The Government race equality and community cohesion strategy, which will shortly be published, includes specific proposals to improve reporting and handling of racially motivated crime.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the separate monitoring of Sikhs under the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000. [206002]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 20 December 2004]: Since May 2002 the Government have received representations regarding the separate monitoring of Sikhs from the Oxbridge Sikh Alumni Association, the British Sikh Federation, and from various Sikh Gurdwaras.

The Government acknowledges that Sikhs have the same status as all other ethnic and racial groups within the Statutory Code of Practice on the Duty to promote Race Equality published under the Race Relations (Amendment) Act.

The Statutory Code of Practice encourages authorities to use the same ethnic classification system as used in the 2001 census or categories that match them very closely. However, the statutory code also recognises that authorities may choose to collect more detailed information to reflect local circumstances. Public authorities with significant Sikh populations in their area may opt to do so.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has taken to counter racism against Sikh and Muslim communities. [206003]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 20 December 2004]: We are committed to tackling racist behaviour wherever it occurs and in whatever form. The Government introduced in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 nine new racially aggravated offences which carry higher maximum penalties where there is evidence of a racist motive or racial hostility in connection with the offence. The offences include assaults, verbal abuse and harassment and criminal damage. For these purposes Sikhs and Jews have been deemed by the courts to be racial groups.

The Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 expanded these provisions to cover religiously—as well as racially—aggravated offences, thereby affording the same protection against attacks to religious groups such as Muslims and Christians.

Under the same Act the maximum penalty for incitement to racial hatred, an offence under Part III of the Public Order Act 1986, was increased from two to seven years' imprisonment. This offence makes it unlawful to use threatening, abusive or insulting language with the intention or likelihood that racial hatred would be stirred up.

The Home Secretary has announced that as part of its Serious Organised Crime and Police Bill, the Government are proposing extending this offence to afford the same protection against incitement to hatred to faith communities including Muslims.

The Association of Chief Police Officers is updating its guidance to forces on dealing with hate crime and the Crown Prosecution Service has made clear in its published policy its determination to deal robustly with racial and religious hate crime.

Regional Offender Managers

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated annual cost is for the operation of each of the regional offender managers' offices; and if he will make a statement. [221582]

Paul Goggins: The final location and composition of the regional offender managers' offices has yet to be finalised and the budgets for the offices are yet to be set. However, an indicative budget for 2005–06 for regional offender managers offices has been set at £1:7 million resource.

Research Documents

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many documents have been published by the Research, Development and Statistics section of his Department on each day of the last six months, broken down by subject area. [221176]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested on publications published by the Home Office over the last six months is shown in the table. Please note we have classified the research according to the business area leads although some publications will be on more cross-cutting topics that cover more than one business area.

Romanian Entrants

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent investigations have been carried out by the Immigration Service into whether Romanians have illegally entered the EU through the Republic of Ireland and then travelled on to Northern Ireland. [221786]

Mr. Browne: The United Kingdom Immigration Service and the Garda National Immigration Bureau work in close co-operation to restrict the abuse of foreign nationals seeking to enter the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland. This co-operation has included a joint operation to assess the traffic of foreign nationals travelling between both countries. A number of Romanians were encountered during this exercise but not in significant numbers.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the contracts signed by his special advisers differ from the Model Contract for Special Advisers. [207242]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 753W.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent assessment he has made of whether the public service agreement target to increase voluntary and community sector activity, including increasing community participation, by 5 per cent. by 2006 will be met; [219130]

(2) whether the public service agreement target to increase value for money from the criminal justice system by 3 per cent. was met in 2004; [219132]

(3) whether the public service agreement target to increase value for money from the Home Office by 3 per cent. was met in 2004; [219133]

(4) whether the public service agreement target to ensure annual efficiency gains by the police of at least 2 per cent. was met in 2004. [219134]

(5) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to bring about measurable improvements in race equality and community cohesion. [219131]

Fiona Mactaggart: Performance against my Department's targets is published in the annual report and the autumn performance report available in the House Library and on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk).

UK Passports

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether changes are planned to the format of (a) the UK passport and (b) the passport application form; and if he will make a statement. [222354]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 16 March 2005]: With the introduction of the e-passport by the end of 2005, UKPS plan to make changes to the current format of the UK passport. These changes include enhanced security features and aesthetic changes that will distinguish the new book from the current passport. These changes will be ICAO compliant and will contribute to maintaining the UK Passport as one of the most secure passport documents in the world.

The UK Passport Service regularly reviews the passport application form and associated guidance. The last update was in August 2004. No further changes to the passport application form are planned in the immediate future.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK passports have been issued in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [222673]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 16 March 2005]: The number of passports issued by the UK Passport Service for each calendar year is as follows:

	Number of passports issued
1997	4,729,467
1998	4,851,215
1999	5,614,360
2000	5,492,141
2001	5,668,272
2002	5,397,050
2003	5,532,350
2004	6,070,626

Note:
These figures do not include British passports issued abroad by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Violent Crime (Leicester)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of all recorded violence against the person in Leicester involved no injury in each year since 1999–2000. [221206]

Ms Blears [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The available information relates to the Leicester Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership area and is only available from 2002–03. 67 per cent. of recorded offences of violence against the person in Leicester in 2002–03 involved no injury. The equivalent figure for 2003–04 was 63 per cent.

It is important to remember that recorded crime data are, however, affected by changes in reporting and recording. In particular, the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002 led to an increase to the number of offences of violence recorded by the police.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Costs

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent on (a) entertainment lunches involving civil servants and guests and (b) working lunches, in each year since 1997. [215042]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999. The Office provides a number of services to the Office of the Advocate-General for Scotland (OAG) that are managed centrally and it is not possible to separate all expenditure between both Offices.

Neither the Scotland Office nor the OAG hold entertainment lunches. Since 1 July 1999, the Scotland Office and OAG have spent the following on working lunches:

1999–2000	0
2000–01	4,281
2001–02	1,287
2002–03	5,073
2003–04	3,267

Economic Growth

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the longest period of continuous quarterly economic growth in Scotland was in the last 30 years; and if he will make a statement. [221493]

Mr. Darling: Quarterly GDP data from the Scottish Executive show that the Scottish economy has been expanding for 10 consecutive quarters. Quarterly statistics for Scotland are only available from 1995; however, there were also 10 quarters of consecutive growth recorded between 1999 Q3 and 2001 Q4.

Looking ahead, the prospects for the Scottish economy are strong. Business surveys now report continuing growth into 2005 and independent forecasters anticipate above or at trend growth for this year.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in which quarters Scotland has been in negative growth since 1997. [221492]

Mr. Darling: Of the 31 quarters since (and including) 1997 Q1, 26 were periods of expansion, four were contractionary and there was only one instance of no movement. The four separate quarters of negative growth were 1997 Q1, 1998 Q3, 1999 Q2 and 2002 Q1. There have been no consecutive periods of quarterly negative growth.

St. Andrew's Day

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to mark St. Andrew's Day in 2005. [220344]

Mrs. McGuire: From 2005, the celebration of St. Andrew's Day in Scotland will centre on an annual theme, responsibility for which lies with Scottish Executive Ministers. This year's celebration will focus on the theme of 'One Scotland, Many Cultures', fully recognising Scotland's history and traditions while celebrating our cultural, religious and ethnic diversity.

DEFENCE

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on trade between UK and US companies in the defence section of the aerospace industry. [220363]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 7 March 2005]: The aerospace sector continues to form the largest element in UK/US defence trade. This trade is highly important to both nations, helping to ensure that the armed forces of both are supplied with the best available equipment as cost-effectively as possible.

Burgaled Breiz Trawler

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps were taken by (a) the Royal Navy and (b) other nations' military involved to broadcast a warning about (i) anti-submarine and (ii) other warfare training exercises in the vicinity at the time of the sinking of the Burgaled Breiz on 15 January 2004; and on which days between 14 and 31 January 2004 military exercises took place in this part of the English Channel; [221496]

(2) whether (a) UK and (b) other nations' submarines returned to (i) Plymouth and (ii) other ports (A) for technical reasons and (B) due to damage sustained to the vessel in the days after the sinking of the Burgaled Breiz on 15 January 2004; [221497]

(3) whether the Department has satellite records of the area of the sinking of the Burgaled Breiz at 12.33 GMT on 15 January 2004; [221498]

(4) what the itinerary was of each (a) UK and (b) other nations' submarine within UK territorial waters south of the Cornish coast on 15 January 2004; [221499]

(5) how many (a) UK and (b) other EU nations' military helicopters were (i) flying as part of an international military exercise and (ii) prepared for action in the sea area south of the Cornish coast on 15 January 2004; [221458]

(6) who the owner was of each of the life rafts found by aircrew from RNAS Culdrose based at 771 Search and Rescue Squadron when responding to the foundering of the Cap Burgaled Breiz on 15 January 2004; [221459]

(7) if he will list the (a) UK and (b) other nations' submarines which took part in military exercises in the English channel during January 2004; and on which days during that month each took part in the exercises; [221460]

(8) on how many occasions during the period from 1 January 2003 to 31 January 2004 UK naval vessels were involved in a Thursday war military exercise in the English Channel. [221461]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Submarine Exercise Area Warnings are published in the Admiralty Notice to Mariners and on Admiralty charts. SUBFACTS (submarine activity in the area), which included the vicinity where the Burgaled Breiz was lost, were broadcast by the Coastguard every four hours from 150140 GMT. Other warnings of warfare training exercises are broadcast only if gunnery firings are to take place. The exercises taking place in this area on 15 January 2004 did not include any gunnery firings.

The German submarine (FGS) U26 arrived alongside in Plymouth on the day of the sinking at 0748 GMT on 15 January 2004 and sailed at 1600 GMT the same day. She returned to Plymouth on 22 January for a Port Visit before providing planned support to Flag Officer Sea Training from 26–29 January. HMS Turbulent sailed from Plymouth on 16 January for surfaced trials off Rame Head and returned alongside that evening, having suffered damage to a towed cable, while conducting those trials. No other submarines went alongside in Plymouth or other ports on the day of or in the days following the loss of the fishing vessel, either for technical reasons or for damage sustained by any cause.

We have no record of contemporary satellite images of the area where the Burgaled Breiz sank for any time period on the 15 January 2004. Such images may, however, be available from commercial sources.

Submarine activity in the English Channel and UK territorial waters during January 2004 was as follows:

Submarine	Dates	Itinery	Position	Comments
HMS Torbay	15 January 2004	UK led exercise	At 151253 GMT: 49 deg 32.33 min North, 007 deg 55 min West
HMS Torbay	16–26 January 2004	UK led exercise	SW of Cornwall
HNLMS Dolfijn	15 January 2004	On surface in transit to UK led exercise	At 151253 GMT: 49 deg 32.33 min North, 005 deg 16.16 min West	Responded to relay of Mayday at 1300 GMT from FV reporting position some 11 nautical miles NE of her location.
HNLMS Dolfijn	16–26 January 2004	UK led exercise	SW of Cornwall
FGS U22	15 January 2004	On dived passage to Mediterranean Sea	At 151253 GMT: 49deg 30.05 min North, 004 deg 07.09 min West	Continued her transit through French waters
FGS U26	15 January 2004		Alongside in Devonport from150748 GMT until 151600 GMT
FGS U26	16–22 January 2004	UK led exercise	SW of Cornwall
HMS Turbulent	15 January 2004		Alongside in Devonport
HMS Turbulent	16 January 2004	Surfaced trials off Rame Head	Off Rame Head (entrance to Plymouth Harbour)	Returned to Devonport that evening having suffered damage to a towed cable.

The French submarine (FS) RUBIS was routed by French Navy authorities from French exercise areas off Brest and in the Bay of Biscay into the ASW exercise area for the start of the exercise. Her route brought her in from the South, however, and she did not enter the Channel areas controlled by the UK. On completion of the exercise she was due to visit Plymouth (from 30 January until 2 February), but the weather conditions were too poor to enable a safe recovery of her towed sonar and she made a surfaced passage to Brest.

The ASW exercise did not commence until 16 January 2004. Helicopters may have been embarked on the vessels with helicopter capability which were alongside at Devonport on 15 January 2004 (four UK, two Dutch, one French) but this cannot be confirmed.

On 15 January 2004, two Dauphin helicopters from POST were flying in the area; one from approximately 0920 and the other from approximately 1310. The duration of these flights was not recorded but it is not thought that either would have exceeded two hours.

Helicopters from RNAS Culdrose were conducting training in the local area on 15 January 2004. Between 0830 and 1700 up to five Merlin, three Sea King Mk 5 and two Sea King Mk 7 took part in this training. The duty Search and Rescue (SAR) helicopters from Culdrose and Chivenor responded to the Burgaled Breiz incident, covering the time from 1249 to 1700.

The crew of the RNAS Culdrose SAR helicopter who responded to the emergency reports of the foundering of the Burgaled Breiz found one life raft in the area. This life raft contained a package of papers, which were not opened by the crew of the SAR helicopter, but were passed to the police via the Falmouth Coastguard. A second life raft was found by a French fishing vessel. It is not known if either life raft has been positively identified as belonging to the Burgaled Breiz.

UK naval vessels were involved in 44 elements of "Thursday War" military exercises in the English Channel in the period from 1 January 2003 to 31 January 2004.

Clothing Contracts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the contract delivery schedule is for battle dress under the cut and sew contract; and what the penalties are for late delivery. [221040]

Mr. Ingram: Under this Enabling Arrangement, the contract delivery schedule is agreed on each Warrant as it is issued. To date over 100,000 items have now been delivered under the cut and sew contract, including combat clothing items, which were received in advance of the agreed delivery date.

Penalties are not enforceable under English Law. The prime contractor has the incentive to perform properly under this contract, as the full five-year duration is subject to continued satisfactory performance. The company is required to make alternative arrangements if there is a risk of delivery failure. However, should they still fail to deliver on time, remedies under the contract include the right to claim damages commensurate with any consequent loss suffered by the Department.

Contract Prices

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what grounds his Department determines whether a contracted price is achievable without subsidy and without additional payments from the Department. [219456]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The Department does not subsidise defence contractors or pay for work that is not covered by a contract. Decisions on contract prices and amendments to contract prices are based on long term Value for Money and take account of factors such as equipment performance, timeliness of delivery, risks and their management, sustainability and support of equipment and, where appropriate, wider factors described in the Defence Industrial Policy, which is in Defence Policy Paper No 5, published in October 2002.

Departmental Efficiency

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the February 2005 estimates of his Department's efficiency delivery position mentioned in the Efficiency Technical Note. [221889]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 March 2005]: Work on revising the figures, to take account of the outcome of the Department's planning and budgeting process for the next financial year, is not yet complete.

Military Uniform

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the stock levels of uniforms for (a) jungle use, (b) winter warfare, (c) general use and (d) desert deployment are. [221642]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence currently holds sufficient stocks of uniforms to meet current operational requirements, as identified by the Front Line Commands, for at least the next six months. Information down to individual items of clothing, as requested, could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Sufficient uniforms are also being procured to meet future operational needs for personnel covering the various climates referred to.

Royal Navy

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the level of naval spares. [221584]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Naval spares are carried on board each unit at levels that support operational commitments. Onboard holdings on deployed units are supplemented by spares carried afloat on Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels, and by shore stocks. The level of spares held ashore is a balance between ensuring normal commitments can be met and minimising the value and volume of stockholdings. These levels are adequate to meet operational commitments under the normal support/reduced support regime currently in place.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from which naval vessels spares are being taken. [221585]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: I will write shortly with a full list of the ships that have had ships' fitted equipment removed from them over the last year. With regard to onboard stores items, these are transferred from one ship's storeroom to another under local arrangements. Such transactions are not normally recorded centrally.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer, 25 November 2004, Official Report, column 51W, on the Royal Navy, what decisions have been made about the future of naval tasks (a) Standing Naval Force Mediterranean, (b) Atlantic Patrol South, (c) Atlantic Patrol North, (d) Armilla Patrol, (e) Indian Ocean Patrol and (f) Fleet Ready Escort around the United Kingdom. [222132]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 March 2005]: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what equipment has been taken from Royal Navy warships in port in the last year to make up for deficiencies on ships that are on operational deployment; how many ships have been involved; and if he will make a statement. [221345]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Ships are prioritised by readiness for the Joint Rapid Reaction Force rather than being either 'deployed' or 'in port'.

The removal of ships' fitted equipment (or parts of it) is known as STOROB. This is a formal process, but is normally used as last resort to meet high readiness operational commitments in cases where the demanded items are not available from other sources. Because of the impact on the donor ship's capability, this is only considered when the donor ship is either reducing in readiness towards upkeep or disposal, or is already in upkeep.

I will write to you shortly with a full list of the ships and equipment that have been involved in the STOROB process over the last year, and I will place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Navy ships are on the list for disposal. [221397]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Presently there are a number of ships on the list for disposal, some vessels are being disposed of in the normal course whereas others have been declared surplus following the Government's announcement in July 2004, as a supplement to the Defence White Paper 2003—Delivering Security in a Changing World Future Capabilities.

Three Type 23 Frigates (HMS Norfolk, HMS Marlborough, and HMS Grafton).

Three Sandown Single Role Minehunters (HMS Bridport, HMS Inverness, and HMS Sandown).

Two Landing Ships Logistics (RFAs Sir Percivale and Sir Galahad).

Three Northern Patrol Vessels (HMS Dulverton, HMS Brecon, and HMS Cottesmore).

Three Type 42 Destroyers (HMS Glasgow, HMS Newcastle and HMS Cardiff).

Two Landing Platform Docks (HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid) Two Castle Class OPVs (HMS Leeds Castle and HMS Dumbarton Castle).

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what efficiency savings have been made against fleet activity in the Royal Navy for each of the last seven years. [221398]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Prior to financial year 2000–01, there was no requirement to record efficiency savings. With effect from FY 2004–05 the requirement to record such measures will once again cease. The following year-on-year efficiency savings for those FYs in which records were mandatory, were achieved in the Fleet TLB:

Financial year	£ million
2000–01	8.233
2001–02	5.206
2002–03	15.786
2003–04	22.485

Efficiency savings resulting from the Fleet TLB restructuring (Fleet First) in March 2002 constitute the major element of the savings achieved in the latter two FYs.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for providing a deep maintenance facility at RAF Leuchars for the Tornado F3. [220837]

Mr. Ingram: As far as is practicable it is intended to consolidate Tornado F3 Main Operating Base maintenance facilities at RAF Leuchars, in line with the recommendations of the End to End Logistics Review.

Credit Card Borrowing

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans her Department has to issue guidance on the consequences of unsustainable borrowing on credit cards. [222197]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Credit is an integral part of our daily lives and in the majority of cases consumers are using credit successfully—confident in their ability to repay due to the underlying economic stability.

We have been particularly concerned to ensure that consumers are made aware of the cost of their borrowing. To this end, the Consumer Credit (Agreements) (Amendment) Regulations 2004 laid before Parliament on 9 June 2004 include provisions to ensure that consumers are made aware of the dangers of failing to repay their borrowing, including the fact that missing payments can have severe consequences for the consumer.

We have also worked closely with the credit industry in developing the voluntary warnings they have introduced on monthly statements about the dangers of making only minimum payments.

Emissions Trading

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of the Emissions Trading Scheme on electricity prices in the UK. [222600]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Assessments on the impact of the Emissions Trading Scheme should be treated with caution. The impact on electricity prices is difficult to assess and is dependent on the carbon price, so for example at a carbon price of €5 per tonne of carbon dioxide the Department estimates that electricity prices to industry might increase by around 6 per cent. and prices to the domestic consumer by around 3 per cent. An analysis of the implications of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme for electricity prices is available at: www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/ilexetsfinal.pdf

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effect on the number of households in fuel poverty of rises in retail prices of gas and electricity since 2003. [221330]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of people in fuel poverty fell from 5.4 million in 1996 to about 2¼ million in 2002. Analysis of the overall effects of changes in fuel prices and incomes suggests that the total number of vulnerable households in fuel poverty is likely to rise by a limited amount in 2004 and 2005—perhaps by up to 200,000 households in England, where vulnerable households are defined as those containing children, the elderly, the disabled or someone with long term sickness.

Gas Prices

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment she has made of the recent price shock on the spot market for gas in the UK; and if she will make a statement; [221554]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact that the large sudden rise in gas spot prices will have on the UK's manufacturing base; and if she will make a statement. [221556]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The high spot gas prices at the end of February and beginning of March appear to have been caused by high demand and market concerns over supply tightness during cold weather across Europe. There were also technical problems reducing supplies from the North Sea and issues around the levels in short and medium term storage. Temperatures have now returned to at or above the seasonal average, and supply concerns have lessened. Spot prices have reduced accordingly, and we still have supplies in storage to meet another cold snap. The impact on manufacturing companies will vary extensively and depend on a variety of factors, including how much gas individual companies use and the exposure of a particular company to the spot price.

Newspaper Distribution

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when the Government will respond to the Office of Fair Trading's announcement of provisional conclusions on newspaper and magazine distribution; [221903]

(2) when the Office of Fair Trading will publish its draft advisory opinion on its provisional conclusions on newspaper and magazine distribution. [221904]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I understand the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) plans to publish its draft advisory opinion for public consultation around end of March 2005 with a view to publishing a final opinion by 1 May 2005. The OFT's provisional opinion does not include anything that requires a response from the Government.

Departmental Costs

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Department spent on (a) stationery and (b) office supplies in each year since 1997. [213841]

Ms Hewitt: Expenditure for stationery and office supplies can be provided only from 1998–99, the first year for which resource information was produced; any earlier figures would not be meaningful. The following figures show the total expenditure between 1998–99 and 2003–04.

£ million

	Stationery	Office supplies
1998–99	2.07	0.13
1999–2000	1.92	0.14
2000–01	2.04	0.15
2001–02	1.68	0.09
2002–03	2.41	0.13
2003–04	1.83	0.08

The purchasing of stationery and office supplies is the responsibility of individual management units.

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent on postage by the Department in each year since 1997. [215016]

Ms Hewitt: Expenditure on postage can be provided only from 1998–99, the first year for which resource information was produced; any earlier figures would not be meaningful.

The following figures show the total expenditure on postage between 1998–99 and 2003–04.

	£ million
1998–99	1.23
1999–2000	1.12
2000–01	1.18
2001–02	1.01
2002–03	1.12
2003–04	1.34

Departmental policy is that all Royal Mail will be sent second class unless Directorates specify first class on the envelope and are prepared to pay the difference in cost from their own budgets.

Online Company Registration

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the latest figures are for online company registration; and what steps she has taken to evaluate consumer satisfaction with the process. [208645]

Mr. Sutcliffe: At the end of February of the financial year 2004–05 Companies House had incorporated a total of 297,368 companies, of which 219,570 were incorporated electronically. This represents 73.8 per cent. of the total number of incorporations for that period. Companies House has regular contact with the customers for this service via an electronic filing focus group which meets in April and November each year. Customers can also provide feedback through our customer services team at any other time if they wish.

To evaluate consumer satisfaction with the service, Companies House carries out regular Customer Satisfaction Surveys. The following table gives results from the last two quarters' surveys in areas relevant to online company registration.

The table gives the results of the latest customer satisfaction survey and the figures given indicate the percentage of people satisfied when questioned about the services provided. Figures are given for the previous and most recent quarterly survey.

Customer Satisfaction Survey

	2004
	Quarter 2	Quarter 3

Renewable Energy

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she is taking to co-operate with those in the microgeneration industry on the removal of (a) network connection requirements, (b) metering requirements, (c) impediments to access to renewables obligation certificates and (d) other regulatory barriers for domestic consumers wishing to install microgeneration. [222097]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Energy Act 2004 commits the Government to producing a strategy for the promotion of microgeneration in the UK. As part of the process of developing the strategy we are consulting on an informal basis with key stakeholders in the industry and other interested parties on a wide variety of issues including connection and metering requirements, access to renewable obligation certificates and other regulatory barriers. There will also be a formal public consultation before the final strategy is published.

Sub-contractors

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the letters of comfort issued by the holding company immediately prior to liquidation of Ballast plc to sub-contractors and suppliers gave a fair and reasonable view of that company's financial position; and if she will make a statement. [203737]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Ballast plc went into administration in October 2003 following withdrawal of support from its Dutch parent. It did not go into liquidation until October 2004.

Supermarkets

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 13 January 2005, Official Report, column 630W, on supermarkets, what discussions she has had with the chairman of the Office of Fair Trading concerning the timetable for the publication of its report into the auditing of supermarket-supplier contracts announced in its report into the supermarket code of practice in February 2004. [221659]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In the context of considering the publication of the audit of the supermarket code, both the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) and DTI officials have been involved in a number of discussions, including requests for updates on timing. The audit was also raised briefly during a regular meeting between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and the Board of the OFT that took place in mid-January. The OFT intend their audit will be published before Easter.

Women's Employment

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of factors affecting (a) entry to the labour market, (b) progression within the labour market and (c) re-entry into the labour market after pregnancy by women from ethnic minority groups. [220857]

Ms Hewitt: DTI is working with the Ethnic Minority Employment Task Force, led by the Department for Work and Pensions, to tackle the barriers to labour market participation faced by ethnic minorities, including those faced by ethnic minority women and ethnic minority women returners. This work stems from the Strategy Unit report "Ethnic minorities in the labour market" published in March 2003. DTI's specific contribution is around working with business to promote race equality and diversity in the workplace and promoting enterprise.

The taskforce has published an interim report on its first year's activities. That report and further information about the taskforce's activities are available from the taskforce website at www.emetaskforce.gov.uk, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House. The final report is due by autumn 2006.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Service Bill

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has made to the Civil Service Commissioners following the Commissioners' response to the consultation on the draft Civil Service Bill on management relationships between Mr. Jonathan Powell and civil servants. [221812]

The Prime Minister: The deadline for comments on the Government's proposals for civil service legislation was 28 February 2005. The Government are considering responses from the Civil Service Commissioners and others. They will make a statement when they have given the responses full and proper consideration.

Iraq (Attorney-General's Advice)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer of 9 March 2005, Official Report, column 1516, to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd), to whom he was referring in his reference to others. [221811]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him at Prime Minister's questions on 9 March 2005, Official Report, column 1514.

Royal Meetings

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister which of his meetings with HRH the Prince of Wales during the period 1 to 10 February were not published in the official Court Circular; and if he will make a statement. [222342]

The Prime Minister: Details of meetings published in the Court Circular are a matter for the Royal Household. Discussions with the Royal Household are not disclosed.

Terrorism

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons alleged known terrorists at large in the United Kingdom, to whom he referred in his interview on Woman's Hour on 28 February, have not yet been detained. [221185]

The Prime Minister: Wherever possible, those alleged to have committed terrorist offences are prosecuted and committed for trial as soon as all the available admissible evidence has been gathered. However, in some cases the intelligence available may suggest that the person poses a potential terrorist threat but there is insufficient admissible evidence to bring a criminal charge. It is for that reason that the Government introduced the control order provisions in the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005.

Correspondence

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister when he will answer the letter of 2 March from the hon. Member for Faversham and Mid-Kent referring to his answer of the same day— 2 March 2005, Official Report, column 954, about the effect of the new Licensing Act 2003 on sports clubs. [222721]

The Prime Minister: I shall reply to the hon. Member's letter shortly.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Albert Fisher Group Pension Scheme

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assistance will be available to members of the Albert Fisher Group Pension Scheme under the recently announced financial assistance scheme; and what assistance is available to members not covered by these provisions. [221588]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer to the written statement I gave on the Financial Assistance Scheme, on 22 February 2005, Official Report, column 16WS.

In addition, a range of state provision is available, depending on individual circumstances, for pensioners and others more generally.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many local authority benefit fraud investigators have (a) commenced and (b) completed the Professionalism in Security Accredited Counter Fraud Officer Scheme. [200116]

Mr. Pond [pursuant to the reply, 6 December 2004, Official Report, c. 368W]: Up until April 2004, 283 local authority benefit fraud investigators had commenced but not completed the Professionalism in Security (PINS) training scheme and 1,557 had completed it.

DLA

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Disability Living Allowance applications for adults were rejected and then subsequently approved after review in each of the past three years, broken down by (a) county and (b) region. [216939]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information that is available is set out in the following tables.

Maternity Pay

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the statistics relating to maternity pay, which, since 1997 (a) are no longer collected by his Department and (b) have had the way in which the figures are compiled changed. [221797]

Maria Eagle: The Department produces data on Maternity Allowance payments.

We have not produced annual figures for Maternity Allowance since 2000–01. However, we continue to produce figures on a quarterly basis.

Since we ceased to produce annual data we no longer have a record of the reason for non-payment of Statutory Maternity Pay.

From the May 2000 quarter data is available on the number of jobs the claimant is recorded as having.

The employment status of the claimant is shown in figures from the August 2000 quarter.

Pensions

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been paid to pensioners in Leeds, West as a result of increases in the state pension since 1997. [221964]

Malcolm Wicks: The total extra basic state pension paid to pensioners in Leeds, West as a result of above inflation increases in the state pension since 1997 (covering the years 1997–98 to 2004–05 inclusive) is £12.7 million, in 2004–05 prices.

Notes:

1. Figures are calculated by comparing what would have happened if basic state pension had been increased in line with the Retail Prices Index since 1997 with what actually happened.

2. Figures for Leeds, West are derived using the overall share of Great Britain expenditure paid to pensioners living in Leeds, West constituency, based on a 5 per cent. sample of retirement pension recipients, and subject to a degree of sampling error.

3. Expenditure on state pensions will have risen for other reasons including a growing population, improved contributions records and the gradual maturing of past policy changes. These effects are not included in the figures as they would have occurred had 1997 policies been continued.

4. Additional spending on the State Second Pension over the period, other than due to factors given under note 3 above, is negligible.

5. The figures do not include additional spending on minimum income guarantee/pension credit, housing benefit, council tax benefit, winter fuel payments and other age-related payments, or Over 75 TV licences, that has also been paid to pensioners since 1997.

Mr. Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of (a) men and (b) women receiving the basic state pension did not receive (i) a full basic state pension and (ii) a basic state pension of 75 per cent. or more of the value of the basic state pension in 2004, (A) in total and (B) broken down by age groups (1) 60–64 years, (2) 65–69 years, (3) 70–74 years, (4) 75–79 years and (5) 80 years plus. [216483]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Percentage

	Basic state pension recipients in Great Britain receiving less than the full basic state pension		Basic state pension recipients in Great Britain not receiving more than 75 per cent, or more of the full basic state pension
	Men	Women	Men	Women
All	10.2	50.9	2.9	42.7
60–64 years of age	—	74.0	—	54.4
65–69 years of age	15.3	68.9	4.0	58.7
70–74 years of age	11.8	57.1	3.6	51.3
75–79 years of age	6.9	42.0	2.3	38.1
80 years of age and over	3.7	20.2	1.2	17.5

Notes:

1. Numbers are taken from a five per cent., sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
3. Percentages are given as a proportion of the relevant gender and age group receiving a basic state pension.
4. A basic state pension is paid to those who fully or partially satisfy the contribution conditions for a Category A or Category B basic state pension, either in their own right or, where applicable, on the basis of their late or former spouse's national insurance contributions.
5. Numbers do not include people entitled to a basic state pension which is then increased when they meet the conditions for a Category D pension.
6. Full rate means the standard rate of a Category A or B basic state pension based on a person's own or late spouse's national insurance contributions—£77.45 for a Category A basic state pension in 2003–04.

7.75 per cent., of a Category A basic state pension in 2003–04 was £58.09.

IAD Information Centre five per cent., sample as at 31 March 2004

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) men and (b) women were in receipt of state retirement pension in the Tamworth constituency in (i) 1999 and (ii) 2004; what each is as a percentage of the Tamworth population; and what percentage of the population of England are in receipt of state retirement pension. [221925]

Malcolm Wicks: The information which is available shows that, as at September 1999, there were 13,400 recipients of the state pension in the Tamworth constituency, of whom 5,200 were males and 8,200 were females. As at September 2004, there were 14,700 state pension recipients in the Tamworth constituency, of whom 5,600 were males and 9,100 were females.

It is not possible to express the number of recipients as a percentage of the population in the Tamworth constituency, because the relevant population estimates are not held at constituency level. However, as at September 2004 the percentage of the population of England in receipt of a state pension was 18 per cent.

Notes:

1. Figures are taken from a five per cent., sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. State pension means Category A, B, C or D state pension or graduated retirement benefit.
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred and are expressed in thousands.
4. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant postcode directory.
5. Population figures are estimates as at mid-2003 as provided by the Office for National Statistics.

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to include the Roxby pension scheme in the indicative list of schemes potentially eligible for the Financial Assistance Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [222408]

Malcolm Wicks: The provisional list published on 22 February contains those pension schemes on which we received information in our latest data collection exercise and that appear potentially eligible under the scheme entry criteria we have outlined. Presence on this list does not guarantee individuals will receive support from the FAS.

Schemes may not have been included on the provisional list either because they did not appear to meet the eligibility criteria or because the information provided was not sufficient to assess potential eligibility. After the FAS regulations have come into force, there will be a six-month period during which we shall accept formal notification from the representatives of other under-funded pension schemes, which may in due course be added to the list, so absence from this list does not preclude eligibility.

Savings

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the population has estimated savings in excess of (a) £5,000, (b) £10,000, (c) £15,000, (d) £20,000, (e) £25,000, (f) 50,000 and (g) £100,000. [222440]

Mr. Pond: Information on individual accounts and savings outside of the range £1,500 to £20,000 is not available.

The Family Resources Survey can provide estimates for Great Britain of adult savings held within benefit units. This information is presented in the following table:

Percentage of benefit units

Limit (£)	Benefit units with savings above certain limits

Notes:

1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the Family Resources Survey (FRS). 2002–03 is the latest year for which data is available.
2. Questions on assets are a sensitive part of the FRS questionnaire and have relatively low level of response. Evidence suggests some under reporting of capital by respondents.

3. A benefit unit is a single adult or couple living as married and any dependent children.
4. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the FRS to Government Office Region populations by age and sex. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining response bias.

Alcohol-related Deaths

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of deaths caused by alcohol in each year since 1997, broken down by age and gender. [222138]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 17 March 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate has been made of the number of deaths caused by alcohol in each year since 1997, broken down by age and gender. I am replying in his absence.

The information requested is given in the reply to David Ameas MP, Official Report 53, column 78W.

Broomfield Hospital

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were performed at Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford, Essex in each year from 1990 to 2004. [221952]

Dr. Ladyman: Information is not collected by individual hospital. All operations for Mid Essex hospitals national health service trust, of which Broomfield hospital is a part, are shown in the table. Information prior to 1992–93 is not held centrally.

A record is only included once in each count, even if an operation is mentioned in more than one operation field of the record.
2. The main operation is the first recorded operation in the HES data set and is usually the most resource intensive procedure performed during the episode. It is appropriate to use main operation when looking at admission details, e.g. time waited, but the figures for "all operations count of episodes" give a more complete count of episodes with an operation.
3. Secondary procedure—as well as the main operative procedure, there are up to 11 (13 prior to 2002–03) secondary operation fields in HES that show secondary or additional procedures performed on the patient during the episode of care.
4. Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times for patients undergoing cataract operations at Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford, Essex were in each year from 1990 to 2004. [221954]

Dr. Ladyman: Information is not collected by individual hospital. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
3. Time waited statistics from HES are not the same as the published waiting list statistics. HES provides counts and time waited for all patients admitted to hospital within a given period, whereas the published waiting list statistics count those waiting for treatment on a specific date and how long they have been on the waiting list. Also, HES calculates the time waited as the difference between the admission and decision to admit dates. Unlike published waiting list statistics, this is not adjusted for self-deferrals or periods of medical/social suspension.

Cancer Care (North Somerset)

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time for those diagnosed with suspected cancer within the North Somerset primary care trust area to see a specialist following an initial GP referral was in the last period for which figures are available; [221874]

(2) how many people have been diagnosed with suspected cancer within the North Somerset primary care trust area in each of the last two years; and how many were able to see a specialist within two weeks of a GP referral. [221875]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested on average waiting times is not collected centrally.

Information on the number of patients referred to a specialist following a referral from their general practitioner is available on a provider rather than commissioner, such as North Somerset primary care trust, basis. Information for Western area health national health service trust, including the percentage seen within two weeks, is shown in the table.

Carers

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) who the official responsible for the National Carers Strategy is; [222496]

(2) who is responsible for the Department's carers website. [222498]

Dr. Ladyman: The policy management unit in the Department's older people's and disability division, which is part of the care services directorate, has ongoing responsibility for policy on carers. The Government actively supported the private members Bill last year that has now become the Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004. Departmental officials are currently working on the implementation of the Act and guidance. Young carers are the responsibility of the Department for Education and Skills.

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the Social Care Institute of Excellence on carers. [222497]

Dr. Ladyman: The Social Care Institute for Excellence (SCIE) works with people throughout the social care sector to identify useful information, research and examples of best practice. The SCIE works closely with people receiving services, their carers and their representative organisations. The SCIE will be taking forward the development of practice guidance to accompany the Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004. The exact format of that guidance is yet to be decided, but, subject to stakeholder agreement, it is likely to build on the current SCIE knowledge review for carers and follow the format taken for other SCIE practice guides. An outline of the work programme and how people can become involved in the development of the guide will be communicated in due course through carers' networks as well as SCIE's website at www.scie.org.uk and the Department's carers website at www.carers.gov.uk.

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the inspection of the implementation of the Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004. [222499]

Dr. Ladyman: The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) has the responsibility for bringing about improvements in services for those that use them, including carers. It is the responsibility of CSCI to assess services for carers, including the implementation of the new Act, as part of its responsibility to monitor council performance in social services.

The Government are assessing, also through the CSCI, councils' performance in supporting carers through a new carers' performance indicator. This demonstrates that support for carers continues to be a priority for the Government. The new carers' performance indicator will be published in autumn 2005.

Dentistry

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2004, Official Report, column 1469W, on NHS dentists, how many of the extra 1,000 full-time dentists to be recruited into the NHS by October have so far been recruited. [218298]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 25 February 2005]: The Department is gathering information on progress with the recruitment of 1,000 whole-time equivalent dentists since April 2004. This will include local national health service recruitment activity and departmental central recruitment, including the 28 Polish dentists who began work in England in January and the further 41 starting work during March and early April.

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221111]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W.

Diabetes

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will take steps to provide access for patients to the new treatment for diabetes on the NHS. [221801]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Research into islet cell transplant, a possible new treatment for people with diabetes, is still at an early stage. Decisions regarding the funding of this treatment by the national health service will be taken when the results of further clinical trials have been considered.

GP List Sizes

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average general practitioner list size was in Greater London, broken down by primary care trust or health authority, in each of the last 10 years. [221947]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Hatfield (New Hospital)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his latest estimate is of the cost of the new hospital planned to be built at Hatfield. [222433]

Dr. Ladyman: I am informed by Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire strategic health authority that East and North Hertfordshire national health service trust currently estimate that the cost of the new hospital planned to be built at Hatfield is £550 million.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision he is making for the construction of homes for key workers and in-patients' relatives at the new hospital in Hatfield; and what the cost is of each. [222434]

Dr. Ladyman: The local national health service have planned for 450 units of accommodation on the Hatfield site and 200 units of accommodation on the Queen Elizabeth II site at Welwyn Garden City and are developing this with a housing association. The cost of each has not yet been calculated.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to his Department will be of providing cancer treatment facilities at the new planned hospital at Hatfield; and what estimate he has made of the cost of provision of such facilities to an equivalent standard at Mount Vernon hospital Northwood. [222435]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not made an estimate of these costs.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to move the in-patient facilities of the cancer centre at Mount Vernon hospital to a new hospital at Hatfield. [222436]

Dr. Ladyman: The local national health service has plans to move the in-patient facilities of the cancer centre to a new hospital at Hatfield. It is understood that this will take place at the end of December 2011.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the number of (a) cancer in-patients who could be referred to the new hospital in Hatfield from within a 15 mile radius of it and (b) cancer in-patients who can be referred to the Cancer Centre at Mount Vernon hospital, Northwood, from within a 15 mile radius of it. [222437]

Dr. Ladyman: Within Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire as part of an approved strategic outline case a new hospital at Hatfield is planned providing a specialist cancer centre in Hertfordshire.

At this stage, the local national health service has not undertaken this level of analysis.

IT Projects

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the capital and revenue costs of Patient Archiving and Communications systems will be met by (a) the Department of Health and (b) the National Programme for IT. [220756]

Mr. Hutton: Both the capital and revenue cost of picture archiving and communications systems will be met by a combination of Departmental and national health service funding.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the trusts listed in the National Programme for IT deployment plans as intending to deploy hospital and clinical administration systems by the end of March have fully implemented basic Patient Archiving and Communication systems for all users throughout each trust. [220757]

Mr. Hutton: Picture archiving and communications systems (PACS) deployment is not dependent on wider national programme for information technology deployments of hospital and clinical administration systems. PACS implementation work has started at 12 early adopter sites, which are expected to go live before the summer.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates his Department has made of the capital and revenue costs of Patient Archiving and Communication systems for each NHS Trust in England and Wales over the next 10 years. [220769]

Mr. Hutton: Trust-specific estimates are not made centrally. Overall estimates of picture archiving and communications systems work contracted by the national programme for information technology (NPfIT) over the next 10 years are based on the three out of five NPfIT cluster areas in England where contracts have now been signed. The work is estimated to have associated capital and revenue costs of £861 million over the next 10 years.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department will pay to fund the capital and revenue costs of the cluster data stores to be provided by local service providers as part of their picture archiving and communications contract with the Department. [220861]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's total planned contribution, via the national programme for information technology, is £61 million capital and £225 million revenue.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many changes there have been to the original specifications of the NHS data spine. [220862]

Mr. Hutton: None. However, there have been seven additions to the specification as a result of new or revised business processes and requirements that have arisen since the development of the original specification.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts in each of the clusters of the NHS National Programme for IT have signed off full trust business cases to take picture archiving and communications systems from their local service provider. [220864]

Mr. Hutton: Two trusts have signed off full business cases to implement picture archiving and communications systems (PACS). Governance arrangements are being adhered to at other sites where PACS implementation work has commenced, to ensure appropriate due diligence, while they await final sign-off of their business cases.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government is still working towards the target that picture archiving and communications systems should be (a) 80 per cent. implemented across the NHS in England by the end of 2006 and (b) 100 per cent. implemented by the end of 2007. [220867]

Mr. Hutton: The target for picture archiving and communications systems roll-out is 80 per cent. completion by the end of March 2006 and 100 per cent. completion by the end of March 2007.

Mental Health

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve the detection of mental illness in older people. [216171]

Dr. Ladyman: The national service framework (NSF) for older people, launched in March 2001, sets out a model for the development of services for older people with mental health needs. The NSF makes it clear that early detection and diagnosis of mental health problems should be an integral part of the development of services for older people.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children and young people aged under 18 years are suffering from a mental disorder, broken down by type of disorder. [216172]

Dr. Ladyman: In a survey of 10,000 children and adolescents by the Office for National Statistics (ONS)—"Mental Health of Children and Adolescents in Great Britain, ONS 2000—among five to 10-year-olds, 10 per cent. of boys and 6 per cent. of girls had a mental disorder. In the 11 to 15-year-old age group, the proportion of children with any type of mental disorder was 13 per cent. for boys and 10 per cent. for girls. Another report by the ONS—"Psychiatric Morbidity Among Adults in Private Households, ONS 2000"—gives prevalence rates for mental disorders among the 16 to 19 years age group.

Prevalence rates for individual disorders are shown in the reports, which are available in the Library.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 2 March 2005, Official Report, column 1229W, on mental health care, if his Department will contact all NHS trusts to ask whether they (a) supplement the income of and (b) provide goods in kind for people in hospital for more than a year. [221717]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has no plans to contact all national health service trusts to ask whether they supplement the income of and provide goods in kind for people in hospital for more than a year.

Myasthenia Gravis

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time is for patients diagnosed with myasthenia gravis in (a) the East Midlands and (b) England; [222128]

(2) what steps he will take to increase awareness of myasthenia gravis among NHS health professionals.[222129]

Dr. Ladyman: Figures on waiting times for the treatment of neurological conditions are published, but myasthenia gravis is not separately identified.

We have no specific plans to raise awareness of the condition among the medical profession. The Department is not responsible for setting curricula for health professional training; that is rightly the responsibility of the statutory and professional bodies. However, we do share a commitment with those bodies that all health professionals are trained so that they have the skills and knowledge to deliver a high quality health service to all groups of the population with whom they deal.

The national service framework for long-term conditions focuses on improving services for people with neurological conditions. While the framework does not cover myasthenia gravis specifically, it does recommend improvements in standards, care and support that will benefit everyone with a neurological condition.

Neonatal Care

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding he made available to support (a) all neonatal care services and (b) neonatal intensive care services in each year since 1999–2000; and what funding will be made available in 2005–06. [218111]

Dr. Ladyman: Neonatal care services are provided through national health service general funding allocations. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health recently announced an increase in the level of NHS general funding allocation to £135 billion for the financial years 2006–07 and 2007–08. The table shows additional funding for neonatal intensive care services. The additional revenue funding in 2004–05 is recurrent in 2005–06.

Additional funding to improve neonatal intensive care services

£ million

	Funding
	Capital	Revenue
2000–01	6.5	5
2001–02	—	5
2002–03	—	5
2003–04	20	12
2004–05	—	20

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many managed clinical networks providing neonatal care there are in England; what the ratio is of nurses to infants in (a) neonatal special care units, (b) neonatal high dependency care units and (c) neonatal intensive care units for each clinical network; and if he will make a statement. [218113]

Dr. Ladyman: There are 25 neonatal managed clinical networks. Information on the ratio of nurses to infants within units is not collected centrally. The ratio is not constant, but relative to the criticality of the infants. This varies according to demand both within and between units providing a range of special, high dependency and intensive care. Research suggests that, in practice, the ratio of nurses to infants in special care is between one nurse to three and one nurse to four infants. In high dependency care, the ratio is in the order of one to two. In intensive care the ratio is one to one, and with some more specialised procedures, such as extracorporeal membrane oxygenation, the ratio increases further.

NHS Direct

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to make changes in the status of NHS Direct. [222533]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Direct special health authority is due to change its status as part of the Department's review of its arm's-length bodies.

NHS Prescriptions

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) NHS prescriptions and (b) NHS prescription items were issued in each of the last 10 years broken down by (i) those attracting a charge and (ii) those receiving an exemption; [221416]

(2) how many (a) NHS prescriptions and (b) NHS prescription items were issued under an exemption in each of the last 10 years, broken down by reason for exemption. [221417]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested about national health service prescriptions and prescription items has been placed in the Library.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost per item prescribed was of prescriptions issued by (a) dispensing and (b) non-dispensing general practitioners in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [221967]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The average net ingredient cost per item of prescriptions issued by dispensing and non-dispensing doctors that were dispensed in the community in England in each year since 1998, is shown in the table.

Average net ingredient cost per item

	Dispensing doctors	Non-dispensing doctors
1998	9.19	9.19
1999	9.91	10.04
2000	9.96	10.18
2001	10.24	10.46
2002	10.76	11.14
2003	11.09	11.60

Note:
Data for 1997 is unavailable.

Patient Transfers

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to ensure that cardiac patients awaiting transfer from the Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother hospital in Margate to London hospitals for surgery are able to travel expeditiously by ambulance. [222356]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for acute trusts together with primary care trusts to ensure that when patients need to be transferred to another hospital; this is done in a timely and clinically safe manner. The Department recently announced the allocation of £14 million to Kent cardiac services to enable more patients to be treated locally, with fewer patients having to travel to London.

Patients (Learning Disabilities)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve the provision of health services for those with learning disabilities; and when he expects the targets for service improvements for adults with learning disabilities set out in the White Paper, "Valuing People", to be achieved. [218115]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government's objective is to enable people with learning disabilities to access a health service designed around their individual needs. The "Valuing People" (March 2001) White Paper included key actions on health and steps taken to achieve these; including the appointment of expert health advisers by the "Valuing People" support team.

The health of people with learning disabilities should be part of mainstream health plans to ensure that all national health service services are accessible to everyone. The Public Health White Paper will address the issue of health inequalities. We are supporting the Disability Rights Commission's investigation into inequalities in access to health care services for people with learning disabilities and mental health service users. We are also discussing with the National Patient Safety Agency a scoping project into the confidential inquiry into premature deaths of people with learning disabilities. There will be an announcement shortly.

We are improving access to primary care services through a new performance indicator in 2005–06 to monitor registration of people with learning disabilities by primary care trusts. In addition, the Healthcare Commission is raising the profile of services for people with learning disabilities through the appointment of a learning disability specialist. We are further supporting the health needs of learning disabled people through funding given to the voluntary sector.

The "Valuing People" White Paper did not define targets; instead, it set out various actions and objectives. Many of the actions have been taken and the objectives achieved. Where work is in progress and the associated aims and objectives have not yet been achieved, we are working with the "Valuing People" support team to take remedial action to ensure their achievement in the near future.

Practice Closures

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the quality of the consultation undertaken by the local primary care trust concerning the closure of the Finchley Road Surgery in Camden. [218166]

Dr. Ladyman: There have been no representations concerning this matter.

Residential Homes (Drugs)

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his latest estimate is of the percentage of patients in residential homes for the elderly who are receiving neuroleptic drugs; and which homes prescribe neuroleptic to 90 per cent. or more of their residents. [220700]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 9 March 2005]: This information is not held centrally.

Scans (Private Sector)

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment was made, before the decision to commission Alliance Medical Ltd. to conduct CT and MRI scans on behalf of the County Durham and Darlington NHS Trust of existing capacity of the Trust's own CT and MRI scanners; [220788]

(2) how many MRI and CT scans have been carried out by Alliance Medical Ltd. on behalf of the County Durham and Darlington NHS Trust; and at what cost. [220789]

Mr. Hutton: Additional diagnostic capacity was procured from Alliance Medical Ltd. as part of a national procurement exercise to serve all parts of England. Alliance Medical's mobile scanning units travel and visit areas according to their needs, as determined by strategic health authority cluster leads. These units only visit areas with long waiting times, following local negotiation.

Alliance Medical's units have carried out 389 scans to date in Durham. Cost is assessed on an average per scan over the life of a five year contract and the total value of the contract is a matter of confidentiality, which cannot be disclosed without prejudicing the commercial interests of the company. However, the cost of scans provided by Alliance Medical is significantly less than the national health service direct access tariff. This represents good value for money, in addition to boosting NHS capacity.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the contract between the NHS and Alliance Medical Ltd. for CT and MRI scans was signed; and who undertook negotiations on behalf of the NHS; [220831]

(2) for how long the NHS contract with Alliance Medical Ltd. will run; and what the total value of the contract is. [220833]

Mr. Hutton: The contract between the national health service and Alliance Medical Ltd. was signed on 29 June 2004. The negotiations were undertaken by the Department's national implementation team.

The contract with Alliance Medical is for five years. The total value of the contract is a matter of commercial confidentiality, and cannot be disclosed without prejudicing the commercial interests of the company. However, the cost of the scans provided by Alliance Medical is significantly less than the national health service direct access tariff. This represents good value for money, in addition to boosting NHS capacity.

Self-harm

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition of self-harm is used by NHS Direct; how many calls NHS Direct received in the last year for which figures are available relating to self-harm; what advice is given by NHS Direct to callers deemed to be self-harming; and whether NHS Direct holds a database of local self-help groups to provide to callers. [221577]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Direct classifies as self-harm all calls relating to self-poisoning or injury, irrespective of the purpose of the act.

NHS Direct is unable to report specifically on the number of call it handles relating to self-harm, as these will categorised under a number of presenting symptoms.

All staff receive training in the handling of calls relating to self-harm against an agreed set of principles.

NHS Direct staff answering calls have access to a detailed database of local and national self help groups.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) training and (b) resources are available to NHS staff dealing with young people with experience of self-harm. [221578]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence's guideline on self-harm, published in 2004, which includes children and young people, has recommended that national health service trusts should provide appropriate training for staff who come into contact with people who self harm.

In addition to trust-based training, NHS staff have access to a variety of university-based education and training courses to equip them to work with young people who self harm. The number of resources available for staff working with young people who self harm is increasing. The National Inquiry into Self-Harm and Young People, run jointly by the Camelot Foundation and the Mental Health Foundation, on which the Department is represented, has been recently launched. It aims to educate and raise awareness about self-harm, and provide training and practical guidelines for individuals and organisations who work with young people who self-harm.

Young Minds, a national charity for children's mental health has also compiled an extensive web-based catalogue of reading material and resources for staff who work with young people who self-harm.

Sikh Employees

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is on the wearing of the Kirpan by Sikh employees. [221670]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department values the diversity of all its staff and has a policy to ensure that no member of staff will be discriminated against on the grounds of their faith. Subject to health and safety considerations, Sikh employees of the Department can wear the Kirpan.

Visually Impaired People

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide CCTV readers for visually impaired people through the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [222359]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service hospital eye service provides optical devices and loans low vision aids, such as high-powered reading lenses, hand-held and stand magnifiers and telescopes, to people with visual impairment. In addition, some primary care trusts have local arrangements for the provision of low vision aids through community-based opticians.

Electronic magnifiers are classed as aids to daily living and as such providing them is the responsibility of local authority social services departments. Social service departments assess individuals' needs and arrange services to meet those needs. This can include the provision of closed circuit television (CCTV). However, hand-held, stand and spectacle-mounted magnifiers are generally easier to use, more widely available and more accessible.

In keeping with the principle of flexibility in meeting local needs, NHS hospital trusts, primary care trusts and social service departments are being encouraged to work more closely together, including the possibility of establishing joint budgets for equipment which could allow for the provision of a wider range of services and equipment than has hitherto been available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Deaf People (Public Service Delivery)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken in the last three years to ensure that deaf and hard of hearing people have equality of access to Government services. [218848]

Mr. Spellar: Over the past three years significant work has been initiated or completed to improve communication between staff in Government Departments in Northern Ireland and people who are deaf or have a hearing impairment.

Examples of steps taken across Departments are as follows:

The formation of a partnership group whereby Departments, led by the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure, are working in partnership with representatives of the deaf community to develop ideas for improving access to public services by users of sign language;

Sign language interpreters are provided at public events;

The issue of guidance in 2004 from the Head of the Northern Ireland Civil Service to all Departments to ensure external events are fully accessible to people with disabilities;

Departments have been delivering training in deaf awareness, sign language and in the use of text phones;

The Department of Finance and Personnel is implementing a programme to ensure people with disabilities can have physical access and communication access to Government buildings. This includes the installation of Deaf Loop systems (at counter points, reception areas and designated rooms in all buildings with a public interface), Deaf Alerter systems for evacuation purposes, Beacons in toilet areas, Quematic systems in public offices, Signage and Text Phones;

The Promoting Social Inclusion Working Group on Disability was established in 2004. This comprises members of Government Departments and those representing people with disabilities and is examining how services can be improved to better address the needs and rights of disabled people including those who are deaf or have a hearing impairment. This work includes conducting a major survey of people with disabilities across Northern Ireland during 2005.

Examples of good practice within Departments are as follows:

The Social Security Agency (SSA) is working in partnership with the Royal National Institute for the Deaf (RNID) on a pilot scheme which will identify possible improvements on services for customers with hearing impairments. Furthermore the SSA has given a commitment to work towards the RNID's "Louder than Words" Charter Mark of best practice;

The Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency of the Department of the Environment makes extra time available to theory test candidates, if required;

Trainees with a disability, including those who are deaf or have a hearing impairment, who enter Jobskills, are entitled to additional training time and funding to assist them in achieving their qualifications;

The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development has provided support under the PEACE II programme for a project which will provide training, support and networking for people who are deaf or have a hearing impairment;

The College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise identifies students who are deaf or have a hearing impairment when they enrol. Each student with such a disability is assigned a personal tutor;

The Department of Education in co-operation with the National Deaf Children's Society has issued two booklets, "Deaf Friendly Schools" and "Deaf Friendly Nurseries and Pre-schools", which provide a clear and friendly view of the context in which young deaf people's education takes place.

All of the above are examples of the standards which Government have set and will continue to review and improve by working in partnership with organisations representing people who are deaf or hearing impaired and from disabled people themselves via consultation and the gathering of information.

Locum Doctors

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether locum doctors in Northern Ireland are able to join the Health and Personal Social Services superannuation scheme; and if he will make a statement. [221518]

Angela Smith: The National Health Service (NHS) Pension regulations were amended in England, Wales and Scotland in 2002 and 2003 respectively to permit access to the NHS Pension Schemes in England, Wales and Scotland to freelance locums on a new supplementary list. Those regulations had to be further amended to permit access to GP locums. The regulations in England and Wales are now being amended again to take account of the new medical performers list, which incorporates the supplementary list.

In Northern Ireland, the prior approval of the Department of Finance and Personnel will be required before the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety can proceed to amend the HPSS Superannuation Regulations to cover both backdated and future scheme membership for freelance and GP locums who are registered on the performers list. This approval is currently being sought.

Railways

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans the Government have for the old Comber railway line between Belfast and Comber; and if he will make a statement. [222124]

Mr. Spellar: The Old Comber railway line has been identified as a proposed cycle route in the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan 2015. This cycle route will form part of the National Cycle Network, which has been promoted by Sustrans, the sustainable transport charity as part of approximately 155 miles of cycle route proposed in the County Down area.

The Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan has also proposed the use of part of the former railway line for a pilot Rapid Transit scheme (known as Eway) on the portion of the line between Holywood Arches and Graham's Bridge Dundonald subject to economic appraisal, budgetary processes and the completion of statutory processes. It is proposed that cycle route facilities are provided in conjunction with the rapid transit scheme.

DRD Roads Service has already provided lengths of cycle route along stretches of the old Comber railway line between King's Road and Holy wood Arches and has drawn up proposals to extend this route towards Dundonald during 2005–06.

Roads

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans the Government have to improve (a) the Portaferry Road between Newtownards and Portaferry over the next two years and (b) traffic management in Newtownards to alleviate traffic congestion at peak times. [222123]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the right hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin to Mr. David Trimble, dated 16 March 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question asking what plans the Government has to improve (a) the Portaferry Road between Newtownards and Portaferry over the next two years and (b) traffic management in Newtownards to alleviate traffic congestion at peak times (222123). I have been asked to reply as the issue raised falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

I am pleased to be able to advise you that we are planning an improvement scheme during the 2005/6 financial year, costing approximately £30,000 along the A20 Portaferry to Newtownards road at the Rowreagh Road/Gransha Road junction, subject to agreement on land acquisition. We are also starting work shortly on the reconstruction of Main Street, Kircubbin, from the junction with Blackhall Street to the junction with Roden Street, at an estimated cost of £300,000. Unfortunately, a scheme to resurface approximately one kilometre of the stretch of Rowreagh Road south of Loughdoo Road to Abbacy Road at a cost of approximately £120,000 has been postponed due to an impending major works scheme by Water Service.

With regard to traffic management schemes planned for Newtownards, you will be aware a number of road improvement schemes have been identified in the Draft Ards/Down Area Plan. I understand the Public Inquiry for the Plan is due to commence in early May. The schemes identified in the Area Plan include the:

Bowtown Road link—from Portaferry Road to Bowtown Road;

Southern Relief Road—from Portaferry Road to Scrabo Road via the Comber Road;

Frederick Street Link—from Nursery Road to Frederick Street Roundabout; and Talbot Street/North Road upgrade—improvements to junction layout.

In addition, the construction of the Bowtown Road link extension to the Donaghadee Road via the Movilla Road, to the east of Newtownards, has been identified to be undertaken with the proposed development to the east of the town. All of these schemes will contribute significantly to the improvement of traffic movements in the town of Newtownards, although no definite timescale can be given for the delivery of most of these schemes at this time.

It is likely that the proposed Southern Relief Road, which will greatly benefit traffic movement in the area, may well be provided over the next two years. Planning permission has already been granted for a section of this road and work is currently ongoing to progress the Direction Order on the remainder of the scheme.

The Zion Place roundabouts on the Bangor Road have also been identified within the Draft Ards/Down Area Plan as requiring improvements and modelling work is ongoing for this junction. As the provision of the Southern Relief Road will alter the traffic movements at the New Road/Portaferry Road junction, this site is also being examined. Unfortunately, it is not possible at this time to be precise on when these junctions may be improved as any proposed schemes will be dependant on the findings of the Area Plan Public Inquiry.

I hope this information is helpful.

Ulster Hospital

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to reduce waiting lists for surgery at the Ulster Hospital. [222077]

Mr. Spellar: The Ulster Community and Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust is treating more than 95 per cent. of inpatients and daycases within 12 months of being placed on the waiting list.

Data provided by the Trust for 7 March 2005 indicate that there are 126 patients waiting more than 18 months for inpatient or daycase treatment at the Trust, a reduction of 66 per cent. compared to the position in April 2004. Plans are in place to treat as many of these patients as possible by the end of March 2005 and those patients remaining will be provided with a treatment plan containing an anticipated date for treatment.

The Trust has a comprehensive waiting list management plan in place and is working towards additional service improvements that will ultimately improve the timeliness, effectiveness and appropriateness of services provided to patients.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to reduce waiting times for category three patients at the accident and emergency unit at the Ulster hospital. [222078]

Mr. Spellar: The Ulster Community and Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust is taking a number of steps to improve the clinical environment in accident and emergency and to shorten waiting times for patients at the Ulster hospital. These steps include:

The appointment of additional nursing staff;

An extension to the existing accident and emergency department;

The refurbishment of the reception and waiting areas; and

The introduction of a new rapid assessment and treatment unit, which will include the provision of additional cubicle space.

At a regional level the Department is taking forward a comprehensive Emergency Pressures Programme, requiring the Ulster Community and Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust and other Trusts to implement a number of compulsory actions and good practice measures to improve the flow of emergency admissions and reduce trolley waits.

Unsolved Killings

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what he expects the likely outcome of the review of the unsolved killings to be in respect of the prosecution of individuals found to have been responsible for murder since 1969. [221383]

Mr. Pearson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland announced, on 8 March, the provision of additional funding to enable the Chief Constable to expand the work of the Serious Crime Review Team (SCRT) in a way that will command the confidence of relatives and the wider community.

The objective of the new unit will be to try and achieve closure where concerns remain from families and to allow the PSNI as an organisation to close inquiries with confidence in the integrity of the investigative process and satisfied that no further investigative opportunities exist.

Where evidential opportunities exist these cases will be reinvestigated with the possibility of evidence being provided to the DPP. Of course, those convicted may be eligible to apply to the Independent Sentence Review Commissioners for early release under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998.

Where a judicial outcome is not possible, the unit will consider ways through which as much information as possible might be made available to the relatives of victims, if that is what they want.

CABINET OFFICE

Cameras

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what his policy is on permitting staff to take cameras into (a) 10 Downing street and (b) the Cabinet Office; [222365]

(2) what his policy is on permitting staff to take mobile telephones which have built-in camera facilities into (a) 10 Downing street and (b) the Cabinet Office; [222366]

(3) how many instances there have been of (a) Downing street and (b) Cabinet Office staff being refused permission to bring (i) cameras and (ii) camera-enabled mobile phones into their respective workplaces, in each of the last three years. [222367]

Mr. Miliband: Staff from both the Cabinet Office and 10 Downing street (Prime Minister's Office) may bring a camera and/or camera phone into the estate but may only use them to take photographs with prior permission from the relevant security section. All staff are aware of, and regularly reminded of, departmental security policy which is rigorously enforced. As staff are allowed to bring cameras and/or camera phones into the estate, but are not allowed to use them within the premises, we do not maintain any records of staff being refused permission to bring them into their respective workplaces.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Alderman Knight School

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects the schools adjudicator to announce his decision on the future of Alderman Knight school, Tewkesbury; and if she will make a statement. [222521]

Margaret Hodge: Schools adjudicators are independent of the Department. The timing of an announcement of an adjudicator's decision is a matter for the Office of the Schools Adjudicator.

Bullying

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will develop a strategy of zero tolerance of violence and intimidation directed at young people. [222703]

Derek Twigg: The Government already has a "zero tolerance" approach to violence in schools and takes this issue very seriously. We have made it clear that head teachers may permanently exclude pupils for violence even where this is a first offence. We are working to create a climate in which all violence is recognised as intolerable. To achieve that, we:

are giving every secondary school access to high-quality behaviour management training materials and expert advice from behaviour management consultants; are providing extra support for schools facing the greatest challenges through our Behaviour Improvement Programme; have provided £120 million for school security improvements since 1997; have based over 300 police officers in schools;

are developing specific violence prevention materials through our Violence Reduction in Schools project; and are consulting on new proposals on keeping knives out of schools, including searching suspect pupils.

These measures will enable schools to tackle the problems that may lead to an escalation to violence and they will make schools even safer for children and staff.

In the main schools are very safe places. Instances of violence are far less frequent than on the streets and in the home. Staff and pupils report fewer concerns about violence than in other European countries.

Diploma in Medicine

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students have enrolled for higher education courses in England leading to a diploma in medicine in (a) September and (b) February in each academic year since September 1998; and how many of each semester's cohort (i) started the second year of studies, (ii) started the third year of studies, (iii) qualified and (iv) registered; [219798]

(2) how many students have enrolled for courses leading to a diploma in nursing at (a) Luton university and (b) the university of Hertfordshire in each semester since September 1998; and how many from each semester's intake (i) started the second year, (ii) started the third year, (iii) qualified and (iv) registered. [219799]

Dr. Howells: This information is not held centrally. The Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) publish completion rates of students on full-time undergraduate courses in "Performance Indicators in Higher Education", but these are not calculated for individual subjects, or courses.

Education Funding

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice she has received from the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) on research conducted for the LSC by the Learning and Skills Development Agency on the size of the funding gap between sixth forms and further education colleges. [222158]

Dr. Howells: None. The report has not been published yet, and we have yet to consider the analysis or the report's conclusions.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects further to reduce the funding gap between school sixth forms and further education colleges in South West Bedfordshire. [222176]

Dr. Howells: Government recognise that there are differences in the funding allocated to school sixth forms and further education colleges and have taken action to address this. We have brought up funding levels for further education colleges as we said we would without penalising schools. Our policy has been to continue to bring up the level of funding for colleges, as and when we are able to secure the resources to do so.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been provided in the 2004–05 financial year to (a) school sixth forms and (b) further education colleges to assist them in covering teachers' pension costs. [222722]

Dr. Howells: The Department does not separately allocate funds to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) for school sixth form and further education college pension costs. We expect schools and colleges to meet staffing costs from funds they receive from the LSC and other sources. The LSC funding includes provision for changes to the Teachers Pensions Scheme in 2003.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding is withdrawn from (a) school sixth forms and (b) further education colleges when a student leaves a level 3 course mid-term; and if she will make a statement. [222723]

Dr. Howells: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is responsible for funding school sixth forms and further education providers. As matters concerning the funding impact of retention relate to the LSC's operational responsibilities, Mark Haysom, the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member providing the information requested. A copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much an average school sixth form received as part of the real-terms annual funding guarantee in (a) 2002–03, (b) 2003–04 and (c) 2004–05; and what the allocation will be in 2005–06. [222724]

Dr. Howells: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is responsible for funding school sixth forms including the operation of our guarantee that, provided pupil numbers are maintained, no school will lose out in real terms as a result of the transfer of funding responsibility to the LSC. As matters concerning the operation of the real terms guarantee relate to the LSC's operational responsibilities, Mark Haysom, the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member providing the information requested. A copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 279W, on further education, to the hon. Member for Finchley and Golders Green (Dr. Vis), what proportion of the funding gap between school sixth forms and further education colleges is due to (a) base funding rates, (b) the annual real-terms funding guarantee, (c) differing funding of institutions when students drop-out, (d) the funding of teachers' pensions, (e) the differential in standards funds, (f) VAT which is able to be reclaimed and (g) costs of maintaining buildings and funding capital projects. [222725]

Dr. Howells: As stated in the answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 279W, on further education (FE), to the hon. Member for Finchley and Golders Green (Dr. Vis), the main measure the Department has used to identify the funding gap is the difference in Learning and Skills Council national base funding rates for an AS/A2 qualification at 2002/03, and the comparative increases since.

I recognise that there is more to overall levels of funding than differences in funding rates and I acknowledge that there are other important differences between school and FE funding. This is a complex area and there is currently no reliable like-for-like comparison between schools and colleges. As part of its agenda for change the LSC is currently reviewing the funding systems and will be consulting later in the year.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much schools in Tamworth have received under the new deal for schools. [221939]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Staffordshire LEA was granted the following amounts under the four phases of NDS: NDS1 1997–98: £1.387 million; NDS2 1998–99 £3.975 million; NDS3 1999–2000 £5.541 million; and NDS4 2000–2001 £10.225 million. No figures are held centrally for Tamworth schools for NDS1. Tamworth schools were allocated £252, 846 for NDS2; £2,231,229 for NDS3; and £5,327,046 for NDS4. This information was recorded centrally and local authorities' allocation of resources may differ from this.

E-university

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills why the UK e-university project was abolished; and if she will make a statement. [222213]

Dr. Howells: We did not abolish the project. A private company, UK eUniversities Worldwide (UKeU), was formed to take forward the UK e-University project. It was intended that this should secure equal funding from public and private sector investment. In autumn 2003 the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) commissioned an independent review of the UKeU plans. In the light of changes in the global financial market, the fact that student recruitment had not met planned targets in the first year, and the lack of any immediate prospect of matching private investment, the Board of the HEFCE concluded that the opportunity cost of providing further funds was too high. HEFCE then sought discussions with UKeU on a restructuring of the company's activities. On hearing of HEFCE's decision, the UKeU board resigned. The HEFCE Board then decided that future HEFCE funding should be used to support the development of e-learning in universities and colleges themselves, placing emphasis on public good objectives.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the UK e-university project; and what plans she has to establish similar distance learning schemes. [222214]

Dr. Howells: We are reflecting on the findings of the Education and Skills Select Committee Report on the UK e-University and consulting with the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) which has separately been considering the lessons to be learnt. We will issue a formal response to the Education and Skills Committee in due course. It is intended that future HEFCE funding should support the development of e-learning in universities and colleges.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research was undertaken before implementation of the UK e-university project; and if she will make a statement. [222236]

Dr. Howells: The Higher Education Funding Council for England commissioned a substantial body of research, covering commercial, HE and pedagogic aspects of the project. I understand that the research is being disseminated to the higher education sector via the Higher Education Academy to inform future eLearning. The first volume of the e-University Compendium is available at www.heacademy.ac.uk/e-University.htm.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which Minister was responsible for the UK e-university project. [222237]

Dr. Howells: The e-Universities project was announced by the former Secretary of State for Education and Employment, Mr. Blunkett, in February 2000. The Higher Education Funding Council for England was responsible for taking forward the project and subsequent Secretaries of State and Ministers for Higher Education in this Department were kept informed of progress. Responsibility for the running of the private company, UK eUniversities Worldwide (UKeU), rested with its Board.

Harrop Fold School

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether her Department has investigated (a) the financial position of Harrop Fold School, (b) the progress of the school since it was placed in special measures and (c) the staff retention rate at the school. [222514]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department has not undertaken any investigation into the financial position of Harrop Fold School. As this school is subject to special measures it receives regular visits from Ofsted to monitor its progress. The reports of the most recent monitoring visits indicate that the school has made reasonable progress since September 2004. The staff retention rate is now very good and next term the school will be fully staffed with no vacancies or supply teachers.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the future of the Harrop Fold School, Worsley, with particular reference to (a) its financial position and (b) any replacement school. [222515]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Harrop Fold School is currently subject to special measures. Ofsted's report on its last monitoring visit to the school in January 2005 noted that it had made reasonable progress since the last such visit in October 2004. The school has a budget deficit which is being taken into account in the work of the School Improvement Partnership Board that has been established to oversee its recovery. We are not aware of any plans to replace the school, which would be a matter for the local authority in the first instance.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received from (a) parents and (b) Salford metropolitan borough council about Harrop Fold School, Worsley. [222516]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: DfES Ministers have received four representations from the Harrop Fold Action Group since the school was placed in special measures. There have been no formal representations from Salford metropolitan district council, although the Council has been in regular correspondence about the school with DfES officials since May 2003 when the school was placed in special measures.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who the members are of the School Improvement Partnership Board put in place to monitor progress at Harrop Fold school, Worsley; how often it has met; and to whom it is accountable. [222517]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The membership of the School Improvement Partnership Board (SIPB) set up to manage, challenge and support recovery programmes for Harrop Fold school includes a former headteacher as chair; the executive head teacher of Harrop Fold; the chair of the governing body of Harrop Fold; the chief education officer for Salford; the deputy chief education officer for Salford; a senior education adviser and one official from the Department for Education and Skills. The SIPB has met four times since 31 August 2004. The SIPB is accountable to my Department for the substantial funding we have provided to support its work to improve the school.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the current status is of Individual Learning Accounts; and when they will be re-introduced into England. [222233]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Individual Learning Account scheme was closed on 23 November 2001 after serious allegations of fraud.

The Department is continuing investigations into learning providers that may have abused the Individual Learning Account scheme and is supporting the police in pursuing criminal proceedings against a number of learning providers. To date the police have been successful in cases involving 11 ILA learning providers, which have resulted in 11 individuals being convicted with a variety of prison and suspended sentences, community service and fines being imposed.

Ministers decided, after careful examination of the lessons we must learn, not to introduce another stand alone Individual Learning Account scheme. Instead, we have integrated those ILA elements that proved successful within the broader skills strategy described in the White Paper, "21st Century Skills, Realising Our Potential" (Cmnd 5810), published in July 2003.

Office for Fair Access

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the milestones for admissions submitted to the Office for Fair Access by individual universities are. [222595]

Dr. Howells: Details of all university access agreements that have been approved by the Office for Fair Access, including milestones, will be publicly available on the OFFA website (http://www.offa.org.uk) from Thursday 17 March.

Primary School Class Sizes (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in primary schools in the Ribble Valley were in classes of 31 or more in each year since 1996–97. [221984]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is shown in the table.

Professor Sir Roy Meadow

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what work remunerated from public funds has been undertaken by Professor Sir Roy Meadow in the last two years. [222070]

Margaret Hodge: Professor Meadow has undertaken no work during the past two years on behalf of the Department for Education and Skills. My Department does not have information on whether he has undertaken any other work remunerated from public funds.

School Leavers (Ribble Valley)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of pupils in Ribble Valley left school with no qualifications in 2004. [221985]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The proportion of 15 year-old pupils[1] that failed to achieve a GCSE or equivalent qualification in the parliamentary constituency of Ribble Valley in 2003–04 was 3.1 per cent.

[1] GCSE and equivalent results are reported as standard as the results of pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year (i.e. 31 August 2003) and therefore reaching the end of compulsory education at the end of the school year.

Schools (Internet Security)

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she has taken to ensure that schools implement security measures in respect of their use of the internet. [222189]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Education and Skills and with Becta (The British Educational Communications and Technology Agency) are committed to ensuring that schools have advice and information on internet safety, to help teachers make informed decisions about the technological and practical steps that they can take to keep their students safe.

The Superhighway Safety website includes advice on all aspects of internet safety covering a number of key areas of concern such as e-mails for students, filtering systems, school websites and chat rooms. The guidance pack is online at http://safety.ngfl.gov.uk. Schools are advised to have an acceptable use policy signed by students and their parents, guardians or carers detailing the ways the internet can or cannot be used.

Self-harm

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) training and (b) resources are available to educational professionals dealing with young people with experience of self-harm; and what definition of self-harm the Department uses. [221576]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The school workforce can draw upon a range of training support in dealing with self-harm. The resources available centrally include the Department's 2001 guide "Promoting Children's Mental Health in Early Years and School Settings" which gives advice on how self-harm can be managed; and "Promoting emotional health and well-being through the National Healthy School Standard", jointly produced by the Departments of Health and Education and Skills, offers guidance and training modules on whole school approaches to supporting emotional well-being more generally. Every local education authority in England works in partnership with primary care trusts to manage and deliver a local healthy schools programme, supported by a local co-ordinator and education and health team.

Further guidelines for education professionals will be available later this year when a national inquiry into self-harm reports. The Department uses the Inquiry's description of self-harm as encompassing

> "a wide range of things that people do to themselves, in a deliberate and usually hidden way, which are damaging."

SOAs (Dartford)

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she (a) has taken and (b) is proposing to take to assist the lower level super output areas (SOAs) in Dartford that fall within the most deprived 20 per cent. of lower level SOAs in England and Wales in terms of educational qualifications and access to education, skills and training. [221102]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Government policy is not currently targeted at a super output area level, but there is an abundance of activity in the Dartford area to address the issues arising from the relatively high levels of deprivation, some directly funded through DfES funding, some through a multi-agency approach.

To give some indication of the levels of activity in the Dartford area there is:

a creative writing initiative to engage the pupils;

a major literacy project in Swanscombe (using a variety of budgets); additional support is made available for providing support for behavioural management in 10 primary schools and the two secondary schools;

three of the primary schools are being remodelled (physical infrastructure) to provide a high quality environment that will enhance the extended school activities by incorporating health, community and social services provision; vocational centres to enhance the work related learning curriculum developed in schools through funding to address the growth agenda in the area;

funding gained to provide additional support in schools to improve the home:school links and engage better with the local communities;

a children's centre based in Swanscombe.

all schools in the area are addressing the Healthy Schools Standard.

In addition, Kent county council have developed school 'cluster' arrangements to help develop collaborative approaches.

Special Educational Needs

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary and (b) secondary school teachers are trained to provide physical education for pupils with special educational needs. [221437]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information is not collected centrally.

Students

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students attended (a) Russell Group universities and (b) other universities in each of the last three years, broken down by (i) socio-economic class and (ii) ethnic group. [218983]

Dr. Howells: The latest available information on socio-economic group was published in September by the Higher Education Statistics Agency and is given in the first table. The latest information on ethnicity is shown in the second table.

Swimming

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assistance is available to pupils from low-income families for swimming lessons; [222404]

(2) what initiatives her Department has undertaken since 2001 to promote swimming among school pupils; [222405]

(3) what the status of swimming is within the national curriculum. [222407]

Derek Twigg: Swimming and water safety is a compulsory part of the PE national curriculum at Key Stage 2. During key stages 3 and 4, schools must offer pupils two programmes of study from: swimming and water safety; athletics and; outdoor and adventurous activities.

Swimming also has a significant role to play within our national strategy for PE, School Sport and Club Links. Since 2001 we have:

created a new swimming and water safety website (www.nc.uk.net/safeswimming) which provides practical support for schools and swimming teachers;

published, in December 2003, a swimming charter, which sets out guidelines, shares best practice and provides practical support to help schools overcome many of the challenges they face when planning and delivering swimming; and carried out a pilot programme which tested out how best to support those children who reach the end of Key Stage 2 and are not able to swim 25 metres.

We intend to implement this programme nationally from April 2006 and over £5 million of funding has been allocated to support the scheme in 2006–07 and 2007–08. We will be consulting shortly on what the detail of this programme might look like.

Furthermore, as part of its wider provision, the PE and school sport national professional development programme will help to improve the quality of swimming teaching throughout England. The programme will identify where there is most need and provide specific professional development and support to help ensure high quality swimming tuition in schools. Every school will be able to access this programme free of charge from April 2005.

As it is a statutory part of the national curriculum, no charge to parents can be made for the cost of providing swimming lessons, or for the cost of transport to carry pupils to and from the lesson. Schools can ask for voluntary contributions to cover the cost of swimming activities, but when requesting the contribution it must make it clear that no child will be treated differently, or left out of the activity, because their parent is unable or unwilling to make the contribution.

Teachers

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many full-time equivalent regular teachers there were in maintained schools in September 2004. [221591]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Information on the numbers of teachers in service is collected in January of each year.

Provisional teacher numbers for January 2005 will be published in April 2005.

Figures for January 2004 were published in table 15 of the Statistics of Education, School Workforce in England, 2004 edition a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library. Alternatively this publication is available at the following URL:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/OL/v000554/index.shtml

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total cost of employing a newly qualified teacher for their first year of work, including salary and pension contributions, is in the current financial year. [222161]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Currently there are four regional pay scales, inner London, outer London, fringe area and England and Wales (excluding the London area). Each of these pay scales has a different starting salary.

For the current financial year (April 4 to March 5), the starting salary of a newly qualified teacher in Inner London is £22,059. The corresponding on costs (national insurance and pension contributions) are 20.7 per cent. bringing the total cost to £26,625.

In outer London the starting salary is £20,862 and the incorporated on costs (national insurance and pension contributions) is 20.6 per cent. bringing the total cost to £25,155.

The starting salary for the fringe area is £19,449. The on costs (national insurance and pension contributions) are estimated to 20.4 per cent. bringing the total cost to £23,420.

For England and Wales (excluding the London area), a newly qualified teacher's salary is £18,558. The corresponding national insurance and pension contributions are estimated at 20.3 per cent. of bringing the total cost to £22,326.

These figures are for the first point of main pay spine for qualified classroom teachers and do not include allowances.

This information is based on data from the school teachers' pay and conditions document 2004 and on the 2004–05 Inland Revenue national insurance rates and thresholds.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to the Government of China on human rights abuses in Kheetan Province; and if he will make a statement. [221449]

Mr. Rammell: There was a discussion on Xinjiang at the most recent round of the EU/China human rights dialogue held in Luxembourg in February 2005.

The UK delegation visited Xinjiang in November 2003 as part of our biannual UK China human rights dialogue. There was a follow-up discussion on Xinjiang at the next round of the dialogue held in London on 13–14 May 2004.

We put forward a number of concerns about Xinjiang in connection with the most recent round of the dialogue, held in Beijing on 22 November 2004.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised human rights during his trip to China in January 2005. I discussed human rights issues with Assistant Foreign Minister Li Hui during my trip to China in October 2004.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter dated 25 January from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding Darfur, reference: 1 85889/05. [221619]

Mr. MacShane: My hon. Friend the Minister for Africa (Chris Mullin) replied directly to "Waging Peace" on 9 March and copied this reply to the hon. Member.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter dated 3 February from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding Miss S. Watson of Abu Dhabi. [221620]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. and noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean replied to the hon. Member on 10 March.

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter of 26 January 2005 from the hon. Member for Walsall, North regarding a constituent, reference 97610. [222513]

Mr. Alexander: UKvisas are continuing with their inquiries with our high commission in Kingston and hope to be able to offer a substantive reply to my hon. Friend shortly.

Cyprus

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial assistance has been given by (a) the Government and (b) the EU to the Northern Cyprus Administration in each of the last three years; and for what projects. [221545]

Mr. MacShane: The British Government have given no financial assistance to the Turkish Cypriot Administration.

Our high commission has funded a number of projects in north Cyprus all designed to help bring Turkish Cypriots closer to the EU, to encourage re-unification of the island and to make a future settlement less costly and easier to implement.

Most EU assistance still awaits agreement on the relevant regulation—details of projects undertaken in the interim may be obtained from the European Commission.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of (a) Turkish Cypriots and (b) Turkish settlers living in northern Cyprus who work in the Republic of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [221546]

Mr. MacShane: We have made no such estimate, although our understanding is that no mainland Turkish workers are permitted to work in the south. The issue of workers remains an important issue for clarification by the parties in the context of a comprehensive settlement.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether a Minister from his Department has visited the closed area of Famagusta; and if he will make a statement. [221557]

Mr. MacShane: I visited Famagusta in October 2004 and saw the sad state of Varosha which has not been inhabited since 1974.

The closed area of Famagusta has not been part of recent visits to Cyprus by Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers, although our high commissioner has visited, under the auspices of the UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus (UNFICYP).

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the areas of northern Cyprus that (a) the British high commissioner to Cyprus and (b) senior officials at the high commission have visited in the last 12 months. [221572]

Mr. MacShane: It is not possible to list all the areas visited. Our high commissioner and his staff routinely visit northern Cyprus, in order to monitor and influence Turkish Cypriot opinion and to discharge consular and other duties wherever required.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed with the Turkish-Cypriot Administration in northern Cyprus its policy on bringing the closed area of Famagusta into use. [221574]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed this issue with the Turkish-Cypriot Administration. However, our officials regularly discuss all aspects of the situation in Cyprus with Turkish Cypriot representatives.

We have also encouraged dialogue on these issues between the Turkish Cypriot leadership and the European Commission.

Egypt

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the Egyptian President's request to Parliament to amend article 76 of the Egyptian constitution to allow multiple candidates in September's Presidential polls; and if he will make a statement. [221606]

Mr. Rammell: The UK has always supported Egyptian efforts on reform. We welcome President Mubarak's proposal on 28 February for a change to the Egyptian constitution, with the stated aim of enabling direct election of the President from among multiple candidates. This is the first step towards Egypt taking its place among the leading reforming countries in the region.

EU Presidency

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what programme points, other than the summit with European Union foreign ministers in Newport in September, have been confirmed for the UK's EU presidency agenda. [221601]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the copy of the provisional programme for the UK's presidency of the European Union, which has been placed in the Library of the House.

European Constitution

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government plan to issue further guidance on the treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe which provides analysis and comparison of the existing treaties and the new treaty, as referred to by the Prime Minister on 4 May 2004, Official Report, column 1456W. [221570]

Mr. MacShane: A Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) commentary analysing the treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe compared with the existing EU treaties was laid before the House on 26 January and published as Command Paper 6459 on 7 February. It can be accessed free of charge at www.europe.gov.uk. Hard copies are available in central libraries and to members of the public on request from the FCO.

Gibraltar

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much money was allocated to Gibraltar from the UK Exchequer in 2004–05. [221481]

Mr. MacShane: The costs of the Convent (the Governor's Office) in the financial year 2004–05 are £1.268 million (£1.187 million running costs and £81,000 capital expenditure). Core Ministry of Defence costs are £78.491 million (£64.698 million operating costs and £13.793 million capital expenditure). The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is also responsible for the Gibraltar Project Fund which has an allocation of £400,000 in financial year 2004–05.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's policy is on expanding trade relations with Gibraltar. [221490]

Mr. MacShane: The Government are committed to helping Gibraltar maintain its prosperity through open access to markets in goods and services.

Israel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2005, Official Report, column 1578W, on Israel, whether he has made representations to the Israeli authorities about the Citizenship and Entrance to Israel law since it was extended on 31 January. [221689]

Mr. Rammell: Our Ambassador in Tel Aviv raised the matter with Israeli Interior Minister Paz-Pines on 7 March. Mr. Paz-Pines said the Israeli government would conduct a further review of the temporary order on 31 May. He expected to see modifications to the law which would allow Palestinians above a certain age to be reunited with their families in Israel. The law would expire at the end of 2005, by which time an entirely new immigration law would need to be introduced.

Kyrgyzstan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the legitimacy of the first round of parliamentary elections in Kyrgyzstan; and if he will make a statement. [221605]

Mr. Rammell: As I said in a press statement on 4 March 2005, I am encouraged to see that the parliamentary elections in Kyrgyzstan on 27 February were more competitive than previous elections, and that voting and the count on the day were a considerable improvement. But a number of significant shortcomings, particularly before election day, meant the elections still did not fully match up to international standards. A copy of the statement is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website: www.fco.gov.uk/news/press-releases.

The UK, like its EU partners, believes that freedom of expression is fundamental to the democratic process. The pressure exerted on the independent media and the late deregistration of some candidates, for example, restricted this freedom for the voters of Kyrgyzstan.

Looking to the second round of parliamentary elections on 13 March 2005 and the presidential elections later this year, I urged the Kyrgyz authorities in my statement of 4 March to take these issues into account and seize the opportunity to set a strong example for the rest of Central Asia.

Moldova

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the presidential elections in Moldova; and whether he has assessed this as a free and fair campaign and vote. [221515]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the declaration on the parliamentary elections in Moldova issued by the EU on 8 March. We are encouraged that the elections were judged by the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) to have generally met international standards for democratic elections. But we urge the Government of Moldova to address without delay the shortcomings identified by the OSCE, in particular problems concerning campaign conditions and the restricted media environment.

The full text of the EU declaration is available on the presidency's website at www.eu2005.lu.

Nuclear Disarmament

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the governments of (a) Iran and (b) North Korea on nuclear disarmament; and if he will make a statement. [221433]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is in regular contact with his Iranian counterpart. Discussion of Iran's nuclear programme forms a key part of these exchanges. He also has frequent discussions with his French, German and US colleagues concerning Iran's nuclear programme. The issue is regularly on the agenda for discussion with a wide range of Ministers from other states.

Discussion of Iran's nuclear programme at senior official level continue on a regular basis.

There has been no direct ministerial contact with the Government of North Korea since the visit of my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Rammell) in December 2004. The Government are, however, following closely developments in North Korea, and is in regular contact with other interested Governments. We urge the Government of North Korea to resume its engagement in the six-party talks process, which aims to resolve international concerns about the status of North Korea's nuclear programmes.

Peter Dun

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the case of Mr. Peter Dun. [221277]

Mr. MacShane: We are not able to comment because we owe a duty of confidentiality to serving and former members of staff.

Student Visas

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many rejected overseas student visa applications were (a) overturned and (b) upheld on appeal in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [222378]

Mr. Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not have figures detailing the number of successful appeals that were made against decisions to refuse entry clearance.

UK Embassies

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the cost of employing a commercial officer in each UK embassy in (a) the EU and (b) North America. [222028]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The decision on which grades to employ at a post on commercial work and therefore the cost to be incurred is determined by the resources needed to meet UK Trade and Investment's (UKTI) trade development and inward investment objective. A commercial officer is not an Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) grade but a job description that can be applied to any of the UK based civil servants or locally engaged staff making up some 1,600 full-time staff equivalents across a wide range of grades and salary bands working on UKTI's objective at FCO posts overseas.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what criteria are used to calculate the cost-effectiveness of magistrates courts. [221828]

Mr. Leslie: Hitherto magistrates courts have been managed through 42 Magistrates Courts Committees (MCCs). The overall performance of MCCs is monitored through a range of financial and performance measures. The cost efficiency of the MCCs is measured through the "Cost per Unit of weighted Caseload". This measure is calculated by comparing total expenditure for each MCC with the total number of completed proceedings, the latter being weighted according a common set of assumptions of the relative complexity for 14 case types.

Royal Marriage

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether it is intended to amend section 6 of the Civil List Act 1952 consequent upon the decision to raise Mrs. Camilla Parker Bowles to the title of HRH the Duchess of Cornwall on her marriage to HRH the Prince of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [222239]

Mr. Leslie: No.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs where and how it is proposed to convene a meeting of the Privy Council in compliance with the provisions of the Royal Marriages Act 1972; and if he will make a statement. [222240]

Mr. Leslie: The Privy Council met on 2 March 2005 to give effect to Her Majesty's consent to the marriage of HRH the Prince of Wales and Mrs. Parker Bowles in compliance with the provisions of the Royal Marriages Act 1772.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the proposed marriage of HRH Prince of Wales to Mrs. Camilla Parker Bowles is morganatic. [222341]

Mr. Leslie: No.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will publish as a Command Paper documents held in the Public Record Office and other public archives relating to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's advice and reasons for refusing Edward VIII's request for a morganatic marriage. [222486]

Mr. Leslie: No.

Training Programmes

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was spent per magistrate on basic training in each of the last five years; how much was spent in each of those years on providing training materials; and what advice is available to the Judicial Studies Board on learning styles in the context of training programmes. [221829]

Mr. Leslie: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board, an independent body chaired by Lord Justice Keene. Training for magistrates is paid for and delivered at local level in 42 administrative areas. The budget for magistrates training is not ring-fenced and currently cannot be isolated from the overall grant allocation made by the Department for Constitutional Affairs to the Magistrates Courts Service.

Most magistrate trainers have attended professional training courses for trainers sponsored by the DCA and will be familiar with the theory of learning styles. To support them the JSB employs professionally qualified trainers who advise on learning styles and methods of delivery of the training and associated materials. JSB magistrates training materials, including reference to learning styles, are accessible on the JSB website and include the Magistrates National Training Initiative (MNTI 2) where advice and guidance on basic training for Magistrates can be found.

TRANSPORT

Airport Security Staff

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason security staff at English airports are vetted by the Scottish Criminal Records Bureau; and for how long this has been the case. [222604]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 17 March 2005]: Security staff at UK airports are vetted by the Department for Transport at Counter-Terrorist Check (CTC) Level. All other staff who need to work in the Restricted Zone at airports are required to undergo a check of their criminal record. Such staff need to provide a Basic Disclosure certificate to the pass issuing authority (Aerodrome Manager). At present the only source of such a certificate is Disclosure Scotland (part of the Scottish Criminal Records Office). The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB), which provides the Disclosure service in England and Wales, is considering its approach to the introduction of Basic Disclosures as part of a strategy review.

Cycle Lanes (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of cycle lanes there have been in York in each year since 1996–97. [222230]

Charlotte Atkins: The following table gives details of the number of miles of cycle lanes (plus, in addition, cycle tracks) built and opened in York covering the years 1996–97 to 2005–06. No figures are available for 1996–97 to 1997–98 as records were not kept on cycle track/lane lengths at that time.

Driving Licences

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the adult population of the United Kingdom has a driver's licence. [221831]

Mr. Jamieson: The latest available comparable figures for the United Kingdom show that, at the end of 2002, the number of licence holders was 40,676,136 representing 85.69 per cent. of the eligible population of 47,469,700.

Heathrow Airport

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the latest assessment is of the terminal facilities which would be required if a third runway were to be constructed at Heathrow. [221652]

Charlotte Atkins: In its response to consultation prior to the Air Transport White Paper, BAA argued that the full potential of an additional third runway at Heathrow could not be realised without a sixth terminal to the north of the A4 and suggested four possible options for new facilities. The White Paper itself acknowledged this.

Work is still under way within BAA to examine the options and impacts, as part of the Project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow, and any proposals would be the subject of consultation in due course.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the work being undertaken by Project Heathrow on the future development of runway capacity at Heathrow airport is restricted to examining the implications of a new short runway. [222223]

Charlotte Atkins: As set out in the Air Transport White Paper, the programme of work known as the Project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow includes consideration of the scope for greater utilisation of the two existing runways as well as the possible addition of a third short runway.

Kerrier Home Zone Project

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation was conducted by Kerrier district council regarding the North Close Home Zone project; how much the consultation cost; and what conclusions were published. [222656]

Charlotte Atkins: Cornwall county council is the authority responsible for implementing the North Close Home Zone project. Kerrier district council has carried out consultation on behalf of, and in partnership with, the county council, and was directly responsible for the organisation of the initial consultation fun day. Other consultation has included door to door surveys, leaflets, exhibitions and statutory consultation.

Overall, the county council reports that approximately £29,350 has been spent on the consultation element of the project.

Results of the consultation have not been published by the county council but have been discussed at meetings of the project working group, the minutes of which are circulated widely.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on the North Close Home Zone project, broken down by main budget heading. [222658]

Charlotte Atkins: Cornwall county council, the authority responsible for the development and implementation of the North Close Home Zone, reports that by mid February this year it had spent £481,500 on the project, of which £460,000 has been provided from the Department's Home Zones Challenge fund.

The council has broken this figure down as follows: £29,350 on consultation, £44,500 on detailed design and £407,650 on construction.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of Kerrier district council's management of the funds for the North Close Home Zone project. [222659]

Charlotte Atkins: Kerrier district council have had no involvement in the management of the funds for the North Close Home Zone project. Cornwall county council are responsible for implementation of the scheme and, therefore, the management of the funds, including the Department's grant from the Home Zones Challenge.

The payment of grant is subject to terms and conditions which set out the requirements relating to the provision of quarterly finance and progress reports and the need for annual certification by an auditor appointed by the Audit Commission. A copy of the terms and conditions was placed in the House of Commons Library in May 2004.

The Secretary of State has appointed a consultant to assist with the management of the Home Zones Challenge, to monitor progress of the schemes and to disseminate good practice. Local authority quarterly finance and progress reports are reviewed and summarised by the consultant in reports to the Department and are taken into account in considering and approving payments. The schemes are reviewed regularly at regional meetings and authorities are visited periodically by officials from the Department and/or the programme consultant to review individual schemes.

Local Authority-sponsored Schemes

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what documentation a local authority sponsoring a major transport scheme is required to produce between the confirmation of compulsory purchase orders and the full approval of funding for the scheme. [222362]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 17 March 2005]: The Department issued a guidance note to local authorities in December 2004 on the information that local authorities are now required to submit when seeking full approval and release of funding for major transport schemes under the Local Transport Programme. A copy of this guidance will be placed in the House Library.

London Underground

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment the Government have made of the merits of extending the Central Line of the London Underground network from Shepherd's Bush to Uxbridge. [222218]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have made no such assessment. Proposals for enhancements to the London Underground network are a matter for the Mayor of London. The Mayor undertook a public consultation exercise on proposals for the West London Tram from Shepherd's Bush to Uxbridge between June and October 2004 and announced the results on 1 March 2005.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations which have been consulted by his Department on its proposal to outlaw equipment which detects the presence of speed cameras; and on which dates they were consulted. [222693]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department for Transport consulted the following organisations on proposals to prohibit the use of speed assesment equipment detection devices in January 2001.

ACPO
Association of British Drivers
Association of Independent Road Safety Officers
ALBRSO
Automobile Association Ltd.
County Surveyors Society
CPRE
Driver Technologies Association
Institute of Advanced Motorists
Institute of Road Safety Officers
Institution of Highways and Transportation
LARSOA
Local Government Association
Magistrates' Association
Motorcycle Industry Association
Motorcycle Rider Training Association

RAC
Road Danger Reduction Forum
Road Haulage Association
RoadPeace
RoSPA
Road Haulage Association
Freight Transport Law
Confederation of Passenger Transport
UK Performance Products Ltd.
Beltronics
Automotive Distribution Association
Welsh Assembly
Scottish Executive

This proposal was deferred pending primary legislation which would give powers to prohibit a vehicle being fitted with or a person using a vehicle carrying these devices.

The Road Safety Bill includes such an enabling power. The precise type of devices that would be prohibited would be identified in regulations made under section 41 of the Road Traffic Act 1988. A statutory consultation would be held on the secondary legislation proposals.

Train Cancellations

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains in England and Wales were cancelled on each day between 20 February and 1 March, broken down by reason for cancellation. [221720]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The information is not collated centrally in the specific format requested. Provisional figures for the number of cancelled trains for each day in the specified period are given in the following table. However the causes of such cancellations are not available.

Trains cancelled in England and Wales[1, 2]

Date	Trains cancelled[3]
20 February 2005	102
21 February 2005	248
22 February 2005	219

[1] Figures for England and Wales are for all franchised train operating companies excluding Scotrail.
[2] Figures are provisional subject to verification to ensure that recorded cancellations take account of any changes to the number of scheduled trains for reasons such as the need to undertake engineering works or the introduction of emergency timetables.
[3] Figures relate to cancellations as recorded as part of the Public Performance Measure of train reliability, i.e. trains that did not run as planned or a train that ran but did not complete at least half of its scheduled journey.

TREASURY

Accidents

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many accidents occurred at his departmental premises in each of the last five years involving (a) members of his Department's staff and (b) members of the public. [222570]

Mr. Timms: The number of accidents reported on HM Treasury's premises in each of the last five years involving (a) members of HM Treasury staff and (b) contractors is given as follows. No accidents have been reported by members of the public:

Number of accidents

	Staff	Contractors	Near miss	Total
2000	13	1	0	14
2001	11	14	1	26
2002	41	10	0	51
2003	39	38	2	79
2004	13	25	0	38

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he publishes data for the number of accidents at work involving employees of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [222583]

Mr. Timms: The data will be published in our departmental annual report 2005.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements for monitoring accidents at work involving members of staff of his Department are in place; and if he will make a statement. [222634]

Mr. Timms: HM Treasury monitor all reported accidents and near miss incidents, identifying trends. Quarterly statistics are produced for the various Health and Safety Committees. These statistics are included in the Treasury's Annual Health and Safety Report that is submitted to the Board.

Drug Deaths

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many deaths the primary cause was found to be (a) heroin, (b) crack cocaine, (c) cocaine, (d) ecstasy, (e) cannabis, (f) alcohol, (g) solvents and (h) prescription drugs in each of the last five years. [222621]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Lynne Jones, dated 18 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many deaths the primary cause was found to be (a) heroin, (b) crack cocaine, (c) cocaine, (d) ecstasy, (e) cannabis, (f) alcohol, (g) solvents and (h) prescription drugs in each of the last five years. (222621)

The most recently available information is for deaths in 2003. Relevant figures are only readily available for deaths where the underlying cause was either related to drug poisoning or directly related to alcohol (alcohol abuse, dependence and poisoning, and diseases directly related to alcohol use). It is not possible to identify from death certificates which substance was the primary cause when more than one was involved. Figures related to the number of deaths on which substances (a) to (e) were mentioned are shown in the table below, together with figures on alcohol-related deaths. Figures are for the calendar years 1999 to 2003.

Figures on deaths due to volatile solvent abuse are collected separately by Department of Health. Figures on deaths involving prescription drugs are not available as it is not possible to readily identify deaths where an adverse reaction to a particular drug taken in therapeutic dosage was involved. Adverse reactions to drugs are reported to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency using the yellow card scheme. Figures on deaths from overdoses involving these drugs are available, however some substances are available in prescription and over-the-counter compounds and these cannot be distinguished.

It should be noted that the figures on drug-related poisoning are not directly comparable to the figures on alcohol for the following reasons.

The figures on drugs do not include long-term effects of drug taking, whereas the figures on alcohol include cirrhosis of the liver.

Overdose deaths which involved both drugs and alcohol are coded as due to drug poisoning, in accordance with international rules for coding cause of death.

The figures on alcohol include only those where the underlying cause was alcohol-related. The figures on specific drugs include any mention of a substance on a death related to drug poisoning. This means a death could be included in more than one row of the table, for example if the deceased took both heroin and cocaine.

Number of alcohol-related deaths[1] and deaths from drug-related poisoning[2] involving selected drugs,[3] England and Wales, 1999 to 2003[4]

Deaths from drug-related poisoning where the following substances were specifically mentioned	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003
(a) Heroin/morphine	754	926	889	790	591
(b) + (c) Cocaine (including crack cocaine)[5]	88	80	96	139	113
(d) Ecstasy	26	36	55	55	33
(e) Cannabis	8	11	15	15	11
(f) Alcohol-related deaths	5,505	5,614	5,970	6,033	6,580

[1] For the years 1999–2000 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9). The codes selected to define alcohol-related deaths are listed as follows:
291—Alcoholic psychoses
303—Alcohol dependence syndrome
305.0—Non-dependent abuse of alcohol
425.5—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
571—Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis
E860—Accidental poisoning by alcohol
For the years 2001–2003 the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) was used. To maintain comparability with earlier years the following codes were selected:
F10—Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol
I42.6—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
K70—Alcoholic liver disease
K73—Chronic hepatitis, not elsewhere classified
K74—Fibrosis and cirrhosis of liver
X45—Accidental poisoning by and exposure to alcohol
The selection of codes to define alcohol-related deaths is described in:
Baker A and Rooney C (2003). Recent trends in alcohol-related mortality, and the impact of ICD-10 on the monitoring of these deaths in England and Wales. Health Statistics Quarterly 17, pp 5–14.
[2] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 292, 304, 305.2–305.9, E850-E858, E950.0-E950.5, E962.0 and E980.0-E980.5 for 1999 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes F11-F16, F18-F19, X40-X44, X60-X64, X85 and Y10-Y14from 2001 onwards.
[3] Drugs mentioned on the death certificate of a death where the underlying cause was drug poisoning.
[4] Data are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.
[5] It is not possible to provide separate figures on deaths related to crack cocaine and cocaine from routine mortality data, as these substances are not generally separately identified on death certificates. ONS routinely publishes a combined figure for deaths mentioning cocaine on the death certificate.

Economic Growth

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many quarters of continuous economic growth there have been in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) the UK and (d) Wales from 1997 to the most recent quarter for which information is available. [221491]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Alex Salmond, dated 18 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about economic growth in Scotland, England, Wales and the UK. (221491)

Quarterly GDP data published by the Office for National Statistics show that in the UK there have been 50 consecutive quarters of GDP growth up to and including the fourth quarter of 2004 (chained volume measures). The second quarter of 1992 was the last quarter to show negative GDP growth in real terms, for either the quarter on previous quarter growth rates, or the growth rate of the latest quarter compared to that of the same quarter of the previous year.

Quarterly GDP data published by the Scottish Executive, show positive growth for Scotland for the last 10 quarters up to and including the third quarter of 2004.

No separate quarterly economic data is compiled for England or Wales.

EU Finances

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the UK's share of the most recent underspend on the EU's final budget to be repaid to the UK. [222390]

Mr. Timms: No underspend from the 2004 EC Budget has yet been announced by the European Commission. Any surplus will, as usual, be returned to member states by reducing the amount which they are required to finance in the 2005 EC Budget. This will be implemented by an Amending Budget tater this year. The surplus from the 2003 EC Budget was returned to member states in this way in Amending Budget 7/2004 implemented from 1 October 2004.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response his Department will make to the National Audit Office report on financial management of the EU, with particular reference to (a) persistent errors in transactions, (b) failure to comply with regulatory requirements, (c) delays in closing the 1994 to 1999 structured programmes and (d) poor forecasting of expenditure. [222985]

Mr. Timms: It would not be appropriate for the Treasury to respond to the National Audit Office's report to Parliament on financial management of the EU.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress is being made in the EU on the introduction of resource accounting; and what targets will be set to improve budget accounting reliability. [222391]

Mr. Timms: The European Commission introduced a system of full accruals accounting on time on 1 January 2005.

G7 Meeting

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the agenda is for the G7 meeting due to take place in April. [222481]

Mr. Timms: As set out in Box 2.3 of the 2005 Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, the UK sees its leadership of the G7/8 and EU this year as an opportunity to address the key challenges of international poverty reduction; structural economic reform; fairer trade; and climate change. G7 Finance Ministers will continue their discussions on these issues when they meet in Washington in April.

MOD Risk Assessment Reports

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the Ministry of Defence's (a) December 2003, (b) July 2004 and (c) December 2004 progress reports produced under the Risk Management Assessment Framework. [221879]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Sani Abacha

Tom Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether funds have been returned to Nigeria from bank accounts in the UK of the late Sani Abacha in the last five years. [222403]

Mr. Timms: The return to Nigeria of any money held in accounts owned by the Abacha family or close associates is dependent on the Nigerian authorities prosecuting individuals for their offences and subsequently, if these individuals are found to be guilty, obtaining a confiscation order against them. An application for enforcement of that order in the UK courts would then be required. I understand that no such confiscation orders have, as yet, been made in Nigeria.

In line with the recommendations of the Commission for Africa, UK authorities will continue to deliver a range of technical assistance programmes in partnership with Nigerian authorities in relation to anti-money laundering and mutual legal assistance.

School-age Children (Essex)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children of school age there have been in each year since 1997 in (a) Essex and (b) Southend. [222490]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibilities of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Amess, dated 18 March 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the school age populations for the county of Essex and Southend Unitary Authority since 1997. (222490)

Below is a table showing the 1997 to 2003 mid-year population estimates for children aged 5–15 within these areas.

Mid-year population estimates of school age children (5–15)

	Essex (county of)	Thousand Southend UA
1997	177.9	22.2
1998	178.6	22.3
1999	182.4	22.6
2000	183.7	22.5
2001	184.7	22.4

Energy Policy

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his announcement in the 2004 pre-Budget report, what plans he has to introduce a reduced rate of VAT for micro-combined heat and power units; what data he has collected from field trials; what representations his Department has received from industry; and if he will make a statement. [220786]

Dawn Primarolo: Budget 2005 announced a reduced rate of VAT for the installation of micro-CHP. This decision was taken in light of ongoing field trials, which are overseen by Defra and sponsored by the Carbon Trust in partnership with the Energy Saving Trust. It also follows representations on this issue from industry and stakeholder groups.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Water Quality

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 25 January 2005, Official Report, column 247W, on bottled water, what recent assessment has been carried out to determine whether tap water remains stale and undrinkable. [222534]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: No recent assessment has been made of whether tap water remains stale and undrinkable.

HOME

Alcohol Confiscation

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the power conferred on local authorities by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 to designate areas where alcohol may be confiscated from individuals have been used in each year since 2001, broken down by local authority area. [221130]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Since September 2001 over 135 local authority areas have notified the Home Office that they have made designation orders under section 13 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 to restrict antisocial public drinking in areas that have experienced alcohol-related disorder or nuisance. The following list sets out a breakdown of designation orders made in every year. A number of those listed will appear more than once as they have introduced more than one designation order since 2001.

Correspondence

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 10 February from the hon. Member for Northavon with regard to a passport application for a constituent, Sa-Sa Ho. [222523]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 16 March 2005]: I replied to the hon. Member on 15 March 2005.

Passports

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the adult population of the United Kingdom had a passport in the most recent year for which figures are available. [221830]

Mr. Browne: At the end of 2004, the percentage of the adult population aged 16 and over that holds a valid passport is within the range of 73 per cent. to 85 per cent.

Police Training

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the average annual cost of employing, training and developing a probationary police constable in each year since 1997. [220168]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary have estimated that the average salary, training and development costs of a probationary police constable up to independent patrol (which is normally 31 weeks after joining a force) in 2003–04 were £27,048. This figure includes salary costs of £13,993 per probationary police constable for that period and training and development costs of £13,055.

Information about the associated costs for recruitment, supervision, accommodation, information technology etc. is not collated centrally.

The average annual costs for all these in each year since 1997 is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prevention of Terrorism

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the legislative provisions to introduce control orders will contain sunset clauses. [216834]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005, as now enacted, does not contain a sunset clause, but instead provides for annual renewal of its provisions subject to approval by both Houses.

In addition, I have informed the House that the Bill to be introduced in the next Session on counter-terrorism offences will provide an opportunity for Parliament, if it so decides, to amend the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005.

Work Permits

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens from the Isle of Man have been granted work permits in each of the last five years. [222933]

Mr. Browne: No citizens of the Isle of Man have been granted work permits in the last five years. Citizens of the Isle of Man do not require work permits to work in the UK.

DEFENCE

2 Princess of Wales Regiment

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) under whose operational command 2 Princess of Wales Regiment will serve for the duration of their deployment outside their tactical area of responsibility; [222219]

(2) if he will make a statement on the (a) purpose and (b) duration of the deployment of 2 Princess of Wales Regiment outside their tactical area of responsibility. [222220]

Mr. Ingram: The 2nd Battalion, the Princess of Wales Royal Regiment (2PWRR) is currently part of the UK-led Multinational Division (South East) (MND(SE)). Elements of 2PWRR have recently relocated to Al Muthanna province within the MND(SE) area of operations. They deployed as part of a Battlegroup, based on the Queen's Dragoon Guards, which is providing framework security and conducting security sector reform in that province. That Battlegroup will continue to carry out those tasks until they are replaced, either by another UK Battlegroup or by a coalition partner.

All elements of 2PWRR remain under the operational command of the General Officer Commanding MND(SE), with the exception of one platoon which is currently located in Baghdad, where it provides force protection to senior British military personnel. This is a longstanding deployment which predates the arrival of 2PWRR in Iraq.

AWE Aldermaston

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expenditure by his Department on AWE Aldermaston was in each of the last five years; and what expenditure he has allocated for 2005–06. [221429]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence's expenditure on AWE Aldermaston in each of the past five years is shown in the following table. All costs are at 2004–05 prices. The figure for 2004–05 is provisional. The allocation for 2005–06 has not yet been finalised.

	£ million
2000–01	303
2001–02	284
2002–03	302
2003–04	300
2004–05	312

Civil Servants (Gibraltar)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether local bids will be invited for contracts for work currently carried out by departmental staff in Gibraltar; and whether a bid from existing departmental employees in Gibraltar would be considered. [218934]

Mr. Ingram: Two areas of work currently being carried out by MOD staff in Gibraltar are being examined for contractorisation.

Any company, including those from Gibraltar, could tender if it meets published MOD commercial criteria. There is no current policy that precludes a competitive in-house option for tasks currently done in-house.

Iraq

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Iraq. [222541]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 17 March 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 1, to my hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Rooney).

RAF Manual of Flight Safety

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 1 February 2005, Official Report, column 779W, on RAF Manual of Flight Safety, if he will place a copy of the Seventh Edition of AP 3207 in the Library. [217052]

Mr. Ingram: I have placed a copy of the seventh Edition of AP 3207 (incorporating Amendment lists 1–3) in the Library of the House today.

Resource Account Codes

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a description of 2004–05 resource account codes (a) GXXWA0 and (b) LM003. [221980]

Mr. Ingram: The descriptions are as follows:

GXXWAO

Cost Communication with Flag Officer Training and Recruitment

LMA003

United Kingdom National Insurance Civilian Staff—Loan–United States Air Force Accruing Superannuation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Accidents

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether she publishes data for the number of accidents at work involving employees of her Department; and if she will make a statement. [222597]

Ms Hewitt: The Department of Trade and Industry publishes data for the number of accidents at work involving employees. This accident data is contained in the Departmental Report. For 2004–05, there have been only two reportable accidents of a minor nature involving employees.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements for monitoring accidents at work involving members of staff of her Department are in place; and if she will make a statement. [222638]

Ms Hewitt: Procedures for monitoring accidents are an integral part of the Department's health and safety guidance. There are formal processes in place for recording, analysing and investigating accidents, whether reportable under health and safety legislation or not. Instructions on the reporting and recording of accidents are available to staff on the Departmental intranet and the Department has a team of safety advisers who investigate accidents and ensure appropriate remedial action is taken.

Bank Charges

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will commission research into the (a) reasons for and (b) level of unavoidable miscellaneous charges made by banks, with particular reference to (i) survey fees, (ii) booking fees, (iii) arrangement fees, (iv) higher lending charges fees and (v) sealing of deeds fees; and if she will make a statement. [220777]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have no plans to commission research into miscellaneous charges made by banks. The Banking Code requires that signatories give their customers details of any charges for the day-to-day running of their account when they open it, and that they inform their customers personally if they increase any of these charges or introduce a new charge, at least 30 days before the change takes effect. The signatories are also required to tell customers the charge for any other service or product before they provide that service or product, and at any time the customer asks.

Corporate Responsibility

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Department is taking to ensure companies adopt policies to meet social and environmental obligations. [218998]

Nigel Griffiths: Companies are bound by legislation on a wide range of social and environmental issues including matters relating to employment terms and conditions, health and safety and environmental protection.

At national level HMG supports a number of initiatives aimed at improving business social and environmental performance. Within DTI these include:

Establishment and funding for CSR Academy to mainstream CSR skills into business practice

Sponsorship of Business in the Community's Corporate Responsibility Index

Sponsorship of Business in the Community's Annual Awards for Excellence

Sponsorship of Small Business Consortium's small business journey toolkit for SMEs

Gas Market

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact on UK industry and consumers of the recent rises in the cost of gas on the spot market; what proposals she has to bring price stability to the gas market; and what plans she has to reform the operation of the forward market for wholesale gas. [222172]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The impact on UK industry of the recent temporary rises in spot gas prices will depend on a variety of factors, including how much gas a particular company uses, the degree of their exposure to spot and/or forward prices and the duration of the high prices. It will also be affected by the energy prices paid by their competitors. The impact on domestic consumers will depend on whether the energy supply companies decide to pass on the costs of what was a short-lived spike in spot prices. Prices in the domestic sector are set to cover a range of weather, including such cold snaps, so we would not expect these peaks to feed into domestic prices.

The Department is working to ease the potential supply tightness which causes high prices by facilitating investment in gas import infrastructure projects, such as a doubling of the import capacity of the Bacton-Zeebrugge interconnector, new pipelines from Norway and the Netherlands, and three major new Liquefied Natural Gas terminals.

Regarding the operation of the forward gas market, my Department has commissioned an independent consultant to analyse how it is working, and to propose, if necessary, recommendations for improving it to both Government and industry.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will make a statement on the recent rises in the forward gas market; and what assessment she has made of the impact the increase in the price for delivery in winter 2006 will have on the competitiveness of UK manufacturing; [222549]

(2) what action her Department is taking to mitigate the risk of job losses within the manufacturing sector as a result of rises in industrial gas prices; and if she will make a statement. [222560]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The forward wholesale price for gas for the first quarter of 2006 averaged around 48p/therm in February 2005, and for the first two weeks of March it has been around 54p/therm. However, the average actual price paid for delivery in the winter tends to be lower than the forward price, and the same may happen in 2006. Nevertheless, 54p/therm is above the forward price in respect of previous winters, driven by changing market views about the tightening winter supply situation.

The Department has commissioned an independent consultant to analyse the operation of the forward market and, if necessary, to propose recommendations for improving it to both Government and industry.

The impact on the competitiveness of manufacturing companies will depend on a variety of factors, including how much gas a particular company uses, the degree of their exposure to spot and/or forward prices, and the duration of the high prices. It will also be affected by the energy prices paid by their competitors. We are working with industry to identify ways it can mitigate the effects of high forward gas prices.

This Government implemented the Manufacturing Strategy in 2002, the first from any Government in over 30 years. In July 2004 we published a review of the Strategy setting out a framework for action to address many of the challenges currently facing manufacturers in the UK. It focuses on support for innovation and skills, and assisting industry to produce smarter, higher-value-added products. This message was reinforced in The DTI Five-Year Programme, published in November 2004.

Industrial Disease (Compensation Claims)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average full and final settlement is for (a) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims and (b) vibration white finger claims, broken down by constituency. [211104]

Nigel Griffiths: The figures as of 31 January 2005 are placed in the Libraries of the House today.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on progress made by the European Commission on its investigation into the setting up and financing of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority, with particular reference to state aid matters. [222601]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 17 March 2005]: The UK has recently submitted its comments on the submissions that the Commission has received from third parties. We now expect the Commission to take some time to consider these and other views submitted to it. We stand ready to answer any further questions it might have.

Photovoltaics

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps she is taking to implement the Energy White Paper commitment to a 2002 to 2012 solar photovoltaics demonstration programme in line with those of the UK's main competitors; [222972]

(2) what steps she is taking to increase support to the photovoltaic industry as proposed in the Energy White Paper. [222973]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Trade and Industry has implemented the Energy White Paper commitment by supporting a "Major Photovoltaic Demonstration Programme" from 2002. This programme is due to end in March 2006, although grants are expected to be paid up to March 2007.

The Department will continue its support for PV through a "low carbon buildings" programme. The low carbon buildings programme will be the subject of formal consultation later this year. Although the programme will be technology blind, projects incorporating PV will be supported. The programme is expected to begin operating in 2006–07.

Renewables

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the number of terrawatt hours of electricity generated from renewable sources required to meet the Government's 2010 renewables target. [222361]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 17 March 2005]: The 2010 10 per cent. renewable energy target relates to electricity supply to consumers. The latest DTI energy projections indicate that the supply to consumers could be around 330TWh in 2010. This would indicate that to meet the target, renewables generation would need to be 33TWh.

However it should be noted that at this stage, any estimate is necessarily very approximate.

Unsolicited Phone Calls

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action her Department is taking to tackle UK-based organisations using a non-EU company to make unsolicited automated phone calls which would be illegal if made from within the EU. [222410]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department introduced the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations in 1999, which provides a scheme called the Telephone Preference Service (TPS) scheme. This provides protection to subscribers from unsolicited direct marketing calls, which originate from the UK or are made on behalf of UK companies by non-EU companies, irrespective of whether they are dialled manually or made by an automated computer. The Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) has responsibility for the enforcement of the TPS scheme and considers breaches.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of Myanmar about the conditions of the Karen people of Myanmar in refugee camps on the Thai border. [221705]

Mr. MacShane: We have not made recent representations to the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) about this specific issue. However, we work closely with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to provide appropriate protection to refugees and to ensure their non-refoulement.

Britain is the largest EU donor providing assistance to refugees outside the country and to poor people inside Burma. Our funds are channelled through non-government organisations such as the Thailand Burma Border Consortium (TBBC) as well as through UN agencies and the European Commission. The TBBC provides food and other basic necessities to the Karen refugees in Thailand. This complements the help with schooling given by the Karen Education Partnership.

We are also doing everything we can to press the Burmese authorities to begin a genuine process of reform involving all political parties and ethnic groups in Burma. A genuine transition to democracy is essential to address the underlying reasons for the displacement of people in Burma.

The UK co-sponsored the UN General Assembly resolution of 23 December which condemned human rights violations suffered by ethnic groups in Burma. The resolution called on the regime to > "end the policy of systematic enforced displacement of persons and other policies leading to displacement within Myanmar and refugee flows to neighbouring countries, to provide the necessary protection and assistance to internally displaced persons and to respect the right of refugees to voluntary, safe and dignified return monitored by appropriate international agencies."

Mr. Luke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Ukrainian ambassador on sales of arms to Burma. [222142]

Mr. MacShane: None.

However, we and our EU partners have raised our concerns with the Ukrainian authorities about the sale of arms to Burma.

The UK and other EU countries maintain an embargo on arms to Burma as part of the EU Common Position on Burma. Although Ukraine is not party to this, we will continue to make them aware of our position and encourage them to align themselves with it.

Burundi

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the new power-sharing constitution in Burundi. [221596]

Mr. MacShane: We welcome the post-transitional Constitution in Burundi, approved by the Regional Peace initiative, and resoundingly endorsed by the Burundian people at the referendum held on 28 February. This is a further step on the path to lasting peace and stability in Burundi.

We and the rest of the international community now urge all parties in Burundi to work constructively towards holding free and fair elections and bringing about a successful end to the transition.

Cuba

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK delegation's position on Cuba will be at the forthcoming UN Human Rights Commission. [221789]

Mr. Rammell: We have serious concerns about the human rights situation in Cuba. We have not yet seen a text on Cuba at the Commission on Human Rights and therefore can not confirm our position. However in previous years, the UK has supported a resolution on Cuba.

Cyprus

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had with the Turkish-Cypriot administration on the number of private properties built in each of the last three years in Northern Cyprus which were purchased by foreign nationals who are neither Greek or Turkish Cypriot; and if he will make a statement; [221547]

(2) what discussions he has had on the policy of the Turkish-Cypriot administration in Northern Cyprus on maintaining in good condition the properties that Turkish settlers now live in but to which Greek Cypriots claim ownership; and if he will make a statement.[221571]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I met Mr. Talat on 1 July 2004; I also met Mr. Talat and other Turkish Cypriot leaders during my visit to the island in October 2004. On both occasions we discussed a number of Cyprus-related issues. Officials from the British high commission also meet Turkish Cypriot leaders on a regular basis to discuss a full range of issues on the situation in Cyprus, including that of property purchase by foreigners. Through our travel advice and in response to inquiries, we advise potential purchasers of property in the north that there may be significant practical, financial and legal consequences, and we strongly encourage potential buyers to seek independent, qualified legal advice.

The issue of the condition of properties likely to be affected by the resettlement and compensation provisions of the Annan plan was studied during the "needs assessment" phase of the UN process, with the close support and interest of the UK Government.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of properties in Northern Cyprus legally owned by Greek Cypriots which are occupied by Turkish settlers from mainland Turkey; and if he will make a statement. [221550]

Mr. MacShane: We have no figures on this aspect of the property issue. As the Foreign Affairs Committee has recently underscored, the complex and deeply felt issues associated with property ownership go to the heart of the situation in Cyprus, and deserve very careful attention within the context of a comprehensive settlement.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when the last population survey took place in Northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement; [221551]

(2) how many (a) Turkish Cypriots born in Cyprus and (b) Turkish settlers he estimates there are in Northern Cyprus; what percentage each represents of the total population; and if he will make a statement.[221552]

Mr. MacShane: The last census in the north of Cyprus carried out by the Turkish Cypriot authorities in 1996 found that there were 137,398 Turkish Cypriots and 54,626 people born in mainland Turkey. However, these figures are not universally accepted. The Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly adopted a resolution in 2003 stating that there were 115,000 persons of Turkish mainland origin in the north of Cyprus. The Assembly also noted that in 2001 there were 87,600 Turkish Cypriots in the north of Cyprus. The Assembly's figures too are disputed.

We believe that the population composition in the north of Cyprus will likely be an important factor in any new settlement negotiations. In that context, universally agreed figures on the demographics of the north would clearly be desirable. But it is for the two sides, in the context of renewed efforts towards achieving a settlement, and in conjunction with the United Nations, to discuss the most appropriate way to deal with demographic issues pertaining to the situation in Cyprus.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Turkish troops are stationed in Northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [221553]

Mr. MacShane: We have no precise figures of our own. Current estimates range from 20,000 to 35,000.

Turkey supported the UN Secretary-General's Comprehensive Settlement Plan for Cyprus, which provided for a staged reduction in troop numbers. If the island had reunited on the basis of the plan, Turkish troops would have been reduced by over 80 per cent. by the end of 2007, with a further 50 per cent. reduction within the following four years. Thereafter, the plan allowed for 650 troops to remain in the north of Cyprus, the same number of Turkish troops as set out in the 1960 Treaty of Guarantee. This agreement would be subject to regular reviews with a view to eventual withdrawal by mutual consent.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent discussions he has had with the Turkish Cypriot administration in Northern Cyprus on its policies to protect and develop the environment; [221573]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Turkish Cypriot administration on its policy on Greek Cypriots who wish to return to live in Northern Cyprus being able to do so; and if he will make a statement. [221575]

Mr. MacShane: Neither my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary nor myself have had recent discussions with the Turkish Cypriot administration on these matters. However, officials from the British high commission in Nicosia meet regularly with Turkish Cypriot representatives to discuss the full range of issues related to the situation in Cyprus. One feature of these discussions is the need to improve environmental protection including by use of EU funds in this area.

India

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the Indian Government on the UN Convention Against Torture. [221671]

Mr. MacShane: On the occasion of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's most recent visit to India in February this year, he did not raise specifically the issue of the UN Convention Against Torture with the Indian Government. He did however discuss human rights. The Indian authorities can be in no doubt of our concerns about this.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indian Government concerning the recent violent attacks on members of the Sikh community of Chattisgarh. [221709]

Mr. MacShane: We are aware of recent violent incidents between members of the Sikh and Hindu communities in Chattisgarh. We continue as a matter of course to raise our concerns with the Indian Government about religious intolerance in India, including attacks against Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs and Christians. We will continue to urge the Indian authorities to ensure that the right to freedom of religion, enshrined in its constitution, is upheld and that those responsible for attacks against people because of their religion are brought to justice. We remind them that the UK Government condemns the persecution of individuals or groups because of their religion or beliefs. The UK Government believe that the democratic process in India is the best protection for a peaceful and secure country. We appreciate the remarks by Dr. Manmohan Singh in his first press conference as Prime Minister, when he said

> "We are the most tolerant civilisation and we cannot divide people on the basis of religion and race."

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK's undertaking to work towards the total elimination of British nuclear weapons. [221455]

Mr. MacShane: The United Kingdom is fully committed to its disarmament obligations as a nuclear weapon state recognised by the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty (NPT), including all the undertakings agreed at the 2000 NPT Review Conference. We also support the agreements made at the 1995 NPT Review and Extension Conference that called on the nuclear weapon states to pursue systematic and progressive efforts to reduce nuclear weapons globally, with the ultimate goal of eliminating those weapons. We are the only nuclear weapon state that has reduced its nuclear capability to a single weapons system and we have reduced the total explosive power of our nuclear forces by over 70 per cent. since the end of the cold war.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Council Tax (North Somerset)

Brian Cotter: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much council tax was uncollected within the North Somerset local authority in each of the last five years. [221899]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is in the following table:

Council tax collection—North Somerset

£ million

	Amount due[1]	Of which: Collected by end of the financial year	Of which: Not collected by end of the financial year
1999–2000	45.566	44.002	1.564
2000–01	49.000	47.380	1.620
2001–02	52.009	50.434	1.575
2002–03	59.235	57.491	1.744
2003–04	69.751	68.863	0.888

[1] Net collectable debit, excluding amounts funded from council tax benefit.

The amount of council tax ultimately not collected for any particular year is less than that shown in the final column of the above table because collection continues after the end of the financial year. Figures for the amounts ultimately collected are not, however, reported to central Government.

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221115]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W.

Fire Service

Mr. Gill: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many recorded attacks there were against (a) firefighters while on duty and (b) fire service equipment in (i) Leicester, (ii) Leicester, South and (iii) the UK in each year since 1997. [222543]

Mr. Raynsford: Since April 2004 fire and rescue authorities in England and Wales have been asked to report attacks on firefighters through the Fire or Incident of Special Interest (FOSI) system. Since that time 428 attacks on firefighters in England and Wales have been reported to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. There have been no attacks on firefighters reported by Leicester, Leicestershire and Rutland Combined Fire Authority.

Local Government

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he (a) has taken and (b) is proposing to take to assist the lower level super output areas (SOAs) in (i) Dartford and (ii) the Thames Gateway Growth Area that fall within the most deprived 20 per cent. of lower level SOAs in England and Wales in one or more of the seven sub-themes used in the 2004 Index of Multiple Deprivation. [221103]

Yvette Cooper: Spending Review 2004 made available over £1 billion of new Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF) resources for the period 2006–08 (£525 million for 2006–07 and £525 million for 2007–08). No decision has yet been made on how these new resources will be allocated. The Government want to ensure that we get the most impact from these very substantial funds. We are therefore carefully considering the opinions expressed in the recent consultation exercise to make sure we take full account of the views of key stakeholders involved in delivering neighbourhood renewal at the local level. An announcement on the allocation of these new NRF resources will be made when we have completed our consideration.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal By-Product Regulation

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the Animal By-Product Regulation (EC) No 1774/2002 requires slaughterhouse waste to be handled in an enclosed space. [221871]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Animal By-Products Regulation requires that all intermediate plants have a covered space to receive animal by-products. We consider that in general this will also mean that all handling of by-products must be done in that covered space. The Regulation also requires the plant to be constructed in such a way that it is easy to clean and disinfect, and that floors must be laid down in such a way as to facilitate the draining of liquids. The plant must also have appropriate arrangements for protection against pests, such as insects, rodents and birds. In our view, the combination of these requirements is such that it would be necessary for the plant to have a roof, walls and a floor before we can approve it.

Slaughterhouse waste may contain high-risk material such as Specified Risk Material (SRM). It will usually have a high liquid content, and contain loose fragments of material, thereby increasing the risk of leakage or spillage during handling and the risk of spread by vermin such as rodents or birds. Such waste must therefore be handled in an enclosed space to provide adequate safeguards to protect public and animal health.

Avian Flu

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what agreements are in place with each country which exports poultry feathers to the UK on ensuring that they are not infected with avian influenza; and what measures she has put in place to ensure agreements are adhered to; [221388]

(2) what tests are carried out in the UK on poultry feathers imported from East Asian countries to establish whether they are infected with avian influenza. [221390]

Mr. Bradshaw: Import requirements for feathers are set in European Union legislation. Imports of unprocessed feathers are prohibited from countries that are currently under restriction due an outbreak of Avian Influenza (HPAI).

Community legislation allows import of processed feathers. Every consignment of processed feathers from countries under restriction because of Avian Influenza are veterinary checked at the Border Inspection Post on entry to the EU. Imports of processed feathers from these countries must be accompanied by a commercial document stating that the feathers have been cleaned with a steam current and heated to at least 70°.

Unprocessed feathers are banned from countries under restrictions due to Avian Influenza. They would be easily detectable by smell or sight as they are highly susceptible to deterioration in transit and would be foul-smelling.

Cleaning feathers with a steam current and heated to at least 70° is considered effective in significantly reducing the quantity of virus, if present, to a negligible level. Therefore no further testing is carried out.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk of avian influenza being transmitted from imported poultry feathers. [221389]

Mr. Bradshaw: In January 2004 Defra carried out a full veterinary risk assessment of the risk of importing avian influenza from a variety of products, including feathers. The assessment is available on the Defra website http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/avianinfluenza_asia.htm

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what quantity of poultry feathers were imported into the UK from each East Asian country in each of the last five years. [221391]

Mr. Bradshaw: UK imports of feathers from Asia, 2000–04.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what input she will seek from (a) hon. Members, (b) farmers and (c) conservation groups in developing a transparent process for making policy decisions on whether badger culling will form part of future policy for controlling bovine tuberculosis. [221278]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government strategic framework for the sustainable control of bovine tuberculosis (bTB) in Great Britain was published on 1 March. Among other things, it sets out how policy decisions on wildlife controls will be reached.

The Government are committed to establishing a new advisory group on bTB to advise the Chief Veterinary Officer and Ministers on policy options and delivery developments, to co-ordinate action taken in England, Wales and Scotland and ensure that decisions at a national or regional level are made in accordance with the principles set out in the Framework. I envisage the new group will be in place by the end of 2005 with membership including those with farmed animal experience and conservation experience.

I expect hon. Members, including the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Select Committee, will continue to be interested in the development of new policies in this area.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the current incidence of bovine tuberculosis in Stafford constituency; and if she will take action to reduce such incidence. [221279]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is not available on a constituency basis. Bovine tuberculosis (bTB) data is held by county or Animal Health Divisional Office area.

The incidence of bovine TB in cattle in Staffordshire in 2004 was 6.56 per cent.[1]. The corresponding figure for Great Britain in 2004 was 3.45 per cent.

Our aim to achieve a sustained reduction in disease incidence in cattle in high incidence areas, as well as slow down and prevent the geographic spread of bovine TB to areas currently free of the disease, forms part of our overall vision for the control of TB for the next 10 years. This is set out in the Government strategic framework for the sustainable control of bovine TB which was published on 1 March.

[1] Incidence is defined as confirmed new herd incidents as a percentage of tests on unrestricted herds. Data downloaded from the State Veterinary Service database on the 8–11 March 2005. This is provisional data, which is subject to change as outstanding TB test and culture results become available.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the voyages since 1 January 2002 on which (a) her officials and (b) agency officials were present and witnessed dolphin by-catches in trawling nets; and what (i) documentary evidence was assembled, including photographs and videos and (ii) written reports were subsequently produced. [221562]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 14 March 2005]: As part of Defra-funded research into cetacean by-catch, the Sea Mammal Research Unit (SMRU) has placed observers on a range of trawl fisheries to monitor cetacean by-catch. By-catch has not been observed by any other officials and, to date, by-catch has only been witnessed by SMRU in the pair trawl fishery for bass. From 1 January 2002 to the end of the last fishing season for bass in spring 2004, observations were made covering 352 hauls in which a total of 207 dolphin casualties were observed. It is not possible to provide a list of voyages.

The full details of this research are set out in the following reports produced by SMRU for Defra, available via the Defra website:

"Analysis and mitigation of cetacean by-catch" (reference MF0726)

"By-catch reduction in pelagic trawl fisheries" (MF0733)

"Further development of a dolphin exclusion device" (MF0735)

"Monitoring, impact and mitigation of marine mammal by-catch" (MF0736)

A video was produced by SMRU as part of the work on the development of a dolphin exclusion device, reported above.

Full details of the results of this research were also summarised in the evidence presented by Defra to the House of Commons EFRA Committee Inquiry into cetacean by-catch and contained in the report published by this Committee in January 2004.

Chemicals (EU Authorisation)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to discuss REACH during its EU Presidency; and if she will make a statement. [221788]

Mr. Morley: REACH is a priority for the UK Government's forthcoming EU Presidency. The Government are working very closely with the Luxembourg Presidency to ensure that substantial progress is made in the negotiations in 2005. Building on the work conducted to date both in the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament, the two Presidencies will invest major efforts on the REACH Regulation with the aim of reaching political agreement by the end of 2005 based on an effective balance between economic, social and environmental considerations.

Climate Change

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1639, to my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd) on climate change, what the results were of her discussions with newly developing countries, with particular reference to those with substantial and growing energy needs; and if she will make a statement. [222461]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, together with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry jointly hosted a round table for the energy and environment Ministers from 20 countries, including the emerging economies, on 15–16 March.

This was an innovative event which enabled us to explore common ground and begin to build a shared agenda to tackle issues of access to energy for development, energy security, and environmental protection.

A summary of proceedings will be placed on the Defra and DTI websites shortly.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Countryside Stewardship payments for 2004 have been paid. [221799]

Mr. Morley: Latest figures show that there have been 25,908 Countryside Stewardship Scheme payments made during the scheme year 2003–04. This figure represents some 97 per cent. of claims received.

Emissions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons industries subject to the requirements of the National Allocation Plan are not exempt from the requirements of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. [220720]

Mr. Morley: Directive 2003/87/EC established the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. Article 9 requires each member state to develop a National Allocation Plan (NAP) stating the total quantity of allowances that it intends to allocate and how it intends to allocate them to installations. The NAP is therefore an integral part of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. Installations which are covered by the Directive must be listed in the NAP and cannot be exempted from the scheme unless they are temporarily excluded from the scheme under Article 27 of the Directive.

Fallen Stock

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers have (a) signed up to and (b) withdrawn from the National Fallen Stock Collection Scheme since it was established. [221463]

Mr. Bradshaw: The National Fallen Stock Company Ltd. reports that in the first three months of the scheme operating just over 25,000 members had signed up to the scheme. In the corresponding period just under 500 members initially applied to join the scheme but withdrew their application before payment of the subscription fee was processed.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the future of the Fallen Stock Collection Service in Lancashire; and how many farmers are using the scheme. [221692]

Mr. Bradshaw: The National Fallen Stock Company Ltd. reports that there are currently eight collectors registered to collect fallen stock under the Scheme in Lancashire.

Further information on the scheme as it applies to Lancashire is not available. However, the National Fallen Stock Company Ltd. reports that after just over three months of operation it already has over 25,000 members. Whilst acknowledging there have been teething problems with collection of fallen stock in some parts of the country, the National Fallen Stock Company reports that it is pleased with the response and that the scheme is generally working well.

Fisheries

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of whether the proposed EU Constitutional Treaty takes account of fisheries provisions negotiated by those member states that joined the EU in 1995. [222416]

Mr. Bradshaw: No assessment has been made of the fisheries provisions relating to the member states which joined the EU in 1995 in the context of the EU Constitution.

Flood Defences (Sheerness)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) who is responsible for making sure the floodgates in the sea wall are closed properly when there is an exceptional tide at Sheerness; [222709]

(2) who is responsible for the floodgates in the sea wall at Sheerness. [222710]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency and its predecessors constructed the flood defences along the Sheerness frontage on the Isle of Sheppey and retains overall responsibility for the floodgates and floodwalls. The Agency is responsible for issuing tidal flood warnings and ensuring the floodgates are closed as necessary.

The Environment Agency operates the Queenborough tidal flood barrier, located across the Queenborough Creek, but there are local agreements in place with Swale borough council and private landowners to operate all other floodgates along the Sheerness frontage.

Visual inspection to confirm the integrity of the sea defences, and the closure of all the floodgates on the Sheerness frontage, is also undertaken by the Agency during exceptional tides.

Full details of which floodgates are operated by Swale borough council and local landowners are as follows:

Swale borough council is responsible for closing floodgates at:

The Broadway The Esplanade, Beech Street, Sheerness
Cheyne Rock
Queenborough Hard
Crundalls Wharf, North Road, Queenborough
Tesco, Bridge Road, Sheerness
Shellness Road
Elmley Ferry
Warden Bay Promenade
Warden Bay, Jetty Road

Local landowners are responsible for closing floodgates at:

Bretts, Chalk Wharf Canning Town
Ship Breaking Ltd., Queenborough Rolling Mill
Abbots Laboratories, Abbotts Slipway, Queenborough
Medway Ports, Sheerness Docks, Sheerness, Kent

Additionally, the Environment Agency undertakes routine maintenance inspections of all the floodgates every two months, and carries out the actions arising from these inspections that may include capital expenditure—for example to replace worn out gates.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on alleviating fuel poverty in the boroughs of (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Thurrock in each year from 1995 to 2004. [221955]

Mr. Morley: The Warm Front Scheme, the major programme to tackle the problem of fuel poverty in the private sector in England, was launched in June 2000. Between June 2000 and the end of December 2004 expenditure in Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock in each financial year was:

	Southend-on-Sea	Thurrock
2000–01[1]	53,700	18,600
2001–02	333,900	109,500
2002–03	304,500	101,250
2003–04	394,150	100,000
2004–05[2]	372,250	173,500

[1] June to March.
[2] April to December 2004

The annual estimated expenditure under the previous Home Energy Efficiency Scheme from April 1995 to May 2000 for Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock was:

	Southend-on-Sea	Thurrock
1995–96	377,350	98,350
1996–97	311,850	70,100
1997–98	231,900	215,850
1998–99	203,750	298,700
1999–2000[1]	84,500	392,650

[1] To May 2000.

Pet Animals

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she plans (a) to sign and (b) to ratify the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Pet Animals. [221674]

Mr. Bradshaw: We intend to review further the UK's position on the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Pet Animals once the Animal Welfare Bill has become law.

Radiation Risks

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what changes her Department plans to its (a) policies and (b) regulatory practices following the recommendations of the Report of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters, with particular reference to risk estimates. [220591]

Mr. Morley: I have considered the Report of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters (CERRIE), along with the report of its parent body, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE).

On matters to do with radiation and health, we would take advice from COMARE, the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) and the Department of Health (DH). DH, as well as Defra, co-sponsored CERRIE. DH, through its radiation research programme, will respond to COMARE's recommendation that further work is required to address the uncertainties associated with determining the risk from internal emitters. We look forward to any further practical advice from COMARE or DH as to how uncertainty should be addressed either through policy or the regulatory regime. In the meantime, we shall be encouraging consideration of uncertainty whenever radiation risk is calculated.

Radioactive Waste

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans her Department has to review low level radioactive waste management policy. [222126]

Mr. Morley: I have agreed with ministerial colleagues within UK Government and the devolved administrations that a review of policy for the long-term management of the UK's low level radioactive waste (LLW) should be carried out.

LLW is generated by a wide range of activities involving the use of radioactive substances. They include the operation of nuclear reactors, the operation of other nuclear processing facilities, the decommissioning and clean up of nuclear sites, non-nuclear industrial activities, the medical use of radioactive materials, and research and educational activities.

While relatively low, the level of radioactivity in LLW can span a very wide range (about five orders of magnitude). Not least because of this, it has been managed in a number of ways in the past: using the national disposal facility at Drigg in Cumbria, using various forms of disposal on the nuclear site on which the waste was generated, using controlled burial to landfill and, for small quantities of very low level waste, through disposal with other ordinary refuse.

What has now changed is that with many nuclear sites and facilities moving into their decommissioning phase, and with the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) being set up to deal with this, it has been increasingly recognised that there will be a very large volume of LLW to be dealt with. Potentially this could fill the Drigg disposal facility a number of times over.

The kinds of issue that are going to have to be addressed in the review are as follows. Should we use up existing capacity in the Drigg facility—which is a relatively expensive management option—on very low activity wastes (i.e. how do we best use the Drigg facility as a national asset?). Does it make sense to dig up very large quantities of very low activity waste and transport it around the country to bury at some other site? Is controlled burial to landfill off-site appropriate for nuclear waste, or should we be looking to a greater use of on-site burial under suitably controlled and regulated conditions? For whatever approach is identified, what is the likely timing of the existing Drigg facility becoming full, and what need for action does this imply?

The proposed policy review is intended to consider these kinds of issues. The aim is to identify a policy framework, which will update that set out in the 1995 White Paper "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy: Final Conclusions" (Cm2919) to cover the future management of LLW, notably by the NDA. The aim of such a policy statement is not to address the detail of the individual LLW management decisions that have to be made, but rather to define the high level framework—requirements and principles—within which such decisions must be made.

The initial stages are being overseen by a Steering Group drawn from the Government's Radioactive Waste Policy Group (RWPG). RWPG is made up of UK Government, devolved administrations and regulatory body representatives and meets regularly, several times a year, to discuss radioactive waste management policy and regulatory issues. The Steering Group is organising two national stakeholder workshops during the course of 2005 to support consideration of the issues and possible solutions. This work will contribute to the preparation and issue of a Government consultation on the revised policy proposals to be issued around the turn of the year.

The LLW long-term management policy review will be carried out in parallel with the work of the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management (CoRWM), which is assessing options for the long-term management of the UK's higher activity wastes. In contrast to CoRWM's work the issue for LLW is not that of identifying the best long-term management option itself, but rather how best to apply those forms of long-term management that already exist.

Clearly there may be some interdependencies between the LLW management policy review and the work of CoRWM. These will be kept under review and managed by RWPG Committee as the work proceeds.

"Securing the Future"

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what methods she plans to use to publicise the new UK sustainable development strategy, "Securing the Future", with particular reference to schools, colleges and universities. [221174]

Mr. Morley: The Department has developed a forward-looking communications strategy to publicise the strategy to ensure it reaches key audiences. For some stakeholders, more tailored strategic guidance and advice, drawing on "Securing the future", will be produced and publicised. As reflected in the Strategy, schools, colleges and universities are already developing awareness of sustainable development issues in light of DfES' Sustainable Development Action Plan, and resources to help educators consider these issues will be examined in light of the new strategy.

State Veterinary Service

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the capacity of the State Veterinary Service to meet statutory requirements on (a) farm inspections, (b) abattoir inspections, (c) bovine TB controls and (d) other departmental veterinary responsibilities. [221465]

Mr. Bradshaw: The role of the State Veterinary Service is to implement and enforce specific national and EU legislation and regulations relating to animal welfare, the control and eradication of animal diseases and the facilitation of international trade, as agreed with Defra and the devolved Administrations. Implementation and enforcement activities include investigation, inspection and surveillance, licensing, certification and registration. It has specific responsibilities and functions in the case of any outbreak of exotic or other animal disease, which are set out in detailed departmental contingency plans. Abattoir inspections fall within the Food Standards Agency remit.

Reviews of the SVS' resources and work demands are conducted regularly and there are regular performance reports and reviews (reviews are normally quarterly). The outcome of external inspections, EU missions for example, are also monitored.

The Programme preparing for the launch of the SVS as an Executive Agency has included a recent audit of the SVS' Corporate Governance, Finance and Risk Management Systems.

Wildlife Crimes

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many criminal prosecutions for crimes against wildlife in England and Wales were completed in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004. [221950]

Mr. Morley: Many different pieces of legislation create offences protecting wildlife. Prosecutions are brought both publicly and privately but comprehensive information about them is not held centrally.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Further Education (Bromley)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether it is her policy fully to fund courses for adults at level 3 in further education in Bromley in 2005–06; [221634]

(2) whether it is her policy to increase fees for courses above level 2 for adults in further education in Bromley in 2005–06. [221636]

Dr. Howells: It is our policy to ensure that those groups of people benefiting from fully funded further education provision will continue to do so. There will be no change in the fee concessions arrangements that help unemployed people, those on income-based benefits, and retired people and working families on low incomes, to access further education. We will continue to make substantial levels of public funding available to all, which covers the largest part of the cost of courses, but we also expect adult learners who can afford to do so to make a contribution to the costs of their learning. Those people already qualified at level 2, or not in one of our priority groups, will on average pay a higher fee contribution in 2005–06 unless they qualify for fee concessions.

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average funding per student in (a) further education colleges and (b) sixth forms in schools in the London borough of Bromley is in 2004–05; and if she will make a statement. [221635]

Dr. Howells: The Department allocates funds for education and training in the post-16 learning and skills sector to the Learning and Skills Council. The Department does not collect or hold information at the level requested. Mark Haysom, the Learning and Skills Council's chief executive will write to the right hon. Member with details of the average funding per student in (a) further education colleges and (b) sixth forms in schools in the London borough of Bromley for 2004–05. A copy of his letter will be placed in the House Library.

School Funding (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding per pupil was allocated for (a) primary and (b) secondary school education in Lancashire in each year since 1997. [221989]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) on 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 273W.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Costs

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the costs of cleaning the Department were in each year since 1997. [213779]

Mr. Miliband: Figures on costs of cleaning the Department are not fully available for each year prior to 2002 for the Cabinet Office's central London estate.

It is not possible to identify separately cleaning costs at the Centre for Management and Policy Studies College residential and non-residential training sites, Emergency Planning College residential training site and Government News Network, as cleaning services are either provided as part of a wider facilities management contract or paid for as part of rent paid for leased property.

Cleaning costs for the remainder of the Department are shown in the following table:

2002–03	1,043,561
2003–04	1,237,898

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much has been spent on postage by the Department in each year since 1997. [215031]

Mr. Miliband: Spending on postage by the Cabinet Office in each year since 1997 is shown in the table.

1997–98	770
1998–99	596
1999–2000	492
2000–01	667
2001–02	490
2002–03	840
2003–04	961

In general, all mail sent to UK addresses is sent 'Second Class' unless marked 'First Class' or 'Special Delivery'.

The increase in expenditure since 2001–02 is due to the Cabinet Office's widening span of responsibilities in recent years and Machinery of Government changes.

Government Websites

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what action he is taking to prevent UK Government websites from being compromised by (a) denial of service and (b) phishing. [222188]

Mr. Miliband: The UK Government have a continuous programme of work that identifies vulnerabilities and prevents damage to the critical national infrastructure, public sector networks and other interdependent information systems.

Government policy advises all departments on the appropriate measures required to prevent UK Government websites from being compromised.

Phishing is a form of social engineering that has become very common over the past 18 months. Criminals use this technique to deceive people into disclosing their credit card numbers, bank account details or other valuable information.

At present, we have not seen large-scale phishing attacks against UK Government websites. However, we continue to be concerned about these criminal activities, and are therefore working to raise public awareness of the threat. Government have recently launched the IT safe website (www.itsafe.gov.uk) aimed at providing plain English advice and warnings to the general public.

The UK Government are also working with law enforcement and industry on Project Endurance to increase awareness and promote information and advice to online users to give them the confidence to use the internet safely and securely.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

New Opportunities Fund

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money from the New Opportunities Fund was allocated to Edinburgh, North and Leith in each year since 1997. [222910]

Estelle Morris: The following table shows the amount awarded to Lottery projects by the New Opportunities Fund in the constituency of Edinburgh, North and Leith.

	Amount awarded (£)
2000	250,773
2001	1,336,259
2002	1,105,254
2003	1,084,276
2004	358,891
2005	69,961
Total	4,205,414

This information is freely available from the Department's searchable Lottery award database at www.lottery.culture.gsi.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what levels of benefit fraud have been detected in Inverness East, Nairn and Lochaber in each of the last three years. [222082]

Mr. Pond: The information is not available.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much it costs to run the Benefit Fraud hotline in each of the last three years; and how many calls it received in each year. [222120]

Mr. Pond: The information is in the table.

National benefit fraud hotline-operational costs and calls received

	Operational costs (£)	Calls received
2001–02	1,086,000	205,999
2002–03	959,277	159,290
2003–04	1,038,505	[1] 213,471

[1] Includes 2,421 calls received by the Local Authority Fraud Hotline which commenced in September 2003.

Notes:

1. Operational costs include staffing, goods and service costs.
2. The operational costs of administering the National Benefit Fraud Hotline include the costs of administering the report-a-cheat-online service. These costs cannot be separated.

Council Tax Benefit

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans the Government have to increase council tax benefit take-up; and if he will make a statement. [219881]

Mr. Pond: Last year we launched a council tax benefit awareness campaign and we are continuing to support local authorities in raising awareness of council tax benefit in the run-up to, and during, this year's billing round, supported by new posters and flyers, and by press advertising.

National advertising started on 10 January, followed by two weeks of regional press advertising. Further regional press advertising will be released in early March, to coincide with the issue of the council tax bills.

A copy of the council tax benefit flyer was issued with winter fuel payment notification letters, going to around 12 million pensioners encouraging them to "Cut your Council Tax—Find out if you should be paying less."

Flyers are also available in doctors' surgeries, and have been issued to over 20,000 organisations dealing with older people. An electronic version of the flyer is also available for local authorities to download and include with their council tax bills; they can also include a coupon for those who want to claim council tax benefit to fill in and return to their local authority.

We are checking whether those who have already claimed pension credit have claimed CTB (and HB) if appropriate, too, so that we can encourage those who have not claimed to apply—and similarly whether those on HB/CTB have applied for pension credit.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Leeds, West receive council tax benefit; and what the total amount of such benefit was in the last year for which figures are available. [221963]

Mr. Pond: The information is not available.

Fuel Direct

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to extend the fuel direct payment system to include customers who are not in debt; and if he will make a statement. [221332]

Mr. Pond: There are no plans to extend the fuel direct scheme to include customers who are not in debt, nor any to curb its existing provisions. Such a modification would run counter to our policy of promoting financial inclusion by encouraging people to take advantage of direct debit facilities in bank accounts to pay bills. It would also be incompatible with our aims of achieving a fair and reasonable balance between rights and personal responsibilities, and maintaining the momentum from welfare dependency into work for all those who can.

Homeless People (Education)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the 16-hour rule to enable young homeless people to study full-time while in receipt of housing benefit. [222590]

Mr. Pond: We are currently reviewing the part-time study rules for jobseeker's allowance and housing benefit recipients. We expect the review to be completed by the autumn.

Income Statistics

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the average net income after tax and benefits in (a) cash and (b) real terms for (i) each quartile, (ii) two parent families with children, (iii) single parent families with children, (iv) single pensioner households and (v) pensioner couples in (A) the City of York and (B) Yorkshire and the Humber in each year since 1996–97. [222227]

Mr. Pond: The information requested is not available. DWP statisticians are reviewing regional-level estimates and hope to release such estimates as they deem robust, combining years from the Family Resources Survey, when further investigations are complete.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the levels of jobseeker's allowance were in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05; what plans he has to increase the levels of jobseeker's allowance in 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [222923]

Mr. Pond: The information is in the table.

Low-income Households (Weston-super-Mare)

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners he estimates are living below the poverty line within the Weston-super-Mare constituency. [221898]

Malcolm Wicks: Poverty is about more than low income; it is also about other important factors in people's lives: their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The sixth annual "Opportunity for All" report (Cm 6239), published in September 2004, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy.

Information on the number of pensioners on low incomes in individual local authorities is not available.

5,151 pensioner households in Weston-Super-Mare were benefiting from the pension credit as at end of December 2004.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households below average income there are in (a) the South West and (b) Weston-super-Mare constituency. [221900]

Mr. Pond: In 2002–03, an estimated 65 per cent. of households in the South West had incomes below the national mean on the Before Housing Costs income measure, and 64 per cent. on the After Housing Costs measure.

These estimates use the same definition of income used in the Households Below Average Income Series, which is sourced from the Family Resources Survey. It is not possible to provide robust estimates for (b) because of small sample sizes.

New Deal

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) which contracts for the delivery of the new deal self-employment programme will be terminated at the end of financial year 2004–05; [222641]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the new deal programme for self-employment. [222642]

Jane Kennedy: There is no separate new deal self-employment programme although participants on new deal can receive advice and guidance on self employment, and can undertake test trading through new deal and work-based learning for adults.

We are in the process of informing new deal contractors whether their contracts are being renewed or not and, therefore, this information is currently commercial in confidence.

The paper 'Building on New Deal (BoND): local solutions meeting individual needs', published in June 2004, sets out our approach to the development of our welfare to work strategy. This is available in the Library. The BoND programme will deliver a single new deal which will be accessible to all eligible customers. Self-employment support will feature within the BoND menu.

Skills Training (Over-50s)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason people over the age of 50 are not eligible to receive skills training for the first six months of their unemployment; and if he will make a statement. [222934]

Jane Kennedy: We focus our resources on those people who need the most help to find employment. Around three quarters of unemployed people aged 50 and over stop claiming jobseeker's allowance within six months. Where we know the destination of these people, about three quarters move into work.

New Deal 50 Plus eligibility, and access to skills training through Work Based Learning for Adults in England, is set at six months to specifically help those people who continue to claim benefits and are in need of extra support to move into work.

Our policies are designed to give people aged over 50 real choice to remain in, or rejoin, the workforce and to decide when and how they retire. In May we will be launching a national guidance campaign to raise employers' awareness of, and ability to adopt, flexible employment and retirement opportunities in order to increase the recruitment, retention and training of older workers.

People on jobseeker's allowance are eligible for further education provision which includes skills (vocational) learning, as long as they continue to meet the jobseeker's allowance conditions for being available for work. They, and their dependants, do not have to contribute towards their tuition fees. There is no minimum time on jobseeker's allowance for further education fee concessions.

Income Support (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many families with children in Tamworth have been in receipt of income support for more than one year. [221932]

Mr. Pond: 1,000 families with dependent children up to the age of 19 have been in receipt of income support for more than one year in Tamworth.

Mr. Gardiner: The following table provides information relating to the number of business start-ups offered assistance in the Strangford constituency during the four years 2000–01 to 2003–04 and the 11 month period from 1 April 2004 to end February 2005.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the staffing costs of each cross-border body have been as a percentage of total expenditure in each year since their creation; and how many staff work for each body. [212330]

Downpatrick Regional Planning Office

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning personnel are employed in the Downpatrick Regional Planning Office; how many planning personnel are responsible for planning matters in (a) the Ards borough council area and (b) the Castlereagh borough council area; and whether he plans to increase the resources available to the Northern Ireland Planning Service. [222079]

Angela Smith: Within the Downpatrick Divisional Planning Office, on the Operations Side, there is a staff complement of 52 with 47 staff currently in post.

There are currently 14 staff within Ards borough council area and eight staff in the Castlereagh borough council area responsible for planning matters.

Significant additional resources have been allocated to the Planning Service over the last few years in order to employ additional staff. During 2004–05 the Planning Service has sought to recruit 125 additional staff. The Agency now has a complement of 803 staff with 756 staff in post. Workloads in the Planning Service are reviewed regularly as is the need for additional resources.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning submissions the Downpatrick Regional Planning Office received from the Ards borough council area in the last (a) 12 months, (b) 24 months, (c) 36 months and (d) 48 months. [222105]

Angela Smith: The information is as follows:

	Applications received in Ards borough
Last 12 months	1,537
Last 24 months	2,656
Last 36 months	3,864
Last 48 months	4,863

Note:
For calculation purposes the 12-month period runs from 1 March until end of February.

Inward Investment

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans Invest NI have to market Newtownards as a preferred location for future inward investment; and if he will make a statement. [222072]

Mr. Gardiner: The focus of Invest NI's international sales and marketing effort is to promote aggressively all areas of Northern Ireland, including Newtownards, as an attractive and viable location for new inward investment opportunities, in what is a very competitive global marketplace. In recent years the shift in foreign direct investment flows towards service industries has increasingly witnessed new investment, mainly from the financial services and software sectors, wishing to locate within the larger labour pools available in Northern Ireland.

Invest NI's local offices continue to work closely with key stakeholders to understand and ensure that detailed information on sub-regional sales propositions, including Newtownards, is available to potential investors.

While Invest NI continues to encourage new foreign direct investment to Northern Ireland, it also remains committed to strengthening the international competitiveness of local companies. From 2002–04, Invest NI made 72 offers of assistance totalling £3.88 million to existing companies in the Ards borough council area against investments of £15.5 million. This support was offered through a wide range of programmes.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have taken place between the local enterprise agency, Invest NI and Ards borough council regarding inward investment in the Newtownards area. [222073]

Mr. Gardiner: Invest NI and its enterprise partners are working with Ards borough council to develop the local economy within the Newtownards region. Invest NI is committed to working closely with others engaged in economic development, and this includes regular attendance at Ards borough council's economic sub-committee meetings, at which inward investment issues are discussed.

With the continuing movement in global foreign development investment trends from manufacturing to predominantly tradable service-based sectors, potential investors place an increasing emphasis on locations within larger labour pools providing good infrastructure or close proximity to University Centres of Excellence.

Invest NI cannot dictate where companies locate but the interaction and co-operation of local stakeholders are important in promoting opportunities for investors to consider areas such as Ards as a potential location. Invest NI has, in the past few years, taken 10 visitors to view locations in Newtownards as part of their visiting itineraries.

NHS (Private Operations)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of operations carried out privately on behalf of the NHS in Northern Ireland was in each of the past four years, broken down by health board. [221519]

Mr. Spellar: The cost of health care purchased by Health and Social Service Boards from independent sector hospitals in Northern Ireland, Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland across all programmes of care for 2003–04 was:

HEALTH

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are in place to compensate those who have incurred nugatory expenditure as a result of the cancellation of operations. [222345]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 March 2005]: Guidance on "special payments", including ex-gratia payments, is contained in the National Health Service Manual for Accounts.

NHS bodies must consider each case on its merits. However, they are able to make ex-gratia payments, generally in cases where there has been financial loss incurred by the complainant, as a result of the actions or omissions of the relevant NHS body.

In exceptional circumstances, payments may also be made where there has been no financial loss, or in "discovered cases" of maladministration where no complaint has been made.

Childhood Leukaemia

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the report on research by the Childhood Cancer Research Group at Oxford University into possible links between powerlines and childhood leukaemia; and if he will make a statement on the report. [221886]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 15 March 2005]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1690W.

Children's Hospices

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much NHS funding has been allocated to children's hospices in Lancashire in each year since 1997; and what estimate he has made of the proportion of the total children's hospice funding that represented in each year; [222085]

(2) how many children's hospices there are in the Ribble Valley; and how many of them receive (a) a proportion of their funding and (b) the majority of their funding through the NHS; [222086]

(3) how many children's hospices in the Ribble Valley receive less than 10 per cent. of their core funding from the NHS. [222087]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There is one children's hospice in Chorley registered with the Healthcare Commission. The Department does not collect information on hospice funding.

Children's hospice services are funded from a number of sources, including services commissioned by primary care trusts on the basis of their assessment of children's needs and their priorities. There is no upper limit to the amount of funding which the national health service can provide.

The Department continues to encourage representatives of children's hospices to engage actively with local NHS bodies over the contribution that hospices can make to the overall pattern of palliative care they commission for children and young people in their localities.

Community Hospitals

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of community hospitals in urban constituencies under the NHS five-year strategy. [218520]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is seeking to create a more localised national health service, with treatment increasingly taking place in community settings. This means that community hospitals will have an important role in both urban and rural areas. The exact nature of that role will be for local determination, as community hospitals must meet the needs of the local population. Therefore, they will vary in size and in the services they provide, depending on local circumstances.

Doctors

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors have been employed by the NHS in (a) South Tyneside, (b) the north-east and (c) the UK in each year since 1997. [221959]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Information in respect of doctors in Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of the devolved administrators. While the institutions in Northern Ireland are dissolved, responsibility rests with Ministers in the Northern Ireland office.

The 2004 medical work force census is due to be published on 22 March.

Electromagnetic Hypersensitivity

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of electromagnetic hypersensitivity on people's health. [222037]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has made no overall assessment of electromagnetic hypersensitivity on people's health but the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) has commissioned a review of electromagnetic hypersensitivity by a consultant in public health. It will address the range of symptoms reported to arise and explore whether there is a role for the NRPB in terms of prevention, management and public information.

The mobile telecommunications and health research programme, supported by Government and industry sources, is funding studies of individuals who have reported an increased sensitivity to mobile phones and mobile phone base stations.

Food Labelling

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the European Commission about his plans for a traffic light system for food labelling; what response he has received from the Commission about the proposal; whether he plans to introduce legislation to give effect to the system; and whether he expects legislation on the system to be introduced by the European Commission. [217666]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The European Commission is fully aware of, and has expressed support for, the work being progressed in the United Kingdom to develop a voluntary, national signposting system to make it easier for consumers to make healthier food choices. The Food Standards Agency is still investigating various signposting options and no decision has been made on the ultimate format of such front-of-pack labelling.

We will be working with the European Union and will use the British presidency to ensure that Europe as a whole will provide simple nutritional labelling and make it mandatory on packaged goods.

Forensic Medical Examiners

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what training is available to doctors who wish to become forensic medical examiners; and what the cost of this training was in the last period for which figures are available; [215570]

(2) what steps he is taking to increase the numbers of female doctors who become forensic medical examiners. [215686]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is not responsible for the recruitment and training of forensic medical examiners. It is the responsibility of local police authorities and chief officers. There are a number of training providers, but no central information is collated relating to either the content or cost of such training.

Health Promotion

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on advertising the dangers of (a) smoking, (b) poor diet and (c) alcohol in each year since 1997. [219678]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Education Authority ran the public education campaign on the dangers of smoking prior to 1999–2000. The tobacco control campaign run by the Department was launched in December 1999.

The following table shows advertising expenditure on the dangers of smoking from 1999–2000 to date.

Financial year	£ million Tobacco control
1999–2000	6.18
2000–01	8.97
2001–02	7.79
2002–03	7.87
2003–04	17.76
2004–05[1]	25.00

In my response to a question from the hon. Member on 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 324–25W, advertising expenditure on the dangers of smoking from 1999–2000 to date, the amount for 2003–04 was incorrectly listed as £19.36 million. The correct figure for 2003–04 is £17.76 million.

The Department does not advertise the dangers of poor diet. However, the Department promotes the positive benefits of a healthy diet through a range of on-going activities such as the five-a-day programme, including the school fruit and vegetable scheme, promotion of food in schools as well as promoting breastfeeding among the disadvantaged groups.

The following table shows expenditure on promoting healthy diet from 1998 to 2005.

Financial year	£ million Expenditure
1998–99	0.37
1999–2000	1.26
2000–01	1.62
2001–02	1.74
2002–03	1.14
2003–04	3.24
2004–05	4.31

There has been no advertising campaign by the Department specifically on the dangers of excessive drinking in the last seven years.

The Department has funded, through its central communications budget, the production of a number of booklets and leaflets advising the public on sensible drinking. Expenditure for these is shown in the following table.

	£ Expenditure
2002–03	96,764
2003–04	44,591
2004–05[1]	39,954

[1] Up to and including quarter three.

Additionally, the Department funds the Drinkline helpline and a dedicated website. It is not possible to provide a separate cost for the operation of the helpline, Drinkline, as this is provided as part of a contract covering FRANK (drugs), Sexual Health Line, Drinkline and Know The Score, the Scottish helpline on drugs. These services have been provided under one contract and one operational model, for purposes of cost efficiency. The approximate cost of operating the four services in 2004–05 is £1.8 million including VAT, or £1.5 million excluding VAT.

Health Spending

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the spending per head of the population on health services was in (a) England and (b) the Weston-super-Mare constituency in each year since 1992. [221901]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not collected centrally in the format requested. The table shows expenditure per weighted head of population in England, and by the health authority and strategic health authority areas covering the Weston-Super-Mare constituency, for 1996–97 to 2003–04, which is the latest year for which figures are available. Information in this format is not available prior to 1996–97.

Expenditure per weighted head of population

	Avon Health Authority area	Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority area	£ per head England

2002–03	n/a	1,005.46	991.07
2003–04	n/a	1,171.37	1,116.32

Notes:

1. Expenditure is taken from audited health authority accounts and summarisation forms and primary care trust summarisation schedules, which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in the year. Figures are given in cash terms.
2. Allocations per weighted head of population provide a much more reliable measure to identify differences between funding of health authorities and primary care trusts.
3. Figures for 1996–97 to 2001–02 have been prepared using gross expenditure figures. Figures for 2002–03 and 2003–04 have been adjusted to eliminate expenditure which would be double counted where an authority acts as a lead in commissioning health care or other services.

In many health authorities there are factors which distort the expenditure. These include:

the health authority acting in a lead capacity to commission healthcare or fund training on behalf of other health bodies; and asset revaluations in NHS trusts being funded through health authorities or primary care trusts.

The majority of general dental services expenditure is separately accounted for by the dental practice board (DPB). An element of pharmaceutical services expenditure is accounted for by the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA). Total expenditure on these items by the DPB and the PPA cannot be allocated to individual health bodies, therefore the total expenditure in the answer does not capture all NHS expenditure within the area.

The proportion of drugs expenditure accounted for by the DPB was larger in 1997–98 and 1998–99, which is why the total expenditure figures for those years appear low compared to 1996–97, 1999–2000, and 2000–01.

For these reasons expenditure cannot be compared reliably between health authorities or between different years.

Heat-related Illnesses

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had about the public health impacts of heat-related illnesses. [218811]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department is currently updating the report, "The Effects of Climate Change on Health in the United Kingdom", which was published in 2002. A group of experts, drawn from those who contributed to the original report, has met and is currently examining evidence. The effects of heat and cold on health will be carefully considered. An updated report will be published in the summer of 2005.

Hepatitis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional provision has been made should the hepatitis B awareness campaign result in a large increase in people coming forward for treatment. [220785]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The current health care professional and public awareness campaigns are for hepatitis C, rather than hepatitis B.

Over the three year period 2005–06 to 2007–08, funding for the national health service will increase on average by 7.1 per cent. a year over and above inflation—a total increase over the period of 23 per cent. in real terms. Over three years, this will take the total spent on the NHS in England from £69 billion in 2004–05 to £92 billion in 2007–08. This is a significant increase over historic levels of growth.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time in hospitals in (a) South Tyneside, (b) the North East and (c) the UK has been in each year since 1997. [221958]

Mr. Hutton: The Department collects waiting times information by national health service trust.

Lancashire Ambulance Trust

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the proposed restructuring of ambulance services by Lancashire Ambulance Trust. [222101]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 15 March 2005]: Any decisions about the configuration of ambulance trusts are a matter for the local health economy to consider, led by the strategic health authority (SHA) and in consultation with patients and the public. Under section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001, national health service bodies are under a duty to consult and involve patients, the public and their representatives in the planning of changes to services, and to involve them in decisions affecting the operation of services. Should a proposal to change services represent a substantial development or variation, NHS bodies are under a duty to consult relevant local authority overview and scrutiny committees.

Medical Treatment (European Countries)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients living in the Ribble Valley have had operations or other medical treatments funded by the NHS in European countries in each of the last three years. [222103]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 15 March 2005]: This information is not collected centrally.

Midwifery

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of unfilled midwifery posts in the North West. [221411]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 16 March 2005]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

MRSA

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) assessment he has made of the scope for the use of essential oils in dealing with MRSA and (b) funding he intends to provide for research into the use of such oils in combating MRSA. [220178]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The scientific literature indicates that essential oils can help control health care associated infections, including methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA). The Department has allocated £3 million to research into health care associated infection and has recently issued a call for research proposals. If a proposal on essential oils is submitted, it will be carefully considered alongside others.

NHS Spending

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2005, Official Report, column 1911W, on NHS spending, what the expenditure on hospital and community services in England is at constant prices. [222777]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the expenditure on hospital and community services in England, at 2003–04 prices, is shown in the table. Expenditure figures provided include the commissioning of secondary health care, which is the closest to the information requested. It is not possible to provide comparable figures prior to 1996–97.

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which areas receive additional funding for out-of-hours general practitioner services on account of their rural character. [221287]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The table shows the 50 primary care trusts (PCTs) that were allocated on account of their rural character additional funding to provide out-of-hours services. The additional funding was aggregated to strategic health authority level and decisions about final allocations were agreed locally.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints have been received on the new GP out-of-hours service since its introduction (a) in England and (b) in the North Somerset Primary Care Trust area. [221902]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not centrally available.

Paddington Health Campus

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what percentage of Harefield Hospital's catchment area for cardiothoracic NHS inpatients, in-patients will be drawn for the new hospital on the Paddington Basin Health Campus; and when its facilities will be available for them. [221681]

Mr. Hutton: The number of in-patient episodes currently undertaken at Harefield Hospital is projected to grow from 5,500 in 2003–04 to 6,000 by the time the Paddington Health Campus (PHC) opens. Of these patients, it is expected that 73 per cent. will use the PHC and the remaining 27 per cent., predominantly secondary cardiology patients, will use appropriately equipped local hospitals, possibly with cardiac departments operated as satellite Royal Brompton and Harefield services.

The outline business case for the PHC estimates that the new facilities will be fully operational from June 2013.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has consulted HM Treasury on the increase in land acquisition costs over those published in the public consultation document on the Paddington Basin Health Campus project and for which budget provision had been made. [221682]

Mr. Hutton: Her Majesty's Treasury has not yet been formally consulted. However, as recommended by the independent review team, it was represented on the steering group which oversaw the review. Once the Department has approved the outline business case (OBC), my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary of the Treasury will receive the OBC for consideration and approval.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the outcome has been of negotiations between Pearcroft Ltd. and his Department on the Paddington Basin Health Campus. [221683]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not been in negotiations with Pearcroft Ltd. in relation to the proposed Paddington Health Campus (PHC) and has no plans to do so.

Pearcroft has a shareholding in Paddington Development Corporate Ltd., (PDCL), a privately owned consortium, which, amongst other things, owns land in Paddington. PDCL is currently negotiating with Westminster city council and the Paddington Health Campus team for land required for the proposed PHC. Westminster city council has agreed to broker the land deal.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the cost to his Department of providing housing for relatives of patients receiving hospital treatment on the Paddington Basin Health Campus. [222006]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 March 2005]: The outline business case for the Paddington Health Campus submitted in December 2004 estimated the capital cost of accommodation for relatives of children and adults undergoing complex treatment as £11 million.

Patient Fitness Programmes

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation his Department carries out of the efficacy of fitness programmes for patients referred at primary care level by the NHS. [221645]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Fitness programmes for patients referred at primary care level by the national health service are subject to local evaluation. The Healthcare Commission assesses the performance of primary care trusts in the promotion of healthy lifestyles.

The Department periodically commissions reviews of best practice in the promotion of physical activity, including review-level research into the effectiveness of exercise referral schemes. The Health Development Agency has recently produced an updated evidence briefing on the effectiveness of public health interventions for increasing physical activity among adults and is preparing a briefing on the promotion of physical activity aimed at professionals in the statutory, voluntary and private sectors.

"Choosing Activity: a physical activity action plan", includes a commitment for production of specific guidelines for children's exercise referral.

Pregnancy Advisory Service

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 13 December 2004, Official Report, column 978W, to the hon. Member for Totnes (Mr. Steen), on the Pregnancy Advisory Service, whether funding has been allocated by the Government to the British Pregnancy Advisory Service since 1997. [221725]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 16 March 2005]: The Department has not directly funded the British Pregnancy Advisory Service (BPAS) in any year since 1997. We do not collect data on the funding BPAS receives through its contracts with primary care trusts.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirements there are for primary care trust funding panels to consult patients before reaching a decision on whether to fund treatments and drugs. [213588]

Mr. Hutton: There is no formal requirement for primary care trust (PCT) funding panels to consult patients before reaching a decision on whether to fund treatment and drugs. However, in cases where there is no guidance from the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) and a local decision needs to be taken, such consultation would be considered good practice.

Where the National Institute for Clinical Excellence has recommended a treatment in a technology appraisal, PCTs normally have to make funding available for this treatment within three months of the appraisal's publication. NICE consults widely with a range of stakeholders, including patients and patients' organisations, before making a technology appraisal decision.

In addition, all PCTs have patient and public involvement forums, which exist to monitor and review the services arranged and/or provided by the trust from the perspective of the patient. This includes both the range and operation of services.

Scans (Private Sector)

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the decision was taken to site the Alliance Medicals mobile scanner at James Cook Hospital, Middlesbrough rather than at University Hospital, North Durham; and who took the decision. [220843]

Mr. Hutton: The James Cook Hospital was the closest available site which had immediate access to a power and water supply in the grounds of the hospital where mobile scanner units are normally sited. The decision to site the scanner at James Cook Hospital was taken by the local radiology manager, in conjunction with Alliance Medical.

Alliance Medical is investigating the possibility of locating a mobile scanner unit in the North Durham area, ideally on a primary care site which has a suitable power and water supply available in the grounds of the site.

Specialised Health Services

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to strengthen processes for (a) planning, (b) decision making and (c) performance management in the commissioning of specialised health services. [220248]

Mr. Hutton: Primary care trusts are expected to commission specialised services collaboratively through their membership of the eight specialised commissioning groups and 26 local specialised commissioning groups covering England. Strategic health authorities actively support, monitor and performance manage the commissioning arrangements for specialised services in their areas.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Public Service Agreement target to increase the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment programmes by 55 per cent. by 2004 was met. [219239]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Figures published by the National Treatment Agency on 30 September 2004 show that 54 per cent. more drug misusers were in contact with drug treatment services in 2003–04 in comparison to the 1998–99 baseline.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Defence

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what contingency plans have been prepared for coping with a large scale exodus of people from a city following a terrorist attack. [210891]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been asked to reply.

It would be in extremely unusual circumstances that mass evacuation would be initiated. In such circumstances the existing evacuation and reception planning by local authorities, police and emergency services would come into play. The new regional resilience teams in the Government offices for the regions would be available to assist with co-ordination of incidents affecting several local authority areas. In London, large scale evacuation planning is co-ordained by the London resilience team.

New Environmental Technologies

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to reform the methodology of regulatory impact assessments in order to reflect more accurately the social and economic benefits of new environmental technologies; and if he will make a statement. [221730]

Mr. Miliband: The regulatory impact assessment (RIA) methodology provides for the assessment of economic, environmental and social impacts. This includes analysing the benefits that may arise from the use of environmental technology as well as any costs to UK industry. Assessments undertaken by Departments should reflect the social, environmental and economic benefits of any relevant emerging technology.

Staff Identity Passes

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the cost of producing a staff identity pass was in the Department on the latest date for which figures are available; and how many staff identity passes have been reported lost or stolen in each year since 1997. [215080]

Mr. Miliband: The average cost of producing a staff identify pass in the Department on the latest date for which figures are available is £8.87. This includes materials and staff costs. Figures on the number of lost or stolen passes are only available from 2003 onwards and are shown in the following table.

	Number of passes
Lost
2003	61
2004	20
Stolen
2003	10
2004	31

No incidents have been recorded in this period of attempted use of lost or stolen passes.

I regret that the information I gave in a response to the hon. Member on 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 92W, on security passes was incorrect. That response stated that there were 15 passes reported lost in 2004, when there were in fact 20 passes reported lost in 2004. The correct information has been used in response to this PQ.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Africa

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact the Commission for Africa Report will have on (a) delivering funding for development in Africa, (b) ensuring value for money of monies committed from the UK to development projects in Africa and (c) achieving openness and transparency in how the funds are used in delivering the projects. [222667]

Hilary Benn: The Commission for Africa report is a well argued case for the international community and Africa working in partnership to achieve change. One key recommendation is that aid to Africa should be doubled. DFID supports this, the UK is on track to double UK aid by 2010 from levels in 2004–05. The political momentum generated by the report will encourage other countries to increase aid flows and support the International Financing Facility (IFF). DFID will work to enlist maximum international response through our presidencies of the G8 and EU during 2005.

The Commission for Africa report presents a powerful analysis of the most effective ways to ensure that growth in the quantity of aid is matched by increased aid effectiveness. We strongly agree and will be taking further steps to improve the predictability and harmonisation of UK aid, as recommended by the report, so that it will have maximum impact. The report also recommends that aid is untied—which is already the case for UK aid. More effective aid means better value for money for the UK taxpayer.

The report is clear on the importance of donors being held to account for the effectiveness of their aid and recommends the establishment of new mechanisms for monitoring donor performance against clear, time bound and quantifiable commitments. DFID supports this.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how the International Finance Facility will work in connection with projects funded by the UK and other international parties in Africa; and what type of infrastructure projects he expects will benefit from such funds. [222668]

Hilary Benn: The International Finance Facility is a financing mechanism designed to provide significant extra resources for development between now and 2015. It would be used to finance country-led development processes in the poorest countries in Africa and elsewhere in the world, but will not act as a development bank or aid agency in its own right. Funds from the Facility would be disbursed through existing, effective, multilateral and bilateral mechanisms.

Finance from the International Finance Facility should ensure that aid is used to finance the investments that will help put countries on a sustainable and lasting path to poverty reduction this could include infrastructure. The detailed mechanics of how disbursement decisions would be made would depend on the Facility's Governance Structure, which would be for agreement by donors at the establishment of the IFF.

Aid Initiatives

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans his Department has for conflict resolution to address the underlying causes of conflict in countries which are excluded from development and debt initiatives. [222698]

Hilary Benn: DFID carries out the majority of its conflict resolution and conflict prevention work through the Global and Africa Conflict Prevention Pools (GCPP and ACPP respectively), which are supplied by the Ministry of Defence (MoD), the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and the Department for International Development (DFID).

The country and regional strategies in the Africa and the Global Pools are based on where the UK can make a contribution to the reduction and resolution of conflict. The trilateral nature of the Pools means that DFID is involved in a small number of countries that are not development priorities for DFID. The vast majority of the Pools' work, however, is in countries where DFID is also engaged in developmental activities and/or debt initiatives.

Grenada/Cayman Islands

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of reconstruction efforts in (a) Grenada and (b) Cayman Islands. [222198]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID maintains close contact with the Government of Grenada, including its new Agency for Reconstruction and Development (ARD), and with other donors. We do so both bilaterally and through a forum which is convened by the United Nations Development Programme which includes the participation of the other major donors. Through these contacts we have responded to the Government of Grenada's requests for budget support and technical assistance for the reconstruction effort and have helped to press other donors to respond in a timely manner.

The ARD was formally launched on 15 March—albeit somewhat later than originally envisaged. There has been progress in school reconstruction and in the housing sector. In the education sector, funds from the US Agency for International Development, World Bank, European Commission and DFID are being used for a programme of schools' rehabilitation. All children are now back at school.

The Government of Grenada has said that housing reconstruction and financing is a top priority and has committed to a number of initiatives for rebuilding. For priority vulnerable and needy families, as a first phase, it committed to constructing 225 low-income homes at a cost of about £8,000 per home, and providing material assistance for the repair of 1,125 roofs during the same period. The Government are also offering a Soft Loan Facility which provides a maximum loan amount of approximately £8,000 for 10 years with a one year grace period, at an interest rate of 3 per cent. In addition the Venezuelan Government, the US Agency for International Development, and the People's Republic of China have all committed to the construction and repair of homes in Grenada.

Similarly, while not directly involved in assessing the efforts of the Caymanian authorities, DFID continues to monitor progress in Cayman Islands' recovery from Hurricane Ivan. Since our emergency assistance in the immediate aftermath of the hurricane, when we quickly contributed relief supplies and helped with the clear-up operation, both the islands' Governor and our Disaster Management Adviser have kept in close contact and provided us with reports. In addition, the Cayman Islands Government have shared with us a damage assessment by the United Nations' Economic commission for the Caribbean and Latin America (ECLAC).

We understand that the pace of recovery, including repairs to housing and essential infrastructure, continues to be strong and that the situation is improving on a daily basis. The Cayman authorities have also announced measures, in co-operation with the United Nations Development Programme, to establish a National Emergency Management system and to achieve optimum resilience in the event of any future natural disasters.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the Grenadan Government concerning reconstruction efforts following Hurricane Ivan. [222383]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Secretary of State met with Prime Minister Keith Mitchell MP on Monday 21 March in London, to discuss progress on the reconstruction efforts in Grenada. DFID officials attended a regular meeting of the Government of Grenada-Donor Community Forum on 9 March, in Barbados. The Chief Executive of the Agency for Reconstruction and Development, Dr. Richardson Andrews, and Senior Officials from the Ministry of Education represented the Government of Grenada at that meeting. DFID officials met with the Permanent Secretary in the Grenadian Ministry of Finance on Thursday 10 March in the margins of the Caribbean Development Bank Board Meeting. All these meetings are supplemented by regular contact between the Government of Grenada and FCO officials in St. Georges, and by the continuous monitoring of our programmes in Grenada by DFID staff in the Caribbean office.

HIV/AIDS

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support the Government are giving to the development and provision of (a) microbicides and (b) other HIV-prevention methods in his Department's aid programmes to the developing world. [221650]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID is providing a grant of £16 million (October 2001 to September 2006) to the Microbicide Development Programme (MDP) coordinated by the Medical Research Councils Clinical Trials Unit and Imperial College. DFID has also provided £18 million to International AIDS Vaccine Initiative (IAVI) and £1.3 million to International Partnership for Microbicides (IPM).

DFID is supporting a range of prevention interventions across the countries where we work. Our support depends on needs and demand at country level linked to the nature of the epidemic. We support a comprehensive country led approach to HIV prevention. We support governments to strengthen their health and social systems. We also provide specific support to delivering services via civil society, private sector and Government agencies. This covers a range of activities such as school education, harm reduction such as needle exchanges, and methadone replacement for intravenous drug users, voluntary counselling and testing, procurement and supply of sexual and reproductive health commodities and associated training and counselling. We encourage engagement of key stakeholders such as people living with HIV/AIDS, commercial sex workers and intravenous drug users in developing and implementing services.

Access to reproductive health services and information is essential to preventing HIV infection and we support better integration of services for AIDS and sexual and reproductive health, so that they are complementary and not competitive. Sexual and reproductive health services are also a cornerstone of efforts to prevent HIV infection. DFID is a major donor of reproductive health commodities (including condoms), mainly through budgetary support to country strategies that include reproductive health but also via support for specific reproductive health programmes. We support social marketing programmes that distribute contraceptives and condoms for HIV prevention.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to his answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 379W, on HIV/AIDS, if he will place in the Library the report of the Conference on Retroviral and Opportunistic Infections held in Boston USA in March. [222654]

Hilary Benn: I have arranged for the documents entitled "Nevirapine Use for a Second Pregnancy Is Beneficial in Preventing Mother-to-child Transmission of HIV, When Compared to a Transmission rate of 25 per cent. Without Drug Use", "Very Low Verical HIV Transmission Rates Possible in Africa" and "Prevention of mother to child transmission of HIV" which were presented at the Conference on Retrovirals and Opportunistic Infections held in Boston from 23 to 25 February this year, to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

TRANSPORT

Caravans

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the size of vehicle required to tow safely a caravan that has (a) twin axles and (b) triple axles. [222998]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 March 2005]: The Government have not carried out any assessment of vehicle size in relation to the towing of caravans.

The suitability of a vehicle to tow a caravan (regardless of the number axles) is determined by the vehicle manufacturers usually as a result of their research and development programmes. The vehicle manufacturer determines the maximum weight of the trailer (caravan) to be towed by the vehicle and displays this on the vehicle data plate as the maximum train weight. The maximum train weight is the overall combined laden weight of the vehicle and the caravan (trailer) which should not be exceeded in any circumstances when used on the highway.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the maximum (a) length and (b) width is of a caravan that can be legally towed. [223001]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 18 March 2005]: The maximum dimensions regarding the length and width of a caravan that can legally be towed on the roads of the UK is dependent on the maximum gross weight of the towing vehicle.

Towing vehicles with a maximum gross weight of 3500kg or below are permitted to tow a caravan with a maximum length of 7 metres and a width of 2.3 metres.

Towing vehicles with a maximum gross weight exceeding 3500kg are permitted to tow a caravan with a maximum length of 12 metres provided it is fitted with at least four wheels. In all other cases the maximum length is 7 metres. The maximum width is 2.55 metres.

In either case the overall length of the towing vehicle and caravan combination must not exceed 18 metres or 18.75 metres if the towing vehicle was manufactured after 1 June 1998.

Myasthenia Gravis

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the eligibility of sufferers of myasthenia gravis for the Blue Badge scheme. [222131]

Charlotte Atkins: The Blue Badge scheme is designed primarily to assist people with severe difficulty in walking, whatever the cause of their disability. People who are registered blind also qualify under the Scheme. Drivers with a severe disability affecting both arms may also be eligible. Local authorities, which are responsible for administering the Scheme, will decide on an individual's eligibility on the basis of these criteria. People with myasthenia gravis will be eligible for a badge if they meet the criteria.

Railways

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers used Leicester railway station in (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005 in (i) morning peak hours, (ii) evening peak hours and (iii) off-peak hours. [222897]

Mr. McNulty: The only available figures held centrally are based on a passenger count on departures from Leicester station taken for one day in November 2004.

	Number
AM Peak (7am to 10am)	1,972
PM Peak (4pm to 7pm)	2,454
Off Peak (6am to 7am, 10am to 4pm and 7pm to 10pm)	3,444
Total	7,870

Roadside Accidents

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will assess the merits of requiring car occupants to wear reflective jackets compliant to standard EN471 when leaving their vehicle at the roadside, except where the vehicle is parked; and if he will make a statement; [222261]

(2) if he will take steps to require car occupants leaving their vehicle by the roadside, except when the vehicle is parked, to wear reflective jackets compliant to standard EN471; and if he will make a statement; [222262]

(3) if he will make it a requirement that drivers carry at least one reflective jacket in their cars; and if he will make a statement. [222320]

Mr. Jamieson: We do not make it a requirement for any road user to wear reflective clothing. However, we do advise vulnerable road users—pedestrians, cyclists, motorcyclists and horseriders—to wear fluorescent clothing during the day and reflective clothing at night to improve their visibility to other road users. This advice is contained in the Highway Code.

Drivers are generally less vulnerable. But the Code gives advice to them on where they should stand should their vehicle breakdown, with special advice for motorways. Our leaflet, "A Guide to Safer Motorway Driving", also contains the advice on what to do when vehicles break down on motorways. While there are tragic accidents when drivers leave their vehicles, these are rare. We believe that drivers and occupants are not at great risk when they follow this advice—for example, for motorways they are advised to wait on a nearby bank or verge well away from the traffic. We therefore do not believe that we should go further and require the wearing of special clothing.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what compensation will be payable to (a) companies engaged in the supply of and (b) those who have bought equipment which detects the presence of speed cameras in the event of such equipment being outlawed under the provisions of the Road Safety Bill. [222700]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government signalled their intentions in January 2001. The provision contained within the Road Safety Bill regarding speed assessment equipment detection devices would allow regulations to be made which would allow the continued use of Global Positioning Systems which contribute to road safety by informing drivers of the location of published safety camera sites. The provisions are designed to deal with devices whose purpose, or one of the purposes of which, is to detect or interfere with the operation of all police enforcement equipment used to assess the speed of motor vehicles.

It would be inappropriate to compensate companies engaged in the supply, or users of equipment that enabled drivers to ignore speed limits and flout the law with impunity endangering other road users.

Traffic Commissioners

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what authority a traffic commissioner has over members of staff in the Traffic Area Network. [223118]

Mr. Jamieson: Staff in the Traffic Area Offices support traffic commissioners to enable them to exercise their responsibilities for operator licensing. Management responsibility for Traffic Area Office staff lies with the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency.

Transport Security Directorate

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who the Director is of the Transport Security Directorate for (a) Scotland and (b) Wales; and what role the (i) Scottish Executive and (ii) Welsh Assembly Government play in the Transport Security Directorate's operations. [223133]

Charlotte Atkins: As transport security is a reserved matter there is no separate Transport Security Directorate for Scotland and Wales. Relevant transport operations in Scotland and Wales come under the direction of the Department for Transport's Transport Security and Contingencies Directorate (TRANSEC). TRANSEC officials liaise with the devolved Administrations as appropriate.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made with improvements to Non-Motorised User crossings of trunk roads in England; and what plans he has for further progress. [222203]

Mr. Jamieson: By 31 March 2003, the Highways Agency completed surveys of all Non-Motorised User (NMU) crossing points on the trunk road network and drew up a provisional list of improvements, which would offer good value for money.

The Highways Agency has completed approximately 90 discrete NMU related improvement schemes and plans to complete at least a further 14 such schemes in 2005–06. This figure does not include those NMU improvement elements that have been incorporated into other larger projects for delivery as part of the Government's Targeted Programme of Improvements. Progress on delivery of NMU crossing improvements will continue to be monitored by the Agency.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding he has allocated to the Highways Agency for Non-Motorised User crossing improvements over the financial years 2005–06 to 2007–08. [222204]

Mr. Jamieson: Non-Motorised User (NMU) crossings are provided where justified as part of major schemes. In addition, small free-standing schemes are funded from the Highways Agency's small schemes budget. Following the recent Spending Review settlement, the Highways Agency is developing its detailed forward programme for small schemes, which include high value-for-money safety schemes, junction improvements, as well as environmental and accessibility improvement measures that include NMU crossings. Within this particular category of funding, the Highways Agency has indicative funding levels of £10 million, £6 million and £7 million respectively for the period 2005–06 to 2007–08 for Accessibility projects.

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current status of the A681 former trunk road through Sharneyford, near Bacup, Lancashire; and what weight restrictions are in operation upon it. [222421]

Mr. Jamieson: The A681 at Sharneyford is a principal road and is the responsibility of the local highway authority, Lancashire county council. There are no weight restrictions currently in operation on the route.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Listed Places of Worship Grant

7. Miss McIntosh: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners pursuant to his oral answer of 21 February 2005, Official Report, column 20, what the take-up of the listed places of worship grant scheme has been in the last 12 months. [222797]

Sir Stuart Bell: 6,907 applications for VAT refunds have been made under this scheme since 1 April 2004 and roughly £6.5 million has been paid out, of which about 90 per cent. relates to Church of England places of worship.

The Church is extremely grateful to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for extending the scheme until 2008 in his Budget.

As the estimated annual spend on repairs and maintenance is nearly £100 million, there may be some parishes failing to claim. A proportion of repairs cover items which do not qualify under the scheme but there is still a strong suggestion that eligible works are being carried out on Church of England listed church buildings and no application is being made for a VAT refund.

The C of E VAT Group is urging all parishes who have undertaken repair works to listed church buildings costing in excess of £1,000 to make a claim for the VAT refund on completion of the works.

Tourism

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners if he will make a statement on the Church Commissioners' policy on the encouragement of tourism. [222794]

Sir Stuart Bell: Cathedrals and churches are a major draw, not just in their own right but also as the part of the wider communities they serve. Making churches open and accessible raises challenges but congregations are responding with increasing professionalism, aided by advice from national and regional initiatives.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Incitement to Racial Hatred

David Winnick: To ask the Solicitor-General if the Attorney-General will refer the article written by Nasser Amin in the current student journal of the School of Oriental and African Studies to the Director of Public Prosecutions as incitement to racial hatred; and if she will make a statement. [222605]

The Solicitor-General: If any person believes that a criminal offence has been committed, than they may report that allegation to the police. The police can then investigate the allegation and, where appropriate, refer the matter to the Crown Prosecution Service for consideration of whether a prosecution should be brought.

Where the Crown Prosecution Service consider that a prosecution should be commenced for an offence of incitement to racial hatred, they seek the consent of the Attorney-General to prosecute.

The Attorney-General has not to date been asked to consider giving consent to prosecute Nasser Amin for an offence of incitement to racial hatred.

Parliamentary Questions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Solicitor-General, pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2005, Official Report, column 1075W, on parliamentary questions, whether the former deputy legal adviser in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Elizabeth Wilmhurst, was one of the three officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office referred to. [222382]

The Solicitor-General: No.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many motor vehicles have been abandoned in (a) Leicester South, (b) Leicester and (c) England since 1997. [222896]

Alun Michael: Statistics for abandoned vehicles removed and destroyed were first compiled in the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey for 2000–01.

Annual results for England and Leicester, as well as the total since the figures were first recorded in 2000–01 are listed in the following table.

	England	Leicester
2000–01	230,000	1,416
2001–02	286,000	1,434
2002–03	310,000	1,758
Total	826,400	4,608

Agricultural Employment

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in agriculture in England in each year from 1990 to 2004. [221957]

Alun Michael: The number of people employed in agriculture in England for the years 1990 to 2004 are shown in the table. The figures include family workers but exclude casual workers, farmers, partners, directors and salaried managers.

Thousand

	(a) Full-time	(b) Part-time
1990	100.0	45.7
1991	95.6	45.1

1997	80.6	41.9
1998	79.2	41.0
1999	73.6	37.2
2000	64.2	32.7
2001[1]	61.2	29.4
2001[2]	62.8	30.3
2002	58.6	28.7
2003	52.6	26.2
2004	50.4	28.3

[1] Shows the results assuming register improvements had not taken place (comparable with June 2000).
[2] Shows the results including register improvements.
Notes:
1. Part-time is defined as less than 39 hours
2. Due to the introduction of new questions in 1998 figures prior to this year are not directly comparable with earlier years' results.
3. Due to a register improvement exercise in 2001, labour figures prior to this are not directly comparable with later results.

Beekeeping

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons her Department has not issued a consultation document on its plans for the budget for the support of beekeepers in England. [222146]

Alun Michael: It is not our practice to issue consultation documents on expenditure plans. We plan to issue a consultation document on our proposal to remove European foul brood from the list of notifiable diseases of bees in the winter of 2006–07, when further data on the effectiveness of the 'shook swarm' technique will be available.

Bird Control

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the new general licence WLF18 for the control of certain species of birds which came into effect on 1 March 2005. [220439]

Mr. Bradshaw: The general licence WLF 18 has been published and is available on the Defra website via the following link: http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/regulat/forms/cons_man/wlf 18.pdf.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the circumstances in which controlling pigeons on growing crops by non-lethal methods would be (a) less effective and (b) less practical than shooting. [220446]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra have made no such specific assessment. However, in December 2003 the Central Science Laboratory published a report on the 'Review of international research literature regarding the effectiveness of auditory bird scaring techniques and potential alternatives'. A copy of this report can be found at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/noise/birdscaring/birdscaring.pdf

This review, which was commissioned by Defra, did not include an assessment of shooting.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs under what legal authority she transferred the responsibility given to her by S.16 (1A) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 to decide whether there is no other satisfactory solution other than killing certain birds, to the authorised persons under the terms of the General Licence WLF18. [220447]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State has not transferred the responsibility given to her by S.16 (1A) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 to decide whether there is no other satisfactory solution other than killing certain birds, to the authorised persons under the terms of the General Licence WLF18.

The wording of three of the licences (prevention of damage/spread of disease, public safety and air safety) was changed to include reference to the authorised person satisfying himself regarding the effectiveness of alternative methods of control. The new condition was included in order to clarify that general licences properly meet our EC obligations by providing for an assessment of alternatives on a case by case basis.

However, the final responsibility as regards other satisfactory solutions rests with the Secretary of State.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish guidance to persons authorised under general licence WLF 18 on the criteria they should use to assess whether appropriate non-lethal methods of control are ineffective or impracticable. [221392]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra issued a press release on 9 March 2005 announcing the latest revisions to the general licence condition regarding non-lethal methods of control. There are no plans to publish further guidance.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish advice she has received concerning the legal interpretation of condition 4 of general licence WLF 18. [221393]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is necessary for Defra, and other Government Departments, to obtain legal advice in order to formulate policy. Without such comprehensive advice the quality of the Government's decision making would be much reduced since it would not be fully informed and this would be contrary to the public interest.

Disclosure of legal advice has a significant potential to prejudice the Government's ability to defend its legal interests—both directly, by unfairly exposing its legal position to challenge, and indirectly by diminishing the reliance it can place on the advice having been fully considered and presented without fear or favour. Neither of these scenarios is in the public interest

It is for these reasons that Defra will not publish any legal advice it has received in respect of condition 4 of general licence WLF18.

Cormorants

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department plans to amend its policy on the control of fish-eating wildlife other than cormorants [222299]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have no plans to amend the policy on the control of fish-eating wildlife.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action her Department is taking to ensure that the granting of licences for the control of cormorants does not lead to the killing of nesting birds. [222300]

Mr. Bradshaw: Licences to shoot cormorants are normally issued between 31 August and 15 April which avoids the main cormorant breeding season (eggs: 20 March to 1 July, unfledged young: 20 April to 1 September). Some licences are extended to 30 April if smolt runs are likely to be affected by cormorant predation.

The presence of a cormorant nesting site close to a proposed licensed site is taken into consideration when assessing the suitability of the site for licensed action; the licence period may be adjusted to avoid taking cormorants which may have dependent young.

English Nature is consulted on all applications for licences to shoot cormorants outside of t he "normal" period of 31 August to 15 April. These applications may be refused on the basis of humaneness if nesting cormorants and their young are likely to be affected.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many individuals of each bird species, other than cormorants, have been killed as a result of licences granted to control cormorants since the change of policy on cormorant control. [222301]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not hold data on the numbers of individuals of bird species which have been killed as a result of licences granted to control cormorants.

Licences are granted for the shooting of a specific number of cormorants (Phalacrocorax carbo) for a specific purpose (usually preventing serious damage to fisheries) and within a specified location and time frame. This is all clearly laid out on the licence. The shooting of any other species not identified on the licence, whether deliberate or by accident, is not authorised by the licence. A condition of a licence to shoot cormorants is to provide six-monthly returns of the number of cormorants shot under licence. Information on the accidental (or otherwise) shooting of other species is not requested.

Farm Holdings

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of farm holdings in England in each year from 1990 to 2004. [221956]

Alun Michael: The number of agricultural and horticultural holdings in England recorded for the years 1990 to 2004 are as follows:

	Number
1990	150,652
1991	150,966
1992	151,718
1993	153,422
1994	153,426
1995	146,109
1996	145,638
1997	144,777
1998	145,093
1999	147,220
2000	167,855
2001	177,934
2002	187,871
2003	190,687
2004	192,824

Notes:
1. Figures prior to 2000 are for main holdings only, from 2000 onwards main and minor holdings are included. A holding is defined as minor if it meets all of the following conditions:
(a) the total area is less than 6 hectares
(b) the labour requirement is estimated to be less than 100 standard person-days
(c) there is no regular full-time farmer or worker
(d) the glasshouse area is less than 100 square metres
(e) the occupier does not farm another holding
2. The number of holdings in later years reflects changes in administrative recording.

Farm Prices

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on farm-gate prices paid to farmers for supply of (a) dairy produce, (b) meat and (c) fruit and vegetables. [221690]

Alun Michael: The information requested is as follows:

Dairy produce

Nearly all milk produced in the UK leaves the farm as raw milk which is then processed into milk for liquid consumption or manufactured milk products (cheese, butter etc.). The farm-gate price of milk was provisionally 18.5 pence per litre in 2004[1], 9 per cent. higher than in 2000 (when farm-gate milk prices were at their lowest in recent years).

Meat

In 2004 the average price for clean cattle in the UK was provisionally 101.2 pence per kilogram liveweight[2], 13 per cent. higher than in 2000. The average price for clean pigs in the UK was provisionally 102.7 pence per kilogram deadweight, 9 per cent. higher than in 2000. The average price for clean sheep in Great Britain was provisionally 263.6 pence per kilogram dressed carcase weight, 34 per cent. higher than in 2000.

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of how many farmers will (a) gain and (b) lose from the redistribution of the dairy premium to be made under the Single Farm Payment Scheme; and if she will make a statement. [221324]

Alun Michael: A detailed analysis of how English dairy farmers stand to benefit or lose out relative to historic entitlements is provided in the document; CAP Single Payment Scheme, Basis for Allocation of Entitlement, Impact of the Scheme to be Adopted in England, which is available in the Library of the House and on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/capreform/background/pdf/webnoterev16.pdf

By the end of the transitional period some sectors will have gained or lost against historical subsidy receipts. Generally speaking, flat rate payments redistribute subsidy from more intensive to less intensive producers and to land not formerly in receipt of subsidy. On average larger dairy farmers will receive lower payments under this system than under one based on historic receipts whereas smaller farms will on average be better off. We believe that the eight-year transition to the flat rate payment will give all farmers time to adjust.

All payments to dairy farmers in the UK, as for other recipients of the Single Payment, will be decoupled from production, and therefore are no longer linked to particular farming activity. In a decoupled subsidy environment, farmers should only produce milk if they can do so profitably.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the (a) dairy payment and (b) additional dairy payment are being redistributed to all farmers entitled to the single farm payment; and whether she plans to reconsider the decision to make such payments. [221948]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced in a statement to the House on 12 February 2004, Official Report, columns 1585–1602, that all possible CAP direct payments, including the dairy premium and additional payment, would be decoupled in the UK at the earliest possible stage—that is in 2005—and that the flat rate model of the Single Payment would be adopted in England.

Those decisions were taken after very careful consideration of the arguments put forward in response to our consultation exercises on these matters. Those responses revealed a significant body of support for decoupling payments, recognising that the more fully support is decoupled, the greater the degree of freedom farmers will be given in respect of their business decisions.

A wide variety of often conflicting views were offered in respect of the Single Payment model, but our decision was ultimately guided by several key principles, namely:

coherence with the Curry Commission report and our own Sustainable Farming and Food Strategy launched in 2002, in particular with the emphasis in both on bringing the industry closer to the market and on the increasing importance of environmentally-sensitive farming; consistency with our wider objectives for the Common Agricultural Policy, including greater simplicity, transparency, minimal bureaucracy and as few deductions as possible from the basic payment available; and the need to attract the widest possible support of the stakeholder community, for ongoing payments to farming which, we believe, requires us to move towards a system in which public money is delivering public goods.

We recognise the special circumstances the dairy sector is in, but remain of the view that its long-term interests are best served by the decisions I have referred to.

Fisheries

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total fishing effort in km/hours using gill net and tangle net gear in the English Channel and Celtic Sea, ICES areas VIId, e, f, g, h and j was in (a) the 12 metre and over sector and (b) under 12 metre sector in the last period for which figures are available. [222861]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information on the length of time gill and tangle nets are left at sea for each individual fishing session is not collected. These sessions can often span more than one fishing trip. As such, the information requested is not available.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK fishing vessels fish with (a) gill net and (b) tangle net; and what length of each type of net is deployed. [222862]

Mr. Bradshaw: Reliable information on the number of UK vessels fishing with gill nets and tangle nets is only available for those over 10 metres in length. In 2004, 84 of these fished with gill nets and 34 with tangle nets. The length of each type of net can typically be between 100 metres and 10,000 metres depending on the species being targeted.

Harmful Cargoes

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 March 2005, Official Report, column 1936W, on harmful cargoes, if she will list the occasions since 1 May 1997 when monitoring of (a) fish stocks and (b) other marine wildlife has been instigated following the loss of a harmful cargo into the sea, giving in each case the nature of the cargo, the period of monitoring and the results of that monitoring. [222427]

Mr. Bradshaw: On 15 February 1996, the "Sea Empress" laden with over 72,000 tonnes crude oil ran aground off Milford Haven. Extensive monitoring continued for two years covering the contamination with oil of seawater, sediment, fish, shellfish and edible plants and seaweeds with oil as detailed in the report. The main impacts all occurred at the time of the incident or shortly afterwards and there appeared to have been few major long-term effects. A full assessment was provided in the final report of the Sea Empress Environmental Evaluation Committee, published in 1998. A more detailed summary of the report is available at: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_shipping/documents/page/dft_shipping_505333.hcsp.

On 31 October 2000, the "levoli Sun" was abandoned and later sunk approximately 11 miles North West of Alderney. The vessel carried a mixed cargo of 4,000 tonnes styrene, 1,000 tonnes methyl ethyl ketone and 1,000 tonnes isopropyl alcohol. More than 1,000 tonnes styrene was lost to sea during the incident. Analysis of edible tissues from crabs recovered one week later from pots laid very close to the wreck prior to the incident demonstrated only low-level styrene contamination that posed no risk to humans. The remainder of the styrene and the ship's main bunker fuel were recovered from the wreck on the seabed. Full details are provided in R.J. Law, C. Kelly, P. Matthiessen and J. Aldridge (2003) The loss of the chemical tanker levoli Sun in the English Channel, October 2000. Marine Pollution Bulletin, 46: 254–257.

On 29 June 2003, the "Jambo" carrying 3,300 tonnes sphalerite ore ran aground on rocks off the Summer Isles North West of Ullapool. Sphalerite is mainly composed of zinc sulphide and contains traces of other metals such as lead, cadmium and arsenic. Monitoring included testing water, sediments and shellfish for zinc, toxicity testing and measuring the solubility of metallic elements in the sphalerite ore. It showed that measured levels of zinc in the water were mostly very low. Toxic impacts of zinc to water column animals are therefore considered very unlikely. Measured levels of zinc in sediments are very low except in the immediate vicinity of the wreck (−100 metres) so toxic and smothering impacts to benthic (seabed) animals are therefore expected to be similarly localised. There is currently no evidence to suggest that the discharged cargo from the Jambo has resulted in persistent elevated levels of zinc, cadmium or arsenic in scallop or crab tissues. It is concluded that eating shellfish from the area around the Jambo incident does not raise any food safety concerns for consumers. The final report of the Jambo Environment Group to the Secretary of State's Representative was published in July 2004 and can be obtained from the Maritime and Coastguard Agency at: http://www.mcga.gov.uk/c4mca/environment_group_report-5.pdf. An environmental monitoring programme will continue each year until 2007.

Meat Imports (China)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on EU rules regarding the importing of meat from China. [221326]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Imports of red meat from China are not permitted. Imports of poultry meat were banned in January 2002 following the detection in animal products of residues of veterinary medicines.

Bans on some animal products e.g. honey, Royal jelly and rabbit meat have since been lifted following the implementation in China of corrective measures and the guarantees provided by their competent authorities.

However, an inspection visit to China by European Commission Inspectors identified some deficiencies with respect to the production of poultry meat intended for export to the EU. Given that, and the outbreaks of highly pathogenic avian influenza in China, the ban on imports of poultry meat has been retained.

All meat imported into the EU from third countries must enter at designated Border Inspection Posts where they are subject to veterinary inspections to ensure import conditions are met.

Sikh Employees

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is on the wearing of the Kirpan by Sikh employees. [221673]

Alun Michael: The Department's commitment not to discriminate unfairly on the grounds of religion or belief is set out clearly in its equal opportunities policy.

The Department does not have a formal policy on the carrying/wearing of knives but as the Kirpan is a religious symbol and is usually securely wrapped and worn under clothing it would be permitted providing it was safe to do so.

The Department's Diversity and Equality Unit has produced guidance for staff in the rights and responsibilities arising from the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003. The guidance incorporated practical advice for staff and managers to consider to help colleagues establish a good work/life balance in relation to their religious observance. This guidance forms part of the internal website, which also includes a calendar of religious festivals, guidance for staff on cultural differences and information for accommodation managers regarding prayer rooms. Where it is practicable, managers are encouraged to allow staff from non-Christian religions to work on privilege days and take the equivalent time to meet their individual needs for either cultural or religious observance.

Religious discrimination is addressed in all diversity training courses, including our e-learning multi-media interactive IT training package. This package can be accessed by staff at their desks, or used as part of a formal group training exercise.

Single Farm Payment

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent advice she has received from the European Agriculture Commissioner on the legality of making the Single Farm Payment in more than one stage. [221462]

Alun Michael: Our understanding from various contacts with the European Commission is that making the Single Payment in more than one stage would probably require an amendment to EU legislation. The Agriculture Commissioner has agreed with my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, that it would be helpful for respective officials to examine the position in more detail. That work is continuing.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION

General Election Candidates (Expenditure Limits)

8. Mr. Allen: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission whether the Commission intends to review the limits on expenditure by candidates in general elections; and if he will make a statement. [222798]

Mr. Viggers: The Electoral Commission's recommendations in respect of the variation of election expenses for candidates at UK parliamentary elections, published in January 2005, have been accepted by the Government and came into force on 4 March 2005.

In its report on "The funding of political parties" published at the end of 2004 the Commission stated that, after the next General Election, it would undertake a review of the balance between candidate and party spending limits.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what plans the Commission has to review the system of electoral registration. [222799]

Mr. Viggers: The Electoral Commission's report "The electoral registration process", published in May 2003, recommended the implementation of a range of measures designed to make the registration process more straightforward and user-friendly for voters, and to enhance security. Key proposals include the introduction of a system based on the collection and use of individual identifiers; the development of a UK-wide electronic register; and changes to allow voters to register closer to the date of an election.

The Government's Response to the Commission's report was published in December 2004 as Cm 6426.

TREASURY

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made, or have been made on his behalf, to companies involved in the CVF programme concerning final assembly of the proposed aircraft carriers. [211434]

Mr. Boateng: Discussions with companies involved in the CVF programme concerning final assembly of the proposed aircraft carriers are a commercial matter for the Ministry of Defence and not for HM Treasury.

Child Trust Fund Accounts

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 16 February 2005, Official Report, column 66W, on Child Trust Fund Accounts, when he expects a resolution of the issues necessary for credit unions to offer child trust fund cash deposit accounts. [218719]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to Chapter 5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report published last week.

Cigarette Smuggling

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of cigarette smuggling was in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [222234]

John Healey: The estimated level of cigarettes smuggled in each of the last four full financial years are given in table 3.9 and table 3.10 of "Measuring and Tackling Indirect Tax Losses", published by HM Customs and Excise in December 2004 and available from the House Library. The estimated level of smuggled cigarettes for 1999–2000 in market share and volume can be found in table 3.2 and table 3.3 of "Measuring indirect tax losses" published in November 2002, which is also available from the House Library.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with cigarette manufacturers on measures to reduce smuggling. [222324]

John Healey: HM Customs and Excise have Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs) with British American Tobacco, Imperial Tobacco and Gallaher. As part of these, Customs meet regularly to discuss developments in the tobacco market, including measures to reduce smuggling.

Departmental Teams

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) purpose and (b) functions of his Department's (i) local government team, (ii) housing and urban team and (iii) devolved countries and regions team are; and how many civil servants are employed in each. [220907]

Mr. Boateng: The purpose of all three teams is to work with ODPM, the devolved Administrations, regional institutions and local government to improve the quality and cost-effectiveness of the public services they deliver consistent with agreed spending plans.

The local government team consists of nine civil servants.

The housing and urban team consists of 12 civil servants.

The devolved countries and regions team consists of 10 civil servants.

Domiciliary Care Workers (Leicester)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of unregistered paid domiciliary care workers in (a) Leicester and (b) Leicester, South in each year since 1997. [222195]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Parmjit Singh Gill, dated 21 March 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about care workers in Leicester. I am replying in his absence.

The table overleaf gives the available information relating to numbers of care workers, resident in the Parliamentary Constituency of Leicester South and the Unitary Authority of Leicester, for the twelve-month periods ending February 2002 to 2004. Comparable information is not available for earlier years. Information is not held about whether or not these care workers were registered.

Estimates are taken from the Office for National Statistic's Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to sampling variability.

Number of care workers[1] resident in the unitary authority of Leicester and Leicester, South parliamentary constituency

12 months ending February each year	Leicester unitary authority	Leicester, South parliamentary constituency
2002	2,000	1,000
2003	3,000	1,000
2004	3,000	1,000

[1] Care workers include care assistants and home carers only.

Note:
These estimates are based on very small sample sizes and are subject to a very high degree of sampling variability. Changes from year to year, especially, should be treated with caution.

ECOFIN

Mr. Hood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the outcome was of the ECOFIN Council held on 17 February; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement; [218157]

(2) what the outcome was of the ECOFIN Council held on 8 March; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [221266]

Mr. Gordon Brown: At ECOFIN on Thursday 17 February Council Opinions on the Stability and Convergence programmes for Belgium, Denmark, Estonia, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Malta, Poland, Slovakia and Finland were all adopted.

The Council adopted a decision under Article 104(9) of the Treaty recommending measures for Greece to correct its excessive deficit. The Council extended the 2005 deadline to 2006. The Council welcomed the commitment of Greek authorities to continue with their fiscal consolidation effort.

Commissioner Almunia outlined the key components of the Commission's Strategy on Fiscal Statistics (adopted last December), which includes the building of the legal framework, improving the operational capacities of the relevant Commission services, and establishing European standards on the independence of national statistical institutes for the fulfilment of their mission. Conclusions were adopted.

Discussion of Stability and Growth Pact (SGP) reform options took place, on both the preventative arm and the corrective arm of the SGP. The UK highlighted that proper account needed to be taken of the economic cycle, of debt sustainability and of public investment.

An orientation debate was held on European Economic Reform ahead of the Spring European Council on 22 and 23 March 2005. Three items were discussed: draft Council Conclusions following the Commission's Implementation report on the Broad Economic Policy Guidelines (BEPGs); a Key Issues Paper put forward by the Presidency; and the Commission's Spring Report on the mid-term review of the Lisbon Strategy. The Conclusions on the BEPGs were adopted. The UK supported the Commission's call for a renewed focus on growth and jobs. The Presidency concluded that the momentum for the Lisbon Strategy had to be maintained, jobs and growth should be prioritised as Europe's relative performance is weak; and Lisbon National Action Programmes were important for increasing the implementation of reforms.

On Financial Perspectives for the period 2007–13 the Presidency set out a work programme with a view to political agreement in June.

At ECOFIN on Tuesday 8 March Council opinions on the Convergence Programmes for Cyprus, Latvia, Lithuania, Hungary, Slovenia and the UK and on the Stability Programme of Spain were all agreed.

A Recommendation (Article 104.7) to Hungary to correct its excessive deficit was agreed.

The Council examined the principle elements for reform of the Stability and Growth pact ahead of the Spring European Council on 22 and 23 March 2005. Further discussion is planned at a meeting of Ministers on 20 March 2005.

In the context of the Lisbon economic reform agenda, ECOFIN adopted its Key Issues Paper in preparation for European Council on 22 and 23 March 2005.

The Commission outlined the key points of member states' Annual Contributions to the Growth Initiative and informed Ministers that the European Investment Bank (EIB) would be undertaking a mid-term Review of the Initiative by 2007. Council conclusions were adopted. The Commission informed the Council that the Communication on Better Regulation would be published on 16 March. As part of this, the Commission indicated that the pilot projects on reducing the administrative burdens on businesses would be completed this year. I reiterated the need for the pilot phase to be completed by September and the Commission undertook to consider this.

The Council adopted Guidelines for the 2006 Budgetary Procedure and a Recommendation for Discharge of the 2003 EC Budget.

Fraud

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions the UK Government have reported (a) fraud and (b) other irregularities to the European Anti Fraud Office in the last five years. [222389]

Mr. Timms: The United Kingdom has reported irregularities, which includes fraud, on a quarterly basis to the European Commission and the European Anti Fraud Office, as required under Regulations 1150/2000, as amended by Regulation 2028/2004 (Own Resources), 595/91 (Agriculture) and 1681/94 (Structural Funds). Details of the amounts involved and the number of cases can be found in the European Commission's annual "Fight against Fraud" reports. The report, and its annexes, for 2003 was published on 30 August 2004.

Insurance

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the cost implications for general insurance policies arising from the recent European Court of Justice decision that outsourced services in the insurance industry do not qualify for VAT exemption. [222943]

Mr. Timms: HM Customs and Excise and HM Treasury officials are currently examining the European Court of Justice's decision in detail and discussing with industry representatives its likely impact on the insurance industry.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead (Harry Cohen) of 31 January 2005, Official Report, columns 597–98W, what his most recent estimate is of how much has been transferred from the reserve to cover the costs of UK involvement in Iraq. [221203]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 10 March 2005]: In Budget 2003 the Chancellor set aside £3 billion as a special reserve to cover the cost of military operations in Iraq. £1 billion was drawn down by the Ministry of Defence in the spring supplementary estimate for 2002–03.

In the 2003 pre-Budget report, the Government carried forward the £2 billion unallocated special reserve into 2003–04 and added a further £500 million in 2003–04. £300 million was also added in 2004–05 as a prudent allowance against continuing commitments in Iraq and elsewhere in the war against terrorism. A further £520 million for the special reserve in 2004–05 was announced by the Chancellor in the 2004 pre-Budget report.

The Ministry of Defence drew down £1,539 million in the 2003–04 winter and spring supplementary estimates and £950 million in the 2004–05 spring supplementary estimate for the costs of military operations in Iraq.

Ministerial Visit (Beijing)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he had with the Chinese Government during his recent visit to Beijing concerning the position taken by China on the UN Security Council over Sudan and Darfur. [221014]

Mr. Gordon Brown: In Beijing I had discussions with Premier Wen and Finance Minister Jin, on a wide range of issues including foreign policy.

Official Entertainment

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the individuals who have been officially entertained at number 11 Downing street since 1997. [218419]

Mr. Timms: The information requested could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Official Residences

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the official residences for which his Department is responsible; who occupies each one; what the annual cost is of running each property; what contribution the current occupants make towards the running costs of each; what the total capital and refurbishment expenditure has been on those properties in each of the past five years; how much money was spent in each property on (a) flowers and plants, (b) wine and entertaining, (c) food, (d) telephone bills and (e) electricity and gas in 2003–04; how many (i) domestic and (ii) maintenance staff are employed at each property, broken down by post; and what the total cost of staff employment at each was in 2003–04. [213609]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the written answers he received from the Prime Minister on 20 January 2005, Official Report, column 1037W, and the former Financial Secretary (Ruth Kelly) on 19 November 2003, Official Report, column 1097W, and to my answer to the hon. Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr. Prisk) on 16 November 2004, Official Report, column 1267W. I very much regret that my answer inadvertently contained an incorrect figure: the running costs of the Treasury's residential property in 2003–04 were in fact £127,428 (and not £162,858).

Information relating to expenditure on flowers and plants, wine and entertaining, food, telephone bills and electricity and gas is not available. No maintenance or domestic staff are employed by the Treasury in respect of the flat at 10 Downing Street.

Red Diesel

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will be bringing forward, with the Treasury, plans to reform the use of red diesel by excepted vehicles. [222319]

John Healey: HM Treasury and HM Customs and Excise have recently closed a consultation exercise on excepted vehicles entitled to use red diesel. A number of responses have been received, raising a range of issues, and these are currently being analysed. Decisions on whether or not to proceed with changes to the excepted vehicle schedule will be taken once this consideration is complete.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants were penalised for failing to report changes in circumstances which must be reported within three months in the (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05 tax year. [222782]

Dawn Primarolo: Families are required to inform Inland Revenue of any change in the adults heading the family within three months of the change. They are also required to inform Inland Revenue within three months if use of qualifying child care ceases or if child care costs fall by £10 a week or more for a period of at least four weeks.

(a) In order to give families time to adjust to the requirements of the system, in 2003–04 the Inland Revenue did not issue penalties to families who failed to report such changes in the required time period or before their award was finalised.

(b) It is not possible to distinguish how many penalties were issued in respect of current awards for 2004–05 following a failure to report a required change in circumstances from those issued as a result of a misrepresentation on the original claim. The total number of penalties issued for these reasons is 33.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Regional Museums (Funding)

10. Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on funding for regional museums. [222745]

Tessa Jowell: Over the period 2002 to 2008 the Government are providing £147 million in funding for regional Museums through the Renaissance in the Regions programme devised and delivered by the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council. I am pleased that the additional £15 million we are providing in 2007–08 will enable the benefits of Renaissance to be rolled out to all nine English regions.

National Lottery (Unclaimed Prizes)

11. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total amount of unclaimed Lottery prizes is; and what the largest single unclaimed amount is. [222746]

Mr. Caborn: As at 25 February 2005, the total payments to the National Lottery Distribution Fund in respect of unclaimed prizes were £711.1 million. The largest single unclaimed amount is £7,039,469.

Footballers' Behaviour

12. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations she has made to football ruling bodies on the impact of players' behaviour on young people; and if she will make a statement. [222747]

Mr. Caborn: I wrote to all Football Club Chairman at the start of the current season to remind them about the issue of fair play and the responsibility their players have in being positive role models for the game. It is important that the Football authorities take a tough stance on this issue and ensure that match officials have their full support when dealing with poor behaviour during games.

Licensing Act 2003

14. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on how the issue of saturation is being dealt with under the Licensing Act 2003. [222750]

Mr. Caborn: On 7 July last year, we published our Guidance to licensing authorities and this is available in the House Library and also on our website www.culture.gov.uk. Our advice on assessing the local cumulative impact of licensing applications made under the 2003 Act can be found in sections 3.13–3.28 of the Guidance.

Women in Sport

15. Ms Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what initiatives she is taking to promote public recognition of the role of women in sport. [222751]

Tessa Jowell: The Government strategy to promote the role of women in sport involves: boosting participation, ensuring continued success for women elite athletes and putting women in leadership positions in British sport. The public recognition of the role of women in sport is most evident in the bi-annual Honours Lists. The most recent examples of the recognition of women being the award of Damehoods to Kelly Holmes, Tanni Grey-Thompson and Ellen MacArthur.

18. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what strategy her Department is using to increase the number of women on the decision-making boards and committees of sporting bodies. [222755]

Tessa Jowell: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport carries out targeted search to encourage women and other under-represented groups to put themselves forward for consideration for public appointments in all areas.

Tote Privatisation

16. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the privatisation of the Tote. [222752]

Mr. Caborn: We remain committed to the sale of the Tote to a racing trust, subject to clearance of the sale terms by the European Commission.

Binge Drinking

17. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what contribution her Department is making to the Government's efforts to tackle binge drinking. [222754]

Mr. Caborn: The Government believe that the current licensing 'regime exacerbates binge drinking by encouraging people to drink as much as possible before last orders—our licensing reforms will put an end to this practice. More widely, and in support of the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy, in January we announced further proposals to tackle the culture of binge drinking, including Alcohol Disorder Zones; new penalties for disorder; and closure powers related to underage drinking.

Antarctic Huts

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the UK Antarctic Heritage Trust regarding the future of the huts used by the British explorers Scott and Shackleton in Antarctica; and if she will make a statement. [222492]

Mr. Caborn: In September 2004, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Media and Heritage, met the High Commissioner of New Zealand and the UK Consultant to the New Zealand Antarctic Heritage Trust to discuss proposals by the Trust to preserve the huts of the Antarctic explorers Scott and Shackleton. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has also discussed the on-going preservation and conservation of these huts with the Prime Minister of New Zealand which has territorial responsibility for the Ross Dependency in Antarctica where the huts are located.

Sir Neil Cossons, Chairman of English Heritage, visited Antarctica from 25 January to 1 February 2005 as part of a small group invited by the New Zealand Antarctic Heritage Trust. The purpose of his visit was to ascertain what advice and expertise English Heritage could offer to the New Zealand Government and the Trust on the conservation of the Scott and Shackleton huts located in the Ross Sea Region of the continent.

The British Government are keen to support New Zealand's efforts to preserve these historic huts. In 2002, the Government, through the Government of the British Antarctic Territory, donated £70,000 to support the proposed Ross Sea heritage restoration project developed by the New Zealand Antarctic Heritage Trust. Officials in my Department have also been exploring funding options to assist with this but no suitable sources of funding within the UK heritage sector have been found. However, the Government will continue to support fund raising efforts for the preservation of these unique huts.

Arts (Public Spending)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on public spending on the arts in 2004–05. [222748]

Estelle Morris: A total of £507.5 million of public money has been allocated to Arts Council England for spending on the arts to date in 2004–05. This consists of £367 million of Grant in Aid and £140.5 million from the National Lottery Distribution Fund.

In addition, local authorities up and down the country are spending significant sums of money on the arts. While we have no current figures for this, a survey in 2002–03 suggested that this was then at least £261 million.

Cairngorms

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the possibility of the Cairngorms being designated a world heritage site; what the process for that would be; and if she will make a statement. [222653]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 17 March 2005]: The Government has recognised the potential for the Cairngorms being designated as a World Heritage Site by its inclusion on the Tentative List of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland which was published in 1999. The Tentative List is an inventory of properties in a territory which the State Party considers suitable for inscription on the World Heritage List and inclusion on the Tentative List is necessary before a property can be nominated for consideration by the World Heritage Committee.

EU Sport Provisions

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will make a statement on the provisions of (a) existing EU treaties and (b) the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe, relating to sport; [222311]

(2) if she will make a statement on the areas in which the institutions of the European Union regulate UK sport; and whether these regulations could be widened under the provisions of Article III-282 of the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe. [222312]

Mr. Caborn: The existing European Union treaties contain no provisions that relate directly to sport, but EU law has implications for the conduct of some sporting activities (for example because of the rules on competition and free movement of workers).

Articles 1–17 and III-282 of the Constitutional Treaty provide for a limited competence in relation to sport under which the Union may only act to support, co-ordinate or complement member states' action. But the Constitutional Treaty expressly precludes any harmonisation of member states' laws and regulations in the area of sport.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the reasons underlying the inclusion of sporting issues in the treaty establishing a constitution for Europe. [222313]

Mr. Caborn: The proposal to create a specific EU competence for sport was first introduced in the draft treaty establishing a constitution for Europe proposed by the convention on the future of Europe. Articles I-17 and III-282 of the constitutional treaty set out what was eventually agreed.

The Government are content with these provisions because it is clear that the Union may only act to support, co-ordinate or complement member states' action. The treaty also expressly precludes any harmonisation of member states' laws in the area of sport. The constitutional treaty is therefore fully consistent with the Government's view that sport is primarily a matter for the member states.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what projects and organisations received funding from the European Union during the last financial year under EC budget lines (a) 15 04 02 01 (framework programme in support of culture), (b) 15 04 02 03 (preparatory actions for co-operations on cultural matters) and (c) 15 05 04 (European year of education through sport); how much was spent in total; and what funding is available during the next financial year. [222314]

Mr. Caborn: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Framework Programme in Support of Culture (Culture 2000)—EC Budget line 15 04 02 01.

233 European cultural projects have been offered grants in 2004 under the Culture 2000 programme. They will share approximately £22 million in funding. A list with descriptions of the funded projects is available at the following website: http://europa.eu.int/comm/culture/cac/index_en.htmi.

The total available under this programme in 2005 will be approximately £14 million.

(b) Preparatory Actions for Co-operation on Cultural Matters—EC Budget line 15 04 02 03

From 2002 to 2004, the EC budget included funds for preparatory actions for co-operation on cultural matters. This appropriation had a limited budget (£1.5 million in 2004) and was intended to finance measures aimed at developing cultural co-operation. Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the projects relating to sport that her Department has funded in partnership with institutions of the European Union during the past 12 months; and what further projects are planned. [222315]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not directly funded any projects relating to sport in partnership with EU institutions in the past 12 months. However, one of the Department's non-departmental public bodies, UK Sport, did partly fund the "Clean Start" project, which was 50 per cent. funded by the European Commission, under the auspices of the European Year of Education through Sport 2004. This project produced educational resources to inform young people of the issues and dangers of drug misuse in sport. There are no plans to fund further projects in partnership with European institutions at present.

Gloucester Cultural Centre

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the funding available to bid for projects under the private finance initiative; and if she will make such funding available to build a Gloucester cultural centre. [222221]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) has 130 million private finance initiative (PFI) credits available to support new schemes in the latest joint bidding round, which is being run between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, the Department of Health and the DCMS. DCMS priorities for this bidding round are projects that will promote the modernisation of the public library service and the creation of multi-sport facilities. The closing date for expressions of interest, which is the first stage in a two stage application process, was 12 March 2005. We have received Gloucestershire county council's and Gloucester city council's expression of interest for a new cultural centre, and we will be assessing it together with the other expressions of interest we have received. We hope that the process can be completed and authorities notified of the results in June 2005. Further information about the latest bidding round, in the form of guidance to local authorities seeking to apply, can be found at www.local.odpm.gov.uk/pfi/bidguid.pdf

Licence Fees

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the number of premises licensed under (a) the Licensing Act 1964, (b) the London Government Act 1963 and (c) the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 which will fall into each of the rateable value bands for licence fees under the Licensing Act 2003 (Fees) Regulations; how many in each category will be required to pay the fee multiplier; and if she will make a statement. [221009]

Mr. Caborn: As at 30 June 2004, in England and Wales there were 113,370 on-licensed premises; 46,582 off-licensed premises; and 19,913 registered clubs. These figures can be found in the DCMS publication "Statistical Bulletin Liquor Licensing (England and Wales, July 2003—June 2004)" which was deposited on 27 October 2004 in the House Libraries. This document is also available on the DCMS website at:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/global/research/statistics_outputs/liquor_licensing_statistics.htm

The total number of public entertainment licences issued under the London Government Act 1963 and the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 is not known. Licensing authorities hold figures for their own authority areas and these are not collected centrally. However, surveys suggest that 46,000 public entertainment licences are issued in England and Wales annually.

We have not made any estimates of the distribution of these premises across the fee bands for the 2003 Act by category of existing licence. However, the Regulatory Impact Assessment that accompanied the finalised fees estimated the distribution of all licensed premises across the fee bands as follows:

Band	Non-domestic rateable value (£)	Percentage of premises in band
A	0–4,300	19
B	4,301–33,000	60
C	33,001–87,000	13
D	87,001–125,000	3
E	125,001 and over	5

The fee multiplier applies to premises primarily or exclusively engaged in the supply of alcohol for consumption on the premises that fall into fee Bands D and E. Premises in Band D would pay twice the normal application fee and annual fee; and those in Band E would pay three times the normal application fee and annual fee. It is difficult to estimate precisely how many premises will meet these definitions. However, we believe there will be at least 2,000 such premises and, at most, 4,000.

Participation Survey (Children)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she intends to begin collecting data for children under the Survey of Participation in Sport and Culture. [222826]

Mr. Caborn: The new DCMS survey of participation in sport and culture is scheduled to begin in July 2005. Initially information will be collected from adults and young people aged 16 and above, with data collection from children aged 11 to 15 currently planned to follow from January 2006.

Public Libraries (Internet)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of local authorities that offer free internet access in their public libraries. [222836]

Mr. Caborn: The People's Network has been a huge success with 60 million internet hours made available and 11.7 million user sessions in 2002–03 across UK public libraries. The vast majority, 83 per cent. of English library authorities do not make a charge. In line with Government policy on access to the internet for all, when the People's Network was installed, those authorities who were intending to charge were required to have concessionary arrangements for disadvantaged groups of users.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to maximise the contribution to the economy of the tourism, creative and leisure industries. [219962]

Mr. Caborn: The public service agreement target that underpins the Department's economy Strategic Priority is "to improve the productivity of the tourism, creative and leisure industries".

Information on the Department's performance against this public service agreement target was published on 22 December 2004 in the DCMS Autumn Performance Report (Cm 6435). Copies of the report are available in the House Library.

Southend-on Sea (Cultural Heritage)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 8 March 2005, Official Report, column 1765W, on Southend-on Sea (Cultural Heritage), whether she intends to meet English Heritage to discuss the cultural and architectural heritage of Southend-on-Sea; and if she will make a statement. [222423]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has no plans to meet English Heritage to discuss the cultural and architectural heritage of Southend-on-Sea.

Sport England

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Sport England spent on consultants in each of the last four years. [221435]

Mr. Caborn: Details of Sport England's spend on consultants in the last four years is in provided in the table.

	Total cost (£)
2004–05	1,187,697
2003–04	1,553,442
2002–03	788,537
2001–02	415,356

Sport England Plan

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what plans she has to meet representatives of the national governing bodies for sport to discuss Sport England's Whole Sport Plan funding process; [223052]

(2) what representations she has received from sports national governing bodies, or their representative bodies, about Sport England's Whole Sport Plan funding process; and what concerns they have raised. [223053]

Mr. Caborn: I have received representations about Sport England's Whole Sport Plan funding process from the Central Council of Physical Recreation (CCPR) on behalf of national governing bodies of sport. The CCPR raised concerns about levels of funding and the transition from the Active Sports programme to County Sports Partnerships. I have asked Lord Carter, Chair of Sport England, to meet national governing bodies of sport as a matter of urgency to discuss these issues.

Sports Institutes

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much lottery funding has been provided to the UK's network of sports institutes to date. [222556]

Mr. Caborn: To date, Sport England has provided £132,085,049 of capital funding and £22,463,000 of revenue funding to the English Institute of Sport. Funding for the Scottish Institute of Sport, Sports Institute Northern Ireland, and the Welsh Institute of Sport, is a matter for the devolved administrations.

Theme Parks

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the revenue generated by theme parks in England in 2004. [222851]

Mr. Caborn: We are not able to estimate the revenue generated by theme parks in England during 2004 as the data is not yet available.

However, the Annual Business Inquiry (ABI) provides data for businesses grouped by standard industrial classifications. The ABI estimate for total turnover for 'fair and amusement park activities' was £500 million in 2003, up slightly from £494 million in 2002.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Cambridge Schools

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the change since 1997 in (a) capital expenditure and (b) staffing levels has been for each primary and secondary school in Cambridge constituency. [222834]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Capital expenditure for primary and secondary schools in Cambridge is not held centrally. The total capital allocation for Cambridgeshire county council for 1996–97 was £9 million, and for 2004–05 it was £33.2 million, an increase of £24.2 million.

A comparison between 1997 and 2004 staffing levels for each primary and secondary school in Cambridge is contained in the following tables.

Capita SIMS System

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Capita SIMS.net in schools, with particular reference to its effect on (a) schools attendance reporting and (b) suppliers of schools attendance recording systems. [215722]

Derek Twigg: My Department has not made a specific assessment of the effectiveness of the Capita SIMS.net with particular reference to its effect on (a) schools attendance reporting and (b) suppliers of schools attendance recording systems and has no plans to do so.

Capita SIMS.net is one of several commercial management information systems specifically designed for school use that schools are free to choose from, often in collaboration with their relevant local education authority. In common with other systems, Capita SIMS.net includes attendance reporting and recording functionality which can be adapted to meet specific local needs, such as lesson level registration.

Such automated systems provide real time analysis of pupil level attendance data that make a significant contribution to managing attendance as well as reducing administrative work. It is for schools to decide which system best suits their needs. Wide-ranging advice on the use of information communications technologies is available through the Becta ICT Advice website at http://www.ictadvice.org.uk/.

Contested Adoptions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many contested adoptions have taken place in each of the last 10 years. [222035]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

The number of contested adoptions that have taken place in each of the last 10 years are contained in the following table.

	Step-parents[1]		Other		Total

[1] Step-parent adoption occurs where the step-parent applies to formally adopt the child or children of their spouse and assumes parental responsibility to the exclusion of the other birth parent. Contested step-parent adoption cases arise where the non-resident birth parent does not consent to the adoption.

Departmental Policies (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Tamworth constituency, the effects on the constituency of changes to her Department's policies since 1997. [221941]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Tamworth constituency lies within Staffordshire local education authority. The most recent Key Stage 2 and GCSE and equivalents Achievement for pupils attending schools in Tamworth are given in the following tables:

Key Stage 2 Achievements of 11-year-old pupils attending schools in the Tamworth constituency—percentage of pupils gaining level 4 and above

[1] For 2004 only results incorporate GCSEs, GNVQs and a wide range of other qualifications approved pre-16. Prior to 2004 results are based on GCSEs and GNVQs only.
[2] As standard the results reported relate to pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year i.e. 31 August and therefore reaching the end of compulsory education at the end of the school year.

At national level, standards have improved across all key stages. The Primary and Key Stage 3 National Strategies, together with the measures we have taken to help schools in the toughest areas are continuing to deliver better results.

Further information by constituency, is provided within the Department's 'In Your Area' website available at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/inyourarea. Where information is not available at the constituency level it has been provided at local education authority level.

This website allows users to access key facts and local information about education and skills based on postcodes. The data available within the site offers comparisons between 1997 and the latest available year and covers five geographies. These are parliamentary constituency, ward, local authority district, local education authority and Government office region. England figures are also provided.

The information available within the website is grouped in a number of broad categories including Literacy and Numeracy at age 11, Literacy and Numeracy at age 14, GCSE/GNVQ results, Pupils with Special Educational Needs, School Initiatives, School Workforce, School Funding and Resources, Children's Social Services, Early Years, Class Sizes, Post 16, Higher Education and Adult Education

Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost, However, my Department is investigating ways in which we can disseminate more information about the effects of our policies at a local level. The In Your Area website will be further developed over the coming months to include additional information about Adult Education, School Funding, School Initiatives, School Performance, School Workforce and Post 16.

Gifted Pupils

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance she has issued to local education authorities regarding provision in schools for gifted and talented pupils. [222555]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We have made clear our expectation that schools and local authorities will make appropriate provision for gifted and talented pupils. There is a range of guidance available to local authorities from the Department, the National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth and other partners in the national programme for gifted and talented education. The Department has produced a framework that authorities and schools are invited to follow when specifying what their programmes will achieve (see http://www.standards.dfes.gov.uk/giftedandtalented/guidanceandtraining/outcomemeasures/). A self-evaluation instrument, currently being trialled, will help schools to adjust their practice to best meet gifted and talented pupils' needs.

Higher Education

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on her Department's assessment of the average cost of providing one higher education place (a) in March 2005 and (b) in each year from 2005–06 to 2010–11. [223060]

Dr. Howells: This Government have pledged to maintain in real terms funding to support the costs of educating higher education students over the next three years, so that income that may be raised from variable tuition fees will be additional to normal Government funding. Real terms funding per student will not fall below the planned 2005–06 level of £3,490[1] at 2003–04 prices. Funding for 2008–09 and beyond will be considered as part of the 2006 Spending Review.

[1] Real terms unit of funding for teaching, as set out in 2004 Grant Letter to the Higher Education Funding Council for England. This figure relates to full-time equivalent Home and EU-domiciled students studying at English institutions.

Internet (Older People)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support her Department provides to encourage older people to use the internet. [222995]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 18 March 2005]: UK online centres were established to bridge the gap between those in society who have access to ICT and the internet and those who do not. Between 1999 and 2003 a total of £396 million was invested to set up the centres. There are now 6,000 UK online centres in England, and people over 60 are one of the five main groups in the target audience for UK online centres.

Ufi, the organisation which now has responsibility for the administration and development of UK online, also operates the network of 2,000 learndirect centres in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Information provided by Ufi on usage of UK online centres shows that:

UK online centres provide help and support for over 500,000 people a year

14 per cent. of UK online users are over 65

85 UK online centres are co-located or linked to Age Concern

In relation to learndirect centres:

Over 1.5 million learners have enrolled on over 3.6 million learndirect courses since April 2000

27 per cent. of learndirect learners who enrolled on courses between August 2004 and January 2005 are over 50, and 12 per cent. are over 60

In addition, an e-government pathfinder project, led by DfES in conjunction with Ufi aimed to test the potential of UK online centres to support e-government service delivery. One pathfinder focused on services for older people, working with Age Concern, to provide access to a range of Government services. The Department and Ufi are currently considering the findings of the evaluation of these pathfinders.

Schools PFI Contract (Wirral)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the ownership composition is of the special purpose vehicle responsible for delivering the private finance initiative contract relating to Wirral schools. [222938]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The ownership composition of the special purpose vehicle for the Wirral schools PFI project is Barclays Equity, 50 per cent., and the Secondary Market Infrastructure Fund (SMIF), 50 per cent. This information is based on data supplied by Wirral metropolitan borough council.

Teachers (London)

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures her Department has introduced to ensure the recruitment and retention of teaching staff in the outer London boroughs. [222215]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We are committed to improving recruitment and retention of teachers. Nationally, there are around 29,000 more qualified teachers working in schools than there were in 1997. We have put in place nationally a number of incentives to attract and retain teachers, including PGCE bursaries of up to £6,000 and "Golden Hellos" of up to £4,000 in certain subjects. The Teacher Training Agency supports the cost of Recruitment Managers in local education authorities. Every outer London borough has received funding for the last four years and will continue to be supported for the next two years.

Vacancy rates are falling faster in London than in the rest of the country but remain twice the national rate. We therefore continue to take additional steps to recruit and retain teachers in London, including outer London. As part of the London Challenge, which the Prime Minister launched in May 2003, we introduced Chartered London Teacher status. This recognises and rewards the distinctive skills and expertise demonstrated by teachers in outer and inner London and provides incentives for good teachers to stay teaching in London. We are also aware that the cost of housing is a factor in teachers' decisions about where to live and work. With the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, we have introduced interest-free equity loans to help teachers in London schools buy homes. The Key Teacher Homebuy scheme, which is only available to school teachers in London, offers loans of up to £100,000 for teachers willing to commit to a long-term career working in London schools.

We have established a separate pay scale for teachers in outer London. Starting salaries for teachers in outer London will increase from £20,862 in April 2004 to £21,384 in April 2005 and £22,002 in September 2005. Schools retain the discretion to make such payments or other financial assistance, support or benefits to a teacher as they consider necessary as an incentive for the recruitment of new teachers or the retention of existing teachers.

Universities (Projected Income)

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the projected income from (a) tuition and (b) top-up fees to British universities is for each year from 2005–06 to 2010–11. [223061]

Dr. Howells: The income from tuition fees[1] for English Higher Education Institutions in 2005–06 is forecast to be £910 million.

From 2006/07, institutions will be free to set fees up to £3,000 for new students. Figures for income from fees from 2006/07 onwards will depend on the pattern of fee charging by institutions and the way that students respond to that pattern. If 91 per cent. of students were charged £3,000 and the remaining 9 per cent. £2000, we estimate that the fee income on a steady state basis on 2006/07 student numbers would be around £2.3 billion.

University Admissions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications there were from school pupils for full-time courses at universities in England to commence study in each year from 2001 to 2004 inclusive; and how many applications have been made for enrolment in 2005, excluding applications for deferred entry in 2006. [222522]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 17 March 2005]: Information for the years 2001 to 2004, showing the total number of students who applied throughout the application cycle, is shown in the following table. The latest available figures for 2005 entry show that, as at 15 January, 284,359 students from England had applied. We expect to receive updated information in April. The number of applicants who intend to defer entry is not held centrally.

Applicants from England to full-time undergraduate courses in the UK

2001	330,856
2002	331,602
2003	337,593

Wirral Schools Services Ltd.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid to Jarvis plc for the sale of its equity in Wirral Schools Services Ltd. [222895]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I am not able to disclose this information, since it is not for the Department to comment on financial negotiations between two commercial companies.

PRIME MINISTER

Attorney-General

Mr. Drew: To ask the Prime Minister how many times the Attorney-General has attended Cabinet since 2002; and on what issues he has produced written evidence for the Prime Minister. [222547]

The Prime Minister: Since 2002, the Attorney-General has attended Cabinet 24 times. There is a long-standing convention, observed by successive Governments, that the fact that the Law Officers have advised on a particular issue is not publicly disclosed. There is a strong public interest in allowing Government to have a clear space, immune from exposure to public view, in which it can debate matters internally with candour and free from the pressures of public political debate, including in deciding whether it should seek advice from its principal legal adviser, the Attorney-General.

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Prime Minister when the Attorney-General first gave him his advice on the case for war; and in what form. [221613]

The Prime Minister: As indicated in paragraph 374 of the Butler Report, the Attorney-General gave initial advice prior to the adoption of UN Security Council resolution 1441. The date of this advice is withheld as it relates to the formation of Government policy.

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister how many pages constituted the legal opinion provided to Cabinet setting out the Attorney-General's advice on the legality of military action against Iraq in March 2003. [221740]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Solicitor-General (Harriet Harman) gave him on 20 December 2004, Official Report, column 1335W, and to the letter of 10 March 2005 from the Attorney-General to my right hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Clare Short), copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister whether the Attorney-General attended the whole of the meeting of the Cabinet on 17 March 2003. [221818]

The Prime Minister: The Attorney-General did attend the whole meeting of the Cabinet on 17 March 2003.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the oral answer given on 9 March 2005, Official Report, column 1514 to the hon. Member for Linlothgow (Mr. Dalyell), in what form the oral report given by the Attorney-General was recorded in the notes of the Cabinet meeting; and when these notes were made available to the full Cabinet. [221920]

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister (1) whether the advice he received from the Attorney-General regarding the war in Iraq discussed in Cabinet on 17 March 2003 was placed before any other ministerial committee; [221817]

(2) whether the Cabinet meeting on 17 March 2003 discussed any business other than the advice of the Attorney-General regarding war with Iraq. [221819]

The Prime Minister: The proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet Committee meetings are not generally disclosed, in order to ensure the protection of information whose disclosure would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Conduct of Committee Guidelines

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the Cabinet Office guidelines on the conduct of Cabinet and Ministerial Committee business. [221820]

The Prime Minister: The Cabinet Office provides two sources of guidance on the conduct of Cabinet business. The Ministerial Code sets out the arrangements for collective consideration of business by Cabinet and Cabinet Committees. The Code is amplified by "Cabinet Committee Business: a Guide for Departments". Copies of each are available in the Libraries of the House.

Japan

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister when he received a letter from Sakue Shimohira on behalf of the Association for the Bereaved Families of the Atomic Bomb Dead in Nagasaki; and what response he has made. [221735]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, I have not received the letter.

Mr. Paul Wolfowitz

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister whether he was consulted by President Bush about the qualifications in international development and world poverty matters of Mr. Paul Wolfowitz before he received the American nomination to the post of President of the World Bank; and if he will make a statement. [223457]

The Prime Minister: It is not the practice of the Government to make public details of all discussions with foreign governments.

DEFENCE

Defence Aviation Repair Agency

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is considering (a) a sale or (b) a privatisation of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency. [222639]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is conducting a review of the potential future status options for DARA and its Business Units. This work is being carried out without prejudice or preconception. The analysis currently being done by Morgan Stanley to test market interest does not, in any sense, imply that we see sale to the private sector as a preferred option, and any industry interest in any of DARA's business units will be judged impartially against a full range of options, including retaining DARA in-house. The criteria for any final decision will be quality of support to the front line and overall value for money. I aim to reach conclusions about the way forward for DARA, if at all possible, by the middle of 2005.

Deployments

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which sub-units were deployed from the (a) 5th Regiment Royal Artillery to (i) Cyprus, (ii) Iraq and (iii) Northern Ireland, (b) 32nd Regiment Royal Artillery to (A) Cyprus and (B) Iraq, (c) 2nd Royal Tank Regiment to (1) Iraq and (2) Kosovo, (d) Light Dragoons to (x) Bosnia and (y) Cyprus, (e) Queen's Royal Lancers to (aa) Kosovo and (bb) Iraq and (f) Household Cavalry to Bosnia; and what the dates of each deployment were. [222171]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is shown in the following table. The information relates to the period January 2000 to March 2005, as data prior to this period is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Future Rapid Effects System

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the defence procurement budget is allocated to the Future Rapid Effects System for each year from 2007 to 2010. [211254]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Rapid Effect System is in its initial assessment phase. Firm decisions on costs and timescales for the programme will not be made until the main procurement decision.

Maritime Coherence Baseline

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the purpose is of the Maritime Coherence Baseline concept; when it will be implemented; and if he will make a statement. [221346]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 March 2005]: The Maritime Coherence Study Baseline is the core programme emerging from the Maritime Coherence Study. It will provide the basis on which further work and refinement is undertaken. The Maritime Coherence Study is intended to produce a balanced, coherent and more affordable programme to address our capability priorities and provide an industrial programme with stable and balanced loading, and will be implemented over the next two decades.

Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the transportation by air of nuclear materials related to the United Kingdom nuclear weapons programme. [222054]

Mr. Hoon: Within the United Kingdom, our policy is to use surface transportation for all movements of nuclear material related to the UK nuclear weapons programme. Any necessary movement by air of nuclear material outside of the UK is undertaken in compliance with the UK's International Treaty obligations and in accordance with International Air Transport Association regulations, MOD Health and Safety requirements and all statutory legislative requirements. All Ministry of Defence movements of nuclear materials are conducted only by suitably qualified and experienced personnel under procedures designed to reduce foreseeable risk in accordance with the As Low As Reasonably Practicable principle.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which nations he has assessed as having the capacity to launch a nuclear strike against United Kingdom military bases; and which United Kingdom bases are in range of each nation's weapons. [222055]

Mr. Hoon: We assess that there is currently no significant threat of a nuclear strike against UK military bases. We continue to monitor the nuclear capability of a number of countries.

Oil Tankers

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment his Department has made of the Royal Navy's future requirement for oil supply within the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) programme; how many ships are needed; and if he will make a statement; [221134]

(2) what plans he has for the (a) purchase and (b) lease of commercial oil tankers before the introduction of Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability tankers; [221126]

(3) what measures are in place to meet the oil supply requirement of the Royal Navy in the event of a delay in the introduction of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme. [221133]

Mr. Ingram: The MARS programme will provide the future maritime tanker capability for the Royal Navy. The future requirement, including how the capability will be delivered, will be determined during the programme's assessment phase. Two of the LEAF class tankers currently in service are leased. We have no current plans to purchase or lease additional tankers for the RFA ahead of the capability to be introduced through the MARS programme. We will consider extending the current fleet of maritime tankers in service as necessary prior to the introduction of the MARS capability.

Panther Vehicle

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the budget is for each year of the Panther vehicle programme. [211268]

Mr. Ingram: The overall acquisition cost of the Panther programme, which is in its Demonstration and Manufacture phase, is £193 million spread over some five years.

RAF Leeming

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of job losses at RAF Leeming on (a) the work of the base and (b) the local community; and if he will make a statement. [222278]

Mr. Ingram: The written ministerial statement of 10 March outlined the proposed reductions in the number of Service and civilian posts as a result of the end-to-end review of logistics process for military aircraft support. These reductions form part of the Service and civilian manpower reductions that were announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 21 July 2004.

For RAF Leeming, this will mean a reduction in the number of Service posts by 215 and, subject to Trades Union consultation, a reduction in the number of civilian posts by 20.

I recognise that this may be disappointing news for the local community, but the proposed changes in working practices and force structure will improve efficiency within the RAF.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the long-term future of RAF Leeming. [222279]

Mr. Ingram: RAF Leeming is one of many airfields being considered under the Defence Airfield Review, which is examining our future basing requirements.

I announced on 10 March 2005 that RAF Leeming is one of five RAF Stations currently being considered as a potential base for the new Joint Combat Aircraft when it enters service in the next decade.

Regiments

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) land and (b) buildings are held by (i) the Queen's Lancashire Regiment, (ii) the King's Regiment and (iii) the King's Own Borderers. [222317]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Royal Navy Destroyers/Frigates

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the destroyers and frigates serving in the Royal Navy; and what the proposed retirement date for each is. [223251]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Norfolk, a Type 23 frigate, will be withdrawn from service by the end of the month. The latest planned decommissioning dates for the other ships are as follows:

Ship	Planned decommissioning date

HMS Cardiff	2005

Torture-obtained Information

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Answer of 7 February 2005, Official Report, column 1257W, on torture-obtained information, on how many occasions in the last year his Department has used information obtained by the use of torture in another country. [218760]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs gave on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 90W.

Trident

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 1 March 2005, Official Report, column 1148W, which Scottish local authorities were involved in the risk assessment; and if he will place a copy of the risk assessment in the Library. [221033]

Mr. Hoon: No Scottish local authorities were involved in the generation of the latest risk assessment on the transport of nuclear material for the Trident nuclear system. The document contains confidential information relating to national security and I am therefore unable to place a copy in the Library as requested.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 15 March 2005, Official Report, column 189W, on Trident, if he will list the occasions when such incidents occurred while nuclear material was on the jetty. [223304]

Mr. Hoon: On only one occasion, in September 2004, was nuclear material present on the Explosives Handling Jetty when there was an alarm. However, after investigation, this was found to be a false alarm.

Uniforms

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all (a) reservists and (b) full-time soldiers are clothed to scale when on deployment overseas. [222289]

Mr. Ingram: Once a deployment overseas has been agreed, a Mounting Instruction is issued on the authority of the Department's Permanent Joint Headquarters to the Front Line Commands, who in turn amplify, as necessary, the requirement for those personnel being deployed and issue instructions to units for action. Equipment, including clothing, is then demanded and issued to the appropriate scale for Reservists and regular full-time soldiers to supplement their personal issue holdings.

On mobilisation, Army Reservists pass through the Reserves Training and Mobilisation Centre located in Chilwell, Nottinghamshire, for pre-deployment training and administration. Part of this process is to ensure that they have the full scale of personal equipment prior to deploying. Operational theatres have adequate reserve stocks of personal equipment items to make up deficiencies due to loss, damage or wear and tear.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Economic Partnership Agreements

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the need for ACP countries to retain national and regional autonomy in economic partnership agreements with the EU. [221268]

Mr. Alexander: Many of the ACP countries have developed poverty reduction strategies. EPAs should support these by enabling regional groupings to sequence trade reform appropriately and to participate on equal terms in the international economy. We are working closely with other member states, the European Commission and the ACP countries themselves to ensure that the developmental benefits of EPAs are realised.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the (a) Italian, (b) Irish and (c) Dutch presidency of the EU the EC-Russia Joint Committee on scientific and technological co-operation met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement. [215421]

Ms Hewitt: There were no meetings of the EU-Russia PCA sub-committee on education, culture, and science and technology during the Italian, Irish and Dutch presidencies. The last took place in Brussels on March 3 2003 during the Greek presidency. Meetings are convened by the European Commission, and the member states are not invited; therefore no UK officials attend.

Gas

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the security of gas supplies in (a) winter 2005–06 and (b) winter 2006–07; when she expects to lay before Parliament the first report on the medium and long-term energy supplies as required by the Energy Act 2004; and if she will make a statement. [222602]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 17 March 2005]: Through the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group (JESS), the DTI and Ofgem, with help from national grid, continually monitor developments in the energy market, and look for ways of helping the market work more effectively to deliver secure energy supplies. This includes consideration of the position on gas supplies.

The most recent report was published in November of last year and is available from the Libraries of the House. It shows that the gas supply/demand balance would be tight in 2005–06 if that proves to be a particularly severe winter, and that gas supplies are expected to increase after that.

We expect the report under the Energy Act 2004 to be laid before Parliament in the summer.

In-house Magazines

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent on the production of in-house magazines in the Department in each year since 1997. [213635]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI produces an in-house magazine for all staff, the function of which is to inform them about the organisation's business objectives, and enable them to act as ambassadors for the Department. Research shows that the magazine is widely read and considered useful.

Costs for the current year are £5,000. It is not possible to give figures for earlier years because the costs for the previous DTI newspaper were not itemised individually and to produce them would incur disproportionate costs.

International Accounting Standards

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with (a) his counterparts and (b) the European Commission concerning a move towards agreement on international accounting standards. [222394]

Ms Hewitt: Regulation (EC) No. 1606/2002 of the European Parliament and the Council of 19 July 2002 on the application of International Accounting Standards was adopted by member state on 7 June 2002. Prior to its adoption, my Department had extensive discussions with other Government Departments, other member states and the European Commission.

Along with representatives of other member states, my Department sits on the Accounting Regulatory Committee, which was created by the Regulation to consider the adoption of individual International Accounting Standards into European law.

Miners Compensation

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many former miners, their widows and families in Newcastle-under-Lyme have (a) made claims for and (b) been paid compensation in respect of (i) chronic bronchitis and emphysema, (ii) vibration white finger and (iii) pneumoconiosis; and how much has been paid out in total so far. [218994]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 2 March 2005]: The figures for Newcastle-under-Lyme are as follows:

	Number of claims	Number settled by payment	Total paid (£)
COPD	2762	681	5,514,417
VWF	792	359	3,679,542
Pneumoconiosis	37	27	76,770

Miners' Pensions

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the merits of enabling miners to take an early lump sum in lieu of their miners' pension. [216329]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 February 2005]: Following DTI agreement to a trustee proposal, from spring 2003 certain members of the mineworkers pension scheme can take a final lump sum in lieu of their miners' pension from age 50. The total value of a members' benefits must be less than £5 a week. The qualifying conditions are a matter for the Inland Revenue.

Operating and Financial Review

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the proposed Operating and Financial Review. [222173]

Ms Hewitt: The draft Companies Act 1985 (Operating and Financial Review and Directors' Report etc.) Regulations 2005 were considered by the Second Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation on 3 February 2005. The Regulations were also considered by the House of Lords on 16 March 2005.

The Regulations will require the directors of quoted companies to prepare an Operating and Financial Review in respect of companies' financial years which begin on or after 1 April 2005.

Parking Spaces and Penalties

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent on (a) provision of parking spaces for civil servants and (b) parking tickets and penalties incurred by civil servants in the Department in each year since 1997. [213810]

Ms Hewitt: My Department does not make any separate provision for car parking and the only parking spaces on the DTI HQ estate are those integral with the buildings.

Information on parking charges or fees paid by my Department for its civil servants on official business can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The Department does not pay parking penalties.

Regional Venture Capital Funds

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average size of investment made by each regional venture capital fund was up to 31 December 2004. [215861]

Nigel Griffiths: A breakdown by English region of the average size of investment (both initial and follow-on) as at 31 December 2004 is as follows.

RVCF	Average investment overall (£)
South East	214,848.30
South West	233,333.33
London	229,004.63
East of England	231,622.20
East Midlands	164,740.86
West Midlands	201,477.27
Yorkshire and Humber	232,500.00
North East	147,410.91
North West	171,350.02

Russian Economic Forum

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department has liaised with the Confederation of British Industry on support for and involvement in the Russian Economic Forum to be held in London from 10 to 12 April. [221661]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 16 March 2005]: Officials have been in regular contact with the CBI about the Russian Economic Forum.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department will play a role in supporting the discussion on Russia's evolution into a modern, market-based democracy at the Russian Economic Forum to be held in London from 10 to 12 April. [221662]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 16 March 2005]: Officials will attend all relevant sessions of the Russian Economic Forum.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Fire Control Rooms

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the contracts to be entered into by private sector parties in respect of the provision and maintenance of regional fire control rooms will be agreed with the (a) regional management boards or their operating vehicles and (b) with his Department. [222165]

Mr. Raynsford: The agreements to lease the regional control centres (RCCs) will be entered into by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. We are currently considering the responses to consultation on the appropriate operating vehicles to manage the RCCs, either a local authority company or a lead authority. That entity will then take over the lease for its RCC when the building is ready for handover.

Separate contracts will need to be let for the maintenance of the buildings after construction is complete. This will be a matter for the regional entity responsible for each RCC.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the detailed business case for regional control rooms after the contracts to construct and maintain them have been let. [222166]

Mr. Raynsford: Once both procurement processes (ie for the accommodation and infrastructure services) are complete a copy of the full business case based on actual costs, less any information which needs to be retained for purposes of commercial confidentiality, will be made available in the Libraries of the House.

House Fires

Mr. Randall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of the number of house fires in which plug-in air fresheners were a contributory cause in the last five years. [223197]

Mr. Raynsford: The national fire statistics do not distinguish air fresheners as a potential source of fire and so the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is not able to determine the number of house fires in which plug-in air fresheners have been a contributory cause.

Recent inquiries with several fire and rescue services has revealed no evidence that air fresheners may be a contributory cause in house fires.

Housing (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what independent structural survey has been undertaken in the Welsh Streets in Liverpool 8 to assess the state of the properties; and where this information is available to the public. [222661]

Keith Hill: It is understood that Liverpool city council propose to make a compulsory purchase order, to acquire and demolish a number of houses in the Welsh Streets area, as part of their Housing Market Renewal programme. It is for the city council to determine what independent advice they seek, in order to explain why they believe the area is in need of redevelopment.

Housing Market Renewal Areas

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria are used to measure the success of a Housing Market Renewal area. [222660]

Keith Hill: "Homes for All", the Government's five year housing plan sets out our aim to close by a third the gap between the level of vacancies and house values in pathfinder areas compared to the regions by 2010. Our long-term aim is to eradicate the problems caused by low demand housing by 2020.

Specific targets for the period up to March 2006 are included in each pathfinder's funding agreement with the Government.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimates his Department has made of projected future spending by local authorities in each year for which projections have been made; and what proportion of each amount is projected to be met through central Government subsidy in each of those years. [223058]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have made no estimates of future spending by local authorities, which is primarily for local authorities to determine. SR04 provided the following increases in Net Aggregate External Funding (Net AEF) which is comprised of Revenue Support Grant and National Non-Domestic Rates:

	Net AEF[1] (£ million)
2004–05	42,421
2005–06	44,706
2006–07	47,184
2007–08	49,608

[1] This is the increases announced in SR04. The actual Net AEF total for 2005–06 taking account of changes in function and financing agreed after SR04 is 44,726 million.

Note

The figure for 2004–05 includes the resources which were paid out as PFI Special Grant.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many visits to Southend have been made by his officials in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [223420]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Neighbourhood Renewal Funds (Cornwall)

Mr. Atherton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will break down by district council the allocation of neighbourhood renewal funds in West Cornwall. [222837]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is published on the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit website at: www.neighbourhood.gov.uk/page.asp?id=614

An announcement will be made in due course on the allocation of new Neighbourhood Renewal Fund resources for the period 2006–08, once the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has considered fully the responses to our consultation.

Planning (Children's Homes)

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what planning consents private companies that are seeking to open residential children's homes in private residential properties are required to obtain from their local planning authorities before they are able to commence business. [222644]

Keith Hill: The Town and Country (Use Classes) Order 1987 (the UCO) sets out classes of uses, changes within which do not require planning permission due to the similarity in their impact on local amenity, for example: traffic generation, noise, and visual appearance.

The UCO classifies dwelling houses as a C3 use class. This includes dwelling houses used by a single person, any number of persons living as a family, or by no more than six people living together as a single household. Any change of use from this status would normally require planning permission.

Sheltered Housing Schemes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice he provides to (a) local authorities and (b) private or independently-run sheltered schemes on how to use arbitration and consultation procedures in disputes between scheme managers and tenants and owners. [222952]

Yvette Cooper: So far as housing-related support issues are concerned, the Supporting People Quality Assessment Framework core objective includes a requirement that service users, carers and other stakeholders are made aware of complaints procedures and how to use them. However, this only applies to housing support services and services under Supporting People contract to the local administering authority, and does not apply to private sheltered housing schemes

The Housing Corporation requires that Registered Social Landlord (RSL) tenants and applicants have access to effective complaints procedures, and has produced good practice guidance on complaints handling.

Tenants of RSLs also have statutory access to the Independent Housing Ombudsman Scheme (IHOS). In considering cases, the Ombudsman may recommend alternative dispute resolution, either by the use of mediation, arbitration or otherwise, to complainants and member landlords at any time during or at the end of an investigation.

Social Housing

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average number of bedrooms in each social housing unit built was in each year since 1979. [222186]

Keith Hill: Estimates of the average number of bedrooms are not available. The following table shows, for particular years, estimates of the percentages of social dwellings for rent built by flats and houses and with one, two, three and four or more bedrooms.

The figures for 1995–96, 2000–01 and 2003–04 include only Registered social landlord dwellings. Those for 1979, 1985 and 1990 also include local authority and new town dwellings as they then accounted for a larger proportion of social dwellings built.

Figures for each year from 1991–92 are available from the housing statistics section on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's webeite at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/stellent/groups/odpm_housing/documents/page/odpm_house_604058.xls

Trees (London)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to increase the number of trees in London; and whether, he has met (a) the Mayor, (b) the London boroughs and (c) his Department's ministers to discuss this. [221945]

Keith Hill: The London Tree and Woodland Framework Consultation Document was launched in July 2004, produced by the London Woodland Advisory Group which includes Government Office for London, Greater London Authority (GLA) and the Forestry Commission (FC). Consultation involved a wide range of London stakeholders, and as key members of the Advisory Group the Mayor and officials from the GLA were closely involved in drawing up proposals in the framework, while boroughs through the London Tree Officers Association were key consultees.

The Government plan to launch the Tree and Woodland Framework for London shortly. The document will provide a firm commitment by a wide partnership of London bodies including the GLA and the FC to maintain and enhance London's trees and woodlands as a vital part of the environment and will establish priority locations for new tree planting, taking into account such factors as levels of social deprivation, transport corridors and gateways, derelict land, biodiversity objectives, areas of regeneration and community forests.

The 'million trees campaign' which is managed by Trees for London, supported by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the FC, was initiated in September 2003. This project involves a London-wide partnership to plant one million new trees in London by 2010. To date this has already achieved a total of 330,000 trees. The work of the FC and Thames Chase Community Forest has also resulted in substantial areas of new planting with full public access in the North East of London. This project has been supported by the Government's Capital Modernisation Fund and work to extend the forest will continue. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs are also actively involved in the Greening the Gateway partnership which is the shared environmental vision for the Thames Gateway London. I am in regular contact with the Mayor and London boroughs on environmental issues.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants he estimates are living in York. [222229]

Mr. Browne: Statistics on the location of asylum seekers in the UK are linked to the available information on the support that the asylum seeker receives.

At the end of December 2004 there were 151[1] asylum seekers in the local authority area of York recorded as in receipt of National Asylum Support Service (NASS) support.

Corresponding figures for those not in receipt of NASS support are not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Numbers of asylum seekers placed in NASS accommodation and numbers who are in receipt of subsistence only support from NASS, are published on a quarterly and annual basis. The next publication covering the first quarter of 2005 (January to March) will be available on 17 May 2005 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

[1] This figure is rounded to the nearest 5 and includes those in receipt of subsistence only support and those in NASS accommodation.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers and refugees have been issued with short-term certificates of identity to enable them to visit areas affected by the tsunami. [222260]

Mr. Browne: Two short-term certificates of identity have been issued for the purpose of travel to areas affected by the tsunami. One was issued to a refugee, and the other to a person who had been granted exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom.

Civil Servants

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether ex-offenders will be eligible for employment by the National Offender Management Service. [220448]

Paul Goggins: Ex-offenders are eligible for employment in the National Offender Management Service, although they may be required to declare any convictions under the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974.

National Offender Management Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the National Offender Management Service will be taking to ensure that the prisons and probations work force will be diverse, competent and professional, as described in the NOMS Vision Statement. [218197]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) Chief Executive, Martin Narey, is committed to place diversity at the heart of NOMS. A permanent diversity impact assessment process will be in place and a NOMS race and diversity strategic framework is being developed that will be aimed at not only ensuring compliance with legislative requirements, but at also promoting best practice in diversity across NOMS.

Planning has begun on the creation of a learning and development strategy for NOMS. Working closely with Skills for Justice (the Sector Skills Council for the justice sector) and regional probation training consortia, this strategy will identify new learning programmes and qualifications needed to support the development of NOMS.

As the offender management model is now being developed, a particular priority is to define the occupational standards and competencies needed to undertake this critical new role, and hence to develop supporting learning programmes.

The Prison Service and National Probation Service are also developing proposals for an integrated approach to leadership and management development for managers across NOMS. An early output has been the creation of an induction and development programme for the 10 Regional Offender Managers.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the detailed business case for the National Offender Management Service. [220541]

Paul Goggins: We have already published Patrick Carter's independent report "Managing Offenders—Reducing Crime", which sets out the case for a National Offender Management Service, and the Government's response "Reducing crime—Changing Lives" which accepts that case.

A separate business case for the National Offender Management Service is currently being prepared.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2005, Official Report, column 1421W, to the hon. Member for Walthamstow, on the National Offender Management Service, which regional offender managers will be responsible for each probation area in 2005–06; and whether the Prison Service budget for 2006–07 will need to be agreed unanimously by regional offender managers. [221136]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 March 2005]: The Regional Offender Managers were appointed to cover geographically the nine government areas and Wales. Their remit covers all the probation areas within their region. The prison service budget for 2006–07 will be agreed by the Director General of the Prison Service and the Regional Offender Managers.

Polish Workers

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the numbers of Poles working in the UK. [222336]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

The latest Labour Force Survey for autumn 2004 estimated there were approximately 69,000 Polish nationals in employment in the United Kingdom.

Prison Officers

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers have been medically retired in each year since 1997 due to work-related stress. [203365]

Paul Goggins: No information is available on the number of officers granted medical retirement specifically due to work-related stress. The following table contains information on the total number of prison officers, senior officers and principal officers granted medical retirement since 1998 for any reason, within public sector establishments. Information on medical retirements is not available for 1997. The Office for Contracted Prisons does not collect information on medical retirements as privately managed prisons are not contracted to supply this information.

	All officers medically retired
1998	217
1999	195
2000	162
2001	147
2002	142
2003	171
January-October 2004	89

There has, generally, been a fall in medical retirements since revised eligibility criteria were introduced in 1998 through changes in the Civil Service Pension Scheme.

Prisoners (Mental Health)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the percentage of prisoners in England and Wales who suffer from mental health problems. [220681]

Paul Goggins: The Office for National Statistics (ONS) undertook a survey of mental ill health in the prison population of England and Wales in 1997. A copy of the survey is available on the ONS website at www.statistics.gov.uk.

Comparable information for Scotland may be obtained from the Scottish Executive. While the institutions in Northern Ireland are devolved, responsibility for such information rests with Ministers in the Northern Ireland office.

Prisons

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) proportion and (b) total number of prisoners' initial test results under the mandatory drug testing programme have subsequently proved inaccurate in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [218818]

Paul Goggins: This information is not held on the central Mandatory Drug Testing database.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of prisoner rehabilitation programmes. [220924]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) has recently published a review of the impact of corrections on re-offending (Home Office Research Study 291). The report, including references, is available on the RDS website at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds.

Probation Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether performance by the National Probation Service against its performance measure on enforcement improved (a) during 2003–04 and (b) between April and September 2004. [203407]

Paul Goggins: The performance of the National Probation Service (NPS) in meeting its target for enforcement in 2003–04 and April to September 2004 is set out in the following tables.

Table 1: Enforcement by month April 2003–March 2004—England and Wales

Percentage

Month	Breach action taken within 10 days
April 2003	72
May 2003	71
June 2003	73
July 2003	74
August 2003	78
September 2003	75
October 2003	79
November 2003	80
December 2003	81
January 2004	78
February 2004	82
March 2004	84
Total	77

Table 2: Enforcement by month April to September 2004—England and Wales

Percentage

Month	Breach action taken within 10 days
April	84
May	85
June	82
July	86
August	84
September	87
Total	85

The results for the half-year to September 2004 show an improvement of eight percentage points on those for 2003–04. This is very encouraging and continues the upward trend of recent years: in 2001–02 enforcement stood at 53 per cent. rising to 64 per cent. in 2002–03 and again to 77 per cent. last year. The NPS is now closer than ever to achieving its enforcement target of 90 per cent. and I am optimistic that the 85 per cent. achieved in the first six months can be increased by the end of 2004–05.

Radio Frequencies

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of

(a) the effectiveness of Radio Frequency Identification projects and (b) their implications for (i) privacy and (ii) civil liberties. [220770]

Mr. Browne: The Home Office invested £5.5 million in launching the Chipping of Goods Initiative in March 2000. The UK was the first country in the world to embrace the use of Radio Frequency Identification Devices (RFID) or 'electronic tagging' to deal with property crime.

The programme was led by the Police Scientific Development Branch and the Business Crime Team and was established as a result of the need to reduce the incidence and cost of property crime and to reduce the burden on police resources in tracing the ownership of stolen goods. It was also established to show the clear business benefits that can be gained from adopting such technology.

Case studies for each of eight demonstrator projects were carried out, each one showing how the business benefited from the use of RFID. Manufacturers, retailers, consumers, the police and other enforcement agencies will all benefit from the wider adoption of this technology.

The eight demonstrator projects are world class implementations and have already received five awards for technical excellence and outstanding achievement, including 'Retail Technology Team of the Year' and the 'European Supply Chain Solution of the Year'.

Within the Identity Cards programme there has been investigation of the capabilities of contactless smartcard interfaces. However there has been no investigation of Radio Frequency Identification technologies which imply the ability to communicate with devices at much greater distances, nor it is envisaged that this would ever form part of the requirements for the Identity Cards scheme.

Regional Offender Managers

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated staffing requirement for each of the regional offender managers is. [221579]

Paul Goggins: Regional Offender Managers will have a total of four staff working to them in the first instance. It is expected that as Regional Offender Managers' roles expand they will require further staff.

Turkish Cypriots

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Turkish Cypriots have been granted (a) an entry visa and (b) a work voucher for entry into the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [221548]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

UKvisas does not hold statistics on the numbers of Turkish Cypriots who have applied for visas. However, entry clearance statistics on applications received at our visa issuing post in Nicosia in the last three years for which they are available can be found on the UKvisas website at www.ukvisas.gov.uk—"Entry Clearance: Facts and Figures".

Workers Registration Scheme

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long on average registration under the Workers Registration Scheme has taken since the scheme was introduced. [222337]

Mr. Browne: Since the Worker Registration Scheme (WRS) was introduced on 1 May 2004 it has taken the WRS Team on average 10 calendar days to register each applicant.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Marine Pollution (County Down)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have taken place between his Department and (a) North Down borough council and (b) the National Trust in relation to tackling the sewage washed up at Orlock, County Down. [222932]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan to Lady Hermon, dated 18 March 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what discussions have taken place between his Department and (a) North Down Borough Council and (b) the National Trust in relation to tackling the sewerage washed up at Orlock, Co. Down (222932). I have been asked to reply as the issue falls within my operational responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

Water Service regrets the problems that have arisen due to the failure of this screening plant at Briggs Rock, Orlock. Water Service has been in discussion with North Down Borough Council during the past two weeks regarding the problems but has not yet had any discussions with the National Trust. Water Service is currently taking forward a project to replace the existing screening plant at a cost of £150,000, and this is scheduled for completion by the end of this summer. Water Service will discuss the practicalities of a clean up operation at Orlock with both North Down Borough Council and the National Trust.

Parades Commission Chairman

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what official appointments and posts are held by the current Chairman of the Parades Commission. [222872]

Mr. Pearson: Sir Anthony Holland's public appointments are a matter of record and are listed prominently on, for example, the websites and publications of the Parades Commission and the Standards Board for England.

Police Service

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people applying to join the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) categorised as (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholics and (c) non-determined (i) have been regarded as suitably qualified, (ii) were suitably qualified but were unsuccessful and (iii) have been successfully recruited to the PSNI since its establishment. [221680]

Mr. Pearson: In PSNI Trainee Constable competitions, individuals are appointed from the pool of suitably qualified candidates at an equal ratio of those who are determined to be from a Catholic community background and those from a non-Catholic community background.

I am advised that, as at 28 January 2005, 3,243 candidates from a non-Catholic community background have reached the pool of suitably qualified candidates; of this number 2,427 have been unsuccessful and 816 have been appointed. For the same period, 1,089 candidates from a Catholic community background have reached the pool of suitably qualified candidates; of this number 279 have been unsuccessful and 810 have been appointed.

Of the 2,706 candidates deemed suitably qualified but not appointed, only 408 were rejected because of the policy of equal recruitment. The remaining 2,298 applicants would still have failed to be appointed had the temporary 50:50 provisions not been applied.

The appointment process is ongoing and these figures remain subject to change.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department has used funds (a) to provide alternative employment for workers previously employed in the poppy industry and (b) to purchase poppy crops in Afghanistan since 1997. [222196]

Mr. Rammell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary if State for International Development gave him on 9 March 2005, Official Report, columns 1801–02W.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not, as part of its programme, purchased any poppy crops in Afghanistan.

Department for International Development activity in this area forms part of the UK's support for the Afghan 2005 Counter Narcotics Implementation Plan, details of which are contained in my written statement of 10 March 2005, Official Report, columns 121–23WS.

Antarctica

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is being taken to conserve the historic huts used by the British explorers Scott and Shackleton in Antarctica; and if he will make a statement. [222491]

Mr. Rammell: As my right hon. and noble Friend the Minster of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean said on 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 6, in another place, New Zealand has territorial responsibility for the Scott and Shackleton huts located in the Ross Dependency in Antarctica. The British Government, through the British Antarctic Territory, provide an annual donation of £12,500 to the UK Antarctic Heritage Trust, which in turn supports the conservation of the Ross Island huts. In 2002, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, again through the British Antarctic Territory, donated £70,000 to support the proposed Ross Sea heritage restoration project to undertake major preservation work on the huts in question.

China/Taiwan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities on its new law with regard to possible conflict with Taiwan. [222957]

Mr. Rammell: As I said in my reply to the hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Moore) on 16 March 2005, Official Report, column 338W, Ministers have taken a close interest in the development of China's Anti-Secession legislation. We have discussed it on a number of occasions at Ministerial and official level with the Chinese, in meetings both before and after its enactment.

Although the legislation refers to China's desire to resolve the issue peacefully, we are concerned that it makes reference to the possibility of the use of "non-peaceful means". Our view is still that the Taiwan question should be settled peacefully through negotiation between the people on both sides of the Taiwan Strait. We remain strongly opposed to the use of force, as we have consistently made clear to all, including the Chinese.

In addition, the EU issued a Statement on 14 March recording its opposition to the use of force to resolve this issue.

We continue to appeal to both sides to avoid unilateral measures which might heighten tensions. Instead, we encourage both sides to continue the progress of recent months through the implementation of practical measures.

Colombia

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Colombian authorities regarding the murder of Luis Eduardo Guerra, leader of the San Jose de Apartado Peace Community. [222248]

Mr. Rammell: We are deeply shocked by the brutal killing of Luis Eduardo Guerra. Our embassy in Bogota has spoken to the judicial authorities and to Colombian Government representatives at the highest level to express our concerns regarding this killing. Luis Eduardo Guerra was a highly respected member of the Colombian NGO community and well known to our embassy. I met him during my visit to Colombia in 2004. I welcome the Colombian Government's assurances that there will be an impartial, swift and effective investigation into this, as well as into the other murders in the San Jose de Apartado Peace Community. Officials from the human rights unit in the Attorney-General's office, as well as forensic specialists and other officials, are in the area where the killings happened and are carrying out their investigation. This process includes interviews with members of the Peace Community, as well as all local army units, to try and establish the facts. We have also stressed to the Colombian authorities the need for proper protection to be given to witnesses of the crimes and of human rights defenders following the case. The Colombian authorities have assured us that such protection will be available to anyone who needs it. We continue to closely monitor the situation. Those responsible, whoever they may be, must be brought to justice.

Correspondence

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter dated 13 May 2004 from the hon. Member for Brent, East regarding Mr. John Clegg. [215631]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. and noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean, as the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister responsible for our relations with Iraq, replied to the hon. Member's letter on 11 March. Unfortunately we only received the hon. Member's letter on 16 February 2005.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter dated 7 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. M. R. Svei. [221914]

Mr. Alexander: UKvisas have no record of having received this letter. They have requested a copy from the office of my right hon. Friend and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will reply to him as soon as possible once a copy of the letter is received.

Croatia

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) progress in establishing the whereabouts of Ante Gotovina and (b) the impact of that progress on Croatia's proposed accession to the European Union. [221888]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 15 March 2005]: On 16 March 2005, EU Foreign Ministers concluded that the conditions for the opening of EU accession negotiations had not been met in the absence of full co-operation with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY). The opening of accession negotiations have been postponed until such time as the Council confirms that Croatia is fully co-operating with ICTY. The UK strongly supported this conclusion.

The postponement does not affect Croatia's candidate status, and the UK fully supports Croatia's eventual accession to the EU. We will continue to work closely with the Croatian Government and encourage them to co-operate fully with the ICTY, in particular in their efforts to locate and arrest fugitive indictee Ante Gotovina.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the Croatian Government. [222199]

Mr. MacShane: The UK Government maintain a regular dialogue with the Croatian Government, through our embassy in Zagreb and in the course of ministerial and official level meetings. Most recently I met the Croatian Foreign Minister, Kolinda Grabar-Kitarovic on 1 March 2005.

Such meetings address a wide range of issues. In recent months the focus has been on the need for Croatia to fully co-operate with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) in order for the opening of EU accession negotiations to begin. On 16 March 2005, EU Foreign Ministers concluded that these conditions had not been met in the absence of full co-operation with the ICTY. The UK fully supports Croatia's eventual accession to the EU and we will continue to work closely with the Croatian Government and encourage them to fully co-operate with ICTY.

EU Presidency

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what budget his Department has set aside for the UK Presidency of the EU; and how much of that has been allocated for the provision of public information. [221376]

Mr. MacShane: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's budget allocation for 2004–05 is £2.130 million for Financial Year (FY) 2004–05 on UK EU Presidency related activity. The final budget allocation for 2005–06 will be finalised by the end of this month but £8.440 million has currently been set aside. Of this £350,000 has been allocated for the provision of public information and other public-facing activity. (£100,000 FY 04/05 and £250,000 projected for FY 2005–06).

European Constitution

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the dates are of those referendums on the treaty establishing a constitution for the European Union which have been announced. [222395]

Mr. MacShane: The dates of those referendums on the treaty establishing a constitution for Europe which have been announced are: 27 September 2005 (Denmark); 29 May 2005 (France); 10 July 2005 (Luxembourg); 1 June 2005 (Netherlands). The Spanish referendum took place on 20 February 2005.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of whether the proposed EU Constitutional Treaty takes account of derogations negotiated by the latest accession countries, with particular reference to those negotiated by (a) the Czech Republic, (b) Estonia and (c) Poland. [222417]

Mr. MacShane: The derogations negotiated by the latest accession countries, in particular by Czech Republic, Estonia and Poland are taken account of in Protocol 9 to the Constitutional Treaty.

Gibraltar

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits to Gibraltar he has planned. [221482]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to do so.

Holy See

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 21W, on the Holy See, how he intends to widen the pool of potential candidates as Head of Mission to the Holy See beyond the normal reservoir of candidates from the Foreign and Commonwealth Service; how and to whom persons interested may submit an application in support of their candidacy; and if he will make a statement. [222241]

Mr. MacShane: The post of Head of Mission to the Holy See will be advertised publicly in due course. The advertisement will contain details of how to apply.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 21W, on the Holy See, whether he has determined the appropriate level and form of staffing necessary to preserve a viable and effective embassy to the Holy See; and if he will make a statement. [222242]

Mr. MacShane: Final decisions have not yet been taken but the level of staffing will be such as to ensure the efficient and effective conduct of business between the UK Government and the Holy See.

India

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how often the former Director General of the Punjabi Police, Mr K. P. S. Gill, has visited the UK since 1995; and what the duration of each visit was. [221697]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that I cannot provide this information, as it is not our practice to disclose details of individual entry clearance cases in a public forum. However, I will write to the hon. Member with further information.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Indian Government concerning their decision to end the UN moratorium on the death penalty. [222201]

Mr. Alexander: The UK initiated a demarche with EU partners to the Government of India in June 2004 in relation to the death sentence passed on Mr. Dhananjoy Chatterjee. The UK supported a further EU demarche in August 2004 in relation to the same case. On each occasion the EU urged the Indian Government to maintain their de facto moratorium on the death penalty.

Iraq War (Media Coverage)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with which (a) newspaper, (b) television and (c) radio, (i) journalists and (ii) editors Sir Richard Dearlove initiated meetings following the war in Iraq during 1993 to discuss matters relating to (A) the conflict and (B) weapons of mass destruction; and if he will make a statement. [222340]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 17 March 2005]: It is the Government's well-established practice not to provide, confirm or deny details of meetings or movements of any members of the UK Security and Intelligence Services, including the Chief of the Secret Intelligence Service.

Israel

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to Israel following statements by senior Israeli political figures that Israel is considering a pre-emptive military attack on Iranian nuclear facilities. [222646]

Mr. Rammell: We are in regular contact with the Israeli Authorities regarding the international community negotiations with Iran. We have not made any representations to Israel regarding reported plans for a pre-emptive military attack on Iranian nuclear facilities by Israel. The Israeli Government has denied such reports. We will continue to monitor the situation.

Minority Languages

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress made in addressing criticisms and recommendations contained in the report by the Council on Europe on UK implementation of its obligations as a signatory to the declaration of lesser-used and minority languages, with particular reference to Scottish Gaelic. [222848]

Mr. Rammell: The UK Government welcomed the Council of Europe's report of 24 March 2004 on the implementation of the Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. The report praises the UK for its efforts while also highlighting some areas for improvement.

The Scottish Executive has taken forward a number of Gaelic education initiatives which address the recommendations of the Council of Europe Committee of Experts with regard to Gaelic. The Gaelic Language (Scotland) Bill is also progressing through the Scottish Parliament and the Scottish Executive is actively engaged in discussions with all interested parties in connection with the future of Gaelic broadcasting.

These measures and others will be described in detail in the UK's periodic report to be submitted to the Council of Europe by 1 July 2005.

Moldova

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Moldovan elections. [222990]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 17 March 2005, Official Report, column 460W to the hon. Member for Windsor (Mr. Trend).

Nepal

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to fill the post of human rights adviser in the embassy in Nepal. [222430]

Mr. Alexander: The UK is actively recruiting a human rights advisor for the British Embassy in Kathmandu. The role will be funded from the Global Conflict Prevention Pool and tasked with the job of formulating and implementing UK human rights policy and programmes in Nepal. Advertisements for the position will be issued soon.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Nepali authorities on retaining and not replacing the present human rights commissioners in post; and if he will make a statement on (a) treatment of the commissioners and (b) Government support for the commissioners. [222431]

Mr. Alexander: The UK strongly supports the work of the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) in Nepal and has been part funding its operations from the Global Conflict Prevention Pool. We are deeply concerned about the future independence of the NHRC following the King's takeover of power on 1 February and our Ambassador raised our concerns directly with the King in an audience on 8 February. The UK Government believe that the reappointment of the current members of the NHRC, following the expiry of their tenure in May 2005, is the best way to ensure its continued effectiveness. The UK Government have informed the government of Nepal of this position and will continue to press for it.

There have been reports that one of the Commissioners, Sushil Pyakurel, has recently been barred from travelling outside the Kathmandu Valley on two occasions by the Security Forces, which is a source of great concern for the future of the NHRC. The UK intends to maintain its support for the Commissioners and will continue funding NHRC provided its independence and integrity is maintained.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, at the forthcoming meeting of the Commission on Human Rights in Geneva, the Government will press for a reinforcement of the UN's Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in Nepal to improve human rights monitoring; and if he will make a statement. [222432]

Mr. Alexander: The UK remains committed to monitoring and improving Nepal's human rights performance through a number of means, including the UN Commission for Human Rights. Last year the UK was closely involved in the 60th session of the UN Commission for Human Rights (CHR 60) and contributed significantly to the Chairman's statement. We remain equally engaged this year following the King's take over of power and suspension of fundamental rights on 1 February and are currently working with our international partners to seek the best way to take this forward at CHR 61.

Non-proliferation Treaty Review Conference

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of his meeting with Ambassador Sergio de Queiroz Duarte of Brazil, the Chairman of the 2005 Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference. [221360]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not held a meeting with Ambassador Duarte, although Ambassador Duarte maintains regular contact with senior officials. The most recent meeting was in London on Friday 11 March when Ambassador John Freeman, Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament, together with officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Trade and Industry, held consultations with Ambassador Duarte on the forthcoming Review Conference.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Palestinian Authority (a) to allow Christian Arabs the right to pursue their religion, with particular reference to the right to pray on the Temple Mount and (b) to prevent encroachment on and inappropriate use of Christian holy sites. [222518]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 17 March 2005]: We have received no representations from the Christian Palestinian population with regard to access to the right to pray at the Haram ash-Sharif Temple Mount area. We have received representations from the Christian Palestinian community regarding difficulties in accessing sites holy to Christians, as well as Jews and Muslims, but these concerns focus on measures taken by the Israeli rather than Palestinian authorities.

Jerusalem has a unique religious and cultural importance for Christians, Jews and Muslims, and we attach great importance to ensuring access to Jerusalem and freedom of worship there for those of all faiths.

Peru

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Peruvian Government concerning the arrest of Pastor Jose Garcia Pena on terrorism charges. [222503]

Mr. Rammell: British embassy officials in Lima have recently spoken to the Peruvian Justice Ministry about the case of Pastor Jose Garcia Pena. We understand that Pastor Jose Garcia Pena was temporarily released from custody on 11 March.

Russia

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with Russia concerning the presidency of the G8; and what Russia's stated priorities are for their presidency. [222645]

Mr. Alexander: All G8 members, including Russia, are involved in G8 discussions. In addition to these multilateral discussions, we have had a wide range of contacts with the Russians at official and Ministerial level to discuss both their and our G8 presidency themes. The Russians have begun to prepare for their 2006 G8 presidency, but have not yet made any announcements of their priorities.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the progress being made in Saudi Arabia in introducing elements of democracy; and if he will make a statement. [221595]

Mr. Rammell: We welcome the municipal elections which are being held in Saudi Arabia as a first, but important, step in the growing involvement of the people in political decision-making. We look forward to the development of this process and particularly welcome the Government of Saudi Arabia's commitment to extend voting to women.

Spain

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will raise with the Spanish government air pollution from the oil refinery at La Liniea near Gibraltar; [222281]

(2) if he will raise with the Spanish government water pollution caused by the oil refinery at La Liniea and its effects on Gibraltar's territorial waters. [222282]

Mr. MacShane: The Government hopes that the new trilateral forum will provide a suitable atmosphere in which to discuss issues such as these. However, at the present time we believe that local environmental issues such as these are most appropriately addressed under the local cooperation forum of the Government of Gibraltar-Mancommunidad del Campo de Gibraltar Joint Committee. This Committee has already established a joint epidemiological study to investigate the alleged high incidence of cancer cases in the area.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits Payment

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the administration costs associated with each benefit were in the last year for which figures are available; and what percentage of expenditure on each benefit was accounted for by administration costs. [222905]

Mr. Pond: Information is not available in the format requested. In accordance with the requirements of Resource Accounting and Budgeting, the Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its public service agreements (PSA), and by individual Requests for Resources (RfRs), as set out in the Department's Estimates and Accounts.

CSA

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will compensate children adversely affected by delays in transferring cases to the new Child Support Agency system. [222307]

Mr. Pond: Compensation payments can be made to parents with care for losses incurred as a direct result of maladministration by the Child Support Agency.

However, we have always been clear that we will only move people on to the new scheme when we are sure that the new arrangements are working well. This is a sensible approach to implementing a major change and does not amount to maladministration. Compensation is therefore not appropriate.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reasons a date has not been set when old Child Support Agency cases will be transferred to the new system. [222308]

Mr. Pond: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Ashford (Mr. Green) on 8 December 2004, Official Report, column 568W.

Departmental Accounts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether Ministers in his Department have issued written instructions to override his Department's accounting officer's objections since 1997. [221118]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 14 March 2005, Official Report, column 80W, by the Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Timms).

Household Incomes

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households below average income there were in (a) East Midlands and (b) Leicester South constituency in each year since 1997. [222788]

Mr. Pond: In 2002–03, an estimated 69 per cent. of households in the East Midlands had incomes below the GB mean on the Before Housing Costs income measure, and 66 per cent. on the After Housing Costs measure.

These estimates use the same definition of income used in the Households Below Average Income Series, which is sourced from the Family Resources Survey. It is not possible to provide robust estimates for (b) because of small sample sizes.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many national insurance numbers have been issued to workers arriving from abroad in each year since 1979. [222187]

Mr. Pond: The information is not available.

New Deal

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have found work through new deal programmes in Plymouth since 1997, broken down by (a) the new deal for young people, (b) the new deal for over 25s and (c) the new deal for lone parents. [221610]

Jane Kennedy: The information is in the following table.

New deal in Plymouth

Programme	Individuals into work
New deal for young people	3,390
New deal 25 plus	660
New deal for lone parents	1,900

Notes:
1. Figures are for the combined parliamentary constituencies of Plymouth Devonport and Plymouth Sutton.
2. New deal for young people started in January 1998; new deal 25 plus started in July 1998; new deal for lone parents started in October 1998.
3. All data is to December 2004.
4. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the City of York have (a) enrolled on and (b) found work through each of the Government's new deal programmes. [221737]

Jane Kennedy: The available information is in the following table.

New deal in the City of York

Programme	Individual starts	Individuals into work
New deal for young people	1,400	840
New deal 25 plus	890	390
New deal for lone parents	1,060	640
New deal 50 plus (up to and including March 2003)	190	190
New deal 50 plus (from April 2003)	—	50
Total	3,540	2,110

Notes:
1. New deal for young people started in January 1998; new deal 25 plus started in July 1998; new deal for lone parents started in October 1998; new deal 50 plus started in April 2000.
2. Information on starts to new deal 50 plus is only available up to the end of March 2003.
3. Information on individuals into work through new deal 50 plus up to the end of March 2003 is the number of starts to the new deal 50 plus employment credit.
4. New deal 50 plus jobs figures from April 2003 could include people who have started more than one job.
5. Information for new deal for disabled people and new deal for partners is not available at constituency level.
6. All data is to December 2004.
7. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

Pensioner Income

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average difference in pension income between men and women in (a) the UK, (b) Scotland and (c) England was in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [222919]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the tables.

Table 1 gives gross income, net income before housing costs, and net income after housing costs for male and female single pensioners (people over state pension age). The results are based on combined data from the three years 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Table 1: £ per week in 2002–03 prices

	Scotland	England	Great Britain
Male single pensioners
Gross income	212	228	224
Net income BHC	187	194	192
Net income AHC	161	168	166
Female single pensioners
Gross income	188	188	187
Net income BHC	167	165	165
Net income AHC	142	139	139

Table 2 gives the difference in incomes between male single pensioners and female single pensioners.

Table 2: £ per week in 2002–03 prices

	Scotland	England	Great Britain
Gross	24	40	37
Net income BHC	20	29	27
Net income AHC	19	28	27

Notes:
1. Based on pensioners' incomes 2002–03. Because of small sample sizes the results are based on an average of three years of Family Resources Survey (FRS) data. The data is from 2000–01, 2001–02, and 2002–03 where appropriate uprated to 2002–03 prices. Estimates of average incomes may still be vulnerable to random fluctuations in the number of very high income pensioners in each group in the FRS sample. In particular the differences between men and women should be treated with caution.
2. Net income is after direct taxes (including council tax) have been deducted).
3. BHC stand for before housing costs, AHC for after housing costs.
4. Northern Ireland was included in the FRS for the first time in 2002–03. Because the table is based on three years of FRS data results are given for Great Britain rather than the UK.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department plans to continue to use means-testing in the calculation of pensions; and if he will make a statement. [222920]

Malcolm Wicks: This Government's priority when they came to office was tackling the legacy of pensioner poverty. We continue to do this by targeting help on today's poorest pensioners and by encouraging all pensioners to receive the benefits they are entitled to. At the same time the Government believe that empowering individuals to make real and informed choices about working and saving for retirement is fundamental if they are to make sure people get the income in retirement they expect.

Income-testing of benefits has existed since before and after the creation of the Welfare State in 1948. With the introduction of pension credit, and the ease by which it can be applied for, we have moved away from the stigmatising weekly means tests of the past.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what changes took place in levels of pensioner poverty between (a) 1997 and June 2001 and (b) June 2001 and 2005; and if he will make a statement. [222924]

Malcolm Wicks: We have taken many steps to tackle pensioner poverty, including the introduction of pension credit and winter fuel payment, and since 2000 there has been a 7 per cent. real rise in the level of the basic state pension. As a result of these measures during 2005–06 we will be spending extra £11 billion more on pensioners, including £5 billion more on the poorest third.

Poverty is about more than low income; it also impacts on the way people live—their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The sixth annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6239), published in September 2004, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy.

Analysis suggests our overall strategy to tackle pensioner poverty is having an impact on pensioner incomes. The Household Below Average Income figures present the number and proportion of pensioners living in households with incomes below fixed and relative thresholds. The latest publication shows that between 1996–97 and 2002–03, 1.8 million fewer older people lived in absolute low income on un-rounded figures. In percentage terms, this equated to a fall of around two thirds. Further information is presented in the following table:

Number of pensioners with income below 60 per cent. of 1996–97 median income held constant in real terms

	After housing costs	Before housing costs
1996–97	2.7	2.1
1997–98	2.6	2.1
2001–02	1.1	1.4
2002–03	0.9	1.2

Information for 2003–04 onwards is not available. The latest available information about the number of pensioners living in relative low income, measured by households with incomes below 60 per cent. of contemporary median income, is presented in the following table:

Number of pensioners with incomes below 60 per cent. of contemporary median income

Million

	After housing costs	Before housing costs
1996–97	2.7	2.1
1997–98	2.7	2.2
2001–02	2.2	2.2

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the level of pensioner poverty (a) before and (b) after housing costs was in (i) the UK, (ii) Scotland and (iii) England in 2004; and if he will make a statement. [222925]

Malcolm Wicks: The following table gives gross income, net income before housing costs, and net income after housing costs for pensioners, over the three years 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03 combined.

Pensioners' income per week—2002–03 prices

Gross income	353	393	386	193	198	196
Net income BHC	304	328	324	171	172	171
Net income AHC	282	307	304	147	146	146

Notes:
1. From Pensioners' Incomes 2002–03—the Great Britain results in table 6 of 2002–03 Pensioners' incomes were incorrect, the corrected numbers are in this table.
2. Because of small sample sizes the results are based on an average of three years of Family Resources Survey data. The data is from 2000–01, 2001–02, and 2002–03 where appropriate uprated to 2002–03 prices. Estimates of average incomes may still be vulnerable to random fluctuations in the number of very high income pensioners in each group in the FRS sample.
3. Net income is after direct taxes (including council tax) have been deducted.
4. BHC stands for Before Housing Costs, AHC for After Housing Costs.
5. Northern Ireland was included in the FRS for the first time in 2002–03. Because the table is based on three years of FRS data results are given for Great Britain rather than the UK.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average weekly amounts of (a) basic state pension, (b) additional pension and (c) income-related additions received by (i) men and (ii) women were in each year since 1997–98. [217519]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is in the table.

As at March:	Average basic state pension		Average additional state pension		Average weekly rate of income-related additions
	Men	Women	Men	Women	Men	Women
1998	61.42	49.95	15.50	5.60		42.29
1999	63.58	51.68	17.23	6.34	52.76	41.82
2000	65.59	53.34	19.40	6.97	56.03	44.43
2001	66.27	53.95	20.43	7.62	59.60	46.45
2002	71.11	57.97	22.81	8.50	58.56	45.27
2003	73.98	60.38	23.45	9.30	59.96	46.02
2004	75.82	61.96	24.73	10.20	48.50	39.16

Notes:

1. Income-related additions refer to the minimum income guarantee and the pension credit (payable from October 2003) and represent male and female claimants. Figures for male claimants are higher because they include a greater proportion of cases where the claim relates to a couple than the figures for female claimants. Figures for March 1998 are only available for all claimants and cannot be given in the format requested.
2. Figures for basic state pension and additional state pension are taken from a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation. The average weekly rates are based on all state pension recipients in Great Britain.
3. Basic state pension means the basic component of Category A or B state pension or Category C or D state pension.
4. A basic state pension is paid to those who fully or partially satisfy the contribution conditions for a Category A or Category B basic state pension, either in their own right or, where applicable, on the basis of their spouse's or former spouse's National Insurance contributions and to persons aged 80 or over who satisfy the entitlement conditions for Category C or Category D Pensions.
5. Average amounts of additional state pension include the additional state pension component of Category A and B state pension and the addition to long-term incapacity benefit, graduated retirement benefit and age additions paid to people aged 80 and over.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will publish an estimate of the number of pension scheme members who have lost pension through insolvent wind up since 1997 in the same format as the estimate published on 30 June 2004. [219652]

Malcolm Wicks: We shall not have full information on members' losses until their schemes are close to completing wind up. However, based on the information currently available, we estimate that some 80,000 non-pensioner members of schemes winding up since 1997 with insolvent employers could be facing losses of 20 per cent. or more of their expected pensions, 70,000 losses of 30 per cent. or more, 60,000 losses of 40 per cent. or more and 45,000 losses of 50 per cent. or more. These figures exclude those where the difference between the assets in their scheme and the level of losses is less than £10 a week. In addition, we estimate that a small number of pensioner members may be facing significant losses of 20 per cent. or more of their expected pensions.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what initiatives his Department has taken to encourage business investment in worker pensions; and if he will make a statement. [222922]

Malcolm Wicks: We have taken radical action to ease the burdens on business and encourage further investment in employees' pensions. This includes the measures in the 2004 Finance Act to simplify the tax system and provisions in the Pensions Act 2004 to make the running of pension schemes simpler. We have simplified the pensions tax system by changing eight schemes of taxation into one. Simplification measures in the Pensions Act 2004 will enable pension schemes to consolidate and simplify their rules with retrospective effect.

We set up the Employer Task Force to draw on business experience and innovation as a way of identifying and promoting good practice in occupational pensions. Following a recommendation in its report, published in December 2004, we have set up a website aimed at employers which is dedicated to offering guidelines on good practice, with case studies and examples.

We intend to take steps through our informed choice programme to raise awareness among employers of the value for recruitment and retention of employers' pension contributions.

The Government also provide generous tax relief to encourage people to save for an income in retirement, including around £5 billion a year in National Insurance relief to employers.

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what advice was taken from (a) the Government Actuary's Department and (b) other actuaries by the then Department for Social Security (i) in advance of the introduction of contracting-out rebates for personal pensions in the 1986 Social Security Act and (ii) on the appropriateness of the level and structure of these rebates between the introduction of the 1986 legislation and the introduction of age-related rebates in 1997–98. [223111]

Malcolm Wicks: The contracting-out rebate rates that applied to appropriate personal pensions introduced under the Social Security Act 1986, were set out in a report laid before both Houses of Parliament in March 1987 by the then Secretary of State for Social Security. As required under the legislation, a report by the Government Actuary was laid at the same time and set out the rebate rates that, under the legislation then in force, he considered to be appropriate. Before these reports were laid, a draft of the Government Actuary's report was issued for consultation. This consultation included questions on the appropriateness of the level and structure of the rebates. The actuarial profession were among those consulted and their views were taken into account as part of the consultation process.

The Secretary of State is required to review the level of rebates at least once every five years. The same process as described above took place in 1992 to set the rebate rates from 6 April 1993 and again in 1996 to set the rates from 6 April 1997. As a result of the latest of these reviews, age-related rebates were introduced for members of appropriate personal pension schemes and members of contracted-out money purchase schemes.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of fuel price inflation on the value of winter fuel payments to pensioners. [222194]

Malcolm Wicks: Winter fuel payments are a significant contribution towards fuel costs but are not intended to cover the full cost of fuel bills. The payment has risen from £20 in winter 1997–98 to £200 from winter 2000–01.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the rates of basic state pension payable to (a) single pensioners and (b) couples were in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 2004–05; and what the rates would have been in 2004–05 if they had been uprated in line with prices between 1996–97 and 2004–05. [222226]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is in the table:

£ per week

	Single pensioners	Pensioner couple
Rate of basic state pension as at April 1996	61.15	97.75
Rate of basic state pension rate as at April 2004	79.60	127.25
Rate of basic state pension as at April 2004 if it was uprated by retail prices index from 1996–97	74.15	118.50

Notes:

1. Retail prices index as published by the Office for National Statistics.
2. For the years 2001–02; 2002–03; 2003–04, the basic state pension was uprated by more than the retail prices index.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5 pence at each uprating.
4. The basic state pension is an individual payment and there is no such thing as a "singles" or "couple's" rate. The pensioner couple rate, commonly referred to as the "couples rate", is the sum total of a basic state pension and around 60 per cent. of it. The actual amount for a couple will therefore depend on the amount of the basic state pension to which the husband is entitled.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1171W, on expenditure, (1) what the reasons are for the differences between the figures for benefit and tax credit expenditure in the years 1998–99 to 2004–05 and those in table 1.1 of the April 2004 Public Expenditure: Statistical Analyses; [221208]

(2) what the reasons are for the differences between the figures for benefit expenditure in 1996–97 and 1997–98 and those in table 1.3 of the April 2000 Public Expenditure: Statistical Analyses; [221209]

(3) what the reasons are for the differences between the figures for benefit and tax credit expenditure in 2003–04 and 2004–05 and those in table B16 of the pre-Budget report. [221210]

Mr. Pond: Figures in the answer of 10 February 2005, Official Report, column 1771W, are consistent with DWP benefit expenditure tables published following the pre-Budget report 2004 at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/expenditure.asp, and with tax credit expenditure figures supplied to DWP by HM Treasury following this and previous Budget and pre-Budget report forecasts.

The pre-Budget report assigned child elements of income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance to the tax credits line; since this is benefit expenditure it is included in the benefits column of the answer of 10 February, and the tax credits column is reduced accordingly.

Some housing benefit and council tax benefit expenditure is funded from within local authority budgets and is therefore not included in the social security benefits lines in the pre-Budget report and Public Expenditure: Statistical Analyses (PESA).

For completeness, the answer of 10 February includes these amounts. For 2003–04 only, the pre-Budget report includes spending on the Supporting People initiative in the social security line. This is excluded from the previous answer as it is neither benefit nor tax credit expenditure.

DWP's pre-Budget report benefit expenditure tables reflect the latest 2003–04 outturn figures available at the time the forecast was being prepared. More recent figures were available by the time the pre-Budget report was published. Similarly, outturn figures published in PESA 2000 and 2004 were those available at the time of publication. Outturn figures can change as further accounting information becomes available.

Other differences in expenditure figures included in pre-Budget report and PESA in the areas below are the responsibility of the Departments and agencies listed.

Northern Ireland social security benefits: Northern Ireland Social Security Agency (NISSA);

Tax Credits: Inland Revenue;

War Pensions: Veterans Agency;

Child Benefit: Inland Revenue and Paternity and Adoption Pay: Department of Trade and Industry.

Tamworth

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Tamworth constituency, the effects on the constituency of changes to his Department's policies since 1997. [221931]

Jane Kennedy: We have undertaken a fundamental overhaul of the welfare system, transforming it to an active system that fights poverty, creates opportunity and helps people become self-sufficient and independent.

Since 2001, the Government have significantly extended and improved civil rights for disabled people in areas such as employment, education, access to goods and services and transport. Disabled people in Tamworth will have benefited from these improvements in disability rights. Similarly, families with severely disabled 3 and 4-year-old children who are unable, or virtually unable to walk, will have benefited from the Government's decision to lower the minimum age entitlement to the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance from April 2001, whilst older and less well off carers have gained extra help through the provisions within the National Carers Strategy.

In 2002–03 we estimate there were around 10 million adults (22 per cent.) and 0.7 million children (5 per cent.) in Great Britain likely to be covered by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA).

The figures can be broken down to regional level which shows that 21 per cent. of adults and 6 per cent. of children in the West Midlands region are likely to be covered by the provisions of the DDA.

Information on the numbers of customers in Tamworth who are in receipt of disability living allowance (DLA) and attendance allowance (AA) is in the table.

Disability living allowance/attendance allowance recipients—Tamworth

Operational year	Number
2001	5,700
2002	6,000
2003	6,300
2004	6,500

Source:
DWP Information Centre. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100 and are from a 5 per cent. sample at 31 August each year.

Through Jobcentre Plus we are promoting work as the best form of welfare for people of working age. The number of people in work is at historically high levels of over 28.5 million; in Tamworth the proportion in employment has increased by 1 point since 1997 to 72.8 per cent.

Our New Deals have helped lone parents, the young unemployed, the long-term unemployed, disabled people, the over-50s and partners of unemployed people to move from benefit into work. Nationally over 1.25 million people have been helped into work by the New Deals, with 1,890 in Tamworth alone.

Significant progress has been made in eradicating child poverty and the latest figures (for 2002–03) show that, in the UK, there were over half a million fewer children in relative low income than there were in 1996–97. Since 2001–02 incomes for lone parents in receipt of benefit have risen by more than prices or the cost of living. In April 2005 the child allowance rate in income support for a child up to 18 years old will have been increased by 40 per cent. since 2001–02. Child rates in income support and jobseeker's allowance are also being increased above inflation in April 2005 in line with child tax credit upratings. All of this has benefited 1,300 families in Tamworth.

We want all pensioners to have a decent and secure income in retirement and to share fairly in the rising prosperity of the country and our first priority has been to help the poorest pensioners. The Government will be spending nearly £10 billion more in 2004–05 (in 2004–05 prices) on pensioners as a result of measures introduced since 1997, with around half going to the poorest third.

Our reforms include the State Second Pension which helps more future pensioners build up better pensions, especially carers. Pension credit, introduced from October 2003, provides a contribution to a guaranteed minimum income for those aged 60 and over and, for the first time, those aged 65 and over may be rewarded for savings and income. As of December 2004 around 3,855 pensioners in Tamworth were receiving pension credit, with an average award of £38.29 per week.

We know that older people are disproportionately affected by fuel poverty. This winter (2004–05) we have again made available a winter fuel payment of £200 for each eligible household with someone aged 60 or over and £300 to those with someone aged 80 or over to help with their fuel bills. Additionally, for this year, eligible households with someone aged 70 or over will receive the one-off 70+ payment of £100 to help with living expenses including council tax bills. It is paid with the winter fuel payment.

The constituency data on winter fuel payments and the additional 80+ annual payment is available in the Library.

Since 1997 single pensioners and pensioner couples have seen a real terms increase in their basic state pension of 7 per cent. and 8 per cent. respectively. Some 14,400 pensioners in Tamworth have benefited from this increase.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many senior citizens in Edinburgh, North and Leith have benefited from the winter fuel allowance since 1997. [222908]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of senior citizens in Edinburgh, North and Leith who have benefited from the winter fuel payment in each year for which figures are available is in the Library.

Women in Poverty

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women were living in poverty on the latest date for which figures are available, broken down by women of (a) Asian, (b) black, (c) white and (d) other ethnic groups. [221602]

Mr. Pond: Poverty is about more than low income; it also impacts on the way people live—their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The sixth annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6239), published in September 2004, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy.

Specific information regarding low income for the United Kingdom is available in 'Households Below Average Income 1994–95 to 2002–03'. It should be noted that the reporting of year on year changes of low-income rates for small ethnic groups are not reliable. Both publications are in the Library.

According to the latest data, in 2002–03, 3.7 million women in Great Britain were living in households with income below 60 per cent. of median income on the Before Housing Costs measure, and 4.7 million women were living in low income using a similar threshold on the After Housing Costs measure. Robust estimates of the number of individuals by ethnic group are not available. The estimated proportion of women by ethnic group and the proportion of individuals for each ethnic group that were in low income in 2002–03 are in the following tables.

Proportion of all women living in low income households—broken down by ethnic group

Percentage

Ethnic status	Before housing costs	After housing costs
White	88	87
Asian	7	7
Other	5	6

Proportion of women in each ethnic group living in low income households[1]

Percentage

Ethnic status	Before housing costs	After housing costs
White	16	20
Asian	34	40
Of which:
Bangladeshi/Pakistani	55	64
Indian	21	24
Other	22	33

[1] This table gives an estimate of the 'risk' of low income.

Notes:

1. A breakdown for Bangladeshi/Pakistani and Indian is provided for information as there were a greater proportion of Bangladeshi/Pakistani individuals in low income than there was for other ethnic groups.
2. "Low income households" is defined as households below 60 per cent. median income.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Congestion Charge

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much has been spent on congestion (a) charges and (b) penalty charge notices by the Department since the commencement of the congestion charging scheme. [213823]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has spent the following amounts on congestion (a) charging and (b) penalty charge notices since the commencement of the congestion charging scheme:

(a) Charges: £1,390.00

(b) Penalties: £2,690.00

The Department's policy is to recover penalty charges from the drivers who incur them.

Deaths in Custody (Legal Aid)

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list those cases in which he has (a) awarded and (b) not awarded legal aid to families in inquests into deaths in custody since taking office. [222963]

Mr. Lammy: Since November 2001 the Legal Services Commission has been authorised by the Lord Chancellor to fund advocacy at inquests into deaths occurring in police or prison custody, or during the course of police arrest, search, pursuit or shooting, subject to the statutory financial eligibility limits.

From December 2003, Ministers have had the power to waive the financial eligibility limits for legal aid in cases that may engage Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights, and where it is equitable to do so. Using this power, I have authorised funding for legal representation in 21 death in custody inquests, as at 18 March 2005. I have not refused funding for any death in custody inquest. The numbers break down as follows:

April to March	Number
2003–04	10
2004–05	11

Domestic Property Sales

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs, how many domestic property sales above £120,000 took place in Pendle in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and what percentage of the total domestic sales in Pendle this represents. [223376]

Mr. Lammy: In the calendar year 2004, 537 domestic properties were sold in Pendle for more than £120,000. This represents 16.69 per cent. of all domestic property sales in that district.

Immigration Adjudicators

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the nature is of the training for immigration adjudicators organised and facilitated by senior judicial members of the immigration appellate authority. [221783]

Mr. Lammy: The training provided for immigration adjudicators, organised and facilitated by senior judicial members of the immigration appellate authority (IAA), is tailored to be legislatively relevant, and to reflect the changing environment of asylum and immigration decision making. In 2004 the chief adjudicator introduced a dedicated post of training adjudicator, which has improved the development, and delivery, of training packages to reflect the needs of immigration adjudicators in what is a rapidly developing jurisdiction. The training adjudicator is currently responsible for the facilitation of a series of judicial training conferences, underpinning the transition from the IAA into the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT). These recent conferences were designed to provide the immigration judiciary with the appropriate resources, and legislative knowledge, to continue to produce high quality decisions within the new tribunal.

Minority Indigenous Languages

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on initiatives taken through the British Irish

Council to advance minority indigenous languages in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales and (c) Ireland following the discussions at the Fifth Summit. [222849]

Mr. Lammy: At the Fifth Summit of the British-Irish Council, it was agreed that members would:

Jointly consider outcomes of research into inter-generational language transmission;

Carry out an assessment of structures supporting indigenous language learning in adult education in each of the BIC administrations;

Work together to identify priorities for their respective indigenous language use surveys;

Consider together the potential benefits of co-operating on the development of language use surveys;

Share information on their experiences of the relationship between planning policy and linguistic considerations.

This work has been carried forward by the Indigenous, Minority and Lesser-Used Languages Sectoral Group of the council, which is led by the Welsh Assembly Government. The group has decided to focus on three specific areas, namely language transmission within the family, the teaching of Indigenous, Minority and Lesser-Used Languages in the field of education and Information and Communications Technology.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what support has been given to Iomairt Cholm Chille in promoting co-operation through the British Irish Council on minority language issues. [222850]

Mr. Lammy: Work on minority language issues is taken forward by the Indigenous, Minority and Lesser-used Languages Sectoral Working Group of the council, which is led by the Welsh Assembly Government. It would be for members of that group to propose the involvement of non-governmental organisations. To date, such involvement has included, or will include input from various language boards, adult education providers and community-based language groups such as the Welsh Mentrau Iaith.

Non-family Civil Legal Aid

Ross Cranston: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of the population was eligible for non-family civil legal aid in each of the last 20 years; and if he will make a statement. [222729]

Mr. Lammy: We do not have precise figures for the last 20 years. Estimates of the proportion of individuals eligible for civil legal aid generally from 1986 to 2000 are set out on the following table.

	Percentage individuals eligible
1986	63
1987	60
1988	58
1989	59
1990	56
1991	55
1992	56
1993	52
1994	54
1995	54
1996	52
1997	52
1998	52
1999	51
2000	50

More recent surveys estimate that the proportion of the population eligible for civil legal aid generally has remained at approximately 50 per cent. since 2000.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations he has received concerning the continuance of Legal Services Commission funding for the claims of British nuclear test veterans against the Ministry of Defence; and if he will make a statement. [222551]

Mr. Lammy: I have received one letter from the hon. Member for Bournemouth, West (Sir John Butterfill) on this subject. The Department is not aware of receiving any other representations, although data on correspondence are not recorded to give a categorical answer.

I am aware that there has been a dialogue between the Legal Services Commission (LSC) and the applicants' solicitors regarding the continuation of funding.

At the time of writing the LSC has recently received correspondence and enquiries from four MPs, on behalf of constituents who are members of the British Nuclear Test Victims Association.

The LSC granted limited funding in June 2002 to two firms of solicitors to undertake preliminary investigations.

The LSC made an assessment of the atomic veterans' Multi Party Action (MPA) in October 2004. This action not only includes British veterans, but nationals from New Zealand and Fiji. The LSC is currently awaiting further information from the solicitors to enable a decision to be made whether further funding should be provided. Once the information is available the Commission will first consider the merits and then whether the action is affordable from the cash limited budget, having compared it with other major group actions that are being proposed. This is the standard procedure that the Commission currently applies to any major MPA.

Personal Accident Cases

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will take steps to regulate companies involved in no win, no fee claims in personal accident cases. [222249]

Mr. Lammy: The claims management sector must be properly regulated. Many claims management companies have failed to demonstrate the commitment I would have hoped to see by now despite the efforts by the Claims Standard Council. I will be considering how best to safeguard consumer interests now and for the future as we take forward the Clementi reforms.

Sikh Employees

David Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the Department's policy is on the wearing of the Kirpan by Sikh employees. [221667]

Mr. Lammy: The Department's commitment not to discriminate unfairly on the grounds of religion or belief is set out in its Equality and Diversity Policy. The Department has not issued specific guidance on the wearing of the Kirpan by Sikh employees. General guidance on dress places the responsibility on individual managers to inform their employees of the dress code for their particular office. In devising a dress code the guidance requires managers to consult and ensure that they do not discriminate on any grounds and, where an employee's religion requires them to observe a particular dress code, this should be respected. However, recognition and respect for faith must be balanced against considerations for health, safety and security.

The Department's Corporate Diversity Unit is currently devising a toolkit on religion and belief which is intended to include guidance on the wearing of religious objects including the Kirpan.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to focus the asylum system on those genuinely fleeing persecution by taking speedy, high quality decisions and reducing significantly unfounded asylum claims; [219147]

(2) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to ensure the fast turnaround of manifestly unfounded asylum cases; [219148]

(3) whether the public service agreement target to ensure that 75 per cent. of substantive asylum applications are decided within two months by 2004 was met; [219149]

(4) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to enforce the immigration laws more effectively by removing a greater proportion of failed asylum seekers; [219150]

(5) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to reduce unfounded asylum claims; [219157]

(6) what recent progress has been made towards the public service agreement target to tackle abuse of the immigration laws and promote controlled legal migration. [219158]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Gentleman for Buckingham to the answer given by the Minister for Citizenship and Immigration, my hon. Friend the Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. Browne) on 15 March 2005, Official Report, column 205W.

HEALTH

Acute Hospital Beds

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute hospital beds there are in (a) England and (b) Surrey and Sussex; and how many acute beds per 100,000 of population there are in (i) County Durham and Tees Valley Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area and (ii) Surrey and Sussex SHA area. [222962]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Acute hospital beds	Number
England	109,846
Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority (SHA)	4,931
Acute beds per 100,000 population
County Durham and Tees Valley SHA	250
Surrey and Sussex SHA	193

Alcohol

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admissions via accident and emergency to NHS hospitals in England for alcohol-related conditions there were in each year from 1997, broken down by trust; and if he will make a statement. [222545]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Alcohol-related Emergency Admissions (Lancashire)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many alcohol-related emergency cases there were in hospitals in Lancashire in the last period for which figures are available. [221986]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The table the number of alcohol-related[1] finished admission episodes for acute national health service trusts in Lancashire during 2003–04, where the admission method was emergency.

NHS trust	Finished admission episodes
Morecambe Bay hospitals NHS Trust	1,258
Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust	777
Blackpool, Fylde and Wyre hospitals NHS Trust	656
Lancashire Teaching hospitals NHS Trust	1,425
East Lancashire hospitals NHS Trust	1,399

Notes to table:
1. A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
3. As well as the primary diagnosis, there are up to 13 (six prior to 2002–03) secondary diagnosis fields in HES that show other diagnoses relevant to the episode of care.

Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time for ambulances attending 999 calls was in Coventry in each year since 1997. [222614]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally in the format requested.

Data on response times for West Midlands Ambulance Service, which includes Coventry, is shown in the table.

Further information can be found in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2003–04". A copy is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.publications.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0411.htm

Autism

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of provision of services for autistic (a) children and (b) adults in Kent. [222730]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 18 March 2005]: The Department has not made an assessment of the provision of services for autistic children and adults in Kent. Our policy of Shifting the Balance of Power means that responsibility for the provision of local health services now rests with primary care trusts (PCTs). It is for PCTs, in conjunction with strategic health authorities, to ensure that local services meet the needs of their local communities.

British Pregnancy Advisory Service

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects his Department to issue its report on the British Pregnancy Advisory Service. [221746]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Chief Medical Officer (CMO) is currently investigating this matter and will draw conclusions and make recommendations to the Secretary of State. The CMO expects to be able to submit his report to the Secretary of State shortly.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cancelled operations there were in each quarter of 2004–05 in the West Suffolk Hospitals NHS Trust. [222480]

Dr. Ladyman: The published data for last minute cancelled operations in each of the last three quarters of 2004–05 for West Suffolk Hospitals National Health Service Trust are shown in the table.

Quarter (2004–05)	Number of last minute cancelled operations
1 (April-June)	56
2 (July-September)	98
3 (October-December)	313

The quarterly trend for the trust is not uncommon. Traditionally, the number of cancelled operations in the winter months (quarter three) is generally higher than other quarters in most trusts.

Deafness

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the use of funds allocated to primary care trusts for the purpose of ensuring that deaf people receive equal treatment and access to medical care; and if he will make a statement; [222467]

(2) what plans he has to issue instructions to (a) primary care trusts, (b) health trusts and (c) foundation hospitals to record deafness and the preferred communication method for the purpose of the proposed needs assessments to be undertaken by these bodies. [222548]

Dr. Ladyman: The Healthcare Commission is responsible for regulating and inspecting national health service services including those for deaf people.

The Department has no plans to issue such guidance to health and social care providers at a local level. However, individual health and social care practitioners are expected to record the preferred methods of communication of deaf and hard of hearing clients.

Good practice guidance published jointly by the Department and the Disability Rights Commission last year gives practical suggestions of ways in which NHS managers and healthcare staff can make a real difference by meeting the needs of disabled service users, including those who are deaf.

Information on deafness is not collected centrally.

Dementia

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance his Department provides for (a) people who suffer from dementia and (b) their carers; and if he will make a statement. [221366]

Dr. Ladyman: Standard 8 of the national service framework for older people, launched in 2001, sets out service models, actions and milestones for the national health service and social care organisations in the provision of services for older people with dementia and depression, and their carers.

A carers' grant was introduced in 1999 to support councils in providing breaks and services for carers in England. The grant has been increased annually and has provided an extra £225 million over the past four years. It was worth £100 million during 2003–04, helping an additional 130,000 carers. The carers' grant will be £185 million in 2005–06 and will continue until 2007–08 at least. Councils will be able to use the money to give carers help with taking a break from caring and also to give them on-going support with caring.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the drugs available on prescription for people who suffer from dementia; and if he will make a statement. [221367]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None, but the hon. Member may wish to consult the record of the recent debate in Westminster Hall, Official Report, columns 93–101WH, which outlines a number of issues the Department will be raising in its response to the National Institute for Clinical Excellence's current consultation on its draft appraisal of drugs for Alzheimer's disease.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what treatment is available for people with dementia on the national health service; [222695]

(2) what plans he has to improve the service provided to Alzheimer sufferers. [222696]

Dr. Ladyman: Standard 8 of the national service framework for older people sets out service models, actions and milestones for the national health service in the provision of services for older people with dementia and depression.

In 2003, the then Secretary of State for Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn), announced that, as part of the eighth wave of its work, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence would be producing comprehensive guidelines on all aspects of dementia care, including the use of antipsychotic drugs. A draft will be available for consultation in 2006.

Digital Hearing Aids

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the individual cost to the NHS is of (a) assessment, (b) fitting and (c) follow-up in providing a digital hearing aid. [222030]

Dr. Ladyman: Following a change in accounting procedures, data on the costs of digital hearing aids is no longer included in the annual collection of unit costs and activity data from national health service providers. In the last year for which information was available, 2002–03, the average cost of a digital hearing aid was £140.

European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the activity of the European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products in the UK in the last 12 months; and if he will list the publications and newsletters published by the Agency over that period. [215274]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The activities of the European Medicines Agency (EMA), the name of which was changed as of 20 May 2004, will be reported in the annual report for 2004, which is likely to be published in the coming weeks.

The EMA's activities during 2004 covered European Union enlargement; medicines for human use; medicines for veterinary use; working with regulators across the world; the European medicines network; making structural changes to the organisation and planning for the future, which is set out in the road map 2010.

The EMA publishes a large number of documents each year. All documents are available free of charge on the EMA website at www.emea.eu.int.

Freedom of Information Act

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of requests made to the NHS and its agencies under the terms of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 since 1 January. [222526]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 17 March 2005]: The Department did not make estimates in advance of numbers of Freedom of Information requests likely to be received by organisations in the national health service, as there was no sound basis for doing so.

General Practitioners

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints have been received on the new GP out-of-hours service in (a) England and (b) Leicester since its introduction. [222785]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not centrally available.

Health Statistics (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting to see a consultant at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital on (a) 1 May 1997, (b) 7 June 2001 and (c) the latest date for which figures are available. [223157]

Dr. Ladyman: The information for individual hospitals is not held centrally.

The table shows the total number of patients waiting for admission to the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital National Health Service Trust for the nearest dates to those specified.

Period	Total waiting
31 March 1997	4,245
30 June 2001	4,210
30 September 2003	3,648

Hospital Car Parking

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department gives to hospital trusts on the policy of charging (a) staff, (b) visitors and (c) patients for hospital car parking. [222284]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Guidance on car parking charges was issued to national health service hospitals in March 1996. The guidance allows individual hospitals to decide whether or not to charge staff, visitors and patients for car parking and the cost of such charges in the light of local circumstances. Where charges are introduced, patients who are eligible to claim reimbursement of travelling expenses under the hospital travel costs scheme may have the charges reimbursed.

Hospital Energy Bills

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the annual energy bill has been at NHS hospitals in each of the last 10 years; [221999]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to improve the energy efficiency of NHS hospitals. [222000]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table. Data on energy costs is not available before 1998–99.

£ million

	Total annual cost of energy
1998–99	177
1999–2000	183
2000–01	197
2001–02	243
2002–03	244
2003–04	261

The figures quoted are as reported by the national health service and include costs for all forms of energy used, e.g., coal, gas and electricity sourced both locally and from outside suppliers.

Under the requirements of the Government's climate change programme, the Department has set mandatory energy/carbon efficiency targets on the NHS in England to:

Reduce the level of primary energy consumption by 15 per cent., or 0.15 million tonnes carbon from March 2000 to March 2010.

Achieve a target of 35–55 GigaJoules/100 cubic metres energy efficiency performance for the healthcare estate for all new capital developments and major redevelopments or refurbishments.

Achieve a target of 55–65 GigaJoules/100 cubic metres for all existing facilities.

In November 2004, the NHS Estates Agency issued guidance, entitled, "Carbon/energy management in healthcare—best practice advice for the NHS in England on meeting the mandatory carbon/energy targets—March 2000-March 2010", to assist the NHS and to ensure the requirements are kept in focus. The larger more energy intensive elements of the NHS estate are subject to the requirements of the emission trading scheme, which sets a cap on carbon emissions.

Intensive Care Bed Register

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on how many occasions there were no intensive care beds available on the intensive care bed register in each NHS region in each year since 1997; [222137]

(2) how many (a) intensive care beds, (b) high dependency beds and (c) total critical care beds there have been in the NHS in each year since 1997; and what plans he has to increase the number of such beds. [222143]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not collect information on the intensive care bed register.

The available data on intensive care and high dependency provision has been published since March 1999. The latest figures show that there were a total of 3,213 critical care beds in January 2005 compared with 2,362 in January 2000—a 36 per cent. increase.

Copies of the statistical publications are available in the Library. Data from July 2001 to the most recent available are also available on the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/index.htm.

IT Projects

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many trusts in each of the clusters of the NHS National Programme for IT he expects will have implemented and begun to use patient administration systems that form the first release of the common reference solution delivered by local service providers by the end of March; [220859]

(2) how many trusts in each of the clusters of the NHS National Programme for IT he expects will have implemented and begun to use the patient administration systems that form the first release of common reference solution delivered by local service providers by the end of December. [220865]

Mr. Hutton: By the end of March, none. The anticipated numbers by the end of December, broken down by cluster area, are shown in the table.

Cluster	Trusts
North West and West Midlands	37
North East	15
Eastern	29
London	4
Southern	5
Total	90

These year-end figures are broadly in line with the high level profile in the latest published indicative implementation schedule for the national programme for information technology. This will be subject to change as details of local implementation plans become firmer.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government's target remains that Choose and Book will be implemented across England by the end of 2005. [220866]

Mr. Hutton: The Government's targets are for all patients to be offered the choice of at least four or five providers at the point of general practitioner referral and for patients to be able to book the date and time of their hospital appointment by the end of 2005. The Choose and Book service will greatly assist local health communities in achieving these targets.

We have asked the national health service to produce revised returns showing how they plan to roll out the Choose and Book service. We have asked strategic health authorities as a guide to aim for the Choose and Book service to be used for at least 80 per cent. of GP referrals for first consultant outpatient appointments by the end of 2005. Where the Choose and Book service is not being used by this date, there will be other systems in place to ensure that patients receive a choice of four to five providers and can book the date and time of their appointment.

Medical Staff Salaries

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average salary of (a) medical consultants, (b) junior doctors and (c) nurses has been in each year since 1997. [221814]

Mr. Hutton: The Department only holds figures for 1999, 2000 and 2002. These are shown in the table.

Average annualised salary for selected groups of national health service staff

	Mean annualised earnings (£)
England	1999	2000	2002
All consultants	63,000	65,000	70,600
Doctors in training and equivalents	24,300	25,100	27,600
Qualified nurses	18,600	19,400	21,100

NHS Campuses

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition he uses, in the context of the new priorities for the Learning Disability Development Fund, of a NHS Campus; which NHS trusts include a campus within their provision; how many people with a learning disability there are in each campus setting; and what targets have been set for the reprovision of campuses into more appropriate settings in the community. [222624]

Dr. Ladyman: A national health service residential campus is a:

> "Service operated by an NHS Trust comprising housing, some of which will be clustered on one site, together with some shared central facilities and developed as a direct result of the closure of NHS hospitals". Valuing People, Department of Health, March 2001.

A survey was undertaken on behalf of the Valuing People support team (VPST) in 2003. Data collection proved difficult, so the Department has confidence in the overall figures, but not in the individual NHS trust data. The current estimate is that there are approximately 3,000 people living in NHS campuses and approximately a further 3,000 people living in arrangements where NHS trusts are involved but in partnership with other providers. A further survey to improve accuracy is currently underway.

In the implementation guidance for "Valuing People" (HSC 2001/016:LAC(2001)23), objective 6 is clear that people with learning disabilities and their families should be supported to have greater choice and control over where and how they live. Sub-objective 6.3 also states the intention of:

> "Enabling all people currently in NHS long-stay hospitals to move into more appropriate accommodation and reviewing the quality of outcomes for people living in residential campuses".

NHS Pensions

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely effects of the proposed new NHS pension arrangements on levels of early retirement in advance of the deadline for transfer to the new scheme; and if he will make a statement. [223062]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Confederation is currently consulting scheme members and other interested parties on proposals for changes to the NHS Pension Scheme for England and Wales. Consultation closes on 11 April. Ministers will make decisions on changes to the scheme following consultation, taking full account of the responses received and of the likely impact of changes on the recruitment and retention of high quality and motivated staff.

Oxford Radcliffe NHS Trust

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mothers due to give birth to premature babies in Oxfordshire were sent elsewhere in the UK because the Oxford Radcliffe NHS trust was unable to admit them either at the John Radcliffe or Horton hospitals in the last three years. [222559]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally.

Seroxat

Mr. Luke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet a party of hon. Members and members of the Seroxat Users' Group. [222409]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 March 2005]: My noble friend, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State (Lord Warner) has agreed to meet with the hon. member to discuss the concerns of the Seroxat Users' Group and is in correspondence to clarify these concerns.

Social Workers

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many social workers (a) are and (b) have yet to be fully registered. [222202]

Dr. Ladyman: Data provided by the General Social Care Council (GSCC), on behalf of the Department, shows that 61,676 social workers have applied for registration with the GSCC. Of these, all are either fully registered or are through the initial stages of the registration process. 33,803 were registered by noon on 18 March 2005, which is the majority of those that applied before the cut-off date. Remaining applicants will be registered within three months.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of strategic health authorities. [218924]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to "Creating a Patient-led NHS, Delivering the NHS Improvement Plan", which is available in the Library. Chapters three and five of this document include information on the future role of strategic health authorities.

Strategy Documents

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) white papers, (b) green papers and (c) key strategy documents have been published by his Department since 1997, broken down by (i) title and (ii) date of publication. [218109]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since May 1997, the Department has published 10 White Papers, five Green Papers and 34 other key strategy documents, which are shown in the table.

Surgical Instruments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made of the need for the individual coding of surgical instruments under contract requirements for the new regional super centres being established for the decontamination of surgical instruments; [220579]

(2) how many NHS hospital trusts have a bar code system in place for the management of surgical instruments; [220580]

(3) what assessment has been made of the likely effect on patient safety of adopting bar coding for individual surgical instruments; [220581]

(4) what assessment has been made of the merits of adopting a system of individual surgical instrument traceability in NHS trusts; [220582]

(5) what assessment has been made of the implementation of the guidance in Health Service Circular 2000/32 regarding systems for the tracing of surgical instrument sets to patients on whom they have been used; [220588]

(6) if he will require the use of bar coding for surgical instruments in those areas where sterile service super centres are to be introduced; [220634]

(7) how many NHS trusts have the capacity to identify individual surgical instruments used after a high risk patient has been identified. [220635]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's guidance on the tracking of surgical instruments is contained in Health Service Circular (HSC) 2000/032 (Decontamination of Surgical Instruments). This asked chief executives of national health service trusts to have taken steps, by April 2002, towards having systems in place to enable the tracing of surgical instrument sets to patients on whom they have been used. The presence (or absence) of such a system was taken into account in assessing each NHS trust's compliance with the Department's guidance made as part of the "Review of the decontamination of surgical instruments in the NHS in England", published in December 2001. NHS trusts are not required to report to the Department which tracing system they use.

Compliance with the provisions of the Medical Devices Directive (93/42 EEC)—compulsory for commercial reprocessing centres providing a service to the NHS—implies the ability to track surgical instruments through the system. It does not—and nor does Departmental guidance—require any particular form of marking, such as bar codes, to be used. The detailed contents of contracts between NHS organisations and private sector providers of decontamination services are a matter for the parties concerned.

The Department's guidance on handling instruments used on suspected CJD patients or in certain brain biopsies recommends that such instruments should be quarantined pending confirmation of a diagnosis. All hospitals that have implemented the guidance in HSC 2000/032 will have the capacity to do this. Other than the review published in 2001, no complete survey of their compliance has been undertaken.

The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (NHS PASA) has commissioned a survey that includes tracking and tracing systems in use in NHS trusts. NHS PASA is also discussing with the NHS the technologies presently available for marking instruments, such as laser etching; and those being developed, such as the implantation of radio frequency identification chips in individual instruments.

Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards achieving the public service agreement target of enhancing accountability to patients and the public. [219229]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A new set of arrangements have been put in place to enhance accountability to patients and the public. Patients' forums have been set up to monitor local health services and to feed back the views of local people to the trusts. Patient advice and liaison services provide information, advice and support to help patients, families and their carers. Independent complaints advocacy services offer support to patients and their carers wishing to pursue a complaint about their national health service treatment or care. Health overview and scrutiny committees in local authorities are scrutinising health services and a new duty has been placed on the NHS to involve and consult in service planning and operation, and in the development of proposals for changes. The advent of NHS foundation trusts has further led to greater accountability to patients and the public by enabling far greater local ownership and involvement of patients, the public and staff.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards achieving the public service agreement target of securing sustained national improvements in patient experience as measured by independently validated national surveys. [219230]

Ms Rosie Winterton: With reference to improving the patient experience, national patient survey results to date show that the vast majority of patients—across all surveys—are positive about the overall care that they receive and the national health service staff who provide that care. For example, they have confidence and trust in staff, feel involved in their treatment/care, feel that they are listened to, get answers to any questions they have in a way they can understand and are treated with respect and dignity.

All national patient survey results are posted on the website of the Healthcare Commission at www.healthcarecommission.org.uk.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the public service agreement target to improve the life outcomes of adults and children with mental health problems through year-on-year improvement in access to crisis and child and adolescent mental health services was met in 2004. [219236]

Dr. Ladyman: The target date for access to crisis resolution services for all patients requiring emergency access is December 2005. Based on the rapid expansion in the availability of crisis services and an estimate that 70,000 people will access services in 2004–05, we expect to meet the target.

Information about improvement in access to child and adolescent mental health services (CAMHS) in 2004 is being collected through the annual CAMHS mapping exercise. The deadline for finalising data prior to their use by the Healthcare Commission was 28 February 2005. The data is due to be published on 1 June 2005. Data for 2003 and further information about the process for 2004 is available at www.camhsmapping.org.uk.

Wells Report

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the cost of the Wells Report was; and for what reason he does not currently intend to publish the report; [219067]

(2) what the cost was to public funds of the Wells Report. [220094]

Miss Melanie Johnson: No specific budget was allocated to the Wells report work. Its compilation involved the input of many individuals in a number of different organisations. The cost to public funds of the report could therefore be estimated only at disproportionate cost. The report will not be published, as to do so would prejudice similar future examinations of the economy, efficiency and effectiveness with which other public authorities discharge their functions.

West Suffolk Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his latest estimate for outturn against planned budget for West Suffolk Hospitals NHS Trust is for (a) 2004–05, (b) 2005–06 and (c) 2006–07. [222318]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not make any estimates of the outturn against planned budgets for national health service organisations. The audited information in respect to the 2004–05 financial position of the NHS trusts will be published in their individual annual accounts and will be available centrally in autumn 2005. The Department has no plans to publish un-audited information.

The Department does not have any information in respect of 2005–06 and 2006–07. The actual audited information will be available in the autumn following each of those years.

TRANSPORT

Airports

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with (a) BAA and (b) other airport companies about improving (i) the facilities and (ii) cleanliness at UK airports; and if he will make a statement. [221325]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 14 March 2005]: Regular meetings with BAA and other airport operators present a good opportunity to discuss a range of airport issues. However, the refurbishment of existing airport facilities and routine methods of maintaining cleanliness are primarily matters for the operators to decide, with appropriate regard to all relevant health and safety legislation.

Enforcement arrangements are subject to local arrangements at each airport but generally the Health and Safety Executive is responsible for enforcement airside, while local authority inspectors are responsible for enforcement at terminal buildings and landside activities. Local authority inspectors are also responsible for enforcing food hygiene and food safety legislation throughout airports, and they consider health, safety and welfare issues affecting employees, including provision and adequacy of welfare activities.

Buses

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pensioners in Morecambe and Lunesdale he expects will benefit from free bus transport. [223475]

Charlotte Atkins: From April 2006, the Government are extending the existing statutory minimum requirement for concessionary fares so that people aged 60 and over and disabled people in England will be guaranteed free off-peak travel on their local bus services, with no charge for the pass.

In Morecambe and Lunesdale, all residents over 60 will benefit from free local bus travel. According to the 2001 census, there were then 20,223 pensioners (men aged 65 and over and women aged 60 and over) and 22,549 people over 60 in Morecambe and Lunesdale.

Congestion Charge

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on congestion (a) charges and (b) penalty charge notices by the Department since the commencement of the congestion charging scheme. [213825]

Charlotte Atkins: Information on congestion charges and penalty notices incurred by vehicles provided to the Department by the Government Car and Despatch Agency is included in the response given by the Minister for the Cabinet Office on 28 February 2005, Official Report, column 957W.

The central Department has spent £1,168.87 on congestion charges incurred by civil servants on official business. This figure does not include the Department's agencies as they do not record the charges separately from other travel costs and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department does not usually pay congestion penalty charges, as civil servants are personally responsible for such fines. One penalty of £40 was paid soon after the charge was introduced as the penalty was incurred as the result of a payments error.

Crossrail

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether a full cost benefit analysis has been made of the need for a Crossrail station at Woolwich; and if he will make a statement; [223126]

(2) what consultation has been carried out to ascertain the views of people in southeast London on a Crossrail station at Woolwich; [223127]

(3) what assessment has been made of whether a Crossrail station at Woolwich would meet the Government's integrated transport criteria for new rail schemes; [223128]

(4) if he will ensure that the merits of a station at Woolwich are properly assessed before the Crossrail Bill is presented to the House; [223129]

(5) what estimate has been made of the costs of building a station at Woolwich after the Crossrail link to Abbey Wood has opened. [223130]

Mr. McNulty: A Crossrail station at Woolwich was considered during the development of the project, but could not be justified on the current estimates of cost, passenger numbers and benefits. Crossrail will pass under Woolwich in deep tunnels and the cost of constructing an underground station would therefore be high. In view of this, powers have not been sought for a station at Woolwich in the Bill introduced into Parliament on 22 February 2005. However, the alignment of the tunnels has been designed so as to allow a station at Woolwich to be developed in the future, if it could be justified at that time. An area of land has also been safeguarded for this purpose.

No estimate has been made of the potential cost of constructing a station at Woolwich once Crossrail is operational. However, this would entail closure of the route from Custom House to Abbey Wood for a number of years, and therefore the cost would be greater than for construction before operation.

Cross London Rail Links Ltd., the company set up to develop and promote the Crossrail project, consulted widely including two 12-week rounds of public consultation on the project. During both rounds, public information centres were held at Woolwich and Abbey Wood, to provide information and seek residents' views.

These were supported by mail drops to those potentially affected, newsletters, a dedicated website and a 24-hour telephone helpline.

Gatwick Express Service

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what safety issues (a) at stations and (b) on trains were considered prior to the publication of the Strategic Rail Authority's Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Study proposal to remove the all day Gatwick Express Service; [222162]

(2) what account the Strategic Rail Authority has taken of the safety report commissioned by BAA and submitted to the Strategic Rail Authority in consideration of its plans to remove the all day Gatwick Express; [222163]

(3) if he will make a statement on the changes proposed for the Gatwick Express Service set out in the Strategic Rail Authority's Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Study; [222164]

(4) what account the Strategic Rail Authority took of the expected increase in numbers of passengers using Gatwick airport outlined in the Air Transport Policy in its Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Study proposals to remove the all day Gatwick Express service; [222168]

(5) what assessment he has made of the expected change in road use that would ensue if proposals to remove the all day Gatwick Express Service, as set out in the Strategic Rail Authority's Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Study, are implemented. [222177]

Mr. McNulty: The draft Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Strategy does not propose removing the London Victoria to Gatwick airport service. It proposes keeping the fast Gatwick to Victoria services, and increasing their frequency from four to eight trains per hour. Services will be extended to cover south coast destinations. In developing the strategy the SRA reviewed a number of documents and data sources to understand future growth demands, this included "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper. The SRA and Network Rail are continuing to work closely together regarding passenger handling issues at Gatwick airport station, and are considering the issues identified in BAA's safety assessment. Given that the RUS proposals aim to improve the performance and reliability of train services on the Brighton Main Line, making services more attractive to passengers, it is not expected to have an adverse effect on road congestion. The views raised in consultation will be taken into account before the final Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Strategy is issued.

Penalty Payments

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to waive penalty payments for train operating companies involved in industrial disputes. [221006]

Mr. McNulty: Penalty payments are one aspect of franchising. Under the Railways Bill, responsibility for passenger rail franchising would pass to the Secretary of State for Transport and Scottish Ministers as appropriate. Whether and how these specific powers will be used in the future is an issue we will want to consider once Parliament has completed its consideration of the Bill.

Railways

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many recorded (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries there were on railway lines resulting from trespass in (i) Leicester and (ii) England and Wales in each year since 1997. [222892]

Mr. McNulty: The Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate (HMRI) advises that between 1997 and 2004 there was one fatality (a confirmed suicide in 2000–01), but the provision of more specific detailed information in the form requested would entail disproportionate cost.

Details of the number of fatalities and injuries resulting from railway trespass in Great Britain since 1997 are set out in the following table. HMRI advises that the provision of trespass data for England and Wales since 1997 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Railway fatalities: Trespass and Suicides Great Britain, 1 April 1997 to 31 December 2004

	Trespassers		Suicides		Grand total

Roadside Accidents

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were (a) killed and (b) seriously injured in road accidents involving car occupants unexpectedly requiring to leave their vehicle at the roadside in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [222255]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not available.

Traffic Commissioners

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many traffic commissioners have undertaken training with the Judicial Studies Board in each year since 2000. [223116]

Mr. Jamieson: All newly appointed traffic commissioners and deputy traffic commissioners attend the Tribunal Skills Development Programme organised by the Judicial Studies Board.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what disciplinary procedures apply when claims of misconduct against a traffic commissioner are substantiated. [223117]

Mr. Jamieson: Paragraph 1 of Schedule 2 to the Public Passenger Vehicles Act 1981 provides that a Traffic Commissioner may be removed from office by the Secretary of State for Transport on the grounds of inability or misbehaviour.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role his Department's legal team plays in reviewing and deciding what information is to be released to the Law Society in respect of a complaint against a traffic commissioner relating to the commissioner's conduct. [223119]

Mr. Jamieson: Where a body such as the Law Society makes a request for the release of information from the Department, the request will be considered on a case by case basis. The Department's legal team may be requested to advice as necessary.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is his Department's practice to indemnify traffic commissioners in any actions brought against them for damages. [223120]

Mr. Jamieson: It is the policy of my Department to indemnify traffic commissioners in any actions brought against them in relation to the exercise of their statutory functions.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether traffic commissioners are required to notify their Department if they have business connections or other involvement with (a) haulage contractors, (b) coach operators and (c) transport consultants. [223121]

Mr. Jamieson: Paragraph 2 of Schedule 2 to the Public Passenger Vehicles Act 1981 provides that if a traffic commissioner acquires a financial interest in a transport undertaking which carries passengers or goods by road within Great Britain, he or she must notify the Secretary of State for Transport within four weeks of the acquisition.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Accidents

Jon Trickett: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many accidents occurred at the House of Commons premises in each of the last five years involving (a) members of the House of Commons Service and (b) members of the public. [222565]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The Occupational Health, Safety and Welfare Service records and analyses information on the numbers and types of recorded injury accidents affecting those who work on or visit the Houses of Parliament. The following table outlines the statistics for the House of Commons for the past five years:

	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
All injury accidents	304	198	155	155	138
House of Commons Service staff	207	143	117	128	99
Members of the public	13	8	2	1	6

The slight increase in injury accidents to members of the public in 2004 may reflect the large increase in numbers of visitors on organised public tours.

Jon Trickett: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission whether the Commission publishes the data for the number of accidents at work involving employees of his Office; and if he will make a statement. [222580]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Since the House adopted a health and safety risk management strategy in 1999, accident rates have fallen steadily. An annual figure of 372 injury accidents in 2000 dropped to 172 in 2004. During the same period the number of injuries resulting in lost time from work fell from 43 to 15 incidents, indicating that more recent accidents are generally of lesser severity. A number of initiatives are under way to target hazards which may lead to accidents.

Statistical information on the numbers and types of recorded injury accidents for the House of Commons is available from Parliament's Occupational Health Safety and Welfare Service, and is reported to the House's Health and Safety Committee on a quarterly basis. The Committee analyses the information for trends and considers options of future strategy to help improve safety performance and further reduce accident figures. An article on accident statistics over the past five years is scheduled to be published in the next issue of the Parliamentary staff magazine, 'In House'.

Jon Trickett: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what arrangements for monitoring accidents at work involving members of House staff are in place; and if he will make a statement. [222630]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: All injury accidents are required to be recorded on Parliament's Incident Reporting Form in line with accident reporting procedures. Once reported an accident investigation takes place to identify root causes and put in place any reasonably practicable measures to prevent or reduce the likelihood of recurrence.

Copies of each accident report are sent to the Occupational Health, Safety and Welfare Service (OHSWS). OHSWS produce reports and statistical analysis of injury accidents on a quarterly, annual and rolling basis for the House's Health and Safety Committee. Trend analysis and risk assessment further identifies problem areas and helps development of appropriate strategy to improve safety performance and reduce future accident figures.

Early-day Motions

Lembit Öpik: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the marginal cost is of processing an early day motion; and how this figure is calculated. [222678]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Costs of processing Early Day Motions (EDMs) include the time of Clerks in vetting the motion, costs of staff entering the data and costs of printing and publication, which depend on the number of times motions are reprinted. EDMs vary in size and complexity and the number of names added to them may be one or many. Processing and printing EDMs is only one of a number of tasks carried out by the staff involved and no realistic disaggregation can be made which can give a cost, marginal or otherwise, of all aspects of processing a single EDM. The best estimate available of the overall costs of printing and publishing Early Day Motions in 2003–04 is £573,000, giving an average cost per EDM of £263.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Kyrgyzstan

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance his Department is giving to the Government of Kyrgyzstan to help it establish a framework for dealing with mentally ill patients in psychiatric institutions. [223201]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) is part of a multi-donor effort to help the Kyrgyz Government develop and fund a health sector strategy for the next 10 years. This comprehensive strategy will include work on mental health.

This assistance is part of DFID's broader programme of support to the Kyrgyz Republic that includes: technical assistance to support the reform of public administration; support for combating HIV/AIDS; strengthening poverty statistics; support for rural livelihoods, water and sanitation.

Oil Extraction (Third World)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) the economies and (b) the environment of Third World countries of oil extraction; and if he will make a statement; [222622]

(2) what support his Department gives to Third World countries with regard to oil extraction; and if he will make a statement. [222623]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) does not directly fund oil extraction in developing countries. We do support the World Bank's involvement in the extractive industries. The oil and gas extractive industries form a very small part of World Bank Group's lending portfolio. Investments are subject to high social and environmental safeguards that set a standard for the industry at large, as set out in the World Bank Extractive Industries Review published in 2004.

We recognise that revenues from oil and gas resources can potentially support economic growth and social development that may lead to reduction in poverty. In some countries, however, the large revenues generated from oil and gas production have been associated with corruption, conflict and increased poverty.

The Prime Minister launched the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) in September 2002. It seeks to increase the transparency of payments to Governments by oil, gas, and mining companies; and the transparency in use of revenues by Governments. DFID has led an international coalition of Governments, industry and international organisations, both within and outside countries hosting significant extractive industries, to improve transparency and reporting of revenues. Nine developing countries have committed themselves to implementing the principles of the EITI, with a further four African countries making new commitments at a London conference on 17 March 2005. The World Bank is actively participating.

DFID monitors and comments on the environmental and social impacts of projects and programmes funded by the World Bank and other International Financial Institutions (IFIs), where we have stakeholder obligations as contributors. In some cases we have commissioned independent studies to improve our understanding of key economic and environmental issues and evaluate how they are being addressed. One example is the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan (BTC) pipeline. We have also kept in close touch with the issues raised by the proposed Sakhalin Island 2 oil pipeline development in Russia.

DFID is working with others (including the IFIs) and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) on improved environmental assessment procedures for use at the planning stages of new projects and programmes. This will include the application of such procedures to large-scale projects in oil extraction, where these are funded by the IFIs.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 14 March; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [222546]

Margaret Beckett: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, and I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council in Brussels on 14 March 2005. Ministers responsible for fisheries and agriculture in Northern Ireland and Scotland were also present.

The Council agreed a proposal concerning establishment of an EU Fisheries Control Agency, which the European Council had previously agreed to sit in Spain. We were able to support a compromise proposal for commission representation on the Agency's administrative board.

The Commission reported progress in negotiations with the Russian Federation to agree certain plant and animal health controls. While the UK has not so far been among the member states most affected by Russian requirements, it was encouraging that progress was being made to resolve the remaining differences.

The main item for discussion at this Council was Rural Development. The presidency focused discussion on a small number of issues in the current proposal to revise the Rural Development Regulation, principally focusing on the LEADER reserve and inviting ments on the Rural Development Strategy which it is planned to table in June. I reiterated the importance we attach to devoting at least half of the financial resources under the Regulation to environmental work, expressed some doubt as to the level of the LEADER reserve proposed and supported others in giving a general welcome to the likely shape of the strategy framework.

The Commission presented a progress report on implementation of the EU forestry strategy. Member states took note.

The Commission also presented proposals for EU measures to address market crises through new risk management techniques in the industry. This was a brief presentation, with substantial discussion planned for later in the year. The Commission made it clear that it opposed extending any kind of generalised safety net provision such as that found in the current beef regime. It also indicated that the use of any modulated funds would only be possible in the context of rural development programmes and measures that were compatible with the WTO Green Box.

Under Any Other Business, we raised the question of cetacean by catches and the need for greater protection of dolphins. The Commission undertook to call for international research on the subject to be accelerated. Portugal drew attention to the difficulties that prolonged drought had caused in its rural areas.

Over lunch, the Commission updated Ministers on the WTO agriculture negotiations. I welcomed recent progress and reminded the Council of the importance of making progress in good time for the Hong Kong Ministerial in December.

Environment Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Environment Council on 10 March; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [221922]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State attended the Environment Council on 10 March 2005.

The main outcome of the Council was the adoption of two sets of conclusions. One set forms a contribution from the Environment Council to the Spring European Council (scheduled for the 22 and 23 March 2005) and is a response to four Commission communications: the Mid-Term Review of the Lisbon Strategy, the 2004 Environmental Policy Review, an initial review of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy and a report on implementation of the Environmental Technologies Action Plan. The second set of conclusions represents the Environment Council's recommendations to the Spring European Council on climate change, specifically medium to long term emission reduction strategies and targets.

Council conclusions on the Environment Council's contribution to the Spring European Council were adopted after a full discussion. Almost all delegations supported the presidency text and emphasised that environmental protection and economic growth went hand in hand. The Secretary of State supported the idea of a statement of principles for sustainable development, but emphasised that these should be integrated into the revised EU Sustainable Development Strategy. In this context, the Secretary of State referred to the recently published UK Sustainable Development Strategy, an executive summary of which was circulated to delegations.

Council conclusions on climate change were adopted following a debate. The conclusions reaffirm the December 2004 Environment Council conclusions, referring to the global nature of climate change and the requirement for international co-operation, and to recent scientific research under the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change on the stabilisation of greenhouse gas concentrations required to meet the 2 degrees centigrade objective. Drawing on this research, the conclusions suggest the consideration of pathways to 2020 and 2050 for greenhouse gas emission reduction in developed countries. The agreed text makes clear that the EU wishes to explore the future framework with others and that the language on emissions reductions is an evidence-based assessment rather than a prescriptive call for action. The conclusions also invite the European Commission to continue its analysis of costs and benefits of reduction strategies, including the costs of inaction.

Council adopted a Decision on a negotiating mandate for the second Meeting of the Parties to the Aarhus Convention on access to information, public participation in decision-making and access to justice in environmental matters, which is scheduled for 25–27 May 2005 in Almaty, Kazakhstan.

Council also adopted a negotiating mandate in preparation for the second meeting of the parties to the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, scheduled for 30 May-3 June 2005 in Montreal. The negotiating mandate was adopted under qualified majority voting procedures, following a presidency compromise which included the addition of UK-proposed wording.

Council conclusions were adopted in preparation for the first conference of the parties to the Stockholm Convention on persistent organic pollutants, which is scheduled for 2–6 May 2005 in Punta del Este, Uruguay. The presidency thanked the UK for chairing the preparatory work for this conference on its behalf. Council conclusions were agreed unanimously following a small amendment to reflect the concerns of two delegations.

Minister John Ashe (Antigua and Barbuda), Chair of the 13th Session of the Commission for Sustainable Development (CSD 13), briefed the Council on preparations for the next session which will take place on 11–22 April 2005. An exchange of views followed, in which member states and the Commission stressed the importance of links between CSD 13 and the Millennium Review Summit to be held in September.

Under Other Business, the presidency gave an update on negotiations on the REACH chemicals strategy and Belgium presented items on the import of wild birds and illegal logging. Germany raised the proposed Services Directive, arguing that country of origin rules presented a threat to national environmental standards, and should not result in levelling down, a view which was supported by some other member states. The Commission referred ministers to the recent statements to the Competitiveness Council and European Parliament on this issue, and other delegations took the view it was too early for Environment Council to discuss the scope of this measure. Austria, with support from a number of member states, raised an issue concerning the Commission's approach to national safeguard actions in relation to GM maize variety MON 810. The Netherlands set out concerns about the possible dilution of EU standards in a current review of the automotive industry ('CARS 21') and the Czech Republic announced a forthcoming conference on Acid Deposition.

Environmental Standards

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she takes to ensure that regulatory impact assessments of new policies accurately reflect the economic effects of high environmental standards. [222385]

Mr. Morley: Since 1 April 2004 all new policies have been accompanied by a regulatory impact assessment (RIA). The RIA replaced the integrated policy appraisal (IPA). All RIAs must include an assessment of the environmental and social costs and benefits, in addition to the economic costs and benefits of a new regulation. The full RIA for all policies which affect businesses must also include an assessment of the impact on competition within UK markets.

The majority of UK environmental legislation derives from Europe. Defra and the UK Government are promoting the Better Regulation agenda in Europe, including the use of detailed impact assessments for all policy proposals. The UK will be using its EU presidency to advance this work.

Fisheries

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 171W, on fisheries, what the weights were of the discards estimates. [215340]

Mr. Bradshaw: The tonnage equivalents of the percentages given in response to the hon. Member's previous question are set out in the following table.

Estimates (in tonnes) of discards for the Scottish North Sea fleet and for a representative sample of the English North Sea fleet

Species	2001	2002	2003
England
Cod	1,300	1,350	635
Haddock	3,709	1,073	588
Whiting	7,061	2,642	4,676
Scotland
Cod	4,440	1,519	1,086
Haddock	86,297	32,196	18,555
Whiting	8,869	8,315	5,931

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make the reduction of cetacean deaths in European fisheries a priority for the UK's Presidency of the European Union. [222859]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK objectives for its Presidency of the European Union in the second half of 2005 include promoting action to protect vulnerable species and habitats with a view to the long term management of healthy fish stocks and the protection of the marine environment. We will also seek to further integrate environmental considerations into fisheries management. These objectives should provide opportunities to address cetacean deaths in fisheries.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many UK fishing vessels are expected to start the deployment of pingers to prevent porpoise deaths in set net fisheries in the North Sea in June; and if she will bring forward the mandatory deployment of pingers to prevent porpoise deaths in set net fisheries in the English Channel and Celtic Sea. [222860]

Mr. Bradshaw: Council Regulation (EC) no. 812/2004 requires, "inter alia", pinger usage from 1 June 2005 on vessels of 12 metres and over in the North Sea (ICES division IV) when using bottom-set gillnets or entangling nets where the mesh size used is greater than or equal to 220 mm.

The number of vessels that are expected to fall into this category is eight. This figure is based on those involved in the fishery in 2004 but does not take into account movements into and out of the fishery.

The Council Regulation requires the mandatory usage of pingers in the English Channel and Celtic Sea with effect from 1 January 2006 and 1 January 2007 respectively.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department is spending this year and how much was spent in each of the past three years on deployment trials to test the practicality and durability of various pinger models in gillnet and tangle net fisheries off southwest England; and when results are expected from these trials. [222888]

Mr. Bradshaw: A total of over £88,000 has been committed to funding for pingers trials. This was £12,000 in 2003–04 provided by the Sea Fish Industry Authority and £76,000 in 2004–05 with £19,000 from SFIA.

Results are expected by the end of August 2005.

Irradiated Material (Caithness)

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she plans to take to address concerns about potential health risks from irradiated material to people living near Sandside Bay, Caithness. [221739]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 March 2005]: This is a devolved issue concerning a site in Scotland and therefore a matter for the Scottish Executive and the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency (SEPA).

Nuclear Waste

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the merits of publishing the original Nirex list of potential sites' suitability for the burial of nuclear waste. [222083]

Mr. Morley: The Nirex site list information comes from a historic and abandoned programme. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) does not hold the Nirex site list information. Future policy for the long-term management of the UK's higher activity radioactive waste is currently being considered under the "Managing Radioactive Waste Safety" programme.

River Dove

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the progress of the preparation of a fluvial strategy for the River Dove. [222179]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is undertaking a flood risk management strategy for the River Dove catchment.

I understand that following consultation on the scoping report in April 2004, the Environment Agency undertook a preliminary strategic review (PSR) of the current flooding situation on the River Dove. This enabled further studies to focus on areas at risk of flooding and key issues.

The PSR highlighted a number of flooding problems in the catchment as well as the potential need for a flood defence scheme at Scopton and Hatton. It also questioned the limitations of the existing hydraulic model and surveys of the river.

In response to this, the Environment Agency is currently undertaking an aerial survey of the river. This will enable improved modelling of the flood plain between Rochester and the confluence with the River Trent, including key tributaries. The agency expect the model to be available from August 2005. It will be used to assess the viability of catchment wide strategic solutions to the flooding problems.

The updated hydraulic model will also be used by the Environment Agency's development control and flood warning teams in their ongoing programmes of continual improvements to their standards of service.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many sites of special scientific interest there were in Shrewsbury and Atcham in each year since 1997. [223149]

Mr. Bradshaw: The figures for the number of sites of special scientific interest in Shrewsbury and Atcham borough in each year since 1997 are:

	Number
1997	[1]25
1998	26
1999	26

2004	28
2005	28

Wildlife and Countryside Act

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many licences have been issued under (a) section 16(1)(k) and (b) section 16(3)(h) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in each of the last 10 years. [220243]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 March 2005]: The number of licences issued under (a) section 16(1)(k)[1] and (b) section 16(3)(h)[2] of the Wildlife and presented in the following table.

[1] For the purposes of preventing serious damage to livestock, foodstuffs for livestock, crops, vegetables, fruit, growing timber, [fisheries or inland waters],

[2] For the purposes of preventing serious damage to livestock, foodstuffs for livestock, crops, vegetables, fruit, growing timber or any other form of property or to fisheries.

2002	112	297	409
2003	176	405	581
2004	281	260	541
2005	118	61	[1]179

[1] Up to 18 March

The analysis of licences issued during the previous five years involves a disproportionate cost and has not been supplied.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Civil Contingencies

Mr. Allan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assistance is being provided by his Department to local authorities to enable them to carry out their duties under the Civil Contingencies Act 2004 in respect of (a) local business continuity and (b) threats to telecommunications networks. [222235]

Mr. Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

The Civil Contingencies Act 2004 requires relevant local authorities to put in place internal business continuity plans and to provide advice and assistance to local businesses and voluntary organisations in relation to business continuity management. The Government held a public consultation on the supporting regulations and guidance between December to March, and will publish the revised package shortly.

The National Infrastructure Security Co-ordination Centre (NISCC) provides guidance to local authorities about the threats to telecommunications systems and building their resilience. The NISCC guidance enables local authorities to make informed decisions about resilience in their dealings with telecommunications service providers.

Housing

Matthew Green: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the 2,000 homes for key workers announced under English Partnerships' London-wide Initiative are included in the 15,000 homes being built under the First Time Buyer Initiative. [223280]

Keith Hill: Of the 2,000 affordable homes for sale to be delivered under English Partnerships London-wide Initiative pilot, 1,000 will be made available under the First Time Buyers Initiative announced in January.

Matthew Green: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many social rented homes have been (a) built and (b) acquired through the private finance initiative mechanism that will be expanded under Sustainable Communities: Homes for all. [223282]

Keith Hill: Through the private finance initiative (PFI) so far 51 social rented homes have been built and 150 homes have been acquired. Within the next three years the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects a further 387 social rented homes to be built through PFI schemes that reached contract signature in 2004.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects the first property constructed under the First Time Buyers Initiative to be completed. [223289]

Keith Hill: English Partnerships are currently developing the business plan that will underpin the delivery of 15,000 homes under the First Time Buyers Initiative.

It is envisaged that the first homes constructed under the scheme will be completed in 2006.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will establish criteria for the First Time Buyers Initiative that ensure the homes are prioritised for key workers and others on incomes at or below the average for the region. [223292]

Keith Hill: I refer the hon. Member to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Public Service Plan 'Homes for All', presented to the House on 24 January of this year. Paragraphs 4.7 and 4.8 set out our proposals regarding decisions on eligibility criteria for the First Time Buyers Initiative. Copies of the Plan are available in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers (a) regional housing boards and (b) regional chambers will have to set (i) targets and (ii) policy for the demolition of homes in their regional strategies. [216651]

Keith Hill: None. However it is essential that the evidence base and analysis that underpins the regional housing and spatial strategies reflect the levels of demolition needed to tackle problems of over-supply or obsolete stock.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council houses there were in Shrewsbury and Atcham in each year since 1997. [223148]

Keith Hill: The following information is provided from Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council's housing investment programmes as required by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (and its predecessors) for the relevant years.

	LA housing stock as of 1 April
1997–98	6,080
1998–99	5,972
1999–2000	5,843
2000–01	5,693

Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council undertook a large scale voluntary transfer of its housing stock to a registered social landlord on the 1 October 2001. Therefore, figures for subsequent years are not available.

Property Conference

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what capacity he is attending the MIPIM Property Conference in Cannes on 8–11 March; what estimate he has made of his (a) travel costs and (b) accommodation costs for the conference; and which officials will accompany him. [221440]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister attended the MIPIM Property Conference to engage some of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's most important stakeholders in helping to create sustainable communities, and deliver affordable housing.

Since 1999 the Government have published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Information for 2004–05 will be published in due course.

Social Housing

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will list those local authorities which have undertaken (a) arm's length management organisation, (b) large scale voluntary transfer and (c) private finance initiative programmes with regard to their social housing provision; [223049]

(2) how many and what percentage of local authorities have not yet chosen their preferred route for meeting the Decent Homes Standard; and if he will list them; [223050]

(3) which local authorities are still undertaking Options Appraisals. [223051]

Keith Hill: Lists have been made available in the Library of the House that show which authorities have chosen an arms length management organisation (ALMO), stock transfer, a private finance initiative (PFI) scheme, or retention, with regard to their social housing provision. Not all of these authorities have implemented their chosen option yet, or are on an approved programme 135 authorities are yet to have their options appraisal, determining their preferred route for meeting the decent homes standard, signed off. A list of these authorities has also been made available in the Library of the House.

Some authorities appear in more than one list as they have chosen multiple solutions for their stock.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his recent decision to relax performance requirements for housing associations for access to gap funding will affect the applications from (a) Tower Hamlets and (b) North East Lincolnshire. [223209]
